Advices from Ottawa to the effect that the Canadian Government is ready to continue the reciprocity negotiations which had been tentatively arranged last spring are placing the Taft administration in a somewhat embarrassing position. This is due to the feeling here that, with things as they are, there is little or no chance of getting action from Congress that would render the adoption of a reciprocity treaty possible. The difficulty is entirely apart from the question whether the Taft administration and its advisers in Congress can actually make up their minds to embark upon reciprocity negotiations. In order to reach that conclusion the Administration will have to overcome some very serious opposition within its own ranks and will have to reconcile itself to certain changes of policy that will constitute a decided innovation on its past point of view. Prominent amongst these will be the admission that we did not, as a matter of fact, gain anything whatever in the negotiations of last spring, and the further recognition that, in order to get anything from Canada, under existing conditions, we shall undoubtedly have to give an ample equivalent.

There has been no change in the essential problem of reciprocity with Canada which was placed before our negotiators in such an unmistakable way six months ago. What is absolutley necessary is a relaxation of our present tariff policy on print paper and pulp wood, particularly in retaliatory aspects. The Canadians have been deeply dissatisfied with our attitude on those points, and the fairer minds among American negotiators, have been perfectly ready to admit from the start that we ought to yield on those issues. While by so yielding we could undoubtedly obtain a very material reduction or relaxation of the policy to be followed by Canada in future regarding the taxation of wood cut on crown lands, it is not at all clear that we should by merely settling the print paper problem obtain any relaxation of the general tariff policy of Canada. That is to say, there will be nothing in the situation that would help us to get into a position of equal advantage with France or England. We should be obliged to go on submitting to the heavy Canadian differential tariffs in favour of those countries. In other words, it is now plain that in order to get anything that will retrieve the serious defeat that was administered to us last spring the Taft administration must make up its mind to propose reductions on a large line of items. This lines of items would undoubtedly be so inclusive that it would almost amount to tariff revision. The situation would be all the more difficult because of the peculiarly clumsy and unfortunate way in which the maximum and minimum tariff negotiations were handled by the State Department under the section of the tariff act which was drafted by Secretary Knox, or at his dictation, to cover the situation.

The trouble centres around the entire refusal of the State Department to adopt and maintain any consistent policy with reference to the most favored nation question. We had a definite "American" interpretation of the most favoured nation clause in commercial treaties ,but this was practically abandoned last spring when the negotiations were opened under the maximum and minimum provision of the Payne-Aldrich law. Under that provision we insisted upon getting from other countries the full minimum tariffs that would place us upon a footing of equality with every other country in the same market. Of course the Payne-Aldrich law only required that we should get "substantially" equal treatment with other nations, so that in the case of France and Canada the President was able by a Pickwickian interpretation of the language of the law, to crawl through a very small hole, declaring that concessions that amounted to almost nothing were substantially equivalent, etc. We had however, established a new precedent by adopting, in the course of the negotiations, almost the European interpretation of the most favoured nation clause. Undoubtedly that will be held against us in the future, so that if we should succeed in getting a special arrangement with Canada, other countries which competed with Canadian products in our market would at once put forward a demand that they should have as good treatment as that which had been accorded to the Canadians. This would dopen up a world of trouble, and the probable results would be forseen as soon as the new reciprocity treaty was brought up in Congress for ratification. An additional difficulty is seen in the fact that the House will certainly insist upon having any reciprocity treaty submitted to it, instead of resting content with the verdict of the Senate for or against it. That means that if the Administration is going to get real action it will have to make up its mind to undertake a campaign designed to force through both houses of Congress legislation intended to bring about practically a revision of the tariff.

While the difficulty which has been sketched is one that will develop only after the treaty has been arranged, it is a question that has to be contemplated at the start, as otherwise the Administration could not sincerely enter into the discussion with Canada. However, more immediate difficulties must also be faced. The question where to hold the negotiations will be of some interest and, of course, effort is being made to have them take place in Washington. There was some criticism of the action of the Administration last spring in sending a commission to Ottawa and of President Taft for going to Albany to a conference with the Canadians later on. A feeling now exists that Canada may well return the courtesy by allowing the sessions to occur in Washington. This is all to be settled within the next few weeks. In addition,our Government will have a serious problem if it seeks capable commercial negotiations, as it has few or no persons in the State Department who are in a position to undertake the work successfully. The Tariff Board is now concentrating its attention entirely upon domestic schedules and rates of duty ,and it is likely that the jealousy of the State Department would not in any event permit the President to have recourse again to the service of this board. The situation is, therefore, of exceptional difficulty, especially as Secretary Knox and his assistant secretaries at the present time seem to have only a rather dim conception of the issues at stake here or of tariff and commercial relationships generally.

"No one questions the honest motives of those who advocate local option, or prohibition — not even we who brew Regal Lager. But the temperate folk who use Regal Lager as a daily beverage for health's sake, know how mistaken is the idea that so pure and tonic a drink is an intoxicant.

Bourassa Severe on Premier.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—Henri Bourassa is quite severe on Sir Wilfrid on the eve of the great demonstration at the Monument Nationale. The Ottawa Free Press having insinuated that the Nationalist leader was an annexationist, Mr. Bourassa repudiates any such sentiment. He admits that his uncle, L. J. A. Papineau, who became a Presbyterian late in life, was an ardent disciple of annexation, and was even mixed up in the conspiracy, set on foot in New York by Marcier, Tarte, Goldwin and others, to bring about the independence of Canada.

The writer in Le Devoir says, however, that, in spite of his uncle's annexation sentiments, neither Mr. Laurier or Mr. Mercier ever refused his checks for their election funds. He ignores to what extent Sir Wilfrid Laurier was aware as to those meetings in New York, but he presumes that had the deal been ratified, the Liberal leader would not have closed the party's electoral coffers against the money, any more than he did when Ernst Pacaud deposited $100,000 from the Baie des Chaleurs, or when he allowed Mercier to be crushed, after profiting by his election fund.

Run Over by Street Car.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—While running across West King street, opposite the Mercer Reformatory, Albert Charles Blake, of 913 West Queen street, nine years of age, and son of Charles J. Blake, was struck by an eastbound King car at 6.20 Sunday night, and had his left leg almost severed below the knee and his left arm fractured in several places. The car was in charge of Motorman George Williams of 18 Carroll street, and Conductor Charles Donnelly of 297 Sumach street, but nobody on the car saw how the accident occurred, and it is supposed that he really made an attempt to board the car and was run over by the trailer. George Dixon and his wife of 5 Manning avenue were on the sidewalk and saw the boy helpless on the road. The screams of the boy were heard by the attendants of the Mercer, one of whom telephoned to Cowan avenue police station and Dr. Harrison of West King street was summoned. The boy was removed in the police ambulance to the Hospital for Sick Children. Latest reports from the hospital was that he was doing as well as could be expected.

Escaped From Sing Sing.

Ossining, N.Y., Oct. 10.—The door to liberty was opened to 195 convicts in Sing Sing State Prison here at half-past one o'clock yesterday morning. Only five men faced death at the hands of the armed guards and escaped by dropping twenty feet to the ground from a window, the bars of which had been sawed. An hour later one other convict, a negro, followed the path of the fugitives and voluntarily gave the alarm to the prison guards. The remaining 189 men, overpowered with a sense of fear, turned their faces away from the temptation to escape. In all the gloomy history of Sing Sing there is no parallel to the scene yesterday morning in the chapel dormitory, a transformed church in which nearly two hundred men pass fourteen hours each day.

The escape was planned by Wm Green, 250 pounds in weight, and strong as an ox, who was serving 6 1-2 years for highway robbery.

Autoists Guilty of Manslaughter.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—Dionne and Keefer, who, while crossing Victoria bridge in an automobile, ran down and killed a woman named Bessie Smith, were found guilty of manslaughter in the court of King's Bench Saturday afternoon. Sentence will be pronounced at the end of the term.

UNCLE WALT

The Poet Philosopher

Years ago majestic colonels filled this glad and smiling land, and we found them in the journals, talked with them on every hand. They were most imposing creatures, heroes of the snickersnee, with their keen and hawk-like features, and their stonch hats and goatees. There were also many majors who in their day made a bit, good old stormy, whiskered stagers, each one thinking he was it. And the colonels and the majors were the country's keen delight, even though (the poet wagers) they had never seen a fight. Not a kindly man begrudges them the fame they tried to reap; but the modern crop of judges makes a mourning nation weep. If you ask us what's the poorest thing that can the heartstrings wrench, we must answer: "It's the jurist who has never seen a bench." But the judges will have vanished when another era dawns, and the place from which they're banished will be cluttered up with Hons.

Making Perfect Garments

The final operation of examining garments for any imperfection in tailoring is a most important one, and, in the 20th Century Brand tailor shops, is done by a staff of eight competent and experienced examiners who are given plenty of time to do the work thoroughly. Their examination is a most critical one and the garment must measure up in every particular to the 20th Century Brand standard or back to the tailor shop it goes. When once the garment has been passed by the final examiners it is boxed and made ready for shipment. It is also ready to fit and ready to give entire satisfaction.

"THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracy, (Copyrighted)

In Newport, Saratoga, and the Adirondacks in summer, in New York during the winter. I lived in a drowsy content. People who take drugs must reach that state, but their condition is pitiable when they are aroused. Many men asked me to marry them. I laughed at the idea. At last I met Mr. Traill. We were friendly for quite five years. I came to Europe to the Engadine, where I found that Mrs. Stephen Brand's troubled life was forgotten, but Mrs. Vansittart, the rich widow, was popular. There I saw Mr Traill again. He offered me marriage, and I fancied it would be well to ally myself with a man so distinguished and widely known on both sides of the Atlantic. I did not love him. I respected and admired him—that was all. I accepted him, but stipulated that I should go back to the States and wind up my affairs there, returning to Paris for the wedding. That was necessary if I would maintain my deception. So, Stephen, after a lifetime of vagary and wandering, this is the result. I am bespattered by the mud of my own nets; I see my forgotten daughter grown to beautiful womanhood; I meet my husband, whom I might have loved and honoured, patiently following the path into which my neurotic impulses drove him. Stephen, do you think my punishment is completed?"

The bitter self-condemnation in her voice was not defiant but subdued. She had travelled far in spirit through the Vale of Tears since the Gulf Rock barred her onward progress.

Though she asked a question she seemed to expect no answer. Brand, thinking to render her task less trying, was still looking through the window and watching the steady churning of the tender towards Corn du and thence to the lighthouse.

At last he spoke.

"When I entered this room," he said, "I meant to avoid a scene which must have been as exhausting to you as it is painful to me. Yet, as it happens, it is well for both of us that you have lifted the veil from what has gone before. Now it should be dropped—for ever."

"Tell me what you wish me to do. I will obey."

"Don't you think it will be better if we defer a final settlement? You have already taxed your frail powers beyond their limit."

"No, Stephen. Speak now. I will not faint nor yield to weakness. I will live. Have no fear. Death does not come as a skilful healer of the wounded conscience. It may be sought, and I have thought of that. But Constance would suffer, and, if it will spare her pain, I will endure to the end. Surely I owe her that reparation. I committed moral suicide once in my life. Let it suffice!"

The fixed plan of the study, with its carefully arranged phrases, was not so readily acceptable to the man now. What would become of his wife if he drove her forth, this time of his own accord, to live in mournful solitude, brooding over a wasted life and looking forward only to an occasional visit from her daughter?

A host of impossible ideas jostled in his brain. He strove desperately to find some easy way of suggesting the settlement which appealed to him as the fitting one, but his soul revolted from the notion of formulating a decree of banishment against the ethereal, ghost like creature who had been thrust back into his very keeping from out the heart of the storm.

He stood up and faced her, careless whether or not the stress of inward conflict in his eyes belied the calm gravity of his words.

"Perhaps you are stronger than I," he said. "We must meet again, to-morrow or next day. Some of the young people will be returning soon. If you wish it, I will not tell them I have seen you."

"It is for you to decide, Stephen."

She seemed to be quite hopeless, resigned to any twist or turn of fate. Here was a broken woman, indeed, and the spectacle was torturing. He had never understood her as a bright young girl and a bride of nineteen. He did not understand her now. A man of his oak-like qualities could not grasp the nature of a woman who bent as a reed before each puff of wind.

It was hard to utter even a commonplace farewell. She held him by her very helplessness. But the rapid trot of a horse caught his ears, and, whilst he stood irresolute, he saw Constance alighting from the dog-cart. His wife looked out, too. They heard their daughter laughingly regret that she could not ask Mr. Pyne to luncheon—meals were irregular events just then.

Brand felt a timid hand grasping his, and a choking sob proclaimed that Constance's mother was crying.

He stooped with a motion that was almost a caress.

"Don't cry," he said. "I cannot bear it."

"I can bear anything, Stephen," she sobbed, "if only you will let me stay with you forever."

"Do you mean that, Nanette?" he gasped, incredulously.

"I have prayed, yes, dared to pray, that it might be so ever since I saw my child. She has brought us together again. Let us not part, for her sake, and for mine, Stephen, if it is not too late."

So Constance, hastening up the garden path, could not believe her eyes when she saw her father lift her mother into his arms and kiss her.

Mary, the maid, never ceased wondering why every other member of her sex in Laburnum Cottage should be tearful yet ridiculously happy that afternoon. Mrs. Vansittart wept, and Miss Constance wept, and Miss Enid wept when she came in, whilst Mrs. Sheppard was weeping at intervals all day.

Nevertheless they were all delighted in their woe, and Mrs. Sheppard, although she cooked a tremendous dinner, never scolded her once.

It was also a remarkable thing that the invalid lady should insist that she was strong enough to come down stairs that evening. She did not eat a great deal, poor thing, but she looked ever so much better, and seemed to find all her pleasure in gazing alternately at the master and Miss Constance, and in listening to every word they said.

In the garden, next night, the moon being now very brilliant indeed, Pyne said to Constance that the step-aunt idea having fizzled out he guessed that the lady who figured in that unclassified degree of relationship would pose more satisfactorily as a mother-in-law.

He said other things that have been said in many languages since men began to woo women, but the phrases are hackneyed save to those who listen, and need not be repeated here.

But why two marriages should take place after extraordinary short engagements, no one in all Penzance knew save Lady Margaret Stanhope, and she, miserable dicta, (being a woman), kept her counsel. It created no end of a sensation when Constance was described in the London newspapers as "only daughter of Sir Stephen Brand, Bart, of Lesser Hambledon, Northumberland." Local gossip quickly exhausted itself, as both weddings took place in London, the only available items being the magnificence of the diamonds given to Enid and Constance by Mr. Traill, and the fact that, in Constance's case, "the bride's mother" was described as "looking charming in a silver-gray costume trimmed with point d'Alencon lace."

Even when confronted with this momentous statement by Mrs. Taylor-Smith, Lady Margaret only shrugged her shoulders and purred:

"A romance, my dear, a romance of real life."

On the day following the departure of two happy couples for the Continent—Mr. and Mrs. Pyne to Italy, Lieut. and Mrs. Stanhope to the Riviera, with intent to meet in Rome at Easter—a quieter and more sedate couple took train at Waterloo for Southampton, bound for the Far West.

Although a Nebraska decree of divorce does not hold good in English law, Lady Brand wished to be married again in the State which sanctioned her earlier folly. Her husband agreed readily. Everybody, including Mr. Traill and Lady Margaret had arranged to turn up at the north-country mansion in May. Provided there were no hurricanes, Sir Stephen thought his wife's health would benefit by the double sea voyage, and he was personally delighted to see the New World for the first time in her company.

Their steamer sailed from Southampton at 11 a.m. After dinner that night they were abreast of the Gulf Rock, and Brand pointed out to his wife its occulting gleam from afar.

"It makes me feel very humble," she said, after they had watched its radiance darting out over the tumbling seas for a long time in silence.

"Why sweetheart?" he asked.

"It is so solemn, so intense in its energy, so splendidly devoted to its single purpose."

"Now, it is an odd thing," he replied, as watchful to check her occasional qualms of retrospect as he had been during many a long night to keep that same light at its normal state of clear-eyed brilliance, "but it does not appeal to me in that way. It is winking portentously, as much as to say 'You old humbug, there you are, leaving me after all these years, and running away with your own wife!'"

THE END.

Eczema Must Yield To
THE WONDERFUL, SOOTHING, HEALING INFLUENCE OF
DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

There is one thing you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to do every time, and that is to cure eczema. There is no more severe test to which an ointment can be put, and because Dr. Chase's Ointment triumphed over eczema it has become the standard Ointment.

When another ointment is praised it is said to be as good as Dr. Chase's. And this illustrates the high position held by this preparation.

Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antoine, Sask., writes: "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure for eczema and other skin diseases. One son while nursing broke out with running, watery sores all over his head and around the ears. Many salves were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered untold agony. He became weak and frail, would not eat and we thought we would lose him.

"Providentially we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now and strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment and we hope more people will learn about it so that their poor little ones may be saved from suffering."

Do not be satisfied with the experience of others, but put Dr. Chase's Ointment to the test when occasion arises. Try it for chafing and irritation of the skin, for chapped and cracked hands, for chilblains and frost bites, for sores and burns. It is delightfully soothing and healing. 60c. ## SPLENDID DIRECTORY

Has Just Been Issued by the Desbarats Advertising Agency, Limited

Newspaper facts are presented very clearly and fully in the Desbarats Newspaper Directory for 1910 just to hand.

The Directory shows a general increase in circulation amongst all classes of publications.

It is interesting to note as showing the development and settlement of the Western Provinces that there are many newspapers published in towns in the West whose names were not on the map a few years ago.

The Directory contains sketches of the different provinces and newspaper towns and cities with a full list of the industries in each town and gives full and detailed reports of each publication.

The directory contains 328 pages and is well printed and attractively bound in red and gold.

Although the price of the Directory is $5.00 we understand the publishers will forward a copy to any one interested in advertising who will make application to the publishers—the Desbarats Advertising Agency, Montreal—enclosing 50 cents to repay

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—May I be permitted to enter a protest in your columns against the manner in which Peterborough people hamper the movements of the firemen when engaged in their arduous duties. If there is ever a time when strict order and non-crowding are necessary it is at a fire. The lack of both these essentials was strikingly apparent at the box factory conflagration on Saturday night. It is no use laying the blame on the police. Two or three individuals cannot very well cope with a multitude. But surely men in rigs can turn down by streets and not drive over the hose, in the way they were noticed to be doing at the fire afore-mentioned. Attention to such matters would conduce immeasurably towards the effectiveness of our really excellent fire brigade.

Yours, etc.,
CIVIS.

TO CURE A HEADACHE
The experience of Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., is of interest to all who suffer from headaches, which came on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do any work. Headache powders and quick cures did no good. I then used six boxes of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food and have not been troubled with headache since. That was eight months ago.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

HAS it been your experience, as it has been mine, to see people who otherwise had good manners, raise the napkin above the mouth, rub their eyes, wipe the forehead, in fact use it as a handkerchief, stopping short only at wiping the nose?" writes a correspondent.

Dear lady, it certainly has.

And also, to see other tricks just as bad committed by people who ought to know better.

A man who stuttered was aroused one day when a supercilious person commented on his failing.

"Oh, I g-guess everybody has his little eccentricity," he said. "Wha-what's yours?"

The supercilious person protested that he didn't know that he had any.

"Oh, I g-guess you have," insisted the stutterer. "Now, dab you eat your soup wi-with your left hand or with your ri-right?"

"Then tha-that's yours," triumphantly pointed out the stutterer, "I eat mine with my spoon."

All of which I have told, simply to introduce the stutterer's philosophy—that every man has his little eccentricity.

I think he has—especially in table manners. It seems as it almost everyone we know, however well bred, has some little disagreeable table trick. Each is horrified at the others' offences and each calmly commits his own.

And don't think I mean offences like a failure to pick the right fork or spoon from a bewildering array of implements. I have a thorough sympathy for such a failure—a sympathy born, I am quite willing to admit, from my own bewilderments.

What I mean is flagrant offences against the laws of decent eating, like that the lady referred to.

Again and again I have seen well dressed men in nice restaurants and hotels, dining with their wives or sweethearts, sit back and use a toothpick while waiting for their checks.

Again and again I have seen men, and women too, issuing from first class restaurants with toothpicks slanting jauntily from the corners of their mouths.

To repeat something that, although it has been said ten thousand times can well afford to be repeated since it has been disregarded quite as many time should never use a toothpick at all. It is neither good for the teeth nor efficacious. Dental floss is the proper implement.

But if you will abuse yourself by using a toothpick, don't abuse the rest of the world by using it in public.

Another extraordinary trick of otherwise decent people, is that of heaping the plate with many kinds of food and allowing them to become mixed up in a melee that is painfully suggestive of the crumb bucket.

Another is the habit of eating soup from the end of the spoon rather than the side. I have seen a college professor and his wife do that—and do it audibly too.

Another is crumbing crackers and croutons, and so forth, into the soup, instead of eating them separately.

Doubtless none of these is your particular offence.

But don't exonerate yourself too quickly. You may be unconsciously committing some other offence that offends other people as much as these offend you.

Better look out for it.

To quote the stutterer:

"Everybody has his little eccentricity. What's yours?"

Ruth Cameron

YOU CAN SEE IT WORK

The beauty of Dr. Chase's Ointment as a healer of the skin in eczema, salt rheum, itching skin diseases and old sores is that anyone can see from day to day exactly what it is doing. There is no guess work, no experimenting. It simply heals the skin and makes it soft, smooth and natural. It heals as if by magic. Prove this to your own satisfaction by trying it.

THE GUILD OF GOOD FELLOWSHIP MEETING

The second of these Sunday afternoon meetings for men, under the auspices of St. John's Guild of Good Fellowship, was held in the Princess theatre yesterday. The Rev. C. Carpenter expressed his pleasure at the large attendance, but hoped to have eventually an attendance of 200 Sunday by Sunday. After remarking that on the previous Sunday the subject was "The Making of the Man," he said he wished to follow this up by speaking on "My Troublesome Friend." He then went on to intimate that the "troublesome friend" was the care of the human soul, viz., the body. How the care of the body was of the utmost importance, not only as to the health of the same, but as a necessity in the production of a clean life. He said he intended having a straight talk to the men present, and a straight talk it was—First as to the purity in themselves, and secondly as to their responsibility as fathers, insofar as in them lie in ensuring the purity in their children. He spoke of the obligation of parents shielding their children from danger by judicious warnings and instructions. He showed how sin left its scars, and that although as in Christ's hands the print of the nails remained after the resurrection, the scars may still be visible in the glorified body, but not as a reproach for former sins, but as an evidence of God's loving mercy in forgiving and redeeming those so scarred.

He treated the subject from a semi-medical standpoint, which was made all the more interesting, by his own personal hospital experiences.

The League has been formed to do good to the men of our city, and to form a close bond of fellowship amongst its members and with this view a few leading members stayed behind to talk over the formation of a Social Club, where members can meet and take their friends, and it is hoped this will be started, in a small way, in about a week's time.

ACCEPTED CALL

Rev. W. B. Tighe, of Whitby, secretary of the Western Board of Missions of the Baptist church for Ontario and Quebec has accepted a call to Parry Sound. Mr. Tighe, his friends will be glad to learn, has almost entirely recovered from the effects of his recent accident in Toronto; in which he was struck by a street car, sustaining injuries which laid him up for some time.

KIDNEY MISERY AND BACKACHE VANISHES

A Few Doses Make Kidneys Act Fine and End Urinary Trouble

No reader of this paper, whether man or woman, need be miserable because of Backache or kidney or bladder disorders.

The time to cure kidney trouble is while it is only trouble. Before it settles into Dropsy, Gravel, Diabetes or Bright's Disease.

Pape's Diuretic acts at once upon the kidneys, bladder and entire urinary system, cleanses, heals and regulates these organs, ducts and glands and completes the cure within a few days. The moment you suspect any kidney or urinary derangement, or feel a constant, dull backache or notice that the urine is thick, cloudy, offensive or full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, you should begin taking Pape's Diuretic as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy, at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure.

Misery in the back, sides or loins, sick headache, inflamed or puffy eyelids, nervousness, Prostatic trouble, rheumatism and darting pains, heart palpitations, bilious stomach, dizziness, sleeplessness, listless, weak, worn-out feeling and other symptoms caused by inactive, sluggish kidneys simply vanish. Uncontrollable urination (especially at night), smarting, discoloured water and all bladder misery ends.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will vouch for the responsibility of Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who prepare Pape's Diuretic. 50 cent treatment—sold by every druggist in the world.

BRIGHAM RUTH SOLD

Mr. Stratton Has Disposed of Her to Montreal Resident

Hon. J. R. Stratton has disposed of "Brigham Ruth," one of his stable of hackneys, to one of the most prominent citizens of Montreal for saddle and harness purposes. "Ruth was one of Mr. Stratton's most successful prize winners at the Cobourg Horse Show, the Canadian National Exhibition and at the Ogdensburg, N.Y., and Montreal Horse Shows. The price paid was in the neighbourhood of $1500.

Mr. Stratton has also disposed of the carriage pair he has been driving in Peterborough for some time, and they will leave for Toronto this week.

"WHY BE SO THIN?"

Thinness is Embarrassing, Unhealthy and Not Natural—Formula Now Used Which Adds From One to Three Pounds a Week.

Every one ought to have some extra flesh on the bony structure of the body, both for the sake of health and self esteem.

Most thin people are sensitive to the harsh, unfeeling criticisms which are constantly being hurled at them by the more fortunate well-figured persons.

Every one pities a thin, bony horse, but horses don't know it—while thin people are both pitied and ridiculed. It ought not to be so, but it is.

A well rounded figure, be it man or woman, excites admiration; not only for the figure but for the bright eyes, pink cheeks, red lips, and vigorous carriage which accompany a well-nourished body.

This prescription aids nature; helps absorption, digestion and assimilation; helps distribute the blood and nerve elements which make sound flesh. Get the ingredients and make it at home, and see how very fast you gain in weight.

In a half pint bottle, obtain three ounces of essence of pepsin, three ounces syrup of rhubarb. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol, shake and let stand two hours, then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound, (not cardamom). Shake well and take a teaspoonful before meals and one after meals. Also drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Weigh yourself before beginning.

"THE BETRAYAL," THE EXAMINER'S NEW STORY

The Examiner has [illegible] serial stories which have [illegible] splendid romances as "The Prince of the Light," "The Wives of the Morning" and "The Sky-Man," will be a notable addition on Saturday next. "The Betrayal," the story is a thrilling story of mystery and adventure, which has added much to the reputation of E. Phillips Oppenheim, the clever English author. "The Betrayal" will be found a little different from the successful love stories that have appeared in the Examiner, but it is even more interesting and exciting than the splendid romances already given the readers of this paper. The scene of the story such as "The Betrayal" are not common, but the Examiner believes in the policy that its readers like a change. That they will enjoy "The Betrayal" seems certain. The first instalment appears on Saturday, and the story will continue daily until completed. Don't fail to read the opening chapters.

The Evangelistic Campaign At Park Street Church

In the morning he spoke on "Love," and in a very tender way told them of the necessity and worth of real love as a working principle among men.

The afternoon mens meeting for men was well attended, the body of the pretty auditorium of the church being completely filled. It was indeed, an inspiration to see so many men present. All listened with rapt attention to the eloquent address given in such a practical way by Dr. Luttrell upon "The Man Who Wins."

We cannot repeat all the good things he said but he made it clear, beyond a doubt, that the men who are most have Jesus Christ for their chief companion. Several men made a desire to lead a new life at the close of the service.

There will be another meeting next Sunday the subject will be announced later. Next Sunday will be the Doctor's last Sunday at Park Street church, and on Tuesday evening, the [illegible] he will give his lecture on "How I was saved and rescued from a Drunkard's Grave." A silver will offering will be taken.

Yesterday the Evangelist took for his theme "Sin." It was a clear-cut definition of sin, given from a Biblical standpoint. At all the services yesterday men and women came out for Jesus.

There will be a meeting to-night at 8 p.m., when Mr. Mulligan will sing

DOMESTIC TROUBLES WERE AIRED IN THE POLICE COURT

Frederick Davis Wanted a Razor and Talked of Cutting Throats---He Was Jealous of a Boarder, His Wife Told the Magistrate---Defendant is Bound Over to Keep the Peace.

Fred Davis, a man employed as stone mason with a local construction company was charged with assault and threat of murder in this morning's police court by his wife. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the defence.

Mrs. Davis was put in the witness box first and stated that on Friday night Mr. Davis had punished one of her sons for peddling bills on the street and on Saturday night he was going to do so again for the same offence and she interfered. It appeared that it was not an unusual thing for them to quarrel. They keep boarders, a married couple and a young man who comes from St. John, N.B., staying with them at present. Mrs. Davis stated that her husband was jealous of her, without any reason. She said if she went out to a store he would make her give a full account of her movements. On Saturday night when she interfered with his punishing the boy, he told her if she and the boys were going to run the house he would get out, and got all his clothes together and took them away. He came back to the house about 9 o'clock and asked for his razor. Mrs. Davis gave it to him and he asked her to come out into another room she wanted to talk to her, where the others could not hear. She refused. He then left and came back at 1 o'clock. He told her he had been at the fire and asked for a dry pair of socks. She gave them to him. When he left the first time she sent one of the boys over to the police station with a watch that she alleges her husband stole last 12th of July in Lindsay. She told him what she had done when he came back and he was angry. He told her that she had cut his throat and now he would cut her's too. She thought he meant to do it with the razor. She told him that he dare not do that and told him if he was going to leave the house to leave it and not come back annoying her. He then left the house and came back about 1.30 and rang the door bell. She answered and asked him what he wanted. He only said "There's more in my head than you think of," and would neither go in nor out, but stood in the door way. She became alarmed and sent for the police. In court this morning Mrs. Davis had two witnesses, the lady who is boarding with her and Alfred Meakins, of whom she alleges her husband is jealous. Meakins has a gaol record in this city. The evidence given by the witnesses did not amount to much. After due consideration of the facts of the case, Magistrate Dumble bound Davis over to keep the peace for two weeks, when they will consider the advisability of a separation for good.

Christopher Brooks, who comes from the lumber camps, blew into town the other day with $25. He got drunk and appeared in court this morning, but was allowed to go.

A man who works in the Canadian General laid a charge against a fellow workman of assault, but later withdrew the charge. The latter did not appear in court but sent the money to pay costs, which amounted to $2.10.

NON-CATHOLIC MEN AS WELL AS CATHOLIC INVITED TO ATTEND

Special Retreat for Men at St. Peter's Cathedral This Week —Rev. Father Gillies, of the Paulist Order, in the City—Sermon to Men Last Night.

AN ELOQUENT SPEAKER

Rev. Father Gillies of the Paulist Order, with headquarters in New York City, is in Peterborough, and for the next ten days will conduct a retreat at St. Peter's Cathedral. This week services will be held each evening at 7:30 for men, and next week services will be held for women for three nights. In conversation with an Examiner reporter this morning, Father Gillies pointed out that to these special services were invited men of non-Catholic churches, and every effort will be made to make them feel at home. While the work of the Paulist Order is principally among Non-Catholic people, by way of lectures on doctrinal matters in connection with the Roman Catholic Church. However, it is not Father Gillies' intention this week to speak on subjects relating to the church, but on moral topics as relating to the Christian life. There will be nothing controversial in his addresses, and Father Gillies is anxious that all should feel at home, non-Catholics as well as Catholics. All old-fashioned antipathy should be eliminated.

Rev. Father Gillies preached to men at the Cathedral last evening. He spoke of the necessity of individual labour for the working out of one's salvation, showing that in all history of Christianity, no sacrifice was too great to bring about one's own salvation, and that of his fellowmen. All the acts of Christian heroism such as shown by Father Damien in his labour among lepers, and the prodigious labours of the missionaries, developed character, and formed habits of virtue, for the sanctification of the souls. The speaker gave instances of how temptation interfered with right living and closed with an appeal to work for the perfecting of their own lives. This was possible through the inspiration of Christ and with the help of God.

Referring to the Portugese question Father Gillies remarked that a peculiar thing was that the new Republic was claimed by the new president, Braga, to be founded on justice and religious freedom, and immediately after members of religious orders were compelled to leave the country within twenty-four hours.

CHEESE BOX FACTORY WAS TOTALLY DESTROYED

could easily be seen from the business section, and the result was that in a few minutes George street which, until the alarm sounded, had its usual busy Saturday night appearance, was quickly deserted. On Dublin street, in front of the building, many hundreds gathered, blocking the road in that section, and every yard in the rear of the fire, as well as every roof had its crowd of spectators, who watched with fascinated interest the raging blaze. The tin roof of the box factory fell in about 9.15 o'clock and the spectacular features of the conflagration were ended soon afterwards as the vast quantity of water poured into the burning structure, subdued the flames.

The firemen were successful in their efforts to save the planing mill and the fire was confined to the portion where it had broken out. Nothing could have saved that section of the plant on account of the start the fire obtained. One man informed the Examiner that he had seen the flames from the corner of Aylmer and Murray streets before the alarm sounded, so that it can be imagined that Chief Howard and his men had no easy task awaiting them when they arrived. That they saved the rest of the company's property indeed speaks volumes for their efficiency and determined efforts. The box factory was, as has been said, totally destroyed, and its contents and machinery will be badly damaged, although Chief Howard made every effort to save the latter by keeping it cooled. Some of the machinery will be fit for use again, however. The border house next the roof of which the fire is thought to have started, did not suffer so severely. It is a brick structure, and protected by an iron roof and was not totally destroyed although badly damaged. The planing mill, the brick building at the front, escaped with the exception that the roof was damaged a little and there will be some loss on account of water damage.

So dangerous did the fire look at one stage that product citizens living in the houses near the factory, on George street, organized amateur fire brigades on their own account and drenched their sheds and kitchens with water from lawn hose. Had there been a strong wind these premises would have been in a precarious condition and as it was, the heat was enough to create considerable anxiety.

The cheese box factory and its contents were insured, although the insurance on the building will only half cover the loss. The risk on the factory is divided between the Western Royal and Guardian Fire Insurance Companies, while the machinery was insured for $1,000 in the Royal.

Three weeks later, the fire would not have been so costly as the box making season would have been at an end. As it was there was a shipment of boxes, four hundred in number, which were to have gone to Buckhorn today, stored in the building and of these only about thirty were saved.

A number of firemen remained on the scene all night in order to watch the premises in case of any further trouble.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

Dear Sir,—A few days ago, soon after the city had cleaned up Reid street from Hunter to Charlotte, somebody in the interests of some of the companies who have seized upon our streets—electric light, telephone or telegraph—mutilated the tree tops on both sides of the street to accommodate their wires. As if this was not enough of an outrage, the severed limbs have been left encumbering and disfiguring the streets. Who is responsible for these conditions? We should like to know—we common citizens who labour under the delusion that we own the streets—who authorized this action and who permits the rubbish to be left on the streets? Will the Board of Works, the Board of Trade or the Board of Health or any of the other lumber that enters into the composition of our governing authorities, act as if the city had some rights that were not surrendered to the overweening arrogance of the various companies that have seized upon our streets and dig them up or litter them, at will.

Yours truly,
TAXPAYER.

HUNDREDS PERISHED

Beaudette, Graceton, Pitt and Spooner Are Gone, and Death List Is Put at Three Hundred, While Forest Fire Continues to Travel — Is Also Burning on Canadian Side—Train Goes Through Bridge.

Warroad, Minn., Oct. 10. Beaudette, Spooner, Pitt, and Graceton, Minnesota, were wiped off the map of Minnesota by the most terrible forest fire ever witnessed by Minnesota settlers. The bodies of 73 settlers have been found and it is thought that the death roll among the settlers will be upwards of 300. Wagonloads of dead bodies are being brought into the railway station at Beaudette constantly.

It is reported that many settlers crazed with grief at the loss of their families and property, are roaming the woods, and searching parties are constantly going out after the injured, the dead and the demented. One family of nine, one of seven, and one of five were wiped out on Friday night.

The people of the Beaudette and Spooner, and the settlers through the northern part of the state have lost everything. A great many are homeless and the greater part of them destitute. Help must reach them in the next day or two in some substantial way, as the greater part of them are but half clad, and cold weather is likely to set in at any time.

Yesterday morning this town was on fire from the International Bridge to Sixth street, a distance of half a mile. Included in the burned area are the Rat Portage Lumber Co.'s mills and lumber yards, containing ten million feet of lumber; the Western Canada Flour Mills Co., and surrounding buildings. Fifty houses are burned, and scores of people are homeless.

Fire is raging in the woods as far as can be seen along the south bank of Rainy River. If the wind remains in the north it is possible the rest of Rainy River will be saved. Most of old Beaudette and International Bridge have so far escaped the fire.

All available hose is in use, but the fire, driven by a strong northwest wind, is beyond control and must burn itself out.

Canadian Northern Railway trains have been stalled here since Friday night, when a freight train went through a bridge near Pitt. The crew was saved, and Conductor Monahan walked into Beaudette. He reports that town destroyed, only the water tank, the school house walls and the depot standing. Monahan says he walked over bodies on the way, but could not say how many. Many settlers took to the woods and have not been heard from since. A mother and five children are known to have been burned.

Outfits are coming in to help settlers 12 miles south. Wires are down, and news is obtainable only as refugees come in.

Fever Patients Carried Away.

International Falls, Minn., Oct. 10 — More than 250 dead, millions upon millions of dollars worth of property destroyed, 3,000 refugees fleeing from the flames, is an epitome of the happenings of the day's session in the Baltrami County fires. Thirty-five typhoid fever patients were carried on improvised litters from Spooner, just ere it was wiped off the map. Forty-five were carried from Beaudette.

The Mecca of all the refugees, carried or tottering from exhaustion, was Rainy River, Canada, across the water from the fire-ridden districts of Minnesota. Then the flames hit Rainy River, destroyed the lumber mills and 200 panic-stricken persons piled into freight cars and all but mobbed the engineer of a switch engine, who thinking there was no danger, started to pull them out of the town. Later the flames subsided, and Saturday night 500 refugees landed in International Falls, strong men shaking like leaves in a gale, women and their children, fever patients on shutters, burned men and women swathed in bandages.

There was no escape to the west, the east was the only chance, and it was a slim one. Bridges and culverts had burned out, wires were down, and [illegible] were run at [illegible] speed [illegible] way from Beaudette and Rainy River, west to Warroad, a distance of fifty miles, was a solid mass of flame. Beaudette, merely a charred remnant of a town. Spooner is wiped off the map. Cedar Spur, Graceton, Pitt, Swift and Roosevelt, small hamlets, are burned to the ground.

UNKNOWN SOLDIERS

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 10. The remains of nine unknown American soldiers, who fell at the battle of Lundy's Lane, July 25, 1814, were reinterred in Drummond Hill Cemetery yesterday afternoon. The remains were discovered three months ago, when excavations were being made near the grave of Laura Secord.

The ceremonies yesterday were under the joint auspices of the Lundy Lane Historical Society of this town and the Niagara Frontier Landmarks Association of Buffalo. The single casket was draped with the Stars and Stripes and banked with flowers, sent from many parts of both Canada and the States.

Short addresses were delivered by R. G. Geary, president of the Lundy's Lane Historical Society; George D. Emerson, secretary of the Niagara Frontier Landmarks Association, and Rev. William Bevan, rector of All Saints' Anglican Church. Chaplain Wood of Fort Niagara read the United States army burial service. Rev. Dr. Wallace, pastor of the Drummond Hill Presbyterian Church, and Very Rev. Dean Bevan, rector of Christ's Church, assisted. After the service Bugler O'Connor of Fort Niagara sounded taps over the casket.

Major Pendleton of Fort Porter represented Secretary of War Dickinson of the United States.

HAS BEEN CAUGHT

Galt, Oct. 10.—The chief of a gang of burglars, who have been operating in Galt all summer, was run in by Chief Gorman yesterday. He is a German, aged forty, gives his name as Johann Banningen, and says he comes from Buffalo. He had pals, but refuses to tell who they are. The prisoner worked at Getty & Scott's shoe factory.

The amount of stuff stolen by the gang reaches over $1,000, and their victims are scattered all over the town. All credit is due the police chief for working up the case with practically no clue. These mysterious robberies had fairly set residents in a panic.

The Toronto police are also interested in the capture, because it is believed this gang was concerned in depredations in that city. The prisoner will be put in the sweat box, and may give important information.

Quarter Million Collection.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 10. What was said to be the largest collection ever taken up on plates by any church in America, an interpretation by the house of bishops on the "open pulpit" subject and refusal to change the name of the church, were among the most important features of the triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in session here on Saturday. While the convention was in session, a communion service was being held in Christ Church, where the donations were being received from the women's auxiliary for the general missionary fund. At the conclusion it was announced that the collection was $243,110.83.

Revolver Accidentally Discharged.

Fort William, Oct. 10.—While Alfred Gilby and an unknown friend were unloading a revolver Sunday morning at Mobelle, fifty-nine miles west of the C.N.R., it was accidentally discharged, and the bullet entered Gilby's abdomen. A special train rushed him to the General Hospital at Port Arthur, where he lies critically ill, the bowels having been perforated eight times.

Rector Half a Century.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 10.—Rev. Dean Houston retires as rector of Christ Anglican Church here Nov. 1, after half a century in that charge. He will be succeeded by Rev. Guy Gordon, rector of St. John's, Port Dalhousie.

Denies the Stories of Clerical Wrong-Doing, and Says Mob Is Responsible For the Religious Troubles In Portugal — Every Effort Being Made to End the Bad Feelings —Convent Attacked by Mob.

Gibraltar, Oct. 10.—The fugitive royal family of Portugal left the yacht Amelie yesterday, and are now the guests of the governor at Government House. The yacht sailed for Lisbon last night. She will enter the harbor without displaying any flag, and will be turned over to the Government.

The people of Gibraltar gave the exiles a warm welcome. When they attended mass at St. Mary's Church yesterday morning, the edifice was crowded, and thousands had congregated outside. King Manuel and the Queen Mother drove from the yacht in Government carriages, with the members of their suite, the governor's aide, the admiral of the port and his flag lieutenant attending them. The people along the route cheered enthusiastically, and the King and Queen bowed their acknowledgments smilingly.

At the entrance of the church Monsignor Chinetta received them and conducted them to seats near the high altar, not far from the beautiful stained windows, which were recently placed as memorials to the murdered King Carlos and the crown prince.

On their departure from the church the members of the party were cheered again. When he left the yacht King Manuel said farewell to all the crew, who kissed his hand, while the others were attending church the Dowager Maria Pia landed and drove to the Government House. The whole party had lunch with the governor, Sir Archibald Hunter. Sentries were doubled, while strong police patrols were stationed outside the house.

Quantities of baggage and furniture have been unloaded from the yacht. Apparently they had been placed on board some time ago, in preparation for a possible flight.

Pope Will Inquire.

Rome, Oct. 10. The Vatican has received despatches from Monsignor Tonti, papal nuncio at Lisbon, dated Cintra, which took more than twenty-four hours to reach Rome. These despatches briefly report the facts concerning the revolutionary movement, as already known to the public.

With reference to the Jesuits and other ecclesiastics throwing bombs and other explosives without provocation, the Vatican appeals to the commonsense of the people of any country as to the improbability of such occurrences. The Vatican points out that it very likely was repetition of what happened in Barcelona in 1909, that the mob must have attacked the religious houses, the inmates defending themselves.

Regarding the various statements made by Premier Canalejas at Madrid it is openly stated by Vatican officials that if he intends to continue that kind of policy, it will be impossible for the Holy See to reach an agreement on the religious question with Spain, as the principles of the Premier are distinctly anti-religious, notwithstanding his affirmations to the contrary.

Calming Anti-Clericals.

Lisbon, Oct. 10.—The Government is making strong efforts to calm the anti-clerical agitation. The Minister of the Interior has been touring the streets in an automobile dispersing manifestants. Priests are set upon wherever seen. A few of the churches, having priests recognized by the Government, have opened their doors.

An armed band yesterday entered Trinas' Convent, which was occupied by 150 Portuguese Sisters of Charity, some of whom resisted. A dozen of the sisters were wounded. Later the troops occupied the convent. The wounded sisters were transferred to a hospital. The others were taken away in closed vans, their destination being unknown.

Killed the Bill Poster.

New York, Oct. 10.—A Chinaman dressed in his flowing native robes of yellow and red, stood on a small wooden bench pasting up a flaring red proclamation in Chinese characters against the wall of 21 Doyers street early Saturday night. To him, breathless after a long run, rushed Policemen Waterbury and Anderson, who had been called from the Elizabeth street station by a rumor of trouble at 14 Mott street, and later at 21 Doyers street.

While they were questioning the Chinaman as to where the trouble was, one policeman standing at either side of him, they heard a shot from across the street, and the Chinese billposter tumbled from the bench. The proclamation, torn and blood-stained, fluttered to the pavement beside him.

CUT HIS THROAT

Ingersoll, Oct. 10.—Ezra Storey of this town committed suicide yesterday morning by slashing his throat from ear to ear several times. A few minutes before 11 o'clock he went into his room to shave. Shortly after his wife and son heard a trickling noise in the room, and on going into it were horrified to see the unfortunate man lying in the floor with his throat terribly gashed. One of the neighbors were immediately called in, and even then he dying man made desperate attempts to continue cutting at his throat. Medical assistance was immediately sent for, but by the time Coroner Dr. Neff arrived, Mr. Storey was breathing his last.

Mr. Storey had been in a mentally unsound condition for some little time, and during the last few days has been particularly melancholy. His wife a few nights ago wrested a knife from his hands, which he had taken to bed with him, determined to carry out the deed, which yesterday resulted in his death. She also has been carrying his razor for some days, in fear of his carrying out a threat that he would some day end his life.

THE TRINITY COLLEGE TEAM TOO MUCH FOR COLLEGIATE

Visitors Won Saturday's Game by 20 Points to 7---Collegiate Finished Strong but Their Rally Was Too Late---First Game of the Season Was a Good Exhibition.

The old rivals, Trinity College School of Port Hope and Peterborough Collegiate Institute fourteens, met in an interesting game of Rugby at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, and the result was a clean-cut victory for the visitors, the score being 20 to 7 in their favour. T.C.S led all the way, and at the end of the third quarter were ahead 20 to 0. Until shortly before that stage they had all the better of the play, but the Collegiate boys rallied a few minutes before three-quarter time and from then until the final whistle out-played and outscored the visitors.

T. C. S., with all but one of last year's back division, and heavier all the way round, proved too awkward a proposition for the homesters, of whom only six were on last year's team. T. C. S. had the weight, the experience and the most speed, and this enabled them to win a decisive, although not an easy, victory. The Collegiate team fought hard all the way and were going stronger and better at the finish than during the opening stages. The weight of the visitors, assisted by a lot of interference, was used to advantage in bucking the line, and T.C.S. devoted themselves to line-plunging tactics almost exclusively. They realized early in the game that this policy would produce the best results, and they kept plugging away at Peterborough's lines with tandem bucks, wings and backs taking turns at carrying the ball. For the greater part of the game the Collegiate wings seemed unable to stop these plunges, but in the last quarter they began pulling down the man with the ball for losses. Perhaps it was on account of the fact that the officials began to penalize T.C.S. frequently for interference, at any event the smashes into the line did not gain as they had done earlier in the battle.

T. C. S. looked to have a better team than last season. The back division is the same, with the exception that Lindsay, last year with St. Andrew's, is on the half line, and their wing line seems faster and heavier than the 1909 team. The backs are fast and clever, the only fault being that none of them seem very sure with his hands, but this muffing will disappear with practice. Martin, the full-back, ran splendidly, getting a thirty-five yard dash for a try, and the three halves were almost as fast, while McAulay did some fine punting.

The Collegiate team has an entirely new back division from quarter, clean through. Burritt, Gibson, Rankin, Richardson and Geale are all absentees this season and the new rear guard has not had enough practice together to work very smoothly, although they caught and kicked better than the visitors' backs. They are, perhaps, shy a little on speed, and would be better for the services of a good running half, but on the whole their work was good on Saturday. Most of the fumbles they made were caused by two men going after a punt together, and this error may be set down to the little practice they have had. Minorgan did some grand punting, perhaps a little too far for his wings, but certainly better than the kicking of the visitors. Vernie Hayes' tackling was one of the brightest features of the game. The little full-back pulled off some beautiful dives at flying runners, which cut off some very promising runs. Quarter-back Matthews played a steady, effective game. On the wing-line the feature was the bucking of Hogan, and the following up and all round good work of Laing, Gilbert and Conroy, who were always in the thickest of the fray.

The teams were as follows:

Referee, A. Quinlan, Peterborough.

Umpire, F. Denison, T.C.S.

Hayes kicked off for Peterborough, but the play was carried at once into the Collegiate territory. On the first scrimmage T. C. S. worked a tandem buck for a big gain. Collegiate were offside at ... lost ten yards. T. C. S. bucked through two gains but lost possession on a fumble. The visitors regained the ball, however, made a big gain with an onside kick. Their heavy back division, aided by offside interference frequently by their wings, tore holes in the Peterborough line, and the homesters seemed unable to stop them. Finally Hinckley, the big middle wing man, was pushed over for a touch. The attempt at converting was a failure. Score, T.C.S. 5, Collegiate 0.

Peterborough worked hard, but were unable to make much impression upon the T.C.S. line. Their bucks were smothered up and attempts at end runs and criss-crosses met the same fate, with the result that they had to fall back on the kicking game, which proved better tactics. The T. C. S. back division were not any too good with their hands and fumbled several of Minorgan's long punts. They were lucky in recovering a loose ball several times, but finally Laing followed up fast and dropped on the oval three yards on a bad miss by Lindsay. Hogan hit the line for a gain, but the Collegiate were offside in the buck, and lost a golden chance. Rogers broke through on the first down, and carried the ball thirty yards before being brilliantly downed by Hayes. Once more the T. C. S. commenced a procession of bucks towards the Collegiate line. In breaking up one of these Conroy was sent off for tripping. Quarter time was called a few minutes afterwards.

T.C.S. continued to have the better of the play in the second quarter. They kept up their same line-plunging tactics and gained ground repeatedly although their tandem bucks, with the assistance of the wing-line, looked to be rather ... They got away with it, however, ... and it counted for big gains. Collegiate worked hard but could not hold them back. Lindsay finally carrying the ball over for a try, which was converted neatly. Score, T.C.S. 11, Collegiate 0.

Just before half-time ... a long kick by Craig, on the ... turn of a punt, carried the play ... to T. C. S's quarter for the first ... time in the period, but time was ... called before the locals had a chance.

T. C. S. ... continued to press after the rest. ... Although the Collegiate wings were ... ripping into their tandems and ... breaking up their plunges in much ... better fashion than at first. A fumble of a long punt gave the T. C. S. ... possession at Peterborough's twenty yard line, and after two bucks had been forced back, Martin dropped a goal neatly from the field. T.C.S. 15, Collegiate 0.

The visitors kept Peterborough on the defensive and fight as they might the Collegiate team could not get away. Finally, Martin grabbed a long punt from Minorgan on Peterborough's thirty-five yard line, and tore through a broken field, dodging half a dozen tackles for a try. It was the prettiest run of the day. The attempt at converting was close enough to hit the goal post. T.C.S. 20, Collegiate 0.

The tide suddenly changed at this stage. And for the balance of the game the Collegiate were the aggressors with the red and black team fighting to hold their lead, instead of increasing it. Hogan started the trouble. In a tandem buck the big middle wing man crashed into the T. C. S. line, like a runaway locomotive. He tore the centre out of the visitors' advance guard and plunged through for a gain of twenty five yards. This exploit seemed to act like a stimulant on the garney and gray team. On the next down on a fake buck Matthews skirted T. C. S.'s right wing for a fifteen-yard gain. On the next Hogan was sent through their left wing for ten yards more. Once more Matthews made a big gain on a fake buck, and the Collegiate were within striking distance. Hogan made their yards on three bucks and then T. C. S. were offside and it was Collegiate's ball with the line only five yards away. Before another scrimmage, however, three-quarter time was called, preventing an almost certain touch down.

In the last quarter the Collegiate team kept up the good work and were on the aggressive all the way. T. C. S. could not gain with their bucks, the Collegiate wings ripping through and pulling down the man with the ball. On the other hand Hogan's bucking and good punting by Minorgan, kept T.C.S. on the run. Finally Minorgan kicked over the head line, for Peterborough's first point: T. C. S. 20, Peterborough 1.

Peterborough went right at the visitors and kept the play in their quarter. The T. C. S. backs fumbled badly at this stage and they could not work the ball away. ... Minorgan kicked over to Rogers who fumbled and Conroy dropped on the ball for a try, which Hayes converted.

Score, T. C. S. 20, Collegiate, 7

The time was too short, however, and although the Collegiate did not let up until the finish they were unable to add to their score before the final whistle sounded.

HOWDEN-EASTWOOD ATHLETIC CONTEST

The next event on the sport calendar of interest to the people of Peterborough will be the "Howden and Eastwood" athletic contest at Riverside Park, Saturday, October 15th. The contest for the "Howden" Trophy which is emblematic of the City all round athletic Championship, and is open to every amateur athlete in the city. The events for the "Howden" Trophy will be 100 yard dash, 120 yard hurdles, one mile run, 12 lb shot put running high and broad jumps, and half mile walk. The scoring will be by points, each contestant will get credit for his performance in each event. The man having the greatest number of points will be declared the winner. This way of scoring is new, so far as these contests are concerned but the committee in charge feel that if this system has given satisfaction in some of the largest competitions in the world, it could not do better than adopt the same system for these contests.

The Eastwood Trophy is emblematic of the all-round Junior Athletic City Championship, and is open to every boy in the city who has not reached his 18th birthday. The events will be the same as the senior with the exception of the 8 lb. shot in place of the 12 lb. and the half mile run in place of the mile, in case of any disputes regarding age of Junior competitors, competitors will be obliged to furnish certificates of birth from registration offices.

There will be no admission fee charged and the public are invited to attend, everything will be run off in first class style and a good day's sport is assured all those who attend.

Entries will be received and any further information will be given by Mr. Thompson, Physical Director of the Y.M.C.A.

FIRST ENTRANT IN EXAMINER RACE

Willie Downer, 496 Parnell street, is the first entrant in the Examiner road races, which will be held three weeks from to-day. His entry came in Saturday for the junior event and will be the advance guard of a long list of youngsters for this contest. Willie was fifteenth in the junior event last year and is confident that he can get up closer to the front on Thanksgiving Day. It should be remembered that contestants in the junior race must be under eighteen years of age.

Only three weeks more to get into shape in; the runners who intend to enter should be already getting into shape.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE VULTURE.

Miss Alice Ellsmore of Wm. Fletcher's comedy, "The Vulture," was the attraction at matinee and evening performances at the Grand on Saturday and pleased two good audiences. The play is cleverly written along some what unusual lines, contains some stirring situations and is told in bright, sparkling dialogue. The result is a very entertaining and interesting comedy. The acting in Saturday's production was uniformly good. Miss Ellsmore's interpretation of the role of Romona, "the girl of whom it is said some unknown power lies within the depths of her eyes," left nothing to be desired. Don Merrifield gave a realistic portrayal of Horace Brandon, "the vulture," and the other roles were in good hands. Specialties between acts were of the same high grade.

"MR. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS" HERE ON THURSDAY EVENING

Those who enjoy the best kind of amusement in the way of farcical comedy will welcome the coming for next Thursday evening to the Grand Theatre of the eminent English actor, Mr. Weedon Grossmith, in his most recent triumph as Mr. Preedy in Carton's play, "Mr. Preedy and the Countess." The entire organization as seen at the Criterion Theatre, London, England, for two years, comes for a short tour in the principal cities of Canada, including Montreal Ottawa, Kingston, Peterborough, Hamilton and Toronto, going direct from Toronto for a winter's engagement in New York. Miss Charlotte Granville, Mr. Grossmith's leading lady, who plays the Countess, is a great favourite in London, admired not alone for her artistic ability, but charm of grace and manner, together with being a remarkably handsome woman, making an ideal characterization of the role. The entire cast has been chosen from among the best of London's players, and the forthcoming engagement gives promise of absolute delight.

MORE TRIUMPHS FOR EXAMINER WANT ADS.

The Examiner Want Ad. Columns continue to justify their existence by producing daily proofs of their efficiency. On Saturday a lady, who had lost a fur boa, advertised in the Examiner, with the result that the missing article had been returned to this office before 6 o'clock. During the past week Examiner want ads recovered a gold brooch and a gold watch. The Examiner is read by nearly everyone in Peterborough. Your advertisement comes before all these readers. Do you see the point?

Generous Response To Chimes Fund Shows A Fine Public Spirit

The splendid work on the part of the employees of the factories of the city in connection with the Chimes' Fund continues, the way the public has responded to the appeal being most public-spirited. On Saturday night an unusual departure was made on the part of the officers of the 57th Regiment, when they voted fifty dollars to the fund. This was exceptionally generous, when it is considered that all the officers had been individual subscribers. This handsome gift will be a lasting feature of the generous response of the citizens, in connection with the raising of the fund. Probably no better evidence of the enthusiasm in the project is shown than that of Mr John Murphy of the Quaker Oats Company, who, with the assistance of some of the other men of the works, sent in over $37, with the promise that more will follow. This brings the total amount from this generous factory over $60.00. Through Mr. R. A. Sutcliffe eleven dollars has been collected at the C. G. E. works. The men of the George Matthews Co., without any solicitation whatever, have sent $17. This was, indeed, a happy surprise, and is gratefully appreciated. The fund at noon to-day stood at $4,774.32.

Insist on Representation.

Quebec, Oct. 10.—In accepting a degree from Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Earl Grey made some remarks that are causing comment here. He said that Canada's population might be eight millions at the next census, and he believed that in the next decade the population would be twelve millions. As soon as Canada reached that population the people of this country should insist on imperial representation, so that the man in Sherbrooke, would have the same rights as the man in Sussex or Middlesex in England.

It was proper that the colonies should contribute towards the maintenance of and the safeguarding of the Empire, he said. There were great possibilities before Canada, and he referred to the fact that in Queen Elizabeth's time England had only a population of five million, as compared with her population to-day, and there was no reason why Canada should not also expand.

Surrendered to Save Life.

Winter ,Wis., Oct. 10.—Just as the armed posse, which had been raining shot into the cabin of John Dietz for hours, was preparing for another volley late Saturday afternoon, the door of the hunted man's cabin at Cameron Dam opened and a little girl walked out, waving a white apron. Little Helen Dietz walked to the edge of the clearing about the besieged hut.

"If papa comes out," she said to Sheriff Mike Madden, "will you promise not to shoot him? He is shot through the hand and he wants to surrender."

CRYING FOR HELP

Fugitives From the Fire-Swept Areas of Minnesota Tell Harrowing Stories of Death and Misery Seen In the Charred District — Canadian Town May Go If the Wind Happens to Change.

Winnipeg, Oct. 11.—The first Canadian Northern train in several days arrived here at 10.15 yesterday morning from Fort Frances, this being the Duluth special. Traffic has thus been resumed through the fire-swept zone, but through traffic has not been established from Fort Frances, east of Fort William. Telegraphic communication has, however, been restored, the wire being strung along stumps of burned trees in sections where the poles were burned. A number of refugees were on the train. Among th passengers was W. A. Preston, M.P.P., who is wiring the Ontario Government from here asking for help for Rainy River. He says that the wind has dropped and the situation for the time being is under control, but if the wind shifts to another quarter Rainy River must be destroyed.

Fort Frances sent up all the fire appliances it can spare, and big gangs of men have been contributed from all along the line to stem the conflagration at the boundary. A regiment of state militia has arrived at Beaudette and have taken charge there.

The Canadian Mounted Police were sent into the fire scene to help fight the flames. Governor Eberhardt of Minnesota ordered out two companies of militia to assist the fire-fighters and help in the rescue work

The Canadian Government have forwarded some tents to house the people, and they were put up last night. What seems to be most needed is plenty of blankets and food.

Nine women rode from a settlement five miles from Warroad on horseback to escape the fire. Three of them carried babies. They rode directly down the railroad tracks, and were badly scorched.

A son of J. Simmons, who lost his home, only escaped with his life by climbing down a well and remaining there until the fire had spent itself. Mr. Simmons states that a whirlwind, high in the air, carried a large piece of burning bark which lit on his property one mile from the main body of the fire. He hitched up a team and with his family escaped with nothing but the clothes they were wearing.

The story told by Robert McAnnany and Fred. Beck, a German homesteader, aged 75 years, with regard to the miraculous escape of themselves and others is spectacular in the extreme. Both men had the hair singed from their heads and eyebrows, their eyes were so bloodshot that they could scarcely see.

Both men say that they only managed to keep alive by standing to the chin in water and putting a wet blanket over their heads.

Edward Monahan, a C.N.R. conductor, arrived in the city yesterday and told a terrible story. "It was a spectacle, the pity and horror of which I have never seen equalled. I had charge of a wheat train which was held up by a wreck. There was nothing for us to do but to follow along the track toward Beaudette, four miles away.

"We had scarcely passed the head of the burning train when we saw at the side of the road all that remained of a woman and a child of about eight months. They were both roasted to a crisp. Their clothing was burned off and the ties beneath the bodies were also charred.

"A little piece farther on we found near the track a man and two boys. They were dead beyond doubt. Only their boots remained upon the bodies, and they were charred beyond recognition.

"We passed a little creek, or were about to pass it, when we were thoroughly startled by an agonized moan which seemed to emanate from the brook bed. Investigating, we found an old man. He lay with his legs submerged in the water. We carried him out and found that his legs had been terribly burned. We brought him in, and I think it was stated that he will recover.

"Then we came upon a woman. She had given up hope and was awaiting death. Her condition was awful. She was been burned and her strength was almost spent."

When the refugees fled in panic for the freight train that bore them to International Falls and Rainy River, men crushed down women and children, it is reported, and in spite of the fact that the cars were choked so that standing room was at a premium, they insisted on cramming themselves in.

Miss Myra Burt, a young woman of Beaudette, stationed herself at the door of one car, kicked every man in the face with her pointed shoes, that attempted to board the car, and herself reached out and took babies from the arms of their mothers. When the train started there were five babies whose mothers were left behind. They are being cared for in the hospital here.

In Rainy River over a hundred deputies have been sworn in and divided into groups of ten to fight the fire from all sides.

Rainy River has a population of two thousand, and when last heard from there were over three thousand American refugees quartered there. When communication was cut off the town was entirely surrounded by flames, and it was burning in a number of places, the recently installed high pressure water system proving of but little avail against the wall of flames which are sweeping the country in all directions.

Shoes Burned Off Her Feet.

Warroad, Minn., Oct. 11. Minnie Shearer, a school teacher of Zipple Bay, a few miles north of here, seeing that the fires were becoming dangerous, dismissed the school, telling the children to lose no time in hurrying home. She started for her own cabin, but was overtaken by the flames. She made a dash for what she considered a safe spot, while her shoes burned off her feet, and she fell unconscious in a creek. Hours later, she awoke in the darkness, terribly burned, but she managed to crawl through the burning embers to the house of William Zipple, which was in a clearing. Some thirty other refugees had gathered in the small log shanty.

Every homestead in the vicinity of Zipple has been burned out and few people have escaped.

REPLY TO JINGOES

Premier Says a Treaty With the U. S. Can Be Negotiated Which Will Benefit Both Countries—The Navy Policy of the Government Has No Suspicion of Militarism About It—Graham Speaks.

Montreal, Oct. 11.—Given a rousing welcome by his compatriots in the Monument Nationale last night, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, speaking in French, made caustic references to the present organization of the Conservative party, warmly defended the Government's navy bill, and got after Henri Bourassa in lively fashion.

He led up to a reference to the tariff negotiations by denouncing those who accused him at various times of "treason," and continuing:

"In fact, I have been accused of that all my life. In 1896 I was accused of treason towards my race and towards my religion, because I recognized the rights of the Federal Government not to impose on a sister province a system of schools which they did not want.

"And now I am accused of treason again by the jingoes of Toronto, by the imperial jingoes, of the crime of violating the national integrity and of wishing to negotiate a treaty of reciprocity with the United States.

"The first duty of a country is to work for its prosperity, and I admit that in this action we are doing that which is likely to become prosperity to this country. And if it is treason to work for this end, then I am ready to accept that reproach.

"On the other hand, we must not forget that we are behind the United States in the matter of industrial development by at least fifty years. I believe it is possible to make a treaty with the United States which will not only be of great advantage to us, but equally to the United States, and I would not have a treaty which was not at least equally profitable to one as to the other."

The Premier then declared that there was no concession to militarism.

"Is there a single word which gives to Great Britain, as she demanded in 1902, a contribution to the navy? Not a word," he asked. "Is there in this law a single word which takes the control of the navy from the Government, the Parliament and the people of Canada? Not a single word.

"Look for another country which is a colony, which is able to make its own treaties of commerce, you will not find any. Look for another country which is a colony, which has obtained the right to have a responsible government for its own people, you will not find one. There is only the British Empire where such a state of things can be found, and it is Canada which has been the pioneer of that new politics."

"But, gentlemen, what is the consequence of this attitude? The consequence of this attitude is that the man you now have before you is accused of crime, is accused of treason. We are accused of treason in the province, treason towards out country, and treason towards the British Empire. I have been accused of treason, but I have grown accustomed to that charge during the past four years."

Hon. Geo. P. Graham, in a short speech, said that times had changed. The eastern manufacturer must learn a lesson from the west. The United States said it could give Canada certain advantages. Canada wanted to know what they were. If satisfactory Canada would consider them. If not there would be no deal.

It was time that the business men of this country realized that they should stop depending on the Government and look after their own interests.

Want Sentence Commuted.

Victoria, Oct. 11.—An effort will be made to secure commutation of the sentence of death passed upon Gunner Thomas Allen last week for the murder of Capt. Peter Ellison.

The matter was brought up yesterday by Dr. Ernest Hall, at a meeting of the Victoria Local Option League. At the trial Dr. Hall gave evidence to the effect that Allen was suffering from alcoholic insanity. His testimony was described by Chief Justice Hunter as "exaggerated," and obviously carried no weight with the jury.

Dr. Hall repeated his opinion with considerable vigor yesterday. He said that a jury of 12 ordinary men can no more tell when a man is insane than they can tell when he has appendicitis.

Each will be represented by a contingent of troops.

ZIONISM IN PROPHECY

Address to a Jewish Mass Meeting—The Hippodrome Jammed.

New York, October 9.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle today addressed a Jewish Mass Meeting, in response to a request sent to him by a Jewish Mass Meeting Invitation Committee. The invitation was signed by many prominent Hebrews of New York City. The invitation and Pastor Russell's response to the same follow:

New York, Sept. 20, 1910.

Pastor C. T. Russell, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Sir—Your sympathetic interest in the Jewish people for years past has not escaped our notice. Your denunciations of the atrocities perpetrated against our race in the name of Christianity has added to our conviction that you are a sincere friend. Your discourse on "Jerusalem and Jewish Hopes" has struck a responsive chord in the hearts of many of our people. Still we doubted for a time if any Christian minister could really be interested in a Jew as a Jew and not merely from a hope of proselyting him. It is because of this feeling that some of us request you to make a public statement respecting the nature of your interest in our people and we desire you to know that the statement you did make was very satisfactory. In it you assured us that you are not urging Jews to become Christians and join any of the sects or parties of Protestants or Catholics. That statement, Pastor Russell, has been widely published in the Jewish journals. We feel, therefore, that we have nothing to fear from you as a race. On the contrary, in that statement you mentioned that the foundation of your interest in our people is built upon your faith in the testimonies of our Law and the messages of our Prophets. You may well understand how surprised we are to find a Christian minister acknowledging that there are prophecies of the Bible still unfulfilled, which belong to the Jew and not to the Christian, and that these prophecies, according to your studies, are nearing a fulfillment of momentous interest to our Jewish race and, through us as a people, to the nations of the world.

These things, Pastor Russell, have led to the formation of a Jewish Mass Meeting Committee, which, by this letter, requests you to give a public discourse, especially to our people. If you will kindly accept this invitation, will you permit us to suggest a topic for your address, which, we believe, will be very interesting to the public and especially to the Jews, namely, "Zionism In Prophecy."

As for the meeting. We suggest Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, October 9th. We have secured an option on the Hippodrome, New York's largest and finest Auditorium, for that date, and we hope that this date and the place will be agreeable to your convenience. We assure you also of a large audience of deeply interested Hebrews, besides whoever may come of the general public.

Trusting to hear from you soon, we subscribe ourselves,

Yours respectfully,

JEWISH MASS MEETING COMMITTEE.

Brooklyn, N.Y., Sept. 21, 1910.

Jewish Mass Meeting Committee, New York City.

Gentlemen—Your kind invitation to address the Jewish Mass Meeting in the New York Hippodrome Sunday, October 9th, at 3 P. M., came duly.

I thank you for the confidence which this invitation implies. The date you have selected is not only appropriate in its relationship to the Jewish New Year, but it is very suitable to my own arrangements, as I leave on October 12th for appointments in London and elsewhere in Great Britain.

Amongst the several prominent members of your race suggested for Chairman of the Mass Meeting, I select Mr. John Barrondess, because I have had the pleasure personally of conference with him and because I know him to be very loyal to the interests of your people and because I believe him to be very highly esteemed as such in the counsels of your race.

Faithfully and respectfully yours,

C. T. RUSSELL.

The Hippodrome is really an immense and elegant Opera House with a capacity of about five thousand. It was crowded to-day and many failed to gain access. The Jewish people of this City, who number more than a million, have become deeply impressed by various discourses which Pastor Russell has recently delivered and were alert for to-day's meeting—to hear his presentation of Zionism as foretold by the prophets. The speaker held his immense audience spellbound for nearly two hours, all apparently as unconscious of the flight of time as was the speaker himself. After the service the Hebrews could be seen in little knots and groups here and there in the corridors . . . in the streets discussing the subject. The speaker's views were evidently shared by the majority. Altogether the meeting was something unique. Never before did Jews give such attention to the message of a Christian minister. And never before did a Christian minister give such a message to the Jews.

The speaker read to his audience many quotations from the prophecies of the Bible relating to Zionism, the first one of which was Psalm cii. 13-16—"Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor her, yea, the set time, is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof. Then shall the Gentiles fear the name of Jehovah, and all the kings of the earth thy glory. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory."

Pastor Russell declared that while once he had been inclined to discard the Bible as unreliable along the lines of Higher Criticism, he had subsequently given it very earnest study, entirely apart from all creeds and theories of men. This study had greatly enlightened his mind and had given him a very different view of the sacred Book. He now has absolute confidence in it. He now realizes, not only that there is a great Creator, but that he is definite, orderly, in his dealings with humanity, in his shaping of earth's affairs. For instance, the first Psalm quoted mentions the time, yea, the set time, for the return of Divine favor to Zion. So he finds matters all through the Scriptures. In due time David, Solomon and others represented Jehovah in the Kingdom of Israel and "sat upon the throne of the Kingdom of the Lord." Later the Kingdom was taken from Zedekiah, the last of the line of David to sit upon the throne of God's typical Kingdom. When the dominion was taken from him the Gentile governments were recognized, but not in the same manner as was Israel. None of them was designated the Kingdom of God. None of them was given perpetuity of rule.

But Gentile governments were promised a lease of power during the period when Israel would be cast off from God's favor. Then at the end of the appointed time the Gentile lease of earthly power in turn, and God's original provision for Israel to represent his Kingdom in the world, would return. These are the set times referred to by the Psalmist. God's promise to David—"The sure mercies of David"—were that of the fruit of his loins one should sit on the throne of the Lord forever. The real purport of this promise was that Messiah, the long-promised King of Israel, would be the root and off-shoot of the Davidic line and blessed of the Lord; his Kingdom should be an everlasting one and fully competent to fulfill all of the Divine promises made to Abraham—"In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

So long as God acknowledged the nation of Israel as his Kingdom their kings were his representatives; but when Zedekiah was rejected it was not inconsistent on the Lord's part to recognize the Gentile governments, as above suggested. Of King Zedekiah we read, "O thou profane and wicked Prince, whose time has come that iniquity should have an end. Remove the diadem. Take off the crown. This shall not be the same. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it until he come whose right it is (Messiah), and I will give it unto him" (Ezekiel xxi, 26, 27). It was at this very time that God gave the lease of earthly power to Nebuchadnezzar and his successors, as is related in Daniel's prophecy. Nebuchadnezzar dreamed, but disremembered his vision. Daniel the Prophet, made prisoner at an earlier date was, by Divine providence, introduced to the king as the one person in all the world able to rehearse the King's dream and to give its interpretation, and his power so to do is declared to have been of the Lord.

The vision was of a stupendous image. Its head of gold represented Nebuchadnezzar's Empire, Babylon. Its breast and arms of silver represented the Medo-Persian Empire. Its belly and thighs of brass represented the Grecian Empire. Its strong legs of iron represent the Roman Empire, East and West. Its feet of iron and and clay represented Papal Rome. The iron continues to represent civil governments, and the miry clay, making them appear like stone, represented ecclesiasticism as it is now mixed up with the politics of the ten kingdoms of Europe. The whole period of time in which these various Gentile governments would dominate the world would last until Messiah's promised Kingdom. And this period is symbolically stated to have been "seven times," that is, seven years—evidently not literal years, by symbolical.

At their end the lease of earthly power of Gentile governments will terminate in the great time of trouble foretold by Daniel (xii. 1). Then Messiah shall stand up in the sense of assuming control of earth's affairs and Gentile governments will cease, for all nations shall serve and obey Messiah. And then God's Chosen People Israel, will come to the front in the world's affairs, because they will become the representatives and instruments among men of Messiah's Kingdom, which will be spiritual and invisible, as is that of the Prince of this world, the Prince of darkness, whom Messiah will bind or restrain during the thousand years of his reign of righteousness and destroy at the conclusion, when he shall deliver over the Kingdom of earth to the Father. Mankind will then be perfect, because all wilful sinners will be destroyed in the Second Death. Meantime, Messiah's reign will not only bless and uplift Israel, but through Israel the blessing will extend to every nation, people, kindred and tongue in full accord with the Divine promise and oath made to Abraham more than thirty centuries ago.

The speaker, however, offers a suggestion. So far as he could discern, the time for these stupendous events is very much closer than many of us had supposed. The seven times, or years of Gentile domination, reckoned on the basis suggested in the Scriptures themselves, should be interpreted a day for a year, lunar time. Seven years in lunar time would represent 2,520 days and these, symbolically interpreted, would mean 2,520 years—from the time Nebuchadnezzar, the head of the image, was recognized down to the time of the expiration of the lease of Gentile power, when the stone shall smite the image in the feet. So far as Pastor Russell has been able to determine, the year of Zedekiah's dethronement was 606 B.C. Thus calculated the 2,520 years of Gentile lease of power will expire in October, 1914. There are some who claim that Zedekiah's dethronement should be dated B.C. 588. If this be true it could make a difference of but eighteen years and give the date 1932. Pastor Russell's convictions, however, favor the 1914 date.

For more than thirty years I have been presenting to Christian people the views I am to-day presenting especially to Jews, at the invitation of your Committee. Thirty years ago I attempted to tell to Israel the good tidings that God's set time to remember Zion had come. But that seemingly was too early. God's set time for Israel to hear was still future. I waited and am still waiting for God's own time and way for the fulfillment of Isaiah, xl, 1, 2—"Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people; speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem. Cry unto her that her appointed time is accomplished, and her iniquity pardoned, for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all of her sins."

About twenty years ago providence raised up for your people a great leader, Dr. Herzl, whose name is now a household word with your race. While your people were unready for any message that I could give them they were ready for what God sent them through Dr. Herzl a message of hope, a message of national aspiration which quickened the pulse of your people into new hope respecting the future of the Jews. Dr. Herzl's endeavor was to have all loyal sons of Israel rise from the dust and aspire to be a nation amongst nations and to provide a home for the persecuted of their race in Russia and Eastern Europe. Dr. Herzl struck the popular cord in the hearts of the people. At first it was purely political, and the name of Zion meant little of anything religious; but gradually Dr. Herzl and all the leaders of the counsels of your people began to see that the religious element of the movement was the strongest, the most powerful.

Dr. Herzl has been succeeded by Dr. Nordau, also evidently a man of great talent and great patriotism; but Zionism languishes. I am disclosing no secret when I tell you that amongst the leaders, as well as amongst the rank and file, Zionism is trembling in the balances and fearful of coming to naught. It has spent its force along the lines originally inaugurated; but it will not fail, as many fear. Without assuming the role of a seer I answer you that Zionism is about to take on fresh vigor; that its most prosperous days are yet to come. According to my understanding of the Hebrew prophets the time of "Jacob's trouble" is not yet ended. Further pogroms of Russia may be expected and further atrocities in Roumania and elsewhere. It is sad indeed to be obliged to admit that these tribulations will probably come to you from professed Christians. How ashamed I feel of those who thus dishonor the name and the teachings of my Master, I cannot find words to express! They are deluded. They have misunderstood the Teacher whom they profess to follow. Their thought is that God will torment eternally all who do not profess the name of Christ. Controlled by delusion they are serving the god Adversary and dishonoring Jesus. But as the trials and difficulties of the patriarch Joseph were God's providences to lead him on to influence and power and honor, so will all these experiences and persecutions work blessings for your race and tend to drive them out of their present satisfaction and make them long for home for Palestine. These experiences, in connection with the voice of the prophets, which will henceforth more and more ring in your ears, will be the providences of God to accomplish for you more along the lines of Zionism than personal pride and national patriotism.

It is not my thought that the eight millions of Jews in the world will all go to Palestine, even though it has been estimated that, under most favorable conditions, the land could support more than twice that many. It is my thought that some of your most earnest and saintly people will go to Palestine quickly, that the rejuvenation there will be astonishing to the world. Further, it is my thought that Jews in every part of the world, in proportion as they come under the holy influences of God's promises through the prophets, will go to Palestine sympathetically, by encouraging those who can better go than themselves and by financial assistance and the establishment there of great enterprises. Permit me to suggest that in the time of trouble, incidental to the transfer of Gentile rule to the power of Messiah, all financial interests will be jeopardized. Many of your race, growing wealthy, will surely take pleasure in forwarding the work of Zionism, as soon as they shall realize that it is of God, foretold through the prophets. And those of your people of insufficient faith to use their means in forwarding the Lord's work at this important juncture will, before very long, find themselves in the condition pictured by the Prophet Ezekiel, who declares (vii. 19) that in this great day of trouble—"They shall cast their silver in the streets and their gold shall be removed; their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord." The great Messenger of the Covenant whom ye delight in (Malachi iii. 1-3) will test and prove you as a people. Those who worship idols of gold and silver, stocks and bonds, will receive severe chastisement at his hand that they may learn a great lesson before he will grant them a share in the coming blessings.

AN APPEAL TO REASON

TWELVE months ago, after prolonged investigation and experiment, we pinned our faith to the Knight motor as the greatest improvement of the decade in automobile construction.

Many believed us, bought cars and are to-day congratulating themselves on their judgement.

There were croakers then, perhaps there are to-day, but we hear less of them.

THEY SAID—The engine was an experiment forgetting that it had stood the greatest engine test on record before the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland.

THEY SAID—It will not stand up on Canadian roads; although they knew a challenge of $1,250 was open to anyone who wished to measure his motor against the Knight for reliability.

THEY SAID—That it would not be taken up in Europe, and that the Daimler Company were about to discard it. We knew at the time and anyone can verify it now, that the leading concerns of six of the countries of Europe have adopted the Knight motor.

THEY SAID—No one in the United States would take it up. We know that over twenty of the largest concerns in the United States have from time to time applied for consideration in the American rights. And we know to-day that leading United states firms will announce 1911 models with Knight motors in another twelve months despite the fact that the agents of some of these concerns profess great skepticism about the Knight motor to-day.

We seldom refer to or bother about the suggestions of interested opponents. We want, however, to repeat our conviction, formed a year ago, and confirmed by twelve months' of experience in the factory, on the road, and in the users' hands.

That the Knight motor far surpasses the old valve type, and that it is only a question of time before it entirely supersedes it in all high grade cars. Get a car that will be up-to-date the longest.

Our 1911 model is out, but our 1910 users can smile for their car is up-to-date still. 1911 is only a refinement in details on 1910.

The same motor. The same body lines, with high front doors, now pretty universally copied.

you do not have to work close to the stove, which is usually far from the window. You can work where you wish, and be warm. You can work on dull winter days in the full light near the window, without being chilled to the bone.

The Perfection Oil Heater quickly gives heat, and with one filling of the font burns steadily for nine hours, without smoke or smell. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap, put in like a cork in a bottle, is attached by a chain. This heater has a cool handle and a damper top.

The Perfection Oil Heater has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back, so the wick can be quickly cleaned. The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged and can be unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel, is strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

Notice to Contractors

Tenders for Machinery for Roundhouse at Lake Superior Junction, and for Pumps and Motors for Sewage Pumphouse at the Winnipeg Shops.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and marked on the envelope "Tender for Machinery," and "Tender for Pumps and Motors," as the case may be, will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway at Ottawa, until 12 o'clock noon of the 18th day of October, 1910, for the machinery required for the equipment of a roundhouse at Lake Superior Junction, Ont., and for the centrifugal pumps and motors required for the sewage pumphouse at the Winnipeg shops, Winnipeg.

Plans and specifications may be seen and full information obtained at the office of Mr. Gordon Grant, Chief Engineer, Ottawa, Ont., and of Mr. S. R. Poulin, District Engineer, St. Boniface, Man.

Tenders must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, for a sum equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders

By order,
P. E. RYAN,
Secretary.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts, a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

THE POINT OF VIEW

Teacher—Tommy, how many is the half of eight?

Tommy—A top or otherwise?

Teacher—What do you mean by on top or otherwise?

Tommy—Why half from the top of 8 is 6, and half of it sideways is 3.

SUICIDE OF A CHAUFFEUR

A chauffeur who accompanied Queen Margherita on several journeys in France has committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver. He took his life through disappointment at his failure to pass an examination for the post of principal chauffeur. He was about to be married.

THE REAL TRUTH

He (at the end of fisher story)—It was a monster. Upon my word, I never saw such a fish in my life.

She—No, I don't believe you ever did.

SLEEPS ONCE A WEEK

The Pastor—"Why, where's you husband, Mrs. Carlton? I surely saw him in church with you."

Mrs. Carlton—"Yes, I left him there. I didn't have the heart to waken him. It's the first good sleep he's had since last Sunday."

A MONKEY'S RELATIVES

A Clydeside riveter who shouted to a crowd of emigrants aboard a Canadian liner, "Bring me hame a monkey," is said to have been promptly informed, "We've nae time to gang luikin' aboot fur yer relations."

HOBBLE SKIRT UMBRELLA

"John," asked the wife, "have you got your umbrella cover?"

"Sure," answers the capable husband. "See, I've got it on the thing."

DISAPPOINTED

Artist: "Oh, no, it's a cab approaching a water trough."

THE OTHER WAY

The Youth—Yes, I'm in business for myself, but I don't seem to be able to meet with any success.

The Sage—Nobody ever met with success, young man. He must overtake it.

EMBARRASSING QUESTION

Police Justice: "Have you any way of making a living?"

Vagrant: "I hev, y'r honor. I kin make brooms."

Police Justice: "You can. Where did you learn that trade?"

"I decline to answer, y'r honor."

His Father: "Well, my son?"

Little Clarence: "I took a walk through the cemetery to-day and read the inscriptions on the tombstones."

His Father: "And what were your thoughts after you had done so?"

Little Clarence: "Why, pa, I wondered where all the wicked people were buried."

STILL WORSE

Pfaatz—I've just heard of a deaf-mute barber and I'm going to try him.

Krastz—Keep away from him. I was in his chair yesterday and he talked so incessantly with his fingers that he cut me in seventeen places.

HARD ON POOR FATHER

Little Wilfred was sitting upon his father's knee, watching his mother arranging her hair.

"Daddy hasn't any waves in his hair like that," said the father laughingly.

Wilfred, looking up at his father's bald head, replied:

"No, daddy. No waves; it's all beach!"

WOULD TALK SHOP

A girl was asked by a friend as to the likeableness of a young fellow who for some time had been paying devoted attention to her.

"Oh," replied the fair one carelessly, "William is a nice enough fellow, but he talks shop too much."

"How's that?" was the next question. "I thought you told me he was a street car conductor."

"So he is," returned the other; "and he's continually saying, 'Sit up closer!'"

THE EASIEST WAY

Mrs. Bridely—If you chop this little pile of wood I'll give you a pie that I've just made.

Hungry Harold—If it's all de same to youse, lady, I prefer to chop de pie an' eat de wood.

DIDN'T MISS HIM

Two festive ones were ambling homeward at an early hour, after being out all night.

"Don't your wife miss you on these occasions?" asked one.

"Not often," replied the other. "She throws pretty straight!"

ONE ON BOTH

Young Lady (coming in with partner from room where progressive whist is being played)—"Oh, mummy I've captured the 'booby.'"

Mother—"Well, my dear daughter, sorry and kiss me, both of you."

DISCRIMINATION WANTED

Bobby—Are you an old resident?

Keller—Yes, that's what they calls me.

Bobby—Well, then, let's hear you bark.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION

"Now," cried the Socialist, speaking at a public meeting recently, "what is the question of the hour with the working man?"

"Generally speaking," said the middle-class man, "it's 'Is it dinner-time yet, mate?'"

THE SONG OF BABY

Oletimer—"Is your married life one grand sweet song?"

Newlywed—"Well, since our baby's been born it's been more like an opera, full of grand marches, with loud calls for the author every night."

HIS PLACE

Hawkins: "How's Henpeck getting on since his marriage? He used to vow that no woman could ever get ahead of him."

Hagg: "Oh, he's still leading, I suppose; but she's behind—holding the reins."

A DIFFICULT LANDING

"Did you and Jack have trouble in getting your father's consent?"

"No; but father and I had a hard time getting Jack's."

KIND TO THE CRITTERS

"Micky," said Mrs. Flanagan, "it takes you twice as long to drive the pigs as it used to."

"I know it. You wouldn't expect me to speak harsh to a lot of critters that's worth fifty dollars apiece, would you?"

PRESERVING HIS DIGNITY

Sailor—Man overboard!

Man in the water—Man overboard! How dare you, sir? Mr. J. P. Gotsplosh overboard you mean.

DEAD WEIGHT

"My word doesn't seem to carry much weight," protested the young wife.

"Never mind, my dear," rejoined the brutal other half, "your apple pie more than made up for it."

AT THE RESTAURANT

Old Gentleman (to waiter): "Can you tell me if my wife is here?"

Waiter: "Yes, sir—eighth hat to the left."

CAREFUL

A mother of four daughters, one of whom had recently married, cornered an eligible young man in the drawing-room.

"And which of my girls do you most admire?"

"The married one," was the prompt reply.

TAR AND FEATHERS

Charles Abner Baker Lays Information Against Father, Mother and Brother of Miss Nettie Spier of Huntsville—They Did Not Approve of His Attentions to the Girl—She Had Left Home.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—Tar in liberal quantities, with feathers added for scenic effect, was applied to Charles Abner Baker, aged 21, who lives a few miles out of Huntsville, on Saturday night last. Yesterday Baker laid a complaint, and Chief of Police Watson of Huntsville served a summons on Thomas Spier, a well-known farmer of the district, calling him to court to-morrow to defend himself. Baker also alleges that during the evening a horsewhip was used on him by Spier. Baker's hair is still matted with tar, but he has succeeded in removing the adornments from his face, though red marks still indicate where the hot stuff was. His clothes were ruined. They have been put in as evidence in the case.

According to Baker, Spier, the father of a young lady he has been keeping company with, objected to his suit. That led to a quarrel between the girl and her father. She left home and entered the employ of a town resident as a domestic. Enraged by the resistence of the pair Spier gave Baker three days in which to leave the country. But Baker did not go.

Saturday night while on his way to Huntsville. Baker met Spier coming from the town. Baker alleges that Spier set upon him, tied his hands and led him to his (Spier's) house, declaring "I'll fix you."

At the house Spier was reinforced by his wife and son. Then, alleges Baker, he was ordered to remove his coat and sweater and was tarred and feathered.

After the operation his coat and sweater were attached to a cord, which was tied tight around his neck. Then a long piece of clothesline was made into a noose and also put around his neck. Spier, sr., held the other end. The journey to Baker's home, about three miles away, was thereupon commenced. Spier followed and frequently used a horsewhip. Baker was released when about a mile from home.

Killed His Aunt.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Oct. 11.—A despatch says a warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of Victor Hudson of Stanhope, charged with having caused the death of his aunt, Johanna Hudson, on Tuesday last.

Mrs. McMasters, sister of deceased, told the officers, who went to investigate, that after her sister had taken a cabbage from his field, Victor followed the woman to their house. A fight took place at the window between Johanna and Victor, armed with sticks.

The nephew wrestled the stick from the old lady and Mrs. McMasters went to the kitchen to get another. "When I returned," she said, "Johanna was lying insensible on the floor. Victor lifted her up trying to restore her, but in vain."

To Save McNulty.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—A. E. H. Creswicke, K.C., thinks he can save Thos. McNulty's neck from the hangman's rope on Dec. 14, through the discovery that there was only one mail delivery at 793 Yonge street on Good Friday, and that in the morning.

McNulty was convicted in Barrie of murder, partly on the statement of Mary Nolan that she received a letter at that address from him Good Friday afternoon instructing her to strangle her child. Mr. Creswicke has been told by the assistant postmaster that it would be impossible for the mail carrier to not reach the house until the afternoon. The case will be appealed on a stated case.

Drowned In Reservoir.

New York, Oct. 11.—After having drawn off 90,000,000 gallons of water in the Croton Aqueduct mains near the Highbridge station, in the upper part of the city, searchers yesterday found the body of Joseph Plenty, a nine-year-old boy, who fell into the aqueduct through an emergency opening while playing with companions on Saturday. It took nearly a day to empty the big pipes in the section into which the boy fell.

Railroad Strike In France.

Paris, Oct. 11.—A strike which may spread and stagnate France industrially was started yesterday when nearly 300 workmen on the Northern Railroad quit work. The strike may involve all of the 45,000 employes of the road before night.

The strikers are demanding a minimum wage of five francs a day, a broader interpretation of the pension law, a ten-hour day and six days' work per week.

Couldn't Identify Him.

Brantford, Oct. 11.—William Burke brought to this city recently from the Central Prison to face a charge of defrauding Morris Leaboyits out of $230 on a fake diamond deal here last summer, similar to a series of frauds pulled off in Toronto and other centres, was discharged yesterday. Although Leaboyits picked Burke out of five prisoners at Toronto, he was unable yesterday to swear to his identity.

True Bill for Murder.

Chatham, Oct. 11.—At the sittings of the fall assizes, begun here yesterday afternoon before Justice Middleton, the grand jury brought in a true bill for murder against Frank Jackson, the colored man charged with shooting Jacob Enos on the night of July 18. It is understood that the plea will be self-defence.

On the charge that James Johnson was an accessory to the murder, they found no bill, and Johnson is accordingly discharged.

LISBON EN FETE.

Rural Population Thronging Into the Capital—To Expel Jesuits.

Lisbon, Oct. 11.—The demonstrations at the capital are being unparalleled in the provinces and the remote country districts. From everywhere comes reports of fetes in honor of the new republic.

Tranquility prevails throughout the country. The normal life of the nation proceeds. Lisbon is resuming its ordinary appearance. Business routine has been renewed.

A monument to the victims of the revolution will be erected. The funeral for Prof. Bombarda and Admiral Reis will be held on Sunday.

Official decrees expelling the Jesuits and declaring their property confiscated, and expelling foreign monks belonging to other orders were formally promulgated yesterday.

The decrees specify that Portuguese members of religious orders other than Jesuits, who accept secularization, may remain in Portugal and return to their families, but those refusing to become secular must leave the country.

Antonio Almeida, the Minister of the Interior of the Provisional Government, is quoted in an interview as saying that the fighting with the monks was provoked by them, they having fired upon the soldiers and people from the windows of the monastery without a shot having been fired at them. The monks, he said, evidently planned a counter revolution.

Going to England.

Gibraltar, Oct. 11.—King Manuel of Portugal and Queen Mother Amelie decided yesterday to proceed to England. They will leave probably within a few days, but are undetermined whether they will travel by land or sea.

The Italian warship Regina Elena arrived here yesterday to take on board the Dowager Queen Maria Pia, who will go to Italy.

The yacht Amelie, which belongs to the Portuguese navy, has been claimed by the Republican Government. It has sailed for Lisbon.

Acquitted of Putting In Poison.

Brockville, Oct. 11.—Charles Landon, charged with an attempt to poison Thomas Sheridan on several occasions in June last by adulterating tea and water intended for the use of the complainant, was acquitted by Judge O'Reilly of Cornwall yesterday.

His honor recalled Constable Dyer, Thomas Sheridan and the latter's son, William, and questioned them regarding the custody of the liquids between the time Landon is alleged to have tampered with the lunch basket and the forwarding of the samples to the proper authorities for analysis. Among the new witnesses for the prosecution was Prof. Ellis of Toronto. He swore to finding several grains of zinc chloride, and if enough were taken it would cause death.

John Bower, a partner of Sheridan, could not say that Sheridan and the witness were on bad terms, the complaint had been made of Landon, who was a tinsmith in their employ, utilizing too much time talking socialism.

Judge O'Reilly, in acquitting Landon, intimated that Constable Dyer was mistaken in what he saw concerning the prisoner's alleged tampering with the lunch basket.

Carter-Cotton Resigns.

Victoria, Oct. 11.—Feeling somewhat disappointed that he was not given the portfolio of finance, Hon. F. Carter-Cotton, president of the council, yesterday handed his resignation to Premier McBride and it was accepted. Hon. Price Ellison becomes Minister of Finance and Agriculture, and W. R. Ross of Fernie was sworn in as Minister of Lands, in place of Ellison. A. E. McPhillips, member for Islands, becomes president of the council. Cotton's retirement is not surprising, for he recently sold his Vancouver newspaper, and is retiring from business and political activity with a million or so to the good. He is representative in the Legislature for Richmond, and it is not probable that he will run again.

Such Bad Form.

Washington, Oct. 11.—Crowds gathered yesterday in such numbers in front of the home of Mrs. Albert Barney, in fashionable Sheridan Circle, to see the life-size, nude, recumbent statue for which Miss Natalie Barney posed, that it was necessary to ask that a policeman be detailed to protect the lawn. The statue, which is called "Deserted Adriadne," is the work of Miss Alice Barney, elder sister of Miss Natalie.

The statue was shipped from Paris to be placed in the Barney residence. The artistic entrance to the studio home, however, proved too small for the work of art. The van men, indifferent or humorous, left the statue a-bathing in the warm sunlight.

All day, top-hatted men and veiled women found its necessary to pass the Barney house, and, of course, it was was not the best form, but who could help but titter at so extraordinary a sight as the nude, recumbent figure of a daughter on the lawn outside her mother's house.

The Conductor's Version.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—Conductor Clarence Long takes exception to the report of an occurrence on a Grand Trunk train near Millbrook. The despatch from Peterboro stated that Conductor Long roughly used a passenger who was intoxicated, and did not produce his ticket.

What happened was this: In dragging the man down the aisle to get him off the car, the man fell against a seat and cut his head. Mr. Long says he did not lock him in the lavatory, but merely shoved him in there so that the aisle would be clear for other passengers to leave the train.

Moreover, Long indignantly denies that he is a strikebreaker. He started with the Grand Trunk during the strike, but as he accepted a permanent position he thinks that entitles him to immunity from the odium that generally attaches to the term "strike breaker."

Smuggled Rare Violins.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Twenty-seven rare old violins, which federal authorities declare were smuggled into this country without paying of duties by John Hornstein, have been seized. They are said to have been purchased from Williams & Co., Toronto, from time to time in the past two years.

DRINK AND DRUG HABIT
CURED IN THREE DAYS at THE NEAL INSTITUTE

78 ST. ALBANS' STREET . . . . TORONTO

Read and contract given to each patient to this effect.

Rev. D. F. Mulvihill, Rector. DES MOINES, IOWA,
St. John's Church.
1915 University Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa.

I am in a position to state that the Neal Institute does all that it claims for its patients. I am personally acquainted with three cases (two of whom I thought were beyond treatment) that took the treatment and are to-day a different type of men. It is beyond doubt a saving grace for poor fellows that wish to get rid of a slavish habit, but have not got the strength to do it themselves. I can safely recommend the Neal Institute and hope that all who have a desire to rid themselves of a vicious habit will give it a trial.

REV. D. F. MULVIHILL.

The Missing Bridegroom Has Been Discovered Can't Tell Where He Was

TORONTO, OCT. 10—With his mind a blank as to the last two weeks, unable to tell what he has done or where he has been, George Edgar Clark, who disappeared fro mthe Iroquois hotel, Toornto, on Wednesday, September 28th, the date of his intended marriage in Guelph, has been found on a country road twelve miles from Brantford.

From what has been learned by Toronto relatives over the long distance telephone, Clark is not in a condition to throw much light on the mystery, which, despite his reappearance, is almost as extraordinary as when he was first missing.

So far as can be learned, Clark was discovered by a connection yesterday afternoon or evening. It was a chance meeting. Clark did not recognize his relative, but the latter knew Clark, though Clark was weary, travel-stained and ill.

A telephone message was sent to Toronto and another to his mother in Guelph. The mother is in Brantford today, and will take her son home, if he is able to travel.

Clark had a severe attack of fever years ago. Although he has been filling a commercial position, he has been a great reader and student, and the after effect of his illness, and excessive study may have caused him to wander away on his wedding morning.

The circumstances of his disappearance were peculiar, but could be explained by mental or nervous strain. Clark had been salesman in Eaton's wall paper department for a few weeks, coming to Toronto from Montreal. He was to marry a Guelph young woman on Wednesday, September 28th, and on Sunday went to Guelph to see that all the preparations were made. He came back on Sunday evening, and as the people withwhom he had been staying had moved, registered at the Iroquois hotel. He slept at the Iroquois Sunday night, Monday night and Tuesday night, but vanished before breakfast next morning, taking neither his overcoat nor his club bag.

He disappeared as completely and as mysteriously as if some giant hand had plucked him from the hotel and hidden him away.

To Upset The Story That Mary Nolan Told

TORONTO, OCT. 10.—A. E. H. Creswicke, who defended Thomas McNulty at Barrie on a charge of infanticide, but will appeal to the Court of Appeal on a stated case, was at the Attorney-General's Department this morning in connection with the evidence.

Mr. Creswicke has made what he believes to be an important discovery since the trial. He says that Mary Nolan, mother of the child, told of receiving at 793 Yonge street a certain letter from McNulty after 1.30 on the afternoon of Good Friday Mr. Creswicke has ascertained from the post office authorities the information that there was only a morning delivery on Good Friday, and they say the carrier in the district where Mary Nolan lived must thave finished his route by 11.30 a.m. at the latest. This would throw discredit on her veracity.

Both McNulty and Mary Dolan are under sentence of death. The man was convicted wholly on the woman's evidence.

Mary Nolan testified that the letter in question advised her to strangle the babe.

STICKS BY HUSBAND ON WRECKED YACHT REFUSES TO LEAVE

Examiner Special.

Atlantic City, Oct. 8—With breakers sweeping over the deck and the yacht in peril, Mrs. Arthur Shaw, of New York, wife of the commander and owner of the auxiliary sloop Imperia, refused to desert the craft so long as her husband decided to remain aboard. Mrs. Shaw is receiving much praise for her bravery to-day.

The sloop, bound from Long Island for Florida, where it was planned to cruise for some time, had her topmast wrecked off the coast in a gale. In her crippled condition and in fear that the storm would further damage the rigging, Captain Shaw decided to enter the inlet in order to make repairs.

SAYS SHE WILL STAY WITH HER HUSBAND

The sloop scudded into the wide mouth of the water and was coming up rapidly by way of the North Channel, dangerous because of a shift of the sands, when it brought up with a jar. For half an hour it floundered in the grip of the shoals, the seas beating over the sides and keeping the decks awash.

Captain A. Hickman, running out from the inlet in his auxiliary yacht Hickman, brought up alongside of the Imperia and informed Captain Shaw of his danger. Profiers to take him and his wife off were declined, but he suggested that his wife be landed. Then Mrs. Shaw, wrapped in oil skins and clinging to the side of the yacht for support, declined positively to desert the vessel, although at the time the Imperia rocked threateningly in the white caps which were sweeping over the decks. She declared that if it was safe enough for her husband it was safe enough for her, and she would remain aboard.

Urged by Captain Hickman that the bar was treacherous and that the gale would likely send the yacht to her grave, the woman suitingly declared her confidence in her husband's judgment, and that it be decided to run the risk of perishing she would stick to the ship with him.

The crew busied itself for an hour to work the craft out into deeper water, but the tide and the breakers drove her further and further in on the shoals. Finally the Government lifesaving crew, which had been watching the Imperia, decided that she was in peril of breaking up, and boarded her. Information Captain Shaw that it was exceedingly dangerous to remain aboard, as a stiffening of the wind could send her to the bottom before help could reach him, he reluctantly took the advice of the experienced mariners, and they were landed by the Government surf boat on the beach.

The couple brought nothing ashore with them except the clothing they wore, as Captain Shaw was confident that the sloop would be saved and that likely they would resume their journey in a few hours. The crew of three men remained aboard, but were told to keep their yacht in readiness for immediate desertion in the event of the sloop springing a leak, or of the more serious accident of her being swamped by the rolling waves which curled a times over her deck. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw have apartments at a hotel from which they can watch the stranded yacht.

STILL HOPE TO SAVE VESSEL

Captain Shaw said that the grounding was due to his taking the north channel instead of the south channel. The north channel was the deeper some two or three years ago, but the water shifted to the south. He believed he was in deep water when the Imperia brought up with a jar that shook her from stem to stern. He had decided to enter the inlet to repair some damage to her topmast.

The Government crew threw out a kedge anchor and hope to hold her where she is until high water, when an effort will be made to get her out of the grip of the bar and out of danger of the breakers. As she is light the prospects are fair for saving the craft.

BUSINESS GROWING

The Peterborough Mattress Company Will Make Extensions

Mr. Will Ellis, brother of Mr. Jas. Ellis, of the Peterborough Mattress Company, arrived in the city on Saturday from San Francisco, and will be associated with his brother in the management of the flourishing East City industry. The business of the company is in such a prosperous condition, and the prospects so bright that certain improvements and alterations have been decided upon to allow Messrs. Ellis brothers to work upon a larger scale.

MORE MEMBERS

Ten Were Added to St. Peter's T. A. S. on Sunday

At the regular meeting of St. Peter's T. A. S. on Sunday afternoon, the progress being made by the Society was strikingly illustrated by the addition of ten new members to the roll.

The Social Club of the Society are making arrangements to hold a social evening in the near future. The particulars will be announced in a short time.

A large number of members of the Society will go down to the T. A. S. Park on the Otonabee on Thanksgiving Day for the purpose of completing the work upon the splendid new athletic grounds.

CONGREGATION TO ACCEPT THE CHIMES

St. John's People Discussed the Project at a Representative Meeting Last Night—Resolutions Were Passed

INTERESTING DISCUSSION

A good representative meeting of the congregation of St. John's church in vestry assembled was held Monday evening, to discuss and determine the attitude of the congregation towards the Chimes project. The whole matter was carefully gone into, and the new obligations to be undertaken by the church were thoughtfully considered. It was felt that the occasion was an important one, affecting, as it did, the future responsibilities of the congregation to the chimes. No meeting had been held by the congregation and no instructions given in regard to the matter since the Easter vestry meeting, when certain gentlemen were informally authorized to test public sentiment, and to go ahead with the project, if it was found practicable without drawing upon the revenues of the church. Since then the project had been gradually evolved and had taken shape in harmony with the gradually increasing interest of the community. Full statements were made by the chairman of the Chimes Committee and by Mr. G. C. Wainright, the treasurer, showing that the magnificent sum of over $4,700 had been willingly contributed by the citizens of Peterborough generally, as well as by former members of the congregation and former citizens who had taken a very important and generous part.

After full discussion the sense of the meeting was embodied in the following important resolutions:

1. That the Vestry of St. John's Church do hereby express its willingness to thankfully accept, when offered, the Chime of Bells obtained by public subscriptions of the citizens of Peterborough, the chimes to be placed in the tower without expense to the congregation.

2. That on behalf of the congregation and parish of St. John's this Vestry hereby agrees to use and operate these chimes for ever as a Public Trust for the glory of God, for the good of His church and Holy Religion and for the benefit of the citizens of Peterborough.

3 That in conformity with the above resolution, No 2, this Vestry undertakes to cause the chimes to be rung on public holidays and National occasions.

4. That the Rector and Wardens may, at their discretion, on the request of any citizen, cause the bells to be chimed on the occasion of any marriage whenever celebrated in the city, the applicant paying the ordinary fee.

The first resolution embodying the principle was carried by a standing vote, and finally the four resolutions were adopted en bloc on a resolution moved by A. E. Coulthard, Esq., people's warden, and seconded by Dr. Boucher, chairman of the Advisory committee, the vote being a standing one.

The matter of the disposition of the old bell was then taken up. It had become endeared not only to the congregation but also outside it, and the hope was generally expressed that somehow it might be found possible to retain it. On the other hand it was pointed out that the value of the bell was supposed to be about $600, and was imperatively needed by the committee in order to install the chimes, place the tower in a proper condition, erect a tablet in the church porch, and other final expenses which could hardly now be estimated. After considerable discussion it was determined to leave the bell in the possession of the congregation until its disposal shall be necessary, when the matter would be further taken up at a subsequent meeting.

THE REAL CAUSE.

The Ancient Scalp-Fever Theory Exploded.

At one time dandruff was attributed to the result of a feverish condition of the scalp, which threw off the dried cuticle in scales.

Professor Unna, Hamburg, Germany, noted authority on skin diseases, explodes this theory and says that dandruff is a germ disease.

This germ is really responsible for the dandruff and for so many bald heads. It can be cured if it is gone about in the right way, of course, and the only way, is to kill the germ.

Newbro's Herpicide does this, and permits the hair to grow luxuriantly, just as nature intended it should.

BOY HAD MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH

Eight-Year Old Victor Lawson Struck by a West Bound Grand Trunk Double Header This Morning and Escaped With Few Bruises---Engineer's Prompt Action Saved His Life.

Little eight year old Victor Lawson, who resides with his grandmother, Mrs. Baker, 546 Park street, was this morning struck by a west bound double header on Macdonnel street crossing. That he was not killed is a miracle and the question of his escape is probably answered by the fact that the engineer on the leading locomotive acted so promptly that he brought the train to a stop on a distance of a few feet.

About 9 o'clock the little fellow went out to play and wandered over to the track, a hundred yards away. Just as he got there two locomotives with a caboose came west, and the little fellow then walked directly on to the track, not noticing that another train was following. He was struck by the pilot and thrown off the track, thus escaping being run over. He was carried into Mr. Jackson's grocery store, which is situated just north of the crossing, and Dr. Cameron was called. It was found that other than receiving a bad shaking up and a few cuts and bruises about the head his wounds were slight, and no serious results will ensue.

After his wounds were attended to, he was carried to his grandmother's, which is just about 50 yards from the store, where he is now resting nicely. Mrs. Baker was greatly agitated over the affair and stated that his parents were in Toronto and he had been left under her care.

Although trains run at a pretty good rate of speed, the crossing is not considered a dangerous one. A train from the west can be seen approaching for a distance of 350 yards and one from the east can be seen 150 yards distant, which gives ample time for any person to get off the track at the rate the trains run. It is generally reported that children at this particular point are so familiar with the trains that they do not realize their danger, hence this morning's accident.

Much credit is due the engineer of the engine for his prompt action in stopping the train. Absolutely no blame can be laid on the train crew, as the proper signals were given for the crossing. It evidently was the one train so closely following the other that puzzled the youngster.

Grand Scotch Concert In Armouries On Friday

The second of the series of popular concerts under the auspices of the band of the 57th Regiment, to be held in the armouries on Friday night of this week will take the form of a grand Scotch night, and a novel and most artistic programme will be given. The band will be assisted by Pipe Major Pollock, late of Scotland, who will render several bagpipe solos and the programme will include Scotch dancing by two local girls. Mr. Barnaby Nelson, of Toronto, the well known tenor soloist, who was for two seasons with Miss Jessie McLachlan, has also been secured by the band. He will sing "Mary of Argyll" and other favourite Scotch ballads. The numbers by the band will all have a Scotchy flavour. Their selections include a new and catchy Scotch march, "By the Bonnie Brier Bush," Sir Henry Bishop's beautiful overture, "Guy Mannering," which will be played here for the first time, the magnificent selection "Robert Bruce" and the tantasia of Scotch airs, "Reminiscences of Scotland, arranged by Godfrey. The admission will be by silver collection and arrangements are being made to have additional seating accommodation.

AN UNSOLICITED TRIBUTE TO THE EXAMINER

The following is from a letter from Mr. Chas. O'H. Craigie, Secretary and Treasurer of the Canadian Automatic Transportation Company to Mr. J. A. Perkins, representative of the Company at Peterborough.

"I read with much interest the publication from the Blossburg Advertiser in your evening Examiner, and I am surprised to know that you have such a large and finely edited evening paper. I am very much interested in many things that I see in it, and I am only surprised that I have not had my attention called to it before. On looking over it hurriedly, there was one article that I thought might well be copied in the papers of Toronto, and every other large city in the Dominion, and that was the one entitled "Young Women Should Keep Off The Streets," being an address given by Miss Addison of Annesley Hall, before the Y.W.C.A., and I shall be surprised if it is not given publication in all the papers.

Will Advise Architect That Plumbers Must Complete Work

The City's Property committee met last night. There were present, Mayor Morrow, Chairman Ald. Duncan, Aldermen Morgan, Graham and Batton.

The chairman was authorized to procure an architect for remodelling the police premises.

Alderman Morgan and Graham thought 80 tons of coal too much to burn for heating the City Hall premises, and they said that something must be wrong with the heating system.

Robert Wilson, janitor of the City Hall, asked for an increase in salary. He is getting $575 a year. Since his appointment his duties have been enlarged. This matter was left in abeyance.

The McDonald & Wilson Co., tendered through Alexander & Miller, to fit up the Public Library with electric light fixtures for $549. The tender was accepted.

The architects of the Public Library will be instructed that the plumbing and heating of this building must be completed at once, and to take whatever steps necessary to effect this.

Mr. E. Sheehy's request that the taxes on the property on Water street at C.P.R. station, which he rents from the town be reduced from $25 to $5 was refused.

The chairman was authorized to enquire into the cost of erecting a lattice fence, or a brick and cement division at south end of the Public Library.

The chairman was also authorized to pay for cleaning and levelling the library lot at his discretion, and to have same seeded down this fall should he consider such a course advisable.

The Old City Hotel Is Being Fitted Up For Bank Premises

A building permit for $1500 was was taken out at the City Clerk's office this morning for alterations to be made to the old City Hotel. It is to be fitted up for bank purposes, and it is understood that the Bank of Nova Scotia has leased the premises and will move across the street as soon as the work has been completed. It is likely that the building will be ready for occupancy by the middle of December.

APPOINTED CHAIRMAN OF NEW BOARD

Public Library Board Recently Formed Held Initial Meeting---Mr. E. H. D. Hall, Chairman---Rules and Regulations to be Adopted

OTHER MATTERS

The Board recently appointed to govern and control the new Public Library met for the first time last evening in the City Council's committee rooms. There were present, Messrs. Duncan Walker, Inspector Mowat, Hazen Ritchie, J. Corkery, Dr. McNulty, E. H. D. Hall, H. R. H. Kenner and David Spence.

These gentlemen entered into their new duties last night with an energy that presages splendid government for Peterborough's new Public Library.

His Worship Mayor Morrow presided at the preliminary proceedings, and explained the position of the new building as regards monies already expended and an estimate of what further monies and fittings will be needed to complete the building.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall was the board's unanimous choice as chairman.

The chairman, Messrs. Ritchie and Corkery were appointed a committee to look into the valuable assets of the Mechanics' Institute which is to be absorbed by the new Board. Their duties will include securing an inventory of the books on hand.

Mr. Corkery explained that for several years the Mechanics' Institute has been known as the Public library, which premises can be vacated at any time. The old institute debentures were vested in trustees.

Messrs. Peters and Bryson, present librarians of the library will be retained until permanent officials are appointed for the new building.

Messrs. Spence, Mowat and Ritchie were appointed a committee to confer with the City's Property Committee regarding book stacks and other furnishings for the new building.

The board has $600 in hand to tide them over this year in the matter of current expenses.

Information will be gleaned from other public libraries as to the number of officials employed, salaries paid same, and also the rules and regulations governing institutions.

Mr. Corkery said that the government grant was $250, this amount varies, however, according to conditions.

The chairman, Mr. Kenner and Dr. McNulty were appointed a committee to draft a set of rules and regulations.

Mr. Mowat stated that the act provided that teachers were privileged to appoint one member, not of their own calling, on the Public Library Board.

The teachers and medical men will probably have separate rooms of their own in the building.

The board adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

GAS, INDIGESTION AND HEARTBURN GO

Makes Your Out-of-order Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes

The question of how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order Stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a reenforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, or heartburn, Sour risings, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved in five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the feast with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

Mr. Coleman M. Moncur, late of Wards, accepted a position with Shutter of Detroit, who is established one of the most prominent prescription druggists in the United States. He will undoubtedly do a splendid patronage in Peterborough.

Mr. Tully is one of Peterborough's best known and most respected business men. He had been in business in this city for forty years, twenty-five of them in the store now occupied by Mr. J. T. C. Lang, and the last fifteen at his present stand, at the corner of George and Hunter Sts.

Mr. Moncur has been associated with Mr. Tully here for some time.

Aeroplanes To Be Used In Carrying The Mails Big Strike In France

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, FRANCE, OCT. 11. An aeroplane may be carrying the London mails so far as the English channel before sunset to-night. Thousands of employees of the French Northern are on strike and all Northern France is tied up. Before the day is over it is expected that a hundred thousand all over France will be out. The demand is a minimum wage of a dollar a day and better conditions. The government early this morning commandeered all mobile service to the channel mail, but the strikers attacked several with loss of life. A plan to try the postmaster general was to attempt by aeroplanes.

BERLIN GETS HYDRO-ELECTRIC "WHITE COAL"

Examiner Special.

BERLIN OCT. 11. In the presence of a distinguished company gathered from towns in a radius of fifty miles, Sir James Whitney, the Premier of Ontario, turned the switch this afternoon and made Berlin hotel, among others, motor-minded, as being first to receive Niagara power over a government-owned line. Sir James, Hon. Adam Beck and others in industrial speeches said that it was an epoch-making day in the history of Ontario. "White coal" would be known to other cities on the current electric circuit very shortly. This town will be illuminated to-night, with thousands of electric lights, while a big banquet is going on. Hon. Mackenzie King, the Minister of Labour, and member of the House of Commons for this district, is here. The whole place is in holiday attire.

A WONDERFUL ATTRACTION AT THE ROYAL THEATRE

The biggest circus ever seen outside of the canvas walls is the big attraction at the Royal to-night and the 9 rings and 3 stages that every performance is going strong with crowded houses. When the show is of the kind that one actually pays 25c or 50c for and considers the Royal at most theatres is getting it for the same, 10c at night and 5c in the afternoon. Mr. Pappas believes in keeping to a price the same no matter what the cost of the attraction. The Doris circus as a wonderful collection of trained equine ponies, donkeys, monkeys, etc., and their performances are to be seen to be appreciated. They conclude their performance at the Royal to-morrow night.

NUMBER OF CASES IN THE COURT TO-DAY

Walter Mahaffey Was Charged with Obtaining Money Under False Pretences—An Assault Case

OTHER INCIDENTS

Walter Mahaffy was arraigned in the Police Court this morning on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences. He was alleged to have gotten $7.00 from the book-keeper of Taylor and Hall, through false pretences. It appears that he worked four and one-half hours for the firm, and through a mistake of the book-keeper, he was paid for four and one-half days. When asked by the book-keeper if that amount was correct, he replied that it was, and later refused to make it right. He pleaded guilty to the above charge, and was remanded for a week for sentence.

James Wallace pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $2.00. He did not have the money and was given four days in which to make the remittance.

A local young man was charge with assaulting an old man at Mr. Curtis' brick yard. The plaintiff was not in court. The defendant said that he would plead guilty to the charge, as he wanted to go to work, but at the same time he was of the opinion that he was not guilty in the full sense of the word. He said that when the altercation took place that the old man came up on him so quickly that he was forced to strike him. This would appear that the assault was made in self defence. His Worship said that he did not want to fine him under the circumstances, as it would not be right to give him a record if he was not deserving and accordingly he will appear again on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

ARE KNOWN AS THE FARMERS' FRIEND

Pine Valley, Man., Oct. 10.—(Special.)—Michael Anderson, a well-known farmer living near here is added to the number of those who have sent the cry echoing over the Prairies, "Dodd's Kidney Pills are the farmer's friend." And truly Mr. Anderson has reason to praise the great Canadian Kidney remedy. Listen to his experience:

"A strain and a bad cold started my troubles," says Mr. Anderson, "and for twelve long years I was a victim of Kidney trouble, Rheumatism and Gravel. Doctors attended me and I tried many medicines, but they did not cure me. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me in less than one month."

It is easy to do anything when you know how. Mr. Anderson went right to the root of his trouble. He cured his Kidneys by using Dodd's Kidney Pills and with the root gone the other diseases disappeared. Dodd's Kidney Pills always make healthy kidneys and with healthy kidneys, you can't have Rheumatism or Gravel.

LET US BE OURSELVES.

Thanksgiving Day is approaching, and reminders are beginning to be given. Why any Canadian publication should make a picture or reference to the turkey as a type of Canadian thanksgiving is difficult to understand unless the "gobbler" stands for the gobbling of food, which to many is the sordid and material form Thanksgiving takes. True our neighbours to the south make Thanksgiving the only national holyday, if a day devoted to gormandizing can be called a holy day. In Christian Canada, Christmas is our end-of-the-year holy day, when feasting is not a main motive but an accompaniment of our rejoicing over the world's greatest gift, and gift giving—kindness to our fellows—recognition of the universal bond of brotherhood the main spring. Canadians have nothing in common with the idealized and formalized Thanksgiving Day of our neighbours. We have our own Thanksgiving Day, set apart by the Government as a recognition of an obligation to the Source of all good gifts. We can show our interest and sympathy with the Thanksgiving Day of our neighbours without adopting its shibboleth and its material symbolism. Let us be ourselves, be original and not thoughtlessly follow in the train of our neighbours in matters in which we should manifest distinction. We are too apt to slavishly imitate our neighbours, not in good things so much as in corrupting adoptions. We get our corrupted form of spelling from the United States; we get the most odious form of corruption in language from the slang of our neighbours. We get our corrupting influences in music from our neighbours; we get our deplorably increasing laxity of opinion regarding the sacredness of the marriage obligation from our neighbours. If we must have slang let us have our own—heaven knows it needs little brains—only vicious apprenticeship in language corruption, of which we have had a surfeit. Let us be ourselves, let us be faithful to the old where the old is good and true. We speak of advance, but there can be no advance except in practice, in the Christian graces of reverence, thankfulness, kindness and grace and gentleness of speech.

WE MUST BE ONE.

The disintegrating elements in Canadian unity are at war with the consolidating influences. At the head of the latter stands Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who has spent his strenuous life in bringing into harmony the diverse elements that necessarily exist in a mixed community. The sundering element is represented by Henri Bourassa and his ilk, who contend for a nationality within the nation, a repugnant and impossible doctrine. We are all Canadians by force of circumstances. We can, at the same time, be British subjects, loyal to the empire, and Canadians loyal to ourselves as well as the empire. No man, be he English, Irish, Welsh, Scotch, French, or German, is to be for one moment blamed for holding his fatherland in affectionate remembrance. This feeling can consist with the largest loyalty to his adopted country but the latter must hold first place. When a young man or young woman separates from the paternal home, to set up a domestic establishment of his or her own, the first duty is to that new home, though the old home and old hearts may be loved and esteemed as much as ever; but to sacrifice the interest of the new home to that of the old, is to court disaster. Le Nationaliste, Quebec, has a cartoon picturing Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a "Methodist minister"—because on his visit to British Columbia he visited the Methodist General Conference. Sir Wilfrid is not to be condemned for this act of courtesy. He is premier, not of one province, or one race, but premier of the whole of Canada, and his duty is to the whole. He sacrifices not one iota of his fealty to his nationality by becoming courtesy to any and all of the peoples and interests that compose his national constituency. We can never be a great nation unless all the racial and creed elements pull together. We may differ, we must differ, for we hold our differences honestly; but we can all be united in promoting the advancement of our common country. There is no room in Canada for imperium in imperio. Nationally in aim and ambition we must be one. Recalling Tennyson's welcome to Queen Alexandra:

Norman and Saxon and Dane are we,
But all of us Danes in our welcome to thee.

We all recognize, be we Irish, Scotch, English, French or Welsh, that we all as Canadians, must be united Canadians, if we would realize the true destiny of our country. We must feel and apply the spirit of the slogan of Dumas' Musketeers: "One for all and all for one."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

That Portugal has been misgoverned under badly administered monarchical institutions may well be true; that is will continue to be misgoverned under a Republican form of government for a time at least, is also true. The people have had no training in self government, and government is too fine an art to be successfully practised by amateurs.

The preliminary edition of the new Cereal map of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, covering the crop areas for 1909, is just issued by the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, and a similar map is stated to be in progress showing the crop areas for 1910. The map is on a large scale, showing graphically the areas under the leading crops. A great deal of statistical information as to these provinces is also given, and the topographical work is excellent. A glance at such a map is vastly more informing than the study of printed reports.

SIR WILFRID'S VISIT.

(Montreal Herald.)

Since Parliament adjourned for the recess, a good deal has happened, politically, rather more, in fact, than generally happens while Parliament is not in session. Sir Wilfrid himself has made a tour of the West. Mr. Borden has made a tour of Ontario and Nova Scotia. Mr. Monk and Mr. Bourassa have made tours of Quebec. Mr. Roblin has been re-elected Premier of Manitoba. Mr. McBride has effusively welcomed the Liberal leader to British Columbia. The West has been demanding lower duties and a railway to Hudson Bay. The manufacturers have gone across the continent and rubbed shoulders with the farmers. The Republican party in the United States has been losing all along the line because it will not adapt itself to the demand for a lower tariff. President Taft has asked for negotiations looking to better facilities for trade between Canada and the United States. Plans have been filed for a new dock at Levis. Montreal has begun on works that will cost twenty millions. Ministers talk of the Georgian Bay canal, the deepening of the Welland and a thirty-five foot St. Lawrence channel as things to be treated as present day problems. Population is pouring in. Wealth is coming with it. Not a bad time, all things considered, for the first Minister of Canada to speak in the Metropolitan city.

The Policy Of Detraction In Regard To Canadian West

(Manitoba Free Press.)

From Montreal a report was forwarded to Holland which grossly misrepresents conditions with regard to farm values and mortgage loans in the Canadian West. In the Weekly Trade report under date of Oct. 3, a communication dated September 15th, at Amsterdam, from the Canadian Trade Commissioner at that point, W. T. R. Preston, says:

"Prominent financial investors in "Amsterdam recently formed a company with the object of loaning "annually $500,000 for a number of "years on farm lands in the Western Provinces, the principal Canadian offices to be located in Winnipeg. Just when arrangements "had been completed to send a "managing director to Canada, information was received from a "Montreal correspondent advising "caution, the reasons given being "that all farm lands in the West "were held at boom values, and "that loans were easily procurable "there for fifty per cent. of these "boom values at five per cent. annual interest. As the Netherlanders expected to realize at least seven per cent. on their loans, the "news from Montreal has crushed "out enthusiasm in the proposed "enterprise."

It is of value to know that such misrepresentations are being circulated in a quarter from which very considerable capital has already come for investment in Winnipeg and the West. It would be of more interest to know what the Canadian representative at Amsterdam did toward giving the Netherlanders correct information and what steps were taken to locate the source in Montreal from which such palpable misrepresentations emanated. At the present time one association of Amsterdam capitalists under the title of the Holland-Canadian Mortgage Company has an office in Winnipeg, and has, in the West, loaned during the past year approximately $1,000,000. There is plenty of room for the investors to which Mr. Preston refers to place the money they speak of, $500,000 annually, at seven per cent. If they are deterred from entering this field by the report attributed to Montreal, it is very important from a Western standpoint, that such a source should be located. Apparently it is an influential one otherwise the cautious Netherlanders would not have suddenly changed their plans after having brought them to a point of maturity.

Mr. Preston, no doubt, could have furnished these gentlemen with all the authoritative information they need ed. He could also have furnished them with the names of officials of responsible business institutions who would have confirmed any statement of facts which he should be prepared to furnish. The facts as to mortgage loans and farm values would have effectually discredited the Montreal source of information. The minimum rate of interest on farm loans at the present time is seven per cent. in Manitoba, and from eight to nine per cent. in Saskatchewan and Alberta. It might interest the Netherlanders to know that the average rate of interest earnings of the Great West Life, which has in the West $5,022,637 invested in farm mortgages, last year was over seven per cent. At the present time the supply of money is no more than equal to the demand and, there is little doubt that if the Netherlanders' money was on the ground at the present time it would quickly find investment at the rate they anticipated getting, and they would have to advance no more than from thirty to forty per cent. of the actual value of the properties as determined by their own valuators. Loans are not made upon the basis of the borrowers' valuation, but upon that fixed by the lender.

The unfortunate result of the appearance of this statement in a Departmental report without accompanying corrections, is that it will be copied and circulated generally, not only on the European continent from which the West expects to derive a larger volume of capital, but also in Great Britain and on this continent, and may deter capital from coming hey. It is an unfortunate occurrence, and to minimise the harm done to the West the Department of Trade and Commerce ought to take prompt steps. Through its agency the source from which such damaging and false reports originated ought to be determined and some explanation for its being given currency in an official publication ought also to be forthcoming.

WHAT IS VINOL?

It Represents Twenty Years' Work of Two Eminent Chemists.

After twenty years of study two eminent French chemists discovered a method by which the alkaloids or medicinal elements of the cod's liver might be separated from the useless oil or grease, retaining all the good of cod liver oil and dispensing with the bad, as the oil has no medicinal value. These medicinal elements blended with tonic iron and a mild medicinal wine—make Vinol.

Vinol is not a secret medicine, as its ingredients are printed on every bottle, and in all cases where the healing, strengthening influence of cod liver oil is needed, Vinol will give better results, for it contains all the curative medicinal properties of cod liver oil, but without the oil, and it is easily assimilated and acceptable to the weakest stomach.

For all run-down, weakened conditions, and to cure chronic coughs, cold and bronchial troubles, Vinol is unexcelled. We sell it always with the understanding that if it does not do all we claim for it, we will refund the money paid us for it. ## PORT ARTHUR WAGON INDUSTRY

A factory may produce a splendid article outstripping its competitors in point of workmanship and utility, but without the machinery for getting that product on the market it would be a failure. Producing machinery is not really of greater importance than the machinery for distribution. In building up a manufacturing enterprise these departments require to be properly balanced, otherwise, sooner or later, the business will wobble out of plum. The Port Arthur Waggon Company, in laying down the foundation for its business, has not only got all that it could from the City of Port Arthur—exemption from taxation, free land, water front and bond guarantee—but it has also secured one of the strongest firm implement distributing organizations in the Canadian West to guarantee a market for its product. The only thing left for the company of do is to get its capital and build the waggons. Its distributing machinery, under the direction of H. W. Hutchinson, the local manager of the John Deere Plow Company, is reliable and perfectly adjusted to the requirements of the Western market. If the producing machinery is made to correspond with it there can be no doubt but that the new waggon industry at Port Arthur will be a success.—Free Press, Winnipeg, Oct. 5th.

BOARD OF HEALTH

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health was held this morning when there were present Dr. McNulty, chairman, Mayor Morrow, Dr Young and James Murty. A letter was received from Peter Thompson, plumbing inspector, enclosing a copy of letter written by the City Engineer to James Long, respecting defective plumbing at numbers 414-416 George street. The Board then adjourned.

Notice to Creditors

In the Matter of Michael C. Tooley, of the City of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, Hotel Keeper, Insolvent.

NOTICE is hereby given that the said M. C. Tooley, formerly carrying on business as a hotel keeper at the City of Peterborough, has made an assignment under R. S. O. 1897, chapter 147, of all his estate, credits and effects, to Walter Stewart Davidson, of the City of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, Solicitor, for the general benefit of his creditors.

A meeting of creditors will be held at the office of the said assignee, in the Bank of Commerce Building, in the City of Peterborough, on Wednesday, the 12th day of October, A.D. 1910, at the hour of 11 o'clock in the forenoon to receive a statement of affairs, to appoint inspectors, and for the ordering of the affairs of estate generally. Creditors are required to file their claims with the assignee with the proofs and particulars thereof as required by the said Act on or before the date of such meeting.

And notice is further given that after the 12th day of November, A.D. 1910, the assignee will proceed to distribute the assets of the estate amongst the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which notice shall then have been given, and that he will not be liable for the assets or any part thereof so distributed to any person or persons of whose claim he shall not then have had notice.

THE EXAMINER ROAD RACES

Thanksgiving Day, Monday, Oct. 31st., 1910

SENIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing, and fulfil the required conditions in other ways and wish to be entered in the Examiner Senior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Name .....

Address .....

JUNIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing and am under eighteen years of age. I wish to be entered in the Examiner Junior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Name .....

Address .....

Contestants are required to fill out the blanks in connection with whichever race they desire to enter and send in this coupon to the sporting editor of the Peterboro Examiner as soon as possible.

Record List Of Entries For The Examiner Races Seems To Be Assured

There will undoubtedly be a record field in the Examiner road races this year. Although the entry-blanks are out earlier than last year the names have started to come in, last night's mail bringing three more junior contestants in the persons of Cecil Armstrong, Vf. Williams and John Downer. The last pair started last year, Williams finishing twenty-fourth and Downer twenty-fifth, but they are an sports to have another try for the junior championship.

A well-known figure will likely be missed from the senior race this year in the person of Charles Thorpe, who has made three game efforts to carry off the Examiner trophy. He has been second for the past two years and was always a favourite with the crowd on account of his pluck. He is at present out of the city and may not be here for the race.

The senior race this year will, in all probability be a difficult matter to dope out in advance, as there will be a number of dark horses in line. Who will be the Indian runner this year to make the white boys extend themselves? Fred Simpson chased Ray Best and Ernie Wilson home in 1906. Ben Howard made Ernie Wilson break the record to beat him in 1907; Reuben Howard was fourth behind J. H. Adams; Charlie Thorpe and Ernie Wilson in 1908, and last year, Albert Smoke of Chemong, won the event in splendid fashion. Undoubtedly down at Hiawatha, or up at Chemong one or two runners are being gotten into shape for the big race.

HAROLD HILL AND M. CARLISLE ARE COLLEGIATE CHAMPIONS

Clever Work in the Jumps Gave Them the Senior and Junior Titles Yesterday--- Huycke Won All Three Junior Jumps.

Harold Hill and Murray Carlisle are respectively senior and junior champions of the Peterborough Collegiate Athletic Society. The balance of the events left over from the field day on Friday, were held yesterday afternoon at Riverside Park, and as a result of their showing in these contests the two named win the trophies. Harold Hill and Vivian Essenden were tied with twenty-one points before yesterday's events. Hill took two firsts, however, giving him the championship by a score of 31 to 29. As Essenden's best efforts were a second and a third.

As the result of the junior jumping events Meredith Huycke scored fifteen points and gained on Murray Carlisle, who had a long lead from Friday's events. Three firsts were not enough to pull him up to Carlisle, however, the latter winning the junior title by a comfortable margin. Following are the results of yesterday's events.

Saved Her Life

The honest, straightforward statement of Mrs. Rhoda Pritchard, of Astoria, is convincing proof of the great merit of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey at a family medicine.

I have taken Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for twenty years and it has [illegible] several times when I had been given up to die by my physicians. I am now sixty-seven years old and have good health, thanks to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. My comfort to tell you. I am not looking day old as that." I have a feel even as old as that."

Mrs. Rhoda Pritchard, 6th Ave., Astoria, L.I.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

has to its credit fifty years of success without a question as to its merits as a curative agent. It quickens and strengthens the heart action, aids digestion, restores health and vigour: makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous.

All druggists, grocers, liquor merchants, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Refuse substitutes and imitations; they are impure and dangerous. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free.

LAJOIE'S EIGHT HITS ON SUNDAY DISPUTED

NEW YORK, OCT. 10. New York baseball fans want to know whether Larry Lajoie was entitled to the eight hits he made in yesterday's doubleheader at St. Louis, which decided the batting supremacy in his favour as against Ty Cobb, and incidentally won for him an automobile prize.

The report that the St. Louis infielders shirked and loafed on Lajoie's grounders, and turned them into safeties, has aroused the baseball colony, and local sport writers are asking whether another baseball scandal will have to be aired.

It is considered significant that seven of Lajoie's eight hits were infield grounders. As Larry is not the swiftest man in the game, the opinion prevails that the St. Louis infield deliberately "threw" the batting honours his way.

If Larry won honestly he has the laugh on Ty Cobb, who in a signed article recently said that Lajoie was an old-time slugger rather than a scientific batter, such as himself.

Favoured Lajoie in Score.

ST. LOUIS, MO., OCT. 10.—A double-header yesterday afternoon, Cleveland v. St. Louis, brought to an end a most disastrous season from a local standpoint.

The much-heralded contest between Tyrus Cobb and Larry Lajoie brought to the surface the most farcical and unsportsmanlike exhibition of baseball ever recorded in the history of the sport. The local team seemed to have been given their instructions in advance as to their movements in dealing with the automobile aspirant, so they would either dodge his weakenings, or await his arrival at first, hence he was eight times at bat and registered eight hits.

For some reason Cobb is not popular in St. Louis, while Lajoie is held in high esteem, and with the leniency of the official scorer Lajoie has been able to fatten his batting average beyond the pale of discretion, and it is figured has won the prize automobile.

Last night the local newspapers were loud in their denunciations of the unsportsmanlike tactics that predominated, and it will unquestionably cast a blemish on the game in general, and it will probably require the services of the National Commissioner to restore confidence in baseball.

Eczema On Head and Arm

Four Doctors Failed After Fair Trial—Cure Effected by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

The average physician is helpless in the presence of skin diseases such as eczema and salt rheum. Some make the mistake of treating eczema as a blood disease and advise internal treatment. Others think only relief is possible and recommend a lotion to afford relief from the itching.

By far the most successful treatment for eczema is the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment. You can verify this statement by enquiring of any druggist. This letter is a fair sample of what we are receiving about every day.

Mr. Geo. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great benefit I received from using Dr. Chase's Ointment. For years I suffered with a skin disease on my head, a sort of eczema. I tried four doctors, giving each a fair trial, but got no better. In fact, the disease spread to my left arm.

"I saw Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised and began using it. Persistent use of this treatment has entirely cured me and I give you a statement of my case with pleasure as I hope thereby to induce some other sufferer to try the same Dr. Chase's Ointment."

There is a wonderful satisfaction in using Dr. Chase's Ointment for you can see from day to day just what results are being accomplished. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE CUBS WIN

CHICAGO, OCT. 10. The Chicago Cubs have gained another of their goals "that of winning every series."

It remained for the lowly Cardinals to give them the game that ended the fight. Until yesterday's game Chicago had won only eleven games from Bresnahan's crew. "King" Cole landed the twelfth victory, the one that threw the majority to the Cubs. Their record of victories now stands: Twelve from St. Louis, 12 from Pittsburg, 14 from New York, 14 from Philadelphia, 16 from Cincinnati, 16 from Brooklyn, and 17 from Boston.

Yesterday's game again illustrated how well fortified the Cubs are in subs, for Beaumont, Kane and Zimmerman, three "subs," made six of Chicago's eleven hits, and were responsible for the victory.

RUGBY

A proposal is on foot for a game between a team of Collegiate Institute old boys, and the present team of the Collegiate. The 1910 boys threw out a challenge and it has been promptly snapped up by the old guard. It was proposed to have the game next Saturday but this will not be practicable on account of the Eastwood and Howden trophy contests, which take place at Riverside Park on that day.

Garnet Rankin, who played on the back division of the Collegiate team last year, left on Saturday night for North Bay, where he will reside in future. He was an accomplished Rugby player and a good athlete in other lines of sport.

The Collegiate Institute team is trying to make arrangements to bring the Jarvis St., Toronto, Collegiate team here for a game on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day. It would prove a popular holiday attraction.

PARK ST. SERVICES

A meeting long to be remembered by all those present, was held last night at the Park street Baptist church. The Holy Spirit was present in mighty convincing and converting power, and as Dr. Sam Luttrell drew four pictures of everyday life as found in the fifth chapter of the gospel according to Luke, the audience drank in his message, to the benefit of their spiritual interests. That the appeal to reason and honour was effective, and appreciated, was manifested by many responding voluntarily to the invitation to come forward, and by so doing confess their determination to lead a better life.

Some long held by the thraldom of drink, came out boldly for Christ. And with tears in their faces, told of their determination to trust in God and give up the accursed habit, which they acknowledged was the ruination of their lives. Yes, God can, through the blood of Christ, save the drunkard, said Dr. Luttrell. He saved me; he can save you, if you will let Him. Only give Christ a square deal.

During the service Mr. E. Mulligan sang a beautiful gospel message which touched all hearts present.

Next Sunday there will be another mass meeting for men, when the doctor will again address the meeting. Don't miss this opportunity to hear a man who knows, both the curse and cure for drink and sin.

Meetings to-night at 8 p.m. All made welcome.

SUDDEN DEATH

Death's call came very suddenly to Mr. Thomas Morgan, a lifelong resident of the Township of Douro. Mr. Morgan, who lived on Lot 11, Concession 4, of the township, and was a neighbour of Mr. H. P. Crowley, dropped dead yesterday at noon. He had just walked out from his house and was proceeding down the yard; when he was seen to stagger and fall forward on his hands. When picked up it was found that the vital spark had fled. The deceased, who was seventy-one years of age, was born in Douro. For the past five years he had lived on the farm on which he died. He was widely known and highly respected and his many friends will learn with deep regret of his tragically sudden demise.

KIPLINGS' POEM

Rudyard Kipling's new poem glorifies strength of character, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. It depicts the man who is unmoved in adversity and silent in the face of criticism, and declares that this is the man who really lives.

"If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give away to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;"

If you can take loss philosophically, if you can resist temptations, "if you can fill the unforgiving minute with sixty seconds' worth of distance run."

"Yours is the earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a man, my son!"

MUSIC AND DRAMA

GUY BROTHERS.

Guy Brothers, the evergreen minstrels, put up a good entertainment last night to a good house at the Grand. In the first part there were some good songs, part and chorus singing and dancing. Some songs were "Trown Over," by two tenor singers with nondescript voices, neither male nor female, and a couple of very fair bass solos were given, one with an especially deep, musical, down-in-the boots voice. The songs were old, a revival of some of the sentimental songs that are coming into conflict with the textureness and shoddy ragtime. The end men were good, though some of the jokes were archaic enough to be treated with the respect due to old age. The Fitzgerald brothers did some marvellous dancing. The juggling and head-balancing "stunts" were simply marvellous. The orchestra was prime, and their concerted and accompaniment work was especially praiseworthy. Altogether, Manager Turner is to be credited with presenting in Guy Bros. an all round, good entertainment of its kind.

ONLY ONE CASE

In referring to a rumour that there was an epidemic of typhoid fever in the city, the medical health officer, Dr. A. W. MacPherson, in speaking to the Examiner, stated that there was not the slightest ground for such a report being circulated. So far from being an epidemic, only one case of typhoid fever has been reported, and in that case the disease can not be set down to the use of city water.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"AND yet, I imagine there is a great deal more unhappiness in these beautiful homes than in those simple little houses we just passed, or even in the city tenements for that matter."

I've heard the spirit of that remark in various forms many, many times, and I always disagree, vocally when possible, and mentally when not.

For I think this idea, which many people not troubled by the "burden of wealth" like to comfort themselves with—that riches and happiness are incompatible, is decidedly wrong.

Riches and unhappiness aren't inseparable, by any means.

But that doesn't mean they are incompatible.

But that doesn't mean they aren't just as likely to shelter happiness as humbler homes, and I think very much more likely to, than wretchedly poor ones, for I don't believe happiness gets along with continual hunger as well as it does with occasional surfeit.

Wealth may be an opportunity to lead a life of license and self-gratification that will end in utter wretchedness of soul and mind and body, but it is also an opportunity to lead a normal, healthy life, full of healthy, happy interests and used for doing the work you love, unhampered by the necessity of translating your activity into dollars and cents.

There may be no more happiness within these beautiful homes than there is in the humble homes across the street, but I do not think we have any reason to believe there is any less.

I heard a woman the other day saying that he was glad her husband had lost his money, and her children had been brought up in comparative poverty, because she thought their characters and habits were infinitely better than they could have been if she had had plenty of money.

Wealth is a temptation, but it is also an opportunity.

Couldn't she have trusted herself to deny those children the temptations of wealth and give them all of its broadening opportunities?

There are some foolish and vicious rich people in this country who out of all their wealth only get unhappiness and restlessness and ruin.

But there are others who find in wealth an opportunity for self culture, and enjoyment of the beautiful, and community usefulness, that must surely bring much happiness.

Maybe you are wondering what's the use of all this talk—why not let people who do not have riches, comfort themselves with the idea that riches bring happiness.

If you saw anyone investing in grapes that you knew were sour and bad for them, you'd probably tell them, wouldn't you?

Well, you see, I speak because I think the idea that riches and unhappiness are incompatible is mental sour grapes and apt to cause mental colic.

This Home-Made Cough Syrup will Surprise You

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly and will usually cure the most stubborn case in 24 hours. This recipe makes sixteen ounces—a family supply. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis, and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc. There is nothing better. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

CHARLOTTE ST. METHODISTS TO TAKE A BALLOT

To Decide Which of Hon. Senator Cox's Generous Offers of Assistance in Building New Church They Will Accept.

ARE ASKED TO VOTE

The congregation of the Charlotte Street Methodist church is taking a ballot to decide which one of the three most generous offers of assistance in building a new church made by Hon. Senator Cox, they will accept. The ballots were given out to the members of the congregation, and must be returned before Sunday, Oct. 23. The three offers to be voted upon are given on the ballot, as follows:

Offer No. 1.—A cash subscription of $10,000.00 towards the erection of a new church on the present site. This option would involve an expenditure of about $42,000.00 for a new church, re-modelling the sheds, and making necessary repairs to parsonage—or the Congregation would themselves have to raise about $32,000.00.

Offer No. Two—All of the property known as the Aaron Cox home, lying east of the centre wall of the double house, for a site for new church and Sunday school room.

This option would entail an expenditure of about $60,000.00, and as our present property would sell for, say, $12,000.00, would necessitate the Congregation raising $48,000.00.

Offer No. Three—All the land necessary for church, Sunday school room and parsonage on the property known as the A. L. Davis home, and situated on Belmont Avenue, together with a cash subscription of $25,000.00.

This option would involve an expenditure of about $65,000.00; but as we would realize, say, $12,000.00 for present property, and Senator Cox's subscription of $25,000.00 equalling $37,000.00, it would leave the congregation to raise $28,000.00.

Missionary Work In Central India Shows Much Progress

The evening session of the Missionary Institute, held in St. Paul's church last evening was marked by a large attendance and a splendid address, not by Rev. Dr. Rankin, of Toronto, but by Rev. D. J. Davidson, a missionary on furlough, from Indore, Central India. In addition to the large number of delegates in the city from outside points, there was an immense gathering of town-people who followed with close attention the proceedings of the meeting. The chairman of the evening was Rev. J. G. Brown, pastor of St. James church, and the devotional exercises were in charge of Rev. Robt. Pogue. An address of welcome was given by Rev. J. R. Webb, of Murray street Baptis tchurch. On behalf of the local societies he welcomed the visitors to our city, to the homes where they were billeted, and it was his hope that the metings would prove a blessing and a profit to all. After a splendidly rendered solo by Miss Helen Davies, the chairman explained that Rev. Dr. Rankin, of Toronto, who was to have been the speaker, had missed his train at Port Hope, and therefore would not be present. However, the chairman remarked, Rev. D. J. Davidson who was on furlough from India, came at a most opportune time, having arrived on the C.P.R. local, and would speak in place of Dr. Rankin. He then introduced Rev. Mr. Davidson.

The Address.

Rev. Mr. Davidson stated at the outset that it was his intention to give his hearers some estimate of the work that had been done in India. Referring especially to the text, "I have come that my sheep might have life and that more abundantly." The church, he said, stood for the same work that Christ came into the world for. He wanted to speak of the work from the standpoint of the Christian community and also from that of the non-Christian community. Speaking of present religious conditions in the land where he has laboured for a number of years, he said that he did not want his hearers to think that the Indian Christian was superior to the Canadian Christian. It was not expected that it would, as their heritage was non-Christian. But the Hindoo Christian realized Christ as an indwelling being, and the speaker remarked that he would not be surprised if in a few years they outstripped Canadians in devotion.

The object of the Missionary was to do something for the other fellow. It was a life that sought others. The speaker instanced a case where a number of Hindoo boys, taking counsel together, decided to give up their two meals of meat each day, in order that the money might be given to the National Missionary Society. He spoke of the simple honesty of the people in the remote villages. He believed that more effective work could be done if they weren't paid for it, as the native people were many of them willing to preach and to teach for the mere money that was in it. The men who were doing the best were the ones who were doing it gratuitously. Rev. Mr. Davidson referred to the good work which was done indirectly, and that was through hospitals, schools and orphanages. These, he said, were a great inspiration to the mission work. Christian enterprise was inspiring a more abundant life. There was a spirit in Hindooism that was akin to Christianity. The Christian life would be meaningless if there was no personal God. The Hindoo believed that he was part of God, and therefore was not responsible for any wrong he committed. The Christian Colleges were sending out many believers. The work was progressing, which should cause the English speaking people to rejoice.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE WINNING MISS.

Speaking of "The Winning Miss," the musical comedy, which comes to the Grand on Monday night next, after spending this week in Toronto, an Akron, Ohio, exchange has the following good things to say:

Every once in a while, though not often perhaps, a show comes off of Broadway that is the real breeze in the way of musical comedy entertainment, but it has been a long time since there has been anything in Akron that might be used as a table of comparison with this spicy offering.

The action is so fast and the pretty chorus glides about the stage with its exhibit of rich costuming to the accompaniment of pretty melodies that it leaves an impression of general satisfaction with the playgoer, who is fortunate enough to see it.

And that Bloom comedian we all thought he was pretty good when he looked in here before, but in "The Winning Miss" it looks like a shame to take the money, so easy does the laughter come and in such profusion that even the lachrymary glands are kept working overtime. Max Bloom is the real funmaker this year and he doesn't have to give all the credit to the authors either. But he gets "some" dialogue out of his system and we don't know of any better test for your humorous capacity than a short entertainment by this comedian.

But don't think Max is the whole show—far be it from so—there is also Miss Lorraine Lester, who is about the most Winning Miss who ever flitted across the footlights and with the assistance of Miss De Von who sings "What I Want is That Dreamy Music" and Mr. Backus, who warbles "Eve," to say nothing of the beauty chorus, which is all that was advertised, they succeed in putting up the best entertainment ever seen here at less than $2.00 prices, and we could name a whole lot that have taken the standard funds that would look like tank-town barnstormers alongside.

It's the kind of a show I could rave about until the close of the engagement Saturday night, when I think of the pretty music, the funny dialogue and the fascinating girls but all that's necessary is to take a walk down Main street to-night or to-morrow matinee and evening and satisfy yourself that it's one of the best things ever seen in Akron.

GREAT PRAISE

The roadbed and general conditions both in operating and service on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, between Winnipeg and Edmonton, is coming in for great praise from patrons who have gone over the road.

At the general offices in Montreal a letter was received from a Professor of one of the prominent Collegiate Institutes, in the West, which reads as follows:

"On my recent trip in the West I travelled over the Grand Trunk Pacific between Saskatoon and Winnipeg. It was my first trip over this road and I must say I was surprised to find the roadbed in such excellent condition. It seemed like travelling on one of the old main lines in the East. The dining and sleeping car service were first-class in every particular, and I found the train officials courteous and obliging. Passengers whom I met were unstinted in their praise of the road and its appointments."

WIFE TO BEGIN 13TH YEAR SEARCH FOR HER HUSBAND

Boston, Oct. 8.—Nearly fifty years of age, prematurely gray and broken in health, but faithful to one of the most remarkable quests ever recorded, Mrs. Harriet C. Atherton, who for the past three months has been a temporary resident of the city of Portsmouth, N.H., will shortly return to South America to resume her life-long search for the body of her husband.

In allegiance to the memory of her husband, whose bleached bones lie somewhere in the jungle fastness or on the slopes of the Andes, Mrs. Atherton will sail once more for Guayaquil, from there to resume a search for the body of Charles F. Atherton, which she has carried on for more than a dozen years.

On the 23rd of this month an American steamer, bound for the northern parts of South America will have among its passengers the woman whose history for the past twelve years seems in every way to be a misfit in the affairs of the present day.

Twenty years ago Charles E. Atherton, a bank clerk in New York City, received notice of the illness and death of William Gordon, an uncle, who for a score of years had been living in parts unknown.

An adventurer and a ne'er-do-well, he had left home at an early age and only occasionally had any of his family heard any word from him.

The news of his death, however, came accompanied with a letter from a firm of lawyers in the city of Guayaquil, Ecuador, relating to the disposition of mining property held by Gordon. Its value was not stated, but the relatives were assured that it was valuable property.

Giving up his bank position, Atherton left New York and went direct to Ecuador. He superintended the return of Gordon's body to New York, and took charge of his claims to the mining property. It was not until he had arrived and had straightened matters out that he realized the value of this property. Several thousand dollars in the bank and considerable valuable machinery at the silver mine which, up to the time of Gordon's death, had been worked regularly, testified to the success of the mining operations.

Instead of returning to eNw York, Atherton entered into the business and made an instant success. A crew of Spaniards and native Indians made up his gang of miners and much valuable ore was taken out.

For five years the young American remained steadily at his work, and his reward came in the shape of such prosperity as he had never dreamed of in his former position. He studied mining, and became an expert. In spite of his youth his advice even to seasoned miners of the country proved valuable.

At the end of eight years Atherton returned to New York on a six months vacation. There he met the woman who became his wife. They were married and with her he returned to Ecuador.

In the course of his working of his own property, Atherton had spent much time prospecting. Stories told by natives of great quantities of silver far up in the Andes ranges toward the boundaries of Brazil had interested the young miner, and he determined to explore that country.

It was not until two years after his marriage, however, that he prepared to visit this country, and it was suggested that during his absence Mrs. Atherton return north on a short vacation and to visit friends.

The wife took her leave of her husband and sailed for New York. Atherton, gathering a few natives with pack mules and provisions, disappeared into the hills towards an uncertain destination among the mountain ranges to the east. What luck he had, if he ever met with any, was not disclosed in the few scattered letters sent out by natives and which the youn gwife in New York received.

It was four months, however, after his departure that Mrs. Atherton, 2,000 miles away, received a scribbled note that brought the presentment of her husband's death. Within four hours, as Mrs. Atherton now relates it, she was aboard ship and on her way south to find her husband.

For six months Mrs. Atherton, at the head of her follows, ranged the paths and passes of the vast foothills of the Andes range. She returned to Guayaquil, organized a new party, which included an American and a Spanish friend of her husband, and once more returned into the mountains.

Every possible spot has now been searched. For hundreds of miles the impenetrable jungle forests of the swampy lower foothills leading upward to the slopes of the Andes range have been beaten by squads of men until the quest has become one almost of waiting.

How many years will elapse before the dust of Charles Atherton will be identified is a matter of doubt. Each year the chances that his body would be found have been growing less and less. Such has been the vigor and extent of the search that now little can be done. Yet, as determined as when, twelve years ago, she received the first news of the probable death of he rhusband, Mrs. Atherton says, simply, that she will never give up the search.

Don't Be Bald

Nearly Anyone May Secure a Splendid Growth of Hair

We have a remedy that has a record of growing hair and curing baldness in 93 out of every 100 cases where used according to directions for a reasonable length of time. That may seem like a strong statement—it is, and we mean it to be, and no one should doubt it until they have put our claims to an actual test.

We are so certain Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will cure dandruff, prevent baldness, stimulate the scalp and hair roots, stop falling hair and grow new hair, that we personally give our positive guarantee to refund every penny paid us for it in every instance where it does not give entire satisfaction to the user.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is as pleasant to use as clear spring water. It is delightfully perfumed, and does not grease or gum the hair. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. With our guarantee back of it, you certainly take no risk. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets.

MR. TULLY RETIRES

To my customers and the Public of Peterborough and District—

On my retirement from the retail drug business conducted by me on George street, Peterborough, for the past forty years, I desire to thank all those who have been my patrons during that period. I also desire to say that I have disposed of my business to Mr. Coleman M. Moncur, a man of ability and experience in the drug business. I believe that the same confidence can be placed in Mr. Moncur as has been placed in the business that I have conducted, as the store has been noted for the high quality of drugs sold ,and Mr. Moncur has given evidence that this will be the line he will follow.

Again thanking my old customers, and bespeaking for Mr. Moncur a liberal schare of your patronage, I am,

Yours truly,
J. D. TULLY.

In connection with the above article referring to my purchasing from Mr. J. D. Tully, his drug business, I just wish to say that I appreciate the position Mr. Tully has held for the past forty years in the business life of Peterborough. Mr. Tully has had the reputation of keeping an excellent stock and a high standard of quality in his business and has earned a reputation that I will endeavour in every way to follow.

I have had a first class drug experience and trust to have the same confidence that has been imposed in Mr. Tully and hope to receive the patronage that has hitherto been extended to this place of business and also to see new faces all the time.

FROM SIERRA LEONE TO CANADA WITHOUT ADDRESS

National Drug Co. Receive Unusual and Amusing Letter

The National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, have just received a letter from the West Coast of Africa, which reached its proper destination although addressed in an extremely vague manner. The writer was evidently a native withan imperfect knowledge of English. The letter was written by a member of the 2nd West India Regiment and is as follows:

Sierra Leone, West Africa,
August 8th, 1910.

Dear Sir, With congratulations, I address you these few lines. May it find you enjoying good time and health at present. Sir, I have receiv vour letter I notice the contents Please send me one box of vour Gin Pill-. 2-6d. I want try it and if do me good, I will send back very early. While I am your truly same.

A. O. GREEN.
B. Company, 2 W. I. R.

The envelope bears only the following inscription:
National Drug & Co., of Canada L'td.
27-29 Wellington St., West.

There is no town, city or country mentioned. Yet this letter was sent from the post office in Sierra Leone to England, as shown by the London post mark, and forwarded to Plymouth, thence to Montreal, reaching the city on August 31st, only twenty-one days after being written in West Africa. This is an excellent example of the wide-spread reputation of the National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, and of their excellent preparations which, it may be safely stated, are known in all parts of the world.

DEATH OF MRS. LILLICRAP

Well Known Resident of Lakefield Has Passed Away

LAKEFIELD, OCT. 11. — A well known resident of Lakefield passed away in the person of Mr. Lillicrap, relict of the late Co. Lillicrap, of the Indian army. The deceased whose maiden name was Miss Greells. She was born in England, but had lived in Lakefield for the greater part of her life and had a very large circle of friends. She was for many years a member of the congregation and W.A. of St. John's church. She is survived by one son, Mr. F. J. Lillicrap, of Lakefield.

SUMMER IS OVER

Cloud land and winter sky
Shall we discover,
Where oft we wandered by
Sweet smelling clover.
Winds breathe a mournful sigh
"Summer is over".

Grim stands the leafless tree,
Gone is the lover
Six foot waiting and patiently
Love to discover.
Winds murmur dreadly
"Summer is over".

Naught but a leafy bier
Is there to cover
With Nature's blinding tear,
Memory will hover
And whisper in mine ear
"Summer is over".

MEETINGS TO-DAY

The Missionary Institute sessions this morning were characterized by splendid attendances, there being quite a number out at the early morning prayer meeting at the Y.M.C.A. The General Secretary, Mr. Gilchrist, led the meeting and spoke on the subject of "Prayer and Missions." The regular morning session opened in St. Paul's schoolroom. The hour of Bible Study was conducted by Rev. J. E. Fee, after which the delegates met in the various Mission Study classes. The Class on India was taken by Rev. D. J. Davidson, the one on South America by Rev. C. N. Mitchell, and the one on the "stranger within our gates," was led by Mrs. (Dr.) F. C. Stephenson and the one on "Corea" was taken by Rev. H. J. Keith.

The evening session to-night in St. Paul's church will be addressed by Rev. Canon N. L. Tucker, M.A., D.C.L., and a union ladies' choir will be under the direction of Miss M. McCaw. On Wednesday evening Mr. J. L. Murray, of New York, Educational Secretary of the Students' Volunteer Movement will be the speaker and the music will be rendered by a male choir under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey.

LADIES' LITERARY ELECTED OFFICERS

At a meeting of the Ladies' Literary Society, held at the Lyceum last night, the following were elected to control the society for the coming year:

President - Miss L. Hurley.
Vice-Pres. - Miss H. Kane.
Secretary Mrs. B. McNamara.
Treasurer—Miss M. Kelly.

The following were elected to the committee:

Miss Clara Cahill, Miss Nora Coughlin, Miss W. O'Brien, Miss J. O'Donnell, Miss Ethel Hayes, Miss Maud Landry, Miss M. McManus, and Miss M. O'Heron.

After the elections Rev. Father Casey outlined in general the work for the year. He would not enter into detail, as they all knew a lady could not keep a secret, but they could take it that they intended to break new ground. The social side of the society would not be neglected, but as it was primarily a literary society they would endeavour to live up to their name and make it literary in the best sense. He did not advocate the multiplication of clubs—many club meant a neglected home, but clubs in moderation, unlike whiskey, might be made to serve a very useful purpose, and they would endeavour to get out of the Society all that was in it. If they would all work together they could make it a society that they would be proud to belong to. That was the ideal they set for themselves, and not merely to make it an agreeable way of wasting time.

The thanks of the Society were tendered Rev. Fr. McColl for last year's work and his general interest in the society, on the motion of Miss Hurley, seconded by Miss Coughlin.

A meeting of the new committee is called for Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Lyceum. The first general meeting will be held on Friday, Oct. 21, when a very able extempore lecturer will inaugurate the year's work. The general public is cordially invited to this lecture, further particulars of which will be announced later.

YOUNG PEOPLES' BAND HAD ENJOYABLE EVENING

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jones, 180 Auburn street, by the members of the Young Peoples' Band of the Salvation Army, who with their teacher Mr. Will Forde and a few intimate friends gathered together, it being the occasion of the birthday of Master Willie Jones, who is a member of the band. About 30 people sat down to a splendid supper, which was served from 6 o'clock to 7.30. After doing full justice to the excellent viands provided, the company enjoyed themselves with games and songs, one interesting feature being the old-fashioned bran-tub. Master Willie Jones, who is a clever young musician, was the recipient of several useful presents with which he was well pleased. Refreshments were served at a late hour, when the tired but happy crowd dispersed, everyone voting the evening a splendid success.

POWER IS TURNED ON

Sir James Whitney and Hon. Adam Beck Get a Good Welcome on Occasion of Inaugural of New Power Service — Banquet Cooked by Electricity—Visitors From All Over the Province Attend.

Berlin, Ont., Oct. 12 Fittingly concluding with a banquet, cooked with electric power from Niagara, the celebration of the inauguration of the Hydro-electric power service in Berlin yesterday was a most happy and auspicious occasion to all concerned. The Hydro-Electric Power Commission has surmounted the several obstacles and difficulties inseparable from such undertakings, and has demonstrated to the representatives from other municipalities, gathered in large numbers here yesterday, its ability to "deliver the goods." The demonstration of approval which the affair brought to Hon. Adam Beck was shared in also by Sir James Whitney and Hon. Mackenzie King, and Sir James' reference to Messrs. King and Beck as two Waterloo boys who have both made good was warmly appreciated by the audience. Sir James did another graceful thing when he associated Mr. Beck with the act of turning on the power, and the people gave vent to warm approval of the courtesy. The decoration and arrangements were above criticism, and the inauguration may be accepted as a happy omen of the future of the enterprise, which is designed to do great service to western Ontario.

The city presented a picturesque spectacle at night, when the official party, with Gen. Green (president of the Ontario Power Co.), Mr. F. H. McGuigan (who has the construction contract) and Chief Engineer Saltman, were driven around the thoroughfares. On either side of the streets were charmingly arranged strings and chains of colored incandescent globes, while at regular distances great arc lights made the night seem like day. On Main street a magnificent illuminated arch, erected by the Hydro-Electric Commission, was much admired. It was an intricate piece of electrical craft, splendidly designed and supporting illuminated crests of the province and the County of Waterloo.

The banquet in the big market building at night was a brilliant affair. The long auditorium was beautifully decorated with flowers, foliage and bunting, and lit by a myriad of tiny Hydro-electric orbs. The elaborate menu also was cooked with the new white coal. Over five hundred men, representing nearly all portions of older Ontario, attended the banquet, over which Mayor Hahn presided. Two little maids presented the Premier and Hon. Mr. Beck with beautiful bouquets of American Beauties. The Minister of Power gallantly passed his on to Mrs. Beck.

Dynamite Was Stolen.

San Francisco, Oct. 12—Army officials of the presidio have given a new turn to the hunt for the Los Angeles Times dynamiters, by laying before the civil authorities their finding in an investigation into the theft of a quantity of dynamite from the reservation. Four days before The Times' building was destroyed 20 sticks of dynamite, 50 feet of fuse and half a box of percussion caps were stolen from the presidio quarry. With the explosives were several expensive instruments, but none of them was disturbed.

It is the belief of the army officials that civilians were responsible for the theft, and that the dynamite was carried off in suit cases by probably three men, and conveyed to one of the north shore wharves, where it could easily have been smuggled aboard a boat.

Walking Round the World.

Chatham, Oct. 12 Henry Stewart of San Diego, Cal., arrived in the city yesterday on his way from San Diego, on a walk around the world, and will visit Palestine, China and Japan. He expects to get back home in time for the Panama-California Exposition in 1915. He left yesterday afternoon on a weary tramp through Ontario and Quebec. He will take the steamer at Quebec. He left San Diego on Feb. 14 of the present year.

Adopt Commission Government.

Lynn, Mass., Oct 12 The commission form of government was adopted by this city at a special election held yesterday. Of the 22 precincts in the city, 18 voted in favor of the change.

At the municipal election in December the voters will elect five men as a commission to govern the city, and on the first Monday in January this commission will supersede the present mayor, board of aldermen and city council.

Ottawa's Water Unsafe.

Ottawa, Oct 12 Allan Hazen of New York, who has been examining the water supply, reports that, while the Ottawa River shows surprisingly little pollution for so large a river, yet the pollution is sufficient, so that the water cannot be used with confidence. The color, also, is not good. He suggests that the water supply should be taken from McGregor's Lake, fifteen miles north of the city.

Washed Overboard.

Lewes, Delaware, Oct. 12.—The British schooner Inga, from Philadelphia for Sydney, C.B., with a cargo of magnesite ore, returned here yesterday leaking badly as the result of encountering a severe northwest gale. The schooner shipped heavy seas, and one of them carried Clive Stephens, aged 18 years, of St. Martins, West Indies, overboard.

Flour Mills Burned.

Brampton, Oct. 12.—About 11 o'clock Monday night fire broke out in the flour mills of Messrs. H. Bracken & Son of Boston Mills. Although every effort was made to save the mills they were totally destroyed, together with the contents. Mr. Bracken had operated the mills for the past forty-five years.

Will Soon Be Housed.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 12—Treasurer McKenzie of the Campbellton relief fund, states that they hope to have all the people housed very soon. Some are still living in tents, but building operations are being rushed.

FACED THE GRAND JURY

Three Notable Men Including a Unionist Member of Parliament, Will Conduct Dentist's Case While Two Celebrated Pleaders Are Retained For Miss Ethel Leneve—Abundance of Evidence.

London, Oct. 12 The October sessions of the Central Criminal Court opened here yesterday morning. In charging the grand jury, Recorder Sir J. Fulton said there were ninety-five persons to be tried at the sessions, and amongst the cases to be disposed of was the charge of murder against Dr. H. H. Crippen, who was described as a dentist, and Miss Ethel Clare Leneve, who was indicted for being an accessory after the fact.

"So far as Crippen is concerned," he continued, "by the evidence I have briefly indicated to you there is an abundance of evidence to justify you in finding a true bill against him for the murder of his wife.

"The case of Miss Leneve is on an entirely different footing. What she is charged with is being an accessory after the fact. It is necessary for the prosecution to satisfy the jury that she relieved, comforted, and assisted Crippen, and that she knew he had committed the murder. Certainly there does not seem to be anything in the statement made by her on the 8th of July in which she seems to indicate that she had not any knowledge at all that Crippen had committed murder. It will depend very much upon her demeanor, but it appears to have been a rational statement.

"You may take it with very great consciousness that every consideration will be given her case. She will have every opportunity, if she desires, to avail herself of giving any further information she may wish in the course of the trial."

Crippen will be represented at his trial by three lawyers, the best known of whom are Alfred Aspinwall Tobin, Unionist member of Parliament for Preston, and Huntly Eugene Jenkins. Of the two who will look after the interests of Miss Leneve, Frederick Edwin Smith is a leading Conservative member of Parliament for Walton division of Liverpool.

$2,250,000 For Research.

Berlin, Oct. 12 The celebration of the 100th anniversary of the University of Berlin began yesterday. The feature was an address by Emperor William, who announced that the work of the University would be broadened further by a foundation for scientific research, for which he had collected from private individuals nearly $2,250,000.

Lord Strathcona, representing McGill University, extended the felicitations of Great Britain.

Merely Swelled Head.

Washington, Oct. 12. Merely because a man has a badly "swelled" head is no excuse for sending him to the lunatic asylum; all inventors have "exaggerated ego," but are not necessarily insane. Such, in effect, was the verdict passed upon the mental condition of John W. Currell, an inventor of aerial torpedoes, whom alienists declared had that peculiar brand of lunacy called "exaggerated ego."

Roosevelt Up in the Air.

St. Louis, Oct. 12. Theodore Roosevelt went up with Aviator Hoxsey yesterday afternoon in an aeroplane, and made three laps of the track. He was in the air three minutes and twenty seconds, and landed easily.

Mr. Roosevelt, after alighting, said it was the finest experience he ever had, and that he would like to stay up an hour if he had the time.

Prosperity His Ruin.

Cobalt, Oct. 12 A veteran of the Spanish-American war, Charles Crawford, was Monday night sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary. Crawford forged two checks on Willard Pooler of the Colonial cafe, where he had worked for some time. Till a year ago, when he received a legacy of $2,000, Crawford was a steady workman, but could not stand prosperity.

Bank Manager Killed by Auto.

Sarnia, Oct. 12.—George H. Griffin, manager of the Bank of Montreal at Sarnia, died at 11 o'clock Monday night from the effects of being struck by an automobile on the evening of Oct. 3.

LISBON IS TRANQUIL

Eighty Thousand Men Involved In Newest Trouble.

Paris, Oct. 12 The French Government is again facing a serious strike situation. The employes of the Northern Railroad struck early yesterday, and last night the strike spread to the Western Railroad, which is owned by the state. Indications are that to-day will see a complete tie-up in northern and western France.

The strikes now involve about 80,000 men. The strike on the Western Railroad was voted last night by 8,000 men employed in Paris and the suburbs. They count upon the national unions to tie up the provinces. It is reported that the movement may also extend to the Eastern and the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean railroads.

As is usual in such circumstances, the City of Paris is threatened with a scarcity of food supplies. Freight, mail and passenger transportation is partially restricted, and the vast army of working people in the northwest are unable to reach their places of business.

Military engineers are taking the places of the strikers, and troops are guarding various stations and important sections of the roads. Large military forces were hastily distributed on the first evidence that a strike had been declared, and additional troops were ordered out last night. The Ministry has placed the railroads on a military basis and may muster the railway employes into service as reservists. The strikers have voted to continue the strike until the demands have been met, but have requested a conference with the railroad officials.

The conservative newspapers condemn the strike as indicating a revolutionary general federation of labor, trying to absorb the railroad unions but the Socialist press hails it as a commendable battle for needed reform.

The demands of the employes are as follows: A general increase of wages, to meet the higher cost of living; a retroactive application of the employes' pension law; a more equitable division of work; the granting of one day off in seven of all employes; distinct employment by the month instead of the day.

WAS HE SANDBAGGED?

Mind of Man Who Disappeared on Eve of Wedding Is a Blank.

Guelph, Oct. 12. That George Edgar Clarke, who disappeared from the Iroquois Hotel, Toronto, on the eve of his marriage to a Guelph young lady, and who was found Monday at Bradford, was sandbagged and robbed of $100, is the opinion of his mother, Mrs. W. R. Clarke, 127 Perth street.

When seen yesterday morning, Mrs. Clarke said that her son had not recovered his senses fully as yet, and so far as the time which elapsed between his leaving the hotel and his recovery at Bradford is concerned, his memory is a blank. There are no superficial wounds, that could be found in medical examination, and it may be merely a case of forgotten identity.

What makes the sandbagging theory stronger, however, is the fact that Clarke left the Hotel Iroquois with $100 in his possession, and when found by his cousin, Mr. Holiby, at Bradford, no trace of the money was found. Clarke was found by Mr. Holiby in his barn two miles out of Bradford, and to him he said he had met with foul play, how he did not know. Holiby telephoned to his father in this city, who brought him back Monday.

The Toronto police are investigating the story, but find it difficult to trace the matter, as Clarke cannot tell anything which occurred after he left the hotel. He does not know which direction in the city he took, so that the scene of the accident or foul play, whichever it might be, cannot be located.

Presentation Plate For Niobe.

Halifax, Oct. 12—The Nova Scotia Government has purchased a handsome piece of plate for presentation to the cruiser Niobe, on her arrival at this port.

$3.50 and $5.00 Glasses for $1.00

Of course, very few, if any, who visit these Fakirs, ever get a pair of glasses for $1.00, but such an advertisement serves the purpose of bringing in the victims, and the would be Optician who is in charge relies on his shrewdness to do the rest.

The men who thus degrade an art which requires the highest scientific attainments in order to practise it successfully, to the lowest level of commercialism, care very little about the results of their work. All they want is to sell the goods.

Peterborough has had a sample of this method of selling glasses, and the results which have followed should be an object lesson to her citizens. If you value your eyesight be-ware of the above kind of Fakirs.

All our glasses are guaranteed, and we are always here to stand back of that guarantee.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

WHAT a superfluity in the world, at least this part of it—it may be different on the other side of the globe—has of half cocked people.

People whose judgment is always a few minutes and usually some hours behind their actions. I mean.

It seems to me that to one person who would be improved by thinking and moving and acting more quickly, there are nine who would be made more desirable citizens my thinking and moving more deliberately.

Most of us go off half, or at the most, three-quarters cocked, the majority of the time.

A man told me recently of a stenographer whom he was about to dismiss for just that fault.

"I tell her of something I want done," he said, "and she seems to understand me perfectly. She assents to all my directions. I say, 'Are you sure you understand just what I want?' She is almost insulted by my doubts and rushes off to start the work.

"In five minutes she is back to interrupt me at whatever I have focused my mind on, with half a dozen questions that she ha sthought of.

"She's a nice girl in lots of ways but I want someone who doesn't go off half cocked most of her time."

Emerson, in one of his essays, speaks of "afternoon men" who upset the scheme of things by being always tardy, always lagging behind the times, always a bit too late in their decisions and actions.

Seems to me the scheme of things is upset a good deal more by "sunrise men" who are always wasting their own an dother people's energy by hasty and unconsidered action.

In one of the western states, there is a prison where the men who have committed crimes that are a result of a quick temper, such as murder or manslaughter or assault are set to work doing some of the very finest work of watchmaking.

They deal with such microscopic and fragile parts that a hasty or ill-considered movement will destroy the work of weeks.

The theory is that the complete control and slowness of motion that this work requires acts upon them mentally and teaches them self-control and deliberation.

Seems to me it wouldn't be a bit bad idea if a course in watchmaking could be introduced into the public schools.

I suppose that is a very wild idea, but surely if the habit of control and deliberation could be inculcated, even to a small degree, in our city, it would do young America more good than some of the frills and furbelows with which its educational garments are trimmed nowadays.

OF DOUBLE INTEREST IS THIS LETTER

It Reports a Remarkable Cure of Kidney and Bladder Disease From Belleville, Ont.

Also Recalls Mr. D. M. Waters' First Purchase of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and Ointment a Quarter of a Century Ago.

When you read this letter you will readily understand why it is of special interest to us, for the druggist who sold the pills in this case gave his first order in 1885

For twenty-five years Mrs. Waters has watched the growth in popularity of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and other medicines and can now point to hundreds of cures in Belleville and vicinity resulting from his recommendations of these well-known medicines

If you are tired of experimenting, why not use a medicine which has proven its undoubted control over diseases of the kidneys and liver? Let this letter convince you or send to us for records of hundreds of other cases.

Mr. Mark Ottrey, Bay Side, Ont., writes: "I purchased two boxes of Dr Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills from my druggist, D M. Waters, Belleville, Ont., and the amount of satisfaction my wife obtained from their use has led me to ask my druggist to send you this letter.

Mrs. Ottrey suffered considerably with kidney and bladder trouble, causing great pain at times. The urine was very heavy and of a bad colour. After taking a few doses of these pills she felt better and when she had used the two boxes she was entirely well." tion of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills on the liver, kidneys, and bowels enables them to bring about cure

Cured Eczema and Dandruff

"I am pleased to inform you that I have been cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Since I was a boy I have suffered with dandruff, not only from the itching but from its disagreeable appearance in a scaly form all over my head. I had to brush it off my clothes all day long. I used every kind of preparation supposed to cure dandruff, also soaps and shampoos, but it seemed to me that, instead of improving with these remedies, the dandruff increased, even my hair began to fall out and the result was that two months ago eczema developed on my scalp.

"I suffered so from this that as a last resource I thought I would try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. They had the most gratifying results for I had used only one box of Cuticura Ointment and a single cake of Cuticura Soap when I was cured, the eczema and dandruff were gone and my head perfectly clear.

"I can assure you that so long as I live no other soap than Cuticura will be used by me and all those near to me. I will also add that I will always use Cuticura Ointment as a dressing for the hair. I feel that you should know of my cure and if you desire you may use this as a true testimonial which comes from a sufferer of thirty years' standing. I will be happy to tell any one of my experience in order to assist those who may be suffering from the same disease." (Signed) J. Ackerno, General Commission Merchant, 59 Pearl St., New York.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment afford the speediest and most economical treatment for itching, burning, scaly humors of infants, children and adults. As in this case, a single set is often sufficient. Sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, U. S. A., for 32-page Cuticura Book on treatment of skin and scalp affections.

THE SAFETY OF "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

May Be Taken For Years

The Ideal Remedy For Young and Old

Nature's gifts do us good, if used judiciously. We eat bread from babyhood to old age without ever tiring of it. We drink water, year in and year out, with the greatest benefit to our health. So too, we eat fruit in season and are better for the change of diet. This is true, because such things are the natural foods and drink of mankind. It is for this reason that "Fruit-a-tives" may be used for years in correcting some ill of the body. As is well known, "Fruit-a-tives" is made of the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes.

Just as fresh fruit may be eaten at every meal, so "Fruit-a-tives" may be taken every night for 20 years or more with the greatest benefit.

The absolute safety of "Fruit-a-tives" has been a great factor in its success. Those who suffered with chronic troubles such as Constipation, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, etc., naturally took a number of boxes of "Fruit-a-tives".

As they became better, they found that instead of being compelled to increase the dose as in most medicines, they were decreasing it, and gradually taking fewer doses.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Parties Of Agricultural Experts More Than Pleased With West

During the summer of 1910 two parties of American agricultural experts, magazine and newspaper men, toured to Western Canada under the auspices of CANADA MONTHLY, to spy out the land for themselves and get copy for their several papers. They came warily, prepared to size up Canada to the last grass-blade; they went away with heads of wheat in their buttonholes and made-in-Canada grins under their moustaches.

One, the Peace River party, comprised seven well-known Americans: Emerson Hough, author and magazine writer; Robert Dunn, of Everybody's Magazine; Dr. B. K. Miller, the naturalist of Wisconsin; Prof. Coats; P. Boll, head of the Agricultural Experiment Station at the University of Minnesota; Prof. James H. Pettit, of the Department of Agronomy of the University of Illinois, and several well known Canadians, including Arthur MacFarlane, whose work appears in The Century, Collier's Everybody's and other American magazines.

At Edmonton, early in August, the party was turned over by CANADA MONTHLY to J. K. Cornwall, who knows the Peace River and Slave Lake country as another man knows his own door-yard. By team and boat and steamer they went, following part of the time the old Mackenzie Trail through the fat meadows, visiting the Government Experiment Farm at Fort Vermilion, and sampling bread grown from seed on the edge of the Arctic Circle. The coming of these men to the Peace River country is an event of real historic significance. It is the first time a party of this sort has penetrated into Canada's great hinterland. The settlers knew they had a rich country, but they did not know how it compared with Ontario, Illinois and Dakota. The trader and hunter knew they had a rich country, and came back from their trips with vague, inexact tales, which reached only a small audience and did not receive much attention there.

It remained for these men, trained to exact observation, primed with exact knowledge of Ontario and Illinois, and Dakota and everywhere else that seed is cast on good ground; keen to see, expert to judge after seeing, to appraise the North at its true worth, to bring news of its richness to "Outside."

It will not be long until "Outside" knows the Peace River as we know the Saskatchewan; not long until there is no more "Outside" to the Peace, because it has become "Outside" itself. And it is these seven Americans who have started the turning of the tide.

The second party represented a dozen of the best known agricultural papers in the United States, and came up to the harvest fields of Western Canada just about the season when certain industrious gentlemen on the other side of the line were working their fountain pens overtime on the touching fairy tale, which has since generally become known as the "15,000 Returning Yankees Myth." One of the most effective refutations that this story could have had is the testimony of these agricultural editors, who saw Western Canadian conditions for themselves and couldn't be fooled.

These men, representing the foremost farm papers, having expert knowledge of farming and keeping in daily touch with crop conditions all over North America, were just the sort of men to estimate the Canadian situation with an appraising eye. They were men who know. Figures may be juggled, hearsay garbled in repeating, estimates padded, but the stack and the grain-bag are actual physical facts which no amount of doctoring can change. They simply are there—or they aren't.

The agricultural editors did not content themselves with observing crop conditions from a car window; they went into the fields, and poked inquisitive noses into the farmers barns and prowled among the elevators along the sidings. They examined the ripe grain, they ate dinner with the threshing crews, they compared notes with farmers who had come from Iowa and Minnesota and the Dakotas; they talked of subsoils and drainage and nitrogen with their meals and in their sleep. And with one voice and varying emphatic adjectives, they pronounced the pathetic picture of the deluded and discouraged American returning to the Stars and Stripes after a hopeless struggle with the barren soil, killing drought and general great-lone-landness of Canada, as "chunk" of the most flagrant and foolish kind.

Not only did ex pronounce it "chunk" in conversation, but when they returned to their editorial chairs they said it in print in no uncertain terms. Recently F. G. Moorhead, of the Iowa Homestead, Wisconsin Farmer and Farmer and Stockman, sent us an editorial written by him for an Iowa paper, which is typical of the work these men are doing for the Dominion.

"The statement that 15,000 American colonists have returned from Canada during the past year is absolutely unfounded and incorrect. The actual facts are that less than 500 settlers have returned. These figures are vouched for by the authorities at Washington, Winnipeg and Ottawa. The story that colonists are coming back by the thousands was undoubtedly inspired by railroads which do not enter the Canadian provinces and which are trying to divert immigration to their respective territories in the United States.

"A recent visit of a Telegraph representative through the Western provinces of Canada discloses that crop conditions are good. Wheat will run from 20 to 35 bushels to the acre, while bumper crops of oats reaching as high as 85 to 90 bushels to the acre are reported from many sections. Iowa has probably sent more settlers to Western Canada than any other state. Personal investigation has disclosed that the great bulk of these settlers are prosperous and contented. They do not evince any desire to return home, although conceding that Iowa is the best state in the Union."

No better answer than this could be made to the gentlemen who devised the "15,000 Returning Yankees Myth." This is the opinion of a man who knows, and it is refreshing to hear the truth so plainly told.

To acquaint such men as these with the truth about Canada does the country more good than can now be estimated. It is not simply that the actual facts seen by these writers will be translated into their special articles and receive wide publicity in the States this season. The men have gained a knowledge of the Dominion that will become a permanent part of their brain furniture, and for years to come they will spread that knowledge and help to quash some of the erroneous popular notions under which Canada has labored so long.

GOOD-BYE TO BEAUTY

It is good-bie to beauty when kidney derangements set in. The skin becomes hard and dry and the form wastes away and becomes emaciated. One cannot be too watchful and the safest way is to keep the kidneys, as well as the liver and bowels, healthy and active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. # OUTLAW SURRENDERS

WINTER, WIS., OCT. 11.—John Dietz, the outlaw of Cameron Dam, late yesterday afternoon surrendered, and was arrested and handcuffed.

Little Helen Dietz operated with a flashlight at 3:20 p.m. She walked to the edge of the clearing, met Sheriff Michael Madden, weeping and said:

"Father was shot in the hand and will surrender if guaranteed safe conduct to jail with the family."

A terrific gun battle began at 9:45 a.m. on Saturday. Every rifle in the posse of sixty met surrounding the Dietz cabin flashed fire. It appears that John and Leslie Dietz walked into the trap set by the deputies. Leslie left the cabin to go to the far side of the clearing for a cow. He had proceeded about 250 yards when he was fired upon. Leslie jumped back and ran along the crest of the hill on which the cabin stands, to cut behind a lumber pile.

For a distance of at least 200 feet he was a fair target for the guns of the deputies. John Dietz, when the shooting started, was between the barn and the lumber piles. Behind one of the piles were a few deputies and he received the full fire from these men. He suddenly pitched forward and down on his knees and then lay prostrate for a moment, then scrambled to his feet and made a dive for the cabin and darted inside the door. Mrs. Dietz was about 100 feet from the door when the bullets began to fly. She ran inside of the house and was appropriately not injured.

While these movements were taking place the landlords was kept up from all sides of the clearing. When they were all within the shack, five shots were fired back through the windows, but that was the only reply. One deputy sheriff is reported to have fallen on one of these shots.

While outside of the cabin, neither John nor Leslie Dietz carried a rifle. To get the outlaw and family were conveyed in automobiles to Hayward, the county seat of Sawyer County, and placed in jail.

AFRAID OF WIFE SLEEPS IN LION CAGE

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11. Rather than face his angry wife when he came back to their tent at the State fair grounds, James Swenson, a lion tamer, crawled into the cage with one of his lions and slept all night, his head pillowed on the brute's body.

In the morning Mrs. Swenson went on a search for her recreant spouse with a tent stake. She found her husband asleep against the lion. With a jab of the stake she awakened the animal tamer.

"Coward," she hissed at him, as he snuggled up to the lion out of reach of the stick, "you know better than to come home to me after you'd been drinking and sneaked off here to hide."

We go to all parts of the world for the wonderful ingredients of Psychine (pronounced Si-keen). We combine these ingredients in the finest chemical laboratories in Canada, and so great is our 30-year-old faith in this preparation that we'll buy a 50-cent bottle of it from your druggist and give it to you to try.

For nearly the third of a century we have known what Psychine will do. We have known it to cure hundreds of thousands in that time, of some of the most desperate cases of disease known to medical science.

We have received thousands of unsolicited testimonials, which we will gladly let you look over should you desire.

Think of it, a third of a century's experience with one preparation—a third of a century's intimate knowledge of what extraordinary cures it has made—almost a lifetime!

Do you wonder then with that perfect knowledge of Psychine, that we are anxious to bring it to the notice of everyone in Canada suffering from disease?

Do you wonder that we want those to know who are using worthless kinds of cure, who are not getting well, and who we know will be benefited by Psychine.

Do you wonder that we can buy hundreds of thousands of 50-cent bottles of Psychine from the druggists of Canada to give to those who wish to try it?

Psychine builds vitality.

It strengthens and increases the white corpuscles of the blood—the phagocytes, the policemen or scavengers of the blood.

These white corpuscles of the blood, when strong enough, destroy every disease germ that gets into the body, keeps the body healthy.

If these white corpuscles are not sufficiently strong or are not sufficiently strong, the disease germs destroy them and disease breed in the body. That's the cause of nearly every disease that afflicts the human race. For years scientists, in fact, it has been recognized that herbs are the most effective treatment for disease.

It is only within recent times that we have been able to get pure herbs as they were so effective.

Because certain of them destroyed and stored the white corpuscles or phagocytes.

These herbs are employed in compounding Psychine.

We go all over this world to obtain these herbs—Arabia, South America, China and Japan all contribute.

And the result is a preparation that will restore health and build vitality as no other preparation will.

That has proven itself in nearly the third of a century's use for such purposes.

That is a most effective treatment for:

|---|---|
| La Grippe | Rheumatic Troubles |
| Bronchitis | Weak Lungs |
| Hemorrhages | Weak Back |
| Sore Throat | Kidney Weaknesses |

THE BOY SCOUTS of BLACK WOLF and B. P.

ROMANCE, Utility, Outdoor Life, Discipline and the Teachings of Manhood Are Included in the Fascinating Semi-Military Organisations to Which the Boys of America and Britain Are Flocking by Thousands.

"YEK! Yek" Yek!"

As this cry echoed along the slopes of Morningside Park a boy whose head was surmounted by a broad brimmed hat of peculiar design halted suddenly upon the stone steps, and, screening his eyes from the sun, peered in every direction.

"Grrao' Grrao!" he replied.

From behind a clump of bushes stepped a lad of fourteen or thereabout in a khaki uniform and saluted with military precision.

"What troop, Flying Eagle?" asked he of the steps.

"First New York," was the answer of the Bush Boy. "What's yours, Tiger?"

"Thirty-third London," was the response.

"Shake hands," said Flying Eagle. "Glad to see you You must know B. P."

"Know him!" was the answer. "Why, I came over with him."

"H'm," remarked Flying Eagle, after a moment's hesitation. "Say, you're a lucky scout. I've been around myself some. I've camped with Black Wolf."

Now, this does not happen to be a meeting in the jungle, far from the haunts of civilized man, but between two boys in a New York city park who had never before seen each other. They were bound together by the tie of a new order of adolescent knighthood which within the last two years has spread around the globe since its organization in England by Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, "B. P.," the hero of Mafeking.

Four hundred thousand boy scouts are enrolled in Great Britain alone, while troops and patrols of the order are to be found everywhere in the world nearly, and the Boy Scouts of America, under the leadership of Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton ("Black Wolf"), number one hundred thousand and are increasing day by day.

There are in the United States ten million boys, it is estimated, varying in age from twelve to eighteen years, who are eligible to the privilege of being Scouts. Judging by the energy which is displayed by the American organizers and by the enthusiasm of the youths themselves, it may be that before long a large proportion of them will be enrolled in this modern chivalry, for such it is under its novel, latter day guise.

Although it was suggested in time of war the boy scout movement is not primarily military, but is more devoted to ways of peace. Lieutenant General Baden-Powell, now on a tour in the interests of the movement, arrived recently in Vancouver and is expected in this city before long, never intended that it should be a drill corps, but rather that it should stimulate the romantic mind the imaginative boy nature and substitute individual initiative for the hard and fast rules of tactics.

This movement, which is becoming so important a factor in the life of the young, practically had its origin at Mafeking, in South Africa, during the Boer War. Lieutenant General, then Colonel, Baden-Powell was besieged for 215 days in Mafeking, which he held with 1,200 men against a Boer army until he was relieved. The celebration over his gallant and successful defence gave to the English language a new word, "mafficking," used to denote public transports of delirious joy.

The siege itself brought into notice the boy scout. So manifold were the duties required of the little garrison and so extensive were the ravages of hunger and illness that the commander could ill spare able bodied men for orderlies and for messengers, and therefore he utilized boys who volunteered. These youthful defenders sped to their work on bicycles under the fire of the enemy and displayed such willingness and ability that Colonel Baden-Powell referred to them in his official report and since that time has been much interested in the development and progress of the boys.

Taken Up in America.

He was impressed, too, as a thorough military man with the paucity of able bodied alert and intelligent men, and he reached the conclusion that the lack of early training and the neglect of manly sports and pastimes had much to do with what he regarded as a sign of decline.

He publicly founded the Boy Scouts at Birkenhead, England, on January 24, 1908. Summing up the objects of the movement he stated that it was intended to make boys manly men, good and useful citizens, and not to train them as soldiers, but rather to avoid the bringing up of forty-six per cent of the boys of the nation without the knowledge of a useful occupation. The idea was received with enthusiasm in England, and now there are so many boy scouts in Great Britain that the organization is embarrassed in its efforts to keep control of the multitude of recruits which flock to its standard.

Mr W. D. Boyce, of Chicago, who had seen something of their work, caused to be introduced last April in the House of Representatives a bill to incorporate in Washington the Boy Scouts of America, which is the official body here in touch with the corps founded by the distinguished British soldier. The charter was issued in June. The Boy Scouts of America have no affiliation with a body of almost similar name which more recently has been founded. The organization already had something of a nucleus from which to work, as in 1909 and in 1901 Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton, the American naturalist and apostle of the gospel of the outdoor life for boys, had started his Woodcraft Indians, a society which had for its basis the following of the free and untrammelled life of the aboriginal inhabitants of this country. Mr. Dan Beard at this period also incorporated a body of youths called the Pioneers, or The Sons of Daniel Boone.

Mr. Seton in 1904 visited Lieutenant General Baden-Powell and asked him to co-operate in popularizing a movement which would make for the upbuilding of the character of the boys of this generation. The officer, after much mature reflection, started the Boy Scout movement, and wrote a handbook for it which from the first was well received and has become the vade mecum of hundreds of thousands of sturdy followers.

The compendium of the Boy Scouts of America includes much of the Baden-Powell edition, with which has been incorporated the Birch Bark Roll prepared by the American naturalist.

The committee on organization of the Boy Scouts of America, which is now hard at work, consists of Mr. Seton, chairman; Mr Lee F. Hanmer, secretary; Mr. George D. Pratt, treasurer, and Messrs. Jacob A. Riis, W. D. Boyce, Dr. Luther H. Gulick, Dan Beard, Edgar M. Robinson and Colin H. Livingstone. It is well financed, and a business man who does not wish his name known in that connection is devoting large sums every month to paying the necessary expenses.

The Boy Scouts of America have headquarters at No. 124 East Twenty-eighth street, where the official business is conducted. The committee already has troops in Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and cities of such rank, and has a large representation throughout this State and New Jersey and Massachusetts, Texas, that home of the rangers, has taken up the movement with alacrity, and the citizens of Fort Worth have become as enthusiastic over the perfecting of the organization as the young scouts themselves.

As there were in days of old degrees of knighthood so there are in scouthood. The first degree is that of tenderfoot. One who is less than twelve years of age cannot be initiated into its mysteries. Before taking it the candidate must know the scout laws and signs the composition of the flag of his country and how to fly it; how to tie the following knots: Reef, sheet bend, clove hitch, bowline, middleman's, fisherman's and sheepshank.

The Laws of the Scouts.

First are the laws of the scouts, which are as follows:

"1. A scout's honor is to be trusted.

"If a scout were to break his honor by telling a lie, or by not carrying out an order exactly when trusted on his honor to do so, he may be directed to hand over his scout badge, and never to wear it again. He may also be directed to cease to be a scout.

"2. A scout is loyal to his country, his officers, his parents and his employers. He must stick to them through thick and thin against any one who is their enemy or who even talks badly of them.

"3. A scout's duty is to be useful and to help others. He must be prepared at any time to save life or to help injured persons. And he must try his best to do a good turn to somebody every day.

"4. A scout is a friend to all and a brother to every other scout, no matter to what social class the other belongs.

"A scout must never be a snob. A snob is one who looks down upon another because he is poorer or who is poor and resents another because he is rich. A scout accepts the other man as he finds him and makes the best of him.

"5. A scout is courteous. That is, he is polite to all, but especially to women and children and old people and invalids, cripples, &c. And he must not take any reward for being helpful and courteous.

"6. A scout is a friend to animals. He should save them as far as possible from pain and should not kill any animal unnecessarily. Killing an animal for food is allowable.

"7. A scout obeys orders of his parents, patrol leader or scout master without question. Even if he gets an order he does not like, he must do as soldiers and sailors do; he must carry it out all the same because it is his duty; and after he has done it he can come and state any reasons against it; but he must carry out the order at once. That is discipline.

"8. A scout smiles and whistles under all circumstances. When he gets an order he should obey it cheerily and readily, not in a slow, hangdog sort of way. Scouts never grumble at hardships, nor whine at each other, nor swear when put out. The punishment for swearing or using bad language is for each offence a mug of cold water to be poured down the offender's sleeve by the other scouts. It was the punishment invented by the old scout Captain John Smith three hundred years ago.

"9. A scout is thrifty; that is, he saves every penny he can and puts it into the bank, so that he may have money to keep himself when out of work, and thus not make himself a burden to others, or that he may have money to give away to others when they need it."

What the Bushido was to the Samurai of Japan, what the laws of honor are to the American Indians the code of the boy scouts is to them. The young steers learn it as squires of the Middle Ages did the regulations which prepared them to be knights. What the word of an officer and a gentleman is in the army and navy are the yeas and nays of the scouts. The candidates are questioned by their superiors, the scout masters, on the points of this code and then at the close of the month, if the tenderfoot has shown that he knows and understands what is required of him, he is permitted to take the scout's oath. Its words are:—

"On my honor I promise to do my best.

"1. To do my duty to God and country.

"2. To help other people at all times.

"3. Obey the scout law.

It is an oath soon taken, but its observance is considered the subject of earnest thought, and a violation of it is regarded among the scouts as a serious offence.

Once a boy has passed his tenderfoot degree he has obligations which he must observe with extreme fidelity, for upon his mind is impressed the idea, "Such is the law of the scouts."

The salute of the order is given by holding up three fingers of the right hand with the thumb and the little finger held down and touching each other at the tips, meaning thereby the trilogy of the law of the scouts. This is the sign given by scouts meeting for the first time. The badge is a conventionalized fleur-de-lis, which also suggests the three points, and beneath the emblem is a turned upscroll made to suggest the smiling lips lifted at the corners and bearing the words, "Be prepared." All the traditions of mediaeval heraldry are suggested in the device, which originated in England and has been adopted as the standard American badge.

Having passed the tests for a scout, the tenderfoot realizes a cherished ambition, for now he is permitted to don the uniform. The standard garb of the British Boy Scouts consists of abbreviated khaki breeches known as "shorts," which leave the knees bare; stockings of wool turned down and brown or black shoes or brown "sneakers" as the soft rubber soled footgear is called. The shirt is of flannel and in winter a sweater may be worn. The belt is of brown leather with buckles of dull metal. The head is covered with a khaki colored hat with flat brim and chin strap. A staff unshod and thus adapted to feeling the way about quietly is carried, and a haversack of khaki color. The scouts also have knives attached to lanyards and hitched to swivels on their belts, and scoutmasters and patrol leaders have whistles on a cord about the neck.

Practically this uniform is being fashioned for the Boy Scouts of America, with olive drab colorings instead of the khaki and certain variations. It is intended to give the Scouts of America the choice of two uniforms, as it is thought possibly the bare knees would be too conspicuous for city use. One variety will have "shorts" and in the other breeches resembling those used by riders will be employed. Some uniforms worn by the various branches of the Boy Scouts of America which are now in the field follow closely on the order of the English pattern. The Boy Scouts in Canada are committed to the bare kneed variety.

The Qualifications.

From tenderfoot the neophyte has passed to the degree of second class scout, for which these are the qualifications:—

1. Have at least one month's service as a tenderfoot.
2. Elementary first aid and bandaging.
3. Signalling, elementary knowledge of semaphore or Morse alphabet.
4. Track half a mile in twenty five minutes; or, if in a town, describe satisfactorily the contents of one store window out of four, observed for one minute each.
5. Go a mile in twelve minutes at "scout's pace."
6. Lay and light a fire, using not more than two matches.
7. Cook a quarter of pound of meat and two potatoes without cooking utensils other than the regulation billy.
8. Have at least twenty-five cents in a savings bank.
9. Know the sixteen principal points of the compass.

Signalling is done largely by flags and the scouts have formulae for remembering the Morse code. The "billy" or "billy can" referred to in the regulations is a combination of the can and skillet so arranged as to be compactly carried.

After it has been adjudged that the scout of the second class has passed all his qualifications he is eligible to promotion as a first class scout. These then are the tests which he must meet in order to attain that position:

1. Swim fifty yards. (N. B. This may be omitted where the doctor certifies that bathing is dangerous to the boy's health. In which case he must run a mile in eight minutes, or perform some equivalent selected by the scoutmaster.)
2. Must have fifty cents at least in the savings bank.
3. Signalling. Send and receive a message either in semaphore or Morse, sixteen letters per minute.
4. Go on foot or row a boat alone to a point seven miles away and return again; or if conveyed by any vehicle or animal, go to a distance of fifteen miles and back and write a short report on it. It is preferable that he should take two days over it.
5. Describe or show the proper means for saving life in case of two of the following accidents allotted by the examiners: Fire, drowning, runaway carriage, sewer gas, ice breaking. Or bandage an injured patient or revive an apparently drowned person.
6. Cook satisfactorily two of the following dishes, as may be directed. Porridge, bacon, hunter's stew. Or skin and cook a rabbit or pluck and cook a bird. Also make a "clamper" of half a pound of flour or a "twist" baked on a thick stick.
7. Read a map correctly, and draw an intelligent rough sketch map. Point out a compass direction without the help of a compass.
8. Use an axe for felling or trimming light timber; or, as an alternative, produce an article of carpentry or joinery or metal work, made by himself satisfactorily.
9. Judge distance, size, numbers and height within 25 per cent error.
10. Train a tenderfoot for a month so that he may qualify as a second class scout.

Boys who have passed all these tests and have been duly enrolled as first class scouts have before them the opportunity of winning certain badges of merit. They may do this by qualifying by special training as members of the ambulance corps, or firemen or cyclists, and also as clerks, signallers, pioneers, seamen, marksmen, masters at arms, stalkers, gardeners, horsemen, electricians and musicians.

Shoulder lines are awarded to any scout who has attained six of these badges, and the exalted rank of "Silver Wolf" goes to the youth who has qualified in all fourteen of these extra requirements. Last of all, as precious to these young knights as orders conferred by kings and queens, are the medals for meritorious deeds, to be worn only when conferred by the Chief Scout Black Wolf himself. The bronze cross with the red ribbon is for saving a life at the risk of his own; the silver cross blue ribbon for life saving without the element of personal danger, and the gilt medal of merit with white ribbon is conferred for such meritorious services as assisting the police at personal risk, for on more than one occasion in London troops of boy scouts have aided in keeping back the crowds by presenting a solid front with their staves pressed forward and receiving the impact of the throng like veterans.

The gilt medal of merit may be achieved also for twenty good deeds, such as stopping runaway horses or assisting at fires or doing various good turns without being paid for them. "Good turns" are of various kinds. Patrols of boy scouts have even suddenly appeared to help an old woman take in her washing. Another patrol aided a man whose automobile seemed hopelessly mired in a country road.

The most important work in the order is done by the scout masters, who may be youths or men of mature age, who train the scouts and give instruction in all the degrees which are needful and take charge of them on scouting parties. Scouts must always address these officials as "Sir."

There are scout commissioners who inspect troops of scouts and give suggestions to scout masters for the good of the service, and over all is the Chief Scout, who in England is Lieutenant General Baden-Powell and in this country Mr. Seton.

The Boy Scouts of America are strictly a non-sectarian organization, and enrolled in its legions are all shades of religious belief. Such agencies as the Young Men's Christian Association, various boys' clubs of Catholics and the Young Men's Hebrew Association are interested in the movement. It happens that for the present the headquarters are in the building of the International Y. M. C. A. The oath to God and country or to God and the King, as it is in Great Britain, is considered by the founder to be sufficiently comprehensive and there is absolutely no distinction made with respect to creeds.

Discipline is largely vested in courts of honor, each composed of a scout master and two patrol leaders, which decide upon rewards, awards and punishments.

It is the object of the entire movement to promote the scout spirit, to bring the boys in touch with the manly virtues, to interest them in nature, to develop their powers of observation and interest them in lines of endeavor which will prepare them for useful and honorable callings.

"This is a time," wrote Mr. Seton in his Birch Bark Roll, which has been incorporated with the Baden Powell handbook for use in this country, "when the whole nation, turning toward the outdoor life, seeking in it the physical regeneration so needful for continued national existence, is waking to the fact, so long known to thoughtful men, that those live longest who live nearest the ground—that is, who live the simple life of primitive times, divested, however, of the ignorance in those times begot. Sport is the great incentive to outdoor life; nature study is the intellectual side of sport.

"I should like to lead this whole nation into a way of living outdoors for at least a month each year, reviving and expanding a custom which, as far back as Moses was deemed essential to the national wellbeing.

"Not long ago a benevolent rich man impressed with this idea chartered a steamer and took some hundreds of slum boys up to the Catskills for a day in the woods. They were duly landed and told to 'go and have a glorious time.' It was like gathering up a netful of catfish and throwing them into the woods, saying, 'Go and have a glorious time.' The boys sulked around and silently disappeared. An hour later they were found in groups under the bushes smoking cigarettes, shooting craps and playing cards—the only things they knew. Thus the well meaning rich man learned that it was not enough to take them out of doors. We must teach them to enjoy it."

If the boys who have had the benefit of country life it is easier to come in touch with the scouting period than it is for those who know little beyond the shrewd insight into life which they may gather in the tenement districts of New York and London. From the east side of New York at the present time, however, hundreds of scouting parties are going to the woods of New Jersey and the Palisades on explorations and are returning after their camping and scouting and signalling refreshed in mind and body and with their intellects keenly alert.

The principles which are kept in view, although the Boy Scout movement is essentially for recreation, are self government, the magic of the camp fire, woodcraft pursuits, honor, the standards, personal decorations for personal achievements, the heroic ideal and the poetry, the romance and the picturesqueness which fire the imagination in all phases of life if the mind is properly awakened and stimulated.

"The boys of the nation," writes Lieutenant General Baden Powell in his handbook for the British Scouts, "are full of enthusiasm and spirit and only want their heads to be turned in the right direction to become good and useful citizens. This splendid material is being allowed to run to waste, nay, worse than that, it is allowed to become harmful to the nation, simply for want of education, for want of a hand to guide them at the crisis of their lives when they are at the crossroads where their futures branch off for good or evil.

"The present authorized scheme of education in our schools includes plenty of book work, but no development of the quality that counts, namely, character, which after all, is of the first importance. Not thousands but hundreds of thousands of boys in our great cities, after an education in reading sufficient to enable them to devour the horrors of the Police News and in arithmetic to make their football wagers, are being left to drift into the ranks of the 'hooligans' and the 'wasters' without any attempt to stay them. But they receive no teaching in resourcefulness, chivalry, thrift, citizenship and patriotism.

"The key to successful education is not so much to teach the pupil as to get him to learn for himself. The subject to be instilled must be made to appeal—you must lure your fish with a succulent worm, not with a bit of hard, dry biscuit. * * * That was my object in suggesting the gilt of 'scouting' for the pill of education in manliness and good citizenship, but I had no idea when I did so a year ago that it would meet with the response which it has done. It has been adopted by all the best associations for boys and by a large number of schools. It has also been used on more than one of His Majesty's ships and on several units in the army."

General Baden-Powell, on his arrival at Vancouver in the interests of the movement, said he was glad to see that it was obtaining such a hold in the United States, although he thought that in some phases it had too much of the drill idea in it—a tendency which the Boy Scouts of America, in their wish to follow the British model, have sought especially to avoid.

CATTLE MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11. London and Liverpool cables quote American cattle steady at 12½c to 13½c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef steady, at 10½c to 11½c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—The railways reported 96 carloads of live stock at the City Yards, consisting of 1685 cattle, 1027 hogs, 1131 sheep and lambs, 132 calves and 3 horses.

Exporters

There were a few odd lots picked out of loads of butchers, about a load all told, that sold at $6 to $6.10; also about a dozen bulls that were bought for export, weighing from 1300 to 1900 lbs., at $4.25 to $5 per cwt.

Butchers.

Geo. Rowntree, who bought 13 carloads for the Harris Abattoir Company, reported prices as follows: Butchers' steers and heifers, $4.70 to $5.35; cows, $3 to $4.60; canners, $2 to $2.50; bulls, $3 to $3.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

The best load of short-keep feeders weighing a little over 1200 lbs., was sold by C. Zimmman & Sons at $5.00. Feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs., sold at $5.15 to $5.40; steers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $4.50 to $4.90. Stockers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $4.25 to $4.75, according to quality.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a moderate supply of milkers and springers, that sold at strong prices, ranging from $50 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts of 120 calves sold at steady prices, ranging from $2.50 to $8 per cwt., with two or three extra quality at $8.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The market for sheep and lambs was firmer than at the close of last week. Sheep, ewes, sold at $4.50 to $4.75; rams, $3 to $3.50; lambs, $6 to $6.30. One selected deck of lambs, all ewes and wethers, sold at $6.40, and one lot of 25 light yearling sheep of choice quality brought $5.35 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris quoted the hog market easy at $8.50 for selects fed and watered at the market, and $8.15 to drovers for hogs f.o.b. cars at country points.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 11.—Cattle—Receipts, 75 head; steady; prices unchanged.

Constable Made His Coffin.

Fort William, Oct. 12.—In a coffin they had made with their own hands, Provincial Constable S. B. White and James Hubert brought to the city last night the body of Louis Pokarney, who died of strychnine poisoning at Lake Superior Junction Sunday. A rumor to the effect that Pokarney committed suicide is denied by the officers.

Negro Composer Insane.

New York, Oct. 12.—Robert A. Cole, well-known as a composer of "coon songs," and a member of the negro vaudeville team of Cole and Johnson, went insane yesterday and raised such a disturbance on the street that he had to be taken to Bellevue Hospital.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

C. V. Parker, sheriff of the County of Bruce, died at Walkerton from pneumonia. He was 66 years of age.

The annual report of the Department of Indian Affairs shows a great improvement in the condition of the redmen.

Donald Morrison, K.C., has been nominated as British expert commissioner in connection with the fisheries arbitration.

Mr. Hays' request for permission to import Asiatic labor to work on the Grand Trunk Pacific was refused by the British Columbia Government.

By orders issued at the U. S. Navy Department Commander Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the north pole, will be advanced to the rank of captain.

The Spanish Government has received confirmation of the report that King Manuel will shortly proceed to England, where he will take up his permanent residence.

The first trainload of wheat over the G.T.P. arrived at Fort William yesterday, and is being unloaded at the G.T.P. elevator. There were 36 cars on the trip, which was without event.

LISBON IS TRANQUIL.

Soldiers Are Withdrawing and Business Is Being Resumed.

Lisbon, Oct. 12. Although the city remains under martial law, the soldiers have been gradually withdrawn from the streets. Hardly any were to be seen yesterday. The people have resumed their business occupations, and perfect tranquility prevails. Several churches reopened yesterday morning.

Guards have been supplied to those establishments of the religious orders which are still occupied, and flying foreign flags, to prevent possible attacks. The papal nuncio, Monsignor Tonti, has hoisted the Austrian flag over his residence at Cintra, but there was no sign yesterday of hostile demonstrations.

The Government has announced that the Irish Dominican Fathers and nuns, who have conducted a school here for many years, will be exempted from the order of expulsion. This step, doubtless, is due to the desire of the republicans to keep on good terms with Great Britain. It is said that Foreign Minister Machado has requested Great Britain to grant immediate recognition to the new regime, ostensibly so that it will be in a position to communicate its full program to the British Government.

The casualty list from the recent fighting falls below the most moderate of previous estimates. The official estimate gives the number killed as between 100 and 150. Unofficial estimates place the number still lower.

One of the plans attributed to the organizers of the revolution was to bring off the coup d'etat on Oct. 5, when King Manuel was visiting the Premier in the northernmost province of the kingdom. It was arranged that the train bearing the king should continue through to the frontier, and the soldiers there were to prevent the king from re-entering Portugal. In the meantime, the Ministry, who would have assembled in a body at the station in Lisbon to see the king off, were to be surrounded and arrested after the departure of the train. The republic was then to be proclaimed.

Warns Against Reciprocity.

London, Oct. 12. (C.A.P. Cable.)—Judge Grantham, speaking at Lewes, said Canada was the workingman's paradise. There were no idlers, and no unemployed, but work at high wages for all. Many Canadians complained bitterly that the Mother Country would do nothing to assist in their economic difficulties, but in her financial arrangements is treating them no better than their commercial enemies. They were in danger of losing Canada as she became deceived by the tempting bait of reciprocity.

Judge Grantham, continuing, said Canadian railway men and miners sent this message by him to fellow-workers: "Britain, give up your false pride in strength and numbers. You are fighting for shadows, and losing substance. You are killing the bird that lays the golden eggs. The capitalist is your greatest friend. He is the only man who can create work. Without work you cannot live. Help him, do not thwart him at every turn."

Keep Out Cholera.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—The necessity of taking additional precautions to prevent the introduction of Asiatic cholera into Canada was yesterday afternoon emphasized upon Hon. Sidney Fisher by an important deputation from Quebec. It was composed of Dr. J. A. Beaudry, medical health inspector of the provincial board of health; Dr. A. John, chairman of the board of health of Quebec City and Dr. P. Casllier, medical health officer of the city.

Another deputation is here to ask for an improvement of the immigration inspection facilities at Quebec.

Reduced to Manslaughter.

Chatham, Oct. 12.—The charge of murder preferred against Frank Jackson for the killing of Jacob Enos was reduced to manslaughter at the fall assizes here yesterday. Jackson pleaded guilty to this charge as read, on the advice of his counsel, O. L. Lewis, K.C. The case, therefore, never went to the jury, and his honor Justice Middleton sentenced Jackson to one year in the common jail. The judge said he would have been moved to discharge Jackson on the evidence taken by the magistrate, had it not been for the circumstance that he was carrying a loaded revolver previous to the killing.

Admitted Forgery.

Montreal, Oct. 12.—Mme. Lajeunesse, accused of forging the name of Hon. S. N. Parent to checks for $230 and $600, admitted the forgery yesterday, and added that she had, with the aid of her husband a man named Samuel Parent, fraudulently obtained no less a sum than $5,000 within four years. Checks had been forged for different amounts and cashed at different places. The gang got caught, however, when they got rid of a check for $230 upon a Mrs. St. Jacques.

RESUMES ATTACK

Montreal, Oct. 12.—Bishop Archambault of Joliette says he was not properly understood when he made some statements a few weeks ago on Freemasonry and for that reason he will take occasion in the near future to refer again to that organization. His lordship returns again to the charge, because he leaves with the greatest sorrow that there are Freemasons in his own diocese of Joliette, and he has documentary evidence to prove it.

His lordship will divide his address into three parts: (1) Teachings and doctrine of Freemasonry; (2) The real object of Freemasonry; (3) Mode of operating. Organization, public or occult. The means of action, open or hidden, of Freemasonry.

Bishop Archambault will contend that Freemasonry neither admits the idea of religion or of God, and his lordship says he is able to prove it. By documents in the hands of the Bishop of Joliette Masons deny the Trinity, the incarnation, the redemption and the fall of man. It is not necessary to believe in the sacraments of the church, neither in her dogmas. It is further stated that the object of Mgr. Archambault's lecture is to make it quite impossible for a French-Canadian to belong to any form of Freemasonry.

Good Word For Grand Jury.

Chatham, Oct. 12. His Lordship Justice Middleton, who is presiding over the fall assizes in this city, in his address to the grand jury, stated that he was a firm believer in the usefulness of the grand jury as an intermediate body standing between the accused and the court of law. He had no sympathy with those who would abolish the grand jury.

License Chinese Laundries.

Windsor, Oct. 12. The proposal to place Chinese laundries under a license system was adopted by Windsor City Council. The fee that will be imposed is from $5 to $20, according to the number of men employed, and the council reserves the right to refuse licenses unless satisfactory conditions are maintained at the laundries.

A Love Tragedy.

Cortland, N.Y., Oct. 12. R. L. Lockie of New York, followed Miss L. E. Dyer of this place after she had refused to marry him, and finding her west play at the home of Dr. Stuart, shot her twice and then put a bullet through his head. It is thought that both will die.

Aviator's Motor Exploded.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 12. While 400 feet in the air, the motor of the aeroplane used by Aviator Parmelee at the state fair, exploded yesterday. The aviator showed no fear in descending safely to the ground although he was burned somewhat.

Alberta's Triumph.

Spokane, Oct. 12. Alberta won the grand cash trophy for the best exhibit at the dry farming congress. The trophy is a $250 silver cup given by the governor, M. E. Hay, president of Washington, for the best exhibit on the grounds.

Alberta was in competition with Australia, Colorado, Montana, Utah and many other exhibits.

Will Have No Detectives.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12. The City Council took some retrograde action Monday night, reversing the former decision to establish a safety department, cutting off all appropriations for the police department for a staff of plain clothes officers, in which is regarded as the segregated area.

Corundum.

With the exception of the diamond, emery and corundum are the best natural abrasives known. Corundum is pure aluminium oxide, and its hardness is next to that of the diamond. Emery, so far as composition goes, may be considered a mixture of corundum with more or less magnetite or hematite.

NO LOSS OF LIFE HAS YET BEEN REPORTED ON THE CANADIAN SIDE

Martial Law in Force in Minnesota Fire Districts—A Great Deal of Sickness Among Women and Children Surviving.

RELIEF AT HAND

Examiner Special.

RAINY RIVER ONT., OCT. 12 So far as can be ascertained here, the loss of life on the Canadian side of the boundary in the recent forest fires has not been great. Reports from Canadian points on the mainland to the west of Rainy River are to the effect that only a few persons have been burned. Reports received here from Emo and Spooner, Minn., on the American side of the boundary, indicate that the loss of life there has been considerable, but not nearly so great as was at first reported. Fires are still burning in the woods between Emo and Spooner, and the smoke is so dense that it is impossible to see the sun. Martial law is in force in the fire districts on the American side, and the militia are doing all in their power to relieve the distress. Many people have been rescued from the burning woods by the crews of steamers on Rainy River, and have been brought to Canadian points. Many of the refugees are in a destitute condition, having lost all their belongings in the fires. Others are suffering from exposure, and a great deal of sickness is reported among women and children. Many of the refugees are being cared for by the people of Fort Frances, Ont., on the Canadian side of the river, and by the people of Emo, Minn., on the American side. Relief trains are being run from Fort Frances to Emo, and from Emo to Spooner, and from Spooner to Kettle River, Minn., a few miles to the west. Many of the refugees are being brought to Fort Frances by steamers on Rainy River. Relief trains are also being run from Fort Frances to Rainy River, Ont., a few miles to the east. Many of the refugees are being brought to Rainy River by steamers on Rainy River. Relief trains are also being run from Rainy River to Fort Frances, Ont., a few miles to the east

AGGRESSIVE CHRISTIANITY

We have evidences in this city this week of the new character of aggressiveness the church militant has assumed. We have at the same moment two great branches of the Christian church engaged in definitely aggressive missionary work. Though the two movements take different forms they are significantly alike in that both aim in their own way to an extension of Christ's Kingdom. In St Peter's Cathedral this week is being held a Men's Mission in connection with the extension work of the Roman Catholic church. Elsewhere in the city is held the Missionary Institute of other Christian denominations; and both, in their own way, are aiming at the same end. Both have awakened to the same call for more energetic work, in the way of more complete cultivation of existing fields, and the opening of new fields to the influence of the Gospel of our blessed Lord. The old hymn sings

Satan trembles when he sees
The weakest sinner on his knees.

He stands to have a genuine diabolical set of convulsions when he sees Christians of all denominations, uniting in a vigorous, concerted and systematic assault upon the citadel of the kingdom of darkness.

THE MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Missionary Institute, now in session in the city, is a sign of the times—a part of the new propagandism, that gives practical form to theoretic sentiments and interests. As its name implies it is largely educational in its essence. Its main object is understood to be instruction in the matter of missions; the imparting of a fuller knowledge of the fields ripe unto the harvest and above all the devising of the most effective means to carry on the work of spreading the light of the Gospel to the people that sit in darkness. In the whole domain of natural activity, in politics and semi-political movements in industrial and agricultural enterprise, the educational effort and influence are made the chief elements; and in this regard the missionary enterprise falls into line, if indeed, it does not lead. Knowing our work and doing our duty in respect of it, are strongly correlated; in no other way can we intelligently and effectively meet our responsibility. Associated with this educational propaganda is the excitation of an intelligent enthusiasm, the true basis of enthusiastic work and added to this influence is the influence of co-operation, the uniting in aim and action of the several interests represented in the institute. The divisions of Christianity have been and are, so far as they still obtain, one of the most potent obstacles to general Gospel advance. In its unifying of denominational interests, in its fusion of denominational distinctions into one common aim and effort the institute tends to impart to the missionary movement the strength that comes from union. Each denomination of Christians, working in its own little circle, ignorant perhaps, or, perhaps, indifferent to the work of another, often crossing, and needlessly duplicating effort, accounts for a very large dispersion and waste of energy and poverty of result. Instead of the Christian army being one mighty host, moving under a general and definite direction, it becomes a number of guerilla bands. The Missionary Institute and the principle it represents mass the various cohorts into one great army, whose power, under divine captaincy, must be irresistible.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir James Whitney might reasonably get into a state, in respect of the superiority of Quebec over Ontario in the matter of Technical Education. This might be more to the point than getting excited over the rather meaningless screed in respect of a matter with which he has nothing officially to do "unless something is done something will happen."

The Mail and Empire, which regards Sir Wilfrid Laurier's naval policy as the thin end of the separation wedge, might explain. How is it that the caps of the crew of the Niobe, the flag ship of Canada's new fleet, bear the letters H.M.C.S.—His Majesty's Canadian Ship—instead of, as in the British Navy proper, the letters H.M.S.—His Majesty's Ship? The Niobe is still a part of His Majesty's navy, but distinguished as to the Canadian section of it under Canadian control as His Majesty's army in Canada is under Canadian control.

CLEANING LONDON.

(London News)

Over 65,840,000 gallons of water were used last year in washing and watering the streets of the city of London.

The quantity of refuse removed from the city by the corporation during the year was 51,821 van loads taken from premises, and 28,930 loads of sweepings from the public way, making a total of 80,759 loads, or about 263 per working day.

The sum of $1,500 was received from the sale of refuse collected from street orderly bins, and old tins were disposed of for $1,000.

During the past year over two miles of derelict or disused overhead wires across the city's streets were removed by the city engineers' officials, making 25 miles during the past ten years. The number of private owners of overhead wires in the city is 141. In all, about 733,956 spans of wire cross the public thoroughfares, and during the last twelve months 5,765 cases of broken wires were reported. The city engineer envisions in his report the erection, for experimental purposes, of various aerial lines for the purpose of intercepting wireless telegraphic messages.

THE RAINY RIVER HOLACUST.

(Toronto Star)

The loss of the Maine and the drowning of two officers and 272 men were made the pretext for war with Spain. A substantially greater loss in lives and money, is represented by the forest fires which have devastated the Minnesota border, and which have swept into Ontario. A far more righteous war than that of 1898 might be waged upon the persons and practices responsible for such conflagrations.

If railway engines, improperly equipped and carelessly cleaned or operated are at the root of the trouble, the great corporations which own them should be brought smartly to time. If camping parties are shown to be in the habit of leaving smouldering fires behind them, examples should be made of the offenders, which would serve as a warning in the future. If the number of fire rangers is insufficient, it should be augmented. If it lacks discipline, it should be organized. The great fire of October, 1910, cannot be prevented. Nothing which the State and Provincial Governments may do can recall to life the carbonds of dead bodies which have been dragged away from the place of Minnesota's desolation. The pitiful scenes, the agonies of the dying, the burning alive of helpless women and children, as well as men, these things are part of the past. It is for the Governments concerned to say whether they shall be part of the future also.

If "an enemy had done this," the cry of vengeance would have been long and loud. But nations will suffer at their own hands injuries which, had the foe inflicted them, would have meant instant reprisals. There is a great war of peace to be fought; a war directed against the agencies of destruction which are depleting the continent's forests and leaving the homes of hundreds a mass of smouldering ruins and charred bones.

LIQUID CURES ECZEMA WHERE SALVES FAIL

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT.

A simple wash. A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A trial bottle will start the cure, and give you instant relief. Write for it today to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. P.E., 49 Colborne street, Toronto. For sale by McDermid and Jury druggists; also Payne's drug store.

OBITUARY

PATRICK COSTELLO.

The death occurred at 8 o'clock this morning of Patrick Costello, at the age of 80 years, at the House of Providence. He is survived by two brothers—Edward, of Ennismore, and John of Minnesota. The funeral will take place on Friday morning at 10 o'clock to St. Martin's church, Ennismore, and thence to St. Martin's cemetery for interment.

Light On Potentialities Of Hudson Bay Shores and Waters

(Winnipeg Free Press)

One of the features of the past busy summer has been the comparatively large amount of travel that has taken place through the vast territory north of the Prairie Provinces. Extensive reports of much of this travel have appeared in the columns of the Free Press and cannot have failed to increase the interest of Canadians, and particularly of Western Canadians, in this hinterland. By comparing these different reports the ordinary citizen should be able to form a fairly accurate idea of these great undeveloped areas for in a multitude of reports, as of counsellors, there is safety.

Perhaps the great area lying to the north of the present Province of Manitoba, and stretching to the shore of Hudson Bay, has attracted most of these travellers out of the beaten paths. Never in the history of the country have the canoe routes and lakes of Keewatin seen so many white men, nor have the Hudson's Bay Company's posts received so many white visitors, as has been the case during the past summer. In the large party of the Governor-General, which passed through the heart of the territory to be added to Manitoba, was Mr. R. W. Brock, director of the Dominion Geological survey, and other gentlemen who may be depended upon to make excellent use of the impressions gained upon the trip. In connection with the Hudson Bay Railway three parties of land surveyors and two parties of hydrographic surveyors have been, and are still, at work, and will undoubtedly collect a large amount of valuable information. An extensive exploration of the northern forests with a view to determining the amount of timber available, is in progress and in addition to all this activity may be mentioned the extension of treaty to all the Indian bands hitherto unnegotiated with.

Among the many excellent results of this northern travel is that the idea that the Hud-on Bay is an Arctic sea has been finally disposed of. The Governor General, in one of his happy expressions, called it the Mediterranean of Canada, a description which is bound to be more and more justified. Life on the shores of the Bay and throughout the intervening region may be made not only tolerable but pleasant, as has been abundantly shown. It has also been impressed upon us that for over two hundred years ships have been annually coming through Hudson Strait, and that white men have during that period lived and prospered upon the shores of Hudson Bay.

That the region contains vast wealth is now no longer a matter for argument. Mr. Brock, during his flying trip with the Governor-General, was impressed with the potential mineral resources of the region, though not claiming to have made any extensive investigation. It is well known that countless lakes in the northland contain large quantities of sturgeon and of the finest whitefish in the world. These, as well as big supplies of pike, trout, pickerel and other merchantable fish, may, by wise preservation, be made inexhaustible. Besides this there are the whale, seal and walrus fisheries of the Bay itself. What amount of large timber is in the region remains to be estimated; that there are immense areas of pulp wood, raw material for extensive industries, is known. Of the agricultural resources of the country but little can be said at present as sustained experiments in grain growing have not been made. However, the fact that excellent potatoes and other garden produce have for years been grown at most of the Indian settlements and the further fact that cattle graze on the bay lands around several of the Hudson's Bay Company's posts, augurs well for the development of agriculture and dairying.

This is enough, at any rate, to show the wisdom of the Liberal party of this Province in adopting as a plank in their platform the position that a satisfactory adjustment of the boundary question consists in the acceptance of the extension of the boundaries as offered by the Dominion Government, provided it is accompanied by the transfer to this province of the lands, minerals, timber, fisheries and other natural resources of the added territory.

An absolute essential to the development of the great northern hinterland is the building of the Hudson Bay railway, and happily this project has already progressed so far that looking back is out of the question. With the railway as a base, the vast Empire to the north of the Province, many parts of which have never been trodden by a white man, will be systematically explored and surveyed. When this is done, it is no oversanguine expectation that discoveries of hidden wealth will be made.

Peterborough City Teachers Open Convention To-morrow Morning

The Peterborough City Teachers' Institute commences its sessions in the Collegiate Institute to-morrow morning. There promises to be a very good attendance and the meetings should be interesting and profitable. The sessions to-morrow morning and afternoon will be largely of a technical nature interesting perhaps only to the members of the teaching profession, but there will be an open session in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute to-morrow night, to which the public is cordially invited. Professor M. W. Wallace, of Toronto University, will give an address upon "The Ballads of the Scottish Border." Prof. Wallace is an eloquent and polished speaker and his address will be well worth listening to. There will be a short musical programme, in which Miss Choate and Mr Lynch will assist.

The programme of to-morrow's sessions will be as follows:

Rev. Dr. Brown Says There Is A Great Awakening In Heathen Lands

At the George street Methodist church yesterday afternoon, Rev. Dr. J. G. Brown, secretary of the Baptist church Mission Board, delivered an address. Dr. Brown was for some years connected with Mission work in India and is well informed on existing conditions in foreign lands. Fifty years ago, he said, the doors of the heathen world were practically closed, but God has opened those doors and moved men to go in. But the doors of the hearts of the people were closed. The attitude of the heathen was not one of open mindedness. They were suspicious of the missionary. Their ignorance led to suspicion. In India, where the speaker laboured for eight years, the people thought that the missionary was part of the British government. The people's intense conservatism made it difficult for the missionary, there being a strong tendency to hang on to old traditions and customs.

The heathen in India, Rev. Dr. Brown stated, had no consciousness of the need of Jesus Christ. Their idea of sin was very vague. But the church here, the speaker believed, had every reason to feel encouraged. All over the heathen world there was a great awakening. The conservatism, the lack of a sense of sin, was passing away. The Christians in Corea had taken as their motto for 1910, "One million souls for Christ." Much would have to be done within the next twenty-five years. Two great dangers were threatening the church in this country, materialism and rationalism. The mad rush for wealth was coupled with the rush for pleasure. Each year there was an increasing percentage of people ceasing to attend church.

JUNIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing and am under eighteen years of age. I wish to be entered in the Examiner Junior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Contestants are required to fill out the blanks in connection with whichever race they desire to enter and send in this coupon to the sporting editor of the Peterboro Examiner as soon as possible.

Young's Point Man First
Entry In The Senior Race

Ernest Coons of Young's Point, is the first contestant to enter the Examiner senior road race. He sent his entry in ye today and is getting into shape for the big contest. Nothing is known about his chances for the ten mile jaunt, but the fact that he is the first to enter, shows that he has evidently been preparing for the race and will make some of the local cracks look up. The junior entries continue to pour in. Eight entries already and the race three weeks away. It was thought that last year's junior bunch was the limit in point of size, but from present indications an even greater number of youngsters will face the starter this year.

Mack Asks Sullivan
To Coach The Athletics

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—Billy Sullivan, the White Sox catcher, has been sent for by Manager Mack of the champion Athletics to coach them in the coming series between the Athletics and a picked American League team.

Sullivan probably will catch some of the games for the picked team, helping out Street and Ainsmith of the Senators. But the chief reason for sending for Billy is that he was an important factor in winning the world's pennant of 1905 from the Cubs, and presumably can give not only the Athletics' catchers and pitchers, but the other players as well, valuable points regarding how it was done.

Sullivan it will be remembered, caught all six games in the 1906 series with the Cubs, and eleven of the Cubs who played in that series will be eligible to the coming contest. Sullivan has caught against all the regulars who will be in the Cub lineup for the big series except Zimmerman, who has replaced the injured keystone sacker, Evers.

Manager Mack probably figures that Sullivan ought to know more about the strength and weaknesses of the Cubs than a whole flock of scouts could tell him after watching Chance's men for a couple of weeks.

All of which proves that the Athletic manager does not look upon the Cubs as an easy proposition for his champions, and does not intend to overlook anything clean that will help.

Star Pitcher Of Cubs, National League Champions, Tells History

BY MORDECAI BROWN

Star Pitcher of Cubs, National League Champions

Chicago, Oct. 8.—I became a pitcher because I decided that it was the best paying position, and the first real game I ever pitched in my life was after I had signed with Terre Haute. I guess I started in the business on my nerve, and that has been my chief asset ever since.

You see, I was born in a little mining town in Indiana, and I thought I was an infielder. I had a job as check weigher, and represented the miner's union. The members seemed to like me, and when I got to playing ball I was their favorite. They would hire another man to weigh their coal so as to let me play ball with the team.

I was just a kid then, and they had so much faith in me that I got to thinking I was about as good a ball player as there was. It was the confidence of a kid. They boosted me so hard that Terre Haute offered me a chance.

TRAINED ALL WINTER FOR FIRST JOB

Some one told me pitchers were better paid than other players, so I decided to be a pitcher, and signed with Terre Haute as a pitcher. Having said I was a pitcher I wanted to make good, and not only for myself, but for the mine fellows, who believed I was the best in the world. I think I started training that winter about Christmas, practising pitching curves. It hurts my arm to think of it now. By the time I had to report to Terre Haute, I was in great shape, much better than the experienced pitchers, and I guess that held my job for me.

They were going to let me go when the people got up a petition and threatened to boycott the club if I was released—so they kept me. I worked hard and watched the other pitchers studying their styles and trying to learn to pitch. You know my hand is crippled and I found that by twisting it a little I could make the ball curve more sharply than most of them.

When I went to the St. Louis Nationals I was full of ambition.

NEARLY RUINED HIS PITCHING ARM

I worked hard to learn to pitch and nearly ruined my arm by overwatching it. St. Louis couldn't see me, but that club saved me as it gave me plenty of rest, and when I got to Chicago I was back in form.

I think my best ball is the curve the fellows call the hook. I pitch it overhanded with a half-round arm motion, starting slowly and finishing with a fast snap with the hand wrist bent. My next best ball is a speedy one. I always make the ball twist, no matter what I pitch. My fast ball I let off the third finger on the side, but near the tip with the stub of the little finger pressed hard under the ball. I have a twisting slow ball, and a sidearm curve, as well as a fast underhand ball.

I think the reason I have been so lucky is because I keep mixing them and springing surprises on the batters. I seldom pitch to a batter's weakness.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 9. About all the pitching I ever had done before I went to Carlisle was throwing stones at squirrels and partridges. I had played baseball a little, and lacrosse a little, but when I went to Carlisle I began to like baseball. Besides, we had a lot of loyalty to the team and I wanted to play for the school. I began to pitch and the more I pitched against college teams the more I thought about what was possible to be done with a baseball. I left Carlisle and played with another college and began to see more and more in the game.

Before I had completed my college course the Athletics wanted me and I was just as anxious to pitch for them as they were to get me. I studied the older pitchers and watched them work and managed to stick to the job.

BEST BALL FAST OVERHAND CURVE

I think my best ball is my fast overhand curve when it is pitched low, although I have had great success with a fast sidearm curve ball. When I have my right speed and the arm is feeling strong I prefer my fast ball pitched high and on the inside corner of the plate.

I think that the curve ball, if it breaks sharply, is the most effective ball pitched and I never yet have seen a batter who could hit that kind of pitching all the time. Of course they would hit anything a fellow pitches sometimes, but fast high pitching across a man's shoulders and a fast breaking curve ball will trouble any batter no matter how good he may be.

MIXING IS WHAT COUNTS

It is mixing up the pitching more than what the ball does in the air, that counts in winning. If a pitcher telegraphs his curve, or the batter knows what to expect, then it does not make much difference what is pitched, as they will hit it. Let a batter get set and let him know a curve is coming, or a fast ball and he will hit. A pitcher is forced to keep thinking what the other fellow is thinking and must keep trying to cross him.

I use fast curves, pitched overhand and side arm, fast balls, high and inside and an underhand fade-away pitched with the hand almost down to the level of the knee. These are my most successful deliveries although a twisting slow one mixed up with them helps at times.

BEE KEEPING

From Farm and Dairy.

By Miss M. Treverrow, Peel Co., Ont.

The story of my experience with bees is probably my best means of showing what bee-keeping may be as an occupation for women.

I started bee-keeping in 1900 with one colony, for which I had paid $5. They did not swarm nor give any surplus honey during the summer, were weak in the following spring, and gradually dwindled away till the hive was empty. I purchased another colony for $6 in May of 1901. When they swarmed I divided the bees and brood in the old brood chamber, putting half into a new hive and alternating each with frames of foundation. From the next swarm I received 30 lbs. of surplus honey. For the spring of 1902 I had three colonies, which had given me so little trouble that I thought I could manage a couple more. I purchased two more strong colonies for $15. When they started to cast out first, second, third and fourth swarms, I began to have some idea of what bee-keeping meant, having double brood chambers in eight-frame Langstroth hives. The swarms were large, and when two swarms issued at the same time I had enough to do to lift the double hives away and replace with new ones before the bees began to return, the queens being clipped. I had heard of twenty swarms issuing at the same time in large yields, but two at a time were enough for me just then.

These five colonies gave me 928 lbs. of extracted honey and increased to sixteen. At the end of the next season I had thirty-five colonies, and 1,400 lbs. of honey from them. I had thirty colonies in the spring of 1904 and 1905, five having died in the cellar. They yielded about 2,600 lbs. In the spring of 1905, I had thirty-three colonies when the weak ones were united with the strong ones; they stored 4,700 lbs. of honey and increased to forty-nine. Last spring (1906) the numbers decreased to forty, five being queenless and four to weak to go alone. They yielded 1,600 lbs. of honey this year and I have thirty-nine colonies this fall.

In conclusion, I might state that a woman may expect the little busy bee to gather honey for her at an average yearly rate of 61 lbs. to the colony; that stings may be subject to her will; stickiness also; that hard work, heavy lifting, perspiration, and disagreeable odors must be borne with fortitude; that careful attention to detail is imperative; and that there are many things in bee-keeping that are calculated to make it attractive and enjoyable, and also a profitable occupation for women.

GET THE LAST CENT

From Farm and Dairy

Is it worth while to get the last cent out of every parcel of produce marketed? Because dairy butter sells on the city market for two cents more than can be had at home, or even can be realized from milk or cream sent to the local creamery, is it worth while to go after the two cents? What does it cost to get it?

Count the cost! The hours, which soon total days, spent in churning, working and printing the butter at home, caring for the cream and butter and washing utensils, the time spent in going to market and the not always pleasant work of marketing, especially during bad weather, the things we might have done had we the time spent over the butter—are these things not worthy of our consideration? Yes, indeed they are.

All is not profit in that increased price realized. There are a host of things that must be reckoned with before the profit can be figured. And then there is not always the best of equipment available on the farm for turning out a first class article. The local creamery has such equipment and if given the right class of material, milk or cream of No. 1 quality, it can turn out a first class uniform product, which will command a price on the open market superior to the best dairy butter made.

These things should be considered. Make sure there is profit, real profit, forthcoming before you undertake the extra work and worry consequent upon home butter making if an alternative is at hand. "Time is money." It is always worth careful husbanding on the part of all in farm homes who, if they but give thought to this matter, may lead lives of greater pleasure and usefulness, and have time for the consideration of greater things.

THE HOME DEPARTMENT

From Farm and Dairy.

"The only department of my farm which does not show a balance on the right side of the ledger," said a prominent Nova Scotia farmer in explaining his system of bookkeeping at a Farmers' Institute meeting, "is the home department. I always charge the balance up, however, to love and good will, and I always have a great big profit on the home investment." This farmer is making a great big success of his profession, and he gives the credit for a large part of his success to the help and inspiration which he derives from a pleasant home life.

WILL REGULATE ALL KIDNEY DISORDERS
Few Doses End the Most Severe Backache or Urinary Trouble

Kidney disease is the most dangerous, because the first symptoms are seen in other parts of the body before anything wrong is noticed with the kidneys themselves.

Some of the symptoms, though, cannot be mistaken; for instance, sick, unhealthy kidneys cause thick, cloudy offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, or there is dull misery in the sides and loins, headaches and dizzy spells may occur, nervous twitching, disturbed sleep, inflamed or puffy eyelids, weakness, bilious stomach, heart palpitations of the sufferer is often weighed down by a feeling of languor or fatigue.

The time to cure kidney trouble is while it is only trouble, before it settle into Diabetes, Dropsy, Gravel or Bright's disease. The moment you suspect the slightest kidney, bladder or urinary disorder begin taking Pape's Diuretic as directed with the knowledge that there is no other medicine at any price made anywhere else in the world which will effect so prompt and thorough a cure.

Don't be miserable and remain in danger another moment because of a lame back or clogged, inactive kidneys or bladder or urinary misery call this will surely go after you take Pape's Diuretic for a few days.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will vouch for the responsibility of Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who prepare Pape's Diuretic. 50 cent treatment—sold by every druggist in the world.

The Beauty of the New Fall Styles Will Appeal to Discriminating Women

We Are Now Featuring Our Complete Autumn Showing of

Ready-to-Wear Garments

To-day we announce our first complete showing of Fall and Winter apparel. In these splendid garments you may view the results of many weeks of careful preparation. After an exhaustive search of the great style centres, we have gathered together an assemblage of Suits, Coats, Dresses and Skirts, which may be accepted as authentically representing the new modes which will be in vogue during the Fall and Winter. This is the largest and finest stock we have ever shown. You will find the models quite a departure from those of previous seasons. On the whole they may be considered as having more "snap and go" to them. This is particularly true of Suits.

Generally speaking, the new garments are marked by a simplicity of outline accompanied by much richness of material and trimming. Contrasting colours also sound a strong and very pleasing style note.

In this complete display you will find exemplified all the newest and smartest in Autumn fashions, the garments possessing in addition to style attractions, price attractions to a very pronounced degree.

New Fall Skirts Have Much Style Value

The separate skirt has always much in its favour. They are not the regulation types. Many of the most attractive features of garment modes find expression in them. They follow closely the fashionable outline, being of almost equal width from hip to hem. Developed in the season's most popular fabrics, gracefully draping cloths and natty rough surface materials, they are garments of unusual attraction.

The New Fall Dresses Make An Impressive Showing

The new dresses shown at this store possess style, originality and distinctive charm. They are graceful, well made and of unmistakably fine quality. The models are singularly effective. Long lines destined to give grace and dignity to the figure have been accentuated. Materials are of unusual beauty both as regards weave and colouring. Trimmings are tasteful, well chosen, and in many instances very elaborate. As a climax to other desirable features of these splendid garments, the prices are extremely attractive. A series of fortunate incidents enables us to offer exceptionally fine values in our early Autumn stocks of which economical buyers should be quick to take advantage.

WINTER TIME IS CURTAIN TIME

¶ The time when you enjoy the long evenings in your home—the time when every little thing about the house makes or mars the cheerfulness of the family, and makes the long cold cheerless winter fly more quickly. The Curtains are among the main decorations of the home. Some cold winter's night for instance, take the curtains from the windows and note the disheartening effect which results. Beautiful homey Curtains add more to the home than one would think, both on the inside and outside. Think this over. Now is the time to secure your needs in this line. We are commencing the season with a tremendous sale of Curtains, not old shop worn goods, but our fresh new lines just opened up, and for three days only. After Saturday the original prices will prevail. Don't ask for cut prices after this week. Three Days only and only Three Days. Note the following: :: :: :: :: ::

ALL DOLLAR NOTTINGHAM CURTAINS 79c—These are well finished Curtains, Colbert edges, first quality at this price, sizes, 2½, 3 and 3½ yds long and up to 48 inches wide, 12 good patterns, strong mesh. All our Dollar Curtains for, per pair.. .. .. . ... ..... 79c

$3.50 FANCY NET CURTAINS AT $2.79—Two patterns only of fish Net Curtains in cream and the new fashionable Egyptian shade, a nice draping curtain, well finished edges and top, exclusive designs, 3 yards long and the usual width, double bordered, all $3.50 values. Three Days' Price. .... 2.79

THE $1.50 KINDS FOR 3 DAYS ONLY $1.19—All brand new goods mostly just opened up and put in stock. There are 9 patterns in cable net, fancy net and Nottingham weaves finished with colbert edges and "hang-easy" tops. There are also a few Cable Net Curtains in this lot to be sold at same price; size 48 to 60 ins. wide and 3 to 3½ yds. long, in white and ecru, $1.50 regular. 3 Days' Price 1.19

$4.50-$5 SWISS NET CURTAINS $3.59 — A few patterns in Swiss Embroidery Curtains in plain spray and shadow effects. A very dainty parlor curtain 3 yds long, usual width. Three Days only 3.59

$4.25 NOTTINGHAM CURTAINS $3.49—A popular high grade curtain, not too expensive yet distinctive designs and patterns in 2 tone ecru, also plain white, a beautiful line of curtains, 3 to 3½ yards long and medium widths, well finished. 3 Days' Sale Price 3.49

ALL OUR 1.25 NOTTINGHAM CURTAINS 98c—In Plain, Fancy and Point D 'Esprit Nottingham Net, in eleven select patterns to choose from, white only, size 48 to 54 ins. wide and 3 and 3½ yards long. This is the popular low priced curtain and our showing this season is better than ever. All $1.25 Lace Curtains (SEE WINDOW) 98c

THE NEW BONIM CURTAIN—This curtain is the latest curtain novelty shown this year. It is a scrim centred curtain with wide border composed of heavy Egyptian lace insertion and beading, 54 ins. wide and 3 yards long. This curtain is made in Canada and promises to make a hit this season. Regular $6 value. Three Days' Price only.... ..... 4.79

$6 BRUSSELS NET CURTAINS $4.23—Irish Point and Swiss Shadow Embroidery on fine Brussels net, 3 patterns only in white, all high class goods, exclusive in design, 3 yards long and 50 inches wide. Our regular selling price $6.00. Three Days' Price per pair .. .. ..... .. 4.23

$3 CURTAINS (exclusive) FOR $2.45—We have not a great deal of demand for a $3.00 curtain as it is an odd or medium price and is too near the popular $2.25 curtain. However, there are 5 or 6 designs in this lot including fancy or plain Nottingham Nets in cream and ecru, usual widths and lengths. $3.00 value for 2.45

OUR $10 HIGH GRADE NET CURTAINS $6.98 or two pairs for $13.00. These curtains cannot be duplicated anywhere either in pattern or quality for less than $10. They come 3½ yds. long and are 50 ins. wide. Only a few patterns in white. High grade $10 Curtains, Three Days' Price .... 6.98

Our Big Special: $2.25 Curtains $1.79

This priced curtain is the big seller because it is within reach of all, we show it in at least 16 different and distinct patterns including, fillet net, Nottingham weaves and new novelty nets in white, cream and ecru, neatly finished curtains in sizes 3 to 3½ yards long by 48 to 54 inches wide (mostly the popular three yard length). Come and see this big special and note the window display. All $2.25 Curtains, per pair..... 1.79

AN INSPIRING ADDRESS ON MISSIONS
BY REV. CANON TUCKER, OF TORONTO

Sessions of the Missionary Institute Yesterday Were Especially Interesting and Profitable.

ATTENDANCE LARGE

At last evening's session of the Missionary Institute a large congregation assembled at St. Paul's church to listen to an address by Rev. Canon Tucker, secretary of the Church Missionary society of the American church Toronto, who gave a very eloquent and interesting talk on missions and missionary work.

Rev. Canon Davidson, Rector of St. John's church, assisted with the service by leading in devotional exercises.

Canon Tucker spoke in plain language of the carelessness of the civilized nations, regarding the missionaries. "Missions form a very important part of Christian work," said Canon Tucker. "They are simply carrying out God's last words and instructions. When all things were over the Lord summed up all His work, and put it into the last command. What are the people here for? The Lord said the church was to be the light of the world. It is like a candelier. They did not want a chandelier and the electric fixtures as a mere work of art and ornament, but to give light, and God placed the church in the world, not for ornament, but to give light of his kingdom and heaven. It was to be like a grain of mustard seed, to expand and carry the good news, the light, to the heathen." He asked them what the joy of their lives was? If they could think of their divine Lord, what He suffered for our sins, the way He took His life in His hands and went out doing good as a missionary, they should look on their efforts as very meagre. He asked them if it seemed right for them to sit down and, knowing religion, find their own way into heaven and let the poor heathen people of Japan, China, Corea, and all the rest live in ignorance of the true gospel of Jesus Christ." He drew their attention to the fact that day by day and year by year, multitudes of Japanese and Chinese are coming to the shores of this continent, and if the mission work is not pushed forward, instead of the civilized people Christianizing them, they will heathenize this country. Missions are greatly imposed upon. Some people will say they do not believe in missions. If there is a man who says he does not believe in missions, he may be an intelligent man, but he is not intelligent in this subject.

"Missions further education; look at the people of the north lands, and the people of Corea; missions brought Christianity, and the Christianity resulted in the furtherment of education. It is well to be optimistic and hopeful, but it is also well to look things in the face. Then it calls forth all the resources that are in a man. It is the largest and most difficult and risking, to be a missionary, that a man can do. There are eight outstanding features in mission work. For instance, the carrying of the gospel to the world as a perfect thing. There are immense difficulties in this seemingly easy task. Before the work of sending missions to China, Corea, Japan and other eastern countries, the subject of privation and great difficulties was discussed. The disadvantages, the drawbacks, the discouraging forebodings of ill were all cast in the face; and today the missionary forces are occupying the field. Then there is the native church to contend with. They got the idea that the world would not be evangelized by English speaking people, but by the native church. There is one thing needed in these countries; it is not the Methodist religion, not the Presbyterian, not the Baptist, nor the Anglican, but it is the simple gospel of Jesus Christ, in its simple form. The next difficulty is how to present the gospel. Some people think, if a man, for instance, cannot succeed in Peterborough, in Lakefield, or some other place, he will be sure to succeed in China or Japan. This is exactly where they mistake. They forget that the intellect of the Indian, the Japanese and Chinese is subtle; this accounts for some men's failures. The place to begin is here in America. If a man cannot evangelize here he can not do it in China or some other eastern country. Is our Christianity worth profiting? Do big hats represent Christianity in our country? Do automobiles represent Christianity in our land? Do all the comforts and luxuries of life represent Christianity here in Canada. When a man spends $5,000 on himself and family and gives $5.00 to the church, the question arises, is that Christianity? No! All these things, taken as a whole point out whether Christianity is the point of view or the joy of having a good time with nothing to bother about only style."

Look at what Christianity does. Look at Japan, while fifty years ago, shut out from European ships, shut out from the outside world, a country of heathenism not safe to travel in. Now, you can go anywhere in that country, safely. The work done there has been as a miracle, in the line of progress. Japan adopted pure Christianity. Look at Corea; over 100,000 Christians in that country now, in that once heathen country. At prayer meeting over 1,500 people will gather at a time. Men and women will walk for thirty and forty miles to attend a meeting, simply from their devotion to the church. This country is one of the miracles of the work of Christ. Corea, as she stands to-day, nearly evangelized and practically by a large number of Scotch Presbyterians who crossed over to the north of Ireland, and went on that way, carrying on the good work. All China requires at the present time is Christianity. They are thrifty and the country is rich in gold, silver, and minerals of all kinds. The Chinese are a very thrifty race. They work simply for the love of work. Another thing is the obedience and respect with which the children treat their parents. Look at the American children, even the little girls would elbow a man off the sidewalk. All these things go to show that evangelism is needed at home, as well as abroad, and there is Christian work for all.

A PRESENTATION

To Mr. W. F. Turner by Employees of Factory and Grand Opera House

The employees of Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons factory with those of the Grand Opera House last evening took occasion to present Mr. W. F. Turner, on the eve of his marriage, with a handsome remembrance, in the way of a handsome hall seat with hall mirror and umbrella stand. The presentation was made by Mr. George Chandler, and the best wishes for many years of happy wedded life were extended by all.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The evening social in mechanical drawing, shop arithmetic, matriculation and electricity will open at the Y.M.C.A. to-night. There will be a score or more who will commence at the beginning; there will be a number of others who will join later on, while a great many more will spend the winter wishing that they had joined. Those who improve their evenings will advance while the others become driftwood. Which do you hope to be?

These are days of strenuous doings at the "Y." Yesterday has been the largest attendance at classes so far this season. In the four classes that were held yesterday there were new men enrolled at every class, and the attendance on the "gym" floor was just under the 100 mark. The intermediate class have adopted the biggest and best all round class in the Association as their motto, and it looks as if they were going to make good in earnest.

The Business Boys had 18 boys out last night and are making excellent progress under the leadership of Mr. Galley.

Senior class to-night at 8 o'clock. If you have not taken in one of the classes yet, line up to-night or come around and see for yourself and you will enjoy every minute.

WEDDING BELLS

TURNER—NESBITT.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Luke's church this morning at half past nine when Miss Eva Lillian Nesbitt, only daughter of Mr. Henderson Nesbitt, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. Webber F. Turner, youngest son of Mr. J. J. Turner, sr., also of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt in the presence of a large number of friends of the contracting parties. To the strains of the wedding march played by the organist, Miss Flowers, the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away. She looked very pretty in a smart tailored suit of navy blue with hat to match. She carried a sheath of chrysanthemums. The bride and groom were unattended. At the conclusion of the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's father, where hearty congratulations were bestowed on the young couple and a dainty luncheon was served by Messrs. Coleman, caterers. Among many other beautiful presents received by the bride, was a topaz necklace, the gift of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner left on the 1.28 C.P.R. train for Montreal, where they will spend a short honeymoon, and on their return they will reside at 454 Mark street. Both Mr. and Mrs. Turner have a wide popularity in Peterborough and their host of friends will join in extending them every happiness.

PLUMMER—NEWALL.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place last evening at 8:30 at the home of the bride's parents, 383 Aylmer street, when Miss Isabella Newall and Mr. Frederick Plummer were united in the hold bonds of matrimony. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. H. J. Keith. The bride who was attractively attired in a pretty travelling suit of blue broadcloth, was attended by Mrs. G. Buller, while the groom was assisted by Mr. G. Buller. Mr. and Mrs. Plummer will reside at 512 Aylmer street.

HAYES—BARNES.

The Edmonton Free Press of Sept 27, contained the following:

At St. Jouchins, B. C. church this morning Miss Bessie Mae Barnes, eldest daughter of Mrs. F. G. Barnes, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Wm. Berton Hayes, of this city, formerly of Peterborough.

The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of old gold and silk with a handsome hat to match. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Gladys Lynch who was similarly gowned. The groom was supported by Mr. W. R. Coughlin.

After the ceremony the young couple drove to the home of the bride's mother, where a sumptuous dejeuner was partaken of. After many hearty congratulations they left to spend their honeymoon with friends in Calgary and Banff. On their return they will be at home to their friends at 653 Fifth street.

The bride received many handsome gifts testifying the high esteem in which they are held by their numerous friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of pearl ear rings and a gold cross set with pearls, to the bridesmaid a pearl ring and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links.

Will Occupy Their Now Property But Not For Some Time Yet

While it is generally known that the Royal Bank has purchased the property at Hunter and George streets, occupied by Mr. J. D. Tully, it was stated to-day that it was the intention of the Bank to occupy these premises. The drug business will be removed to Mr. Adam Hall's store. However, these changes will not be made until after the New Year. Mr. Vincent Eastwood, manager of the Royal Bank, stated that no plans had yet been made by way of making alterations, as it would be some months before they would occupy their new property.

PROBS Fresh northerly to north easterly winds fine and cooler today and on Thursday frost to night in most localities.

Fourth Bride Will Be Last Says 77-Year-Old Groom

Trinidad, Col., Oct 8. T. C. McNadd, seventy-seven years old and a veteran of the civil war, took his fourth bride in Trinidad and he declares that it is to be his last. Mrs. Mary R. Beaver, fifty-five years old, of Folston, N.M., is the latest Mrs. McNadd, and it is not because he expects the present tie to end abruptly that the bridegroom announces his intention to take no more helpmates. It is because of the expense attached to the practice that has caused McNadd to make his decision.

"When I first became a benedict it cost me only 50 cents for a license," said the aged groom. "The second time I was assessed $1. Then it was $1.50 and $2.50 is the cost of a license. It's too much, especially when one can't afford it."

McNadd comes from Milvern, Kan. The courtship ending in to-day's marriage started two months ago and was carried on by mail, although the pair have known each other for thirty-five years. Mrs. Beaver has been married twice before.

The Record

Isn't it wonderful how every incident that takes place upon earth is recorded upon nature.

They say that it takes our light about eight minutes to reach the sun, and the sun is now looking at what we did eight minutes ago.

It takes about a million years for our light to reach the more distant stars and out upon the ether with the light goes the impress of every incident that takes place here.

So out upon the ether is rushing at great speed the whole record of our world since creation.

We are making a record this season, we have greatly extended our mantle department.

We have the long, stylish mantles of the season from $5 to $30. But it is to the $15, $18, & $20 mantles we want to draw your attention, they are beautiful wraps and you can wear them with pride to any function.

Never before have we shown so many of the new up-to-date fashionable waists in the Paisley, clinging chiffon lace, and the Battenburg lace. Let us show them to you.

We have so many it would be impossible to list them. You will be pleased to see so much of fashion and quality so moderately priced.

In dress skirts we handle the most desired range of styles in Canada. Our factory turns out the most stylish garments in the trade at 3.75, 5 and up.

SOUTH MONAGHAN

SOUTH MONAGHAN, Oct 12.

Mr. Chester Lang, Peterborough, was in Monaghan on business on Thursday.

Mr. J. B. Pogue has returned to Vancouver, after having visited the parents of Mrs. Stewart, R.C.

Farmers of South Monaghan are not at present disposed to pay the prices asked by merchants of Peterborough for wheat. It is thought that the grain would be shipped to Peterborough as the merchants there are not as well situated for railway accommodation as Petrolea.

Mr. Hume of Port Hope, has been through South Monaghan paying $1.00 per bushel for white clover. He pays 85c a bushel for wheat that we are only offered 70c for in Peterboro each. Oats are selling at about 40c bushel. Apples are selling from $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel.

The many friends of Mr. Herbert Perring will regret to learn that he has been under the weather for the past few days, but it is to be considered that he is able to be out again as usual.

Mr. James Rutherford, of South Monaghan, has been confined to bed for the past three or four weeks. His friends are hopeful that he will soon be restored to good health.

Mr. Henry S. Barnard, who intends to erect a dwelling house in the early autumn, is improving slowly his old farmed years before retirement to his speedy recovery.

CONVINCING SERMON

That the people have confidence in the message being delivered at Park street Baptist church, was clearly seen last night by the large audience that listened to the convincing sermon given by Dr. Sam Luttrell.

The text was Job. from II Timothy 1 7. "For God hath not given us the part of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind." Learned the devil? Pshaw about all the devil can give.

I can't in the first place in the devil's dictionary. A lot of Christians should be in courts. Poor jelly-backed moral cowards. They can do is to stand or keep upon the wheels of the ambulance and when the casualties save chance they look up with fear and trembling and say but I can't. God gives us power to face the foe. Yes, God gives us power to conquer all our evil habits how to face the unlovable and second mind to reason out life's problems.

At the close of the service a number came out for Christ. Mr. Mullen will sing again to-morrow night. Meeting to-night at 8 p.m. All made welcome.

ENJOYABLE EVENTS

The Brock street Roller Rink's programme of special and enjoyable events will be continued to-morrow night, when a fancy dress carnival will be put on. A great deal of interest is being taken in the event and there will be an unusually large number in costume on account of the splendid prizes which Manager McMurry is offering. For the best dressed lady in fancy costume there is a solid handsome wicker rocker, for the best dressed gentleman in fancy costume an arm chair, for the best dressed lady in comic costume a hand-bag, for the best dressed gentleman in comic costume a leather suit case, for the best dressed lady in comic a season ticket, and for the best dressed girl in comic a similar prize. The prizes are on exhibition in the window of Soden's book store. It will be one of the big events of the season at the popular Brock street amusement place.

THE APPLE CROP

From Farm and Dairy.

A. McNeill, Chief, Fruit Division, Ottawa

The condition of the apple crop in Canada is now practically determined. Early apples have been picked and shipped; and the fall varieties are going forward rapidly. The later fall varieties and winter varieties have yet to meet the exigencies of wind and frost. Nevertheless, they are so well matured that the risk is less at the present time than for a number of years at the same period.

Speaking generally, the quality is very uneven, probably due to the difference in the treatment of the orchards. A much larger proportion of the orchards this year have been well cared for, and in most cases where the trees have been properly looked after, a good crop of clean fruit is the result.

Southern Ontario harvested a very light crop of early apples. The fall apples are somewhat better. The winter varieties are scarce. To this an exception can be noted. The Norfolk Cooperative Fruit Growers' Association orchards, producing about 30,000 barrels, have been for a number of years well cultivated and sprayed; these orchards have a medium to full crop following a good crop last year.

The north shore of Lake Ontario and the Georgian Bay district will have a light to medium crop of winter apples. In this section the Spy is showing up particularly well this year. The Baldwin also is maintaining its record as a crop producer. The King, however, is light, and there are many failures in Golden and Roxbury Russets and Pewaukees. The Fameuse is a medium crop; many full crops are reported. All fruit is well colored.

In eastern Ontario, the St. Lawrence Valley and the eastern townships of Quebec winter apples will be very light. The Duchess gave a full crop; the Wealthy was a medium to full crop. The Fameuse is below the average and is not only light but of poor quality, both with reference to soundness and size. The McIntosh Red generally speaking is light, but well sprayed orchards show good crops.

New Brunswick and North-eastern Quebec will not have apples enough for home consumption. A few orchards in the St. John valley of New Brunswick report a light to medium crop. Elsewhere apples are almost a failure.

In Hants, Kings, Annapolis and Digby Counties, Nova Scotia, almost a total failure is reported in the central part of the Annapolis valley, but a slightly better crop on the slopes of the North and South mountains. The crop for the whole valley, however, will be very light and the quality poor. The Gravenstein is poor in quality and light as to crop. The same may be said with reference to the Bellflower and Ribston. The quality of the Blenheim is fairly good, but the crop light. Of all the varieties, the Baldwin ranks highest in yield, but the sample will be only medium. The Ben Davis and Spy, though showing many failures, can yet be ranked as a light crop.

Prince Edward Island has the poorest crop of years, even the crab apples being almost a failure.

British Columbia will harvest a very large crop. The samples in some cases are small, and much of the fruit is deficient in color. All the commercial orchards show a medium or a full crop. Fruit Crop Report.

CITY AND COUNTY TEACHERS HOLDING THEIR ANNUAL INSTITUTE GATHERINGS

Large Attendance at Sessions in Normal School and Collegiate Institute—Joint Meeting This Afternoon.

PROF. WALLACE TO-NIGHT

The opening session of the Peterborough Teachers' Institute was held this morning in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. In previous years the conventions were held during the month of June, but as the members of the Association are in the midst of preparations for examination and as, therefore, the same interest could not be expected as under the present conditions, the departure to the fall months has, indeed, proved a pleasant and profitable one.

Miss Weir, the president of the Association, in her address, described her trip to the 47th National Educational Association, held last July at Boston, at which a great many Canadian teachers were present. As the participants in the programme were several of them amongst the foremost educators of the Republic, the recital of their addresses in brief, proved very interesting and profitable.

The attention paid to the moral and physical well-being of American school children, and the patriotic spirit displayed at all times throughout the convention in Boston were to be admired. The arrangements made by the various committees to make the stay of the visitors pleasant were all that could be desired. Miss Weir's address was received with great enthusiasm, and was discussed by several of the teachers present.

The Nominating Committee for the present session was then named by the President.

Interesting and valuable papers on Arithmetic were read by Messrs. Richardson, O'Brien, and Merritt, under the following heads: (a) Cancellation; (b) Measures, (c) Some Difficulties. In connection with the treatment of the above subject blackboard demonstrations of the various phases of each were given, and a thorough discussion was held after each paper.

A joint meeting of the City and County Teachers is being held this afternoon at the Normal School. A report of the proceedings will be published in to-morrow's Examiner.

THE COUNTY TEACHERS.

The annual convention of the County Teachers' Association was opened this morning in the Normal School, with a large attendance, representative of teachers from all parts of the county. President S. A. Smithson presided.

The session was opened with the reading of the minutes and the transaction of routine business, after which the president delivered his annual address.

An interesting report of the last annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association was given by Miss M. Ward, who contributed a complete but concise report of the work accomplished during the sessions.

Miss Jessie C. McRae gave a scholarly and interesting address on the subject, "The Value of Art in Public Schools." This afternoon the county teachers are meeting in joint session with the City Teachers' Institute.

PARIS TO-DAY IN A STATE OF SIEGE AS RESULT OF STRIKE

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, FRANCE, OCT. 13.—Paris is practically in a state of siege. The food supply is vanishing. Nearly everybody on the streets is armed and transportation all through France is tied up. There is a critical situation here to-day, the result of a general strike of the railway employees. The latest development to-day was the issuance of an order by the Government that all strike breakers be permitted to bear arms for protection. Now strikers, as well as strike-breakers, have taken the law into themselves, and there was a great crush around the shops where arms and ammunition were sold. Foreign tourists have been subjected to much interference and there have been many complaints to the British and United States Ambassadors. The declaration of martial law and the suspension of the constitution by the Government is expected every minute.

CAUGHT BY ELEVATOR AND WAS BADLY INJURED

Harry Huffman, Bolivar street met with an accident this morning, at the B. E. Ackerman factory where he is engaged on the extension to the building. It is not known just how serious the injuries resulting, are, there being no outward bruise and no evidences of any bones being broken.

It appears that the injured young man was working at the floor at the top of the elevator. Not knowing he was there, some one started the elevator up, with the result that the trapdoor at the top was quickly thrown back, catching Mr. Huffman in between it and the wall, severely hurting him. As soon as it was seen what had happened, relief was given, the young man was removed to his home and medical aid was at once summoned. His chest and stomach were crushed, causing severe pain, but the doctor could not tell as yet how serious the injuries were.

CALLED FROM A HAPPY FAMILY REUNION C. P. R. ENGINEER MEETS DEATH

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, OCT. 13.—Summoned for special duty from a family reunion at midnight, Hugh D. Cameron, C. P. R. engineer, made a short run and was killed here this morning while waiting on a siding for orders. He stepped out upon a parallel track and, hidden by steam, was run down by the incoming Toeswater train. His fireman, after vainly waiting for his return to the cab, looked for him, and found his mangled and lifeless body on the track. He leaves a widow to whom he was married one year ago. He carried three thousand dollars insurance, as member of the brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

DELINE MURDER TRIAL AT HAVELOCK TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner.

HUGH DELINE WAS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL BY MAGISTRATE EDMISON THIS AFTERNOON ON A CHARGE OF MURDERING HIS WIFE. HE WILL APPEAR AT THE FALL ASSIZES AT PETERBOROUGH ON OCT. 26.

HAVELOCK, ONT., OCT. 13. — A large crowd is in the village to-day to attend the Deline investigation. Four new witnesses will give evidence. Cora Parks, sister of deceased, will tell something of how her sister was abused; also Mrs. Arthur Parks, Jas. Hilton and Cormier Kindred. Deline was brought here at noon by Constable Cochtane. He will not give evidence. Deline told Constable Bennett to-day that he was not feeling too bad and liked it out in the fresh air.

HAVELOCK, OCT. 13.—Hugh Deline, who is charged with the murder of his wife, appeared before Magistrate Edmison this afternoon for his preliminary hearing. The prisoner, who was brought down on the noon train, shows improvement in his general appearance since going to the county gaol. Mrs. Samuel Newall, Mrs. Matthew Little and Mr. Wm. McMillan gave similar evidence as at the inquest. Mrs. Little said that when she examined the body of the dead woman cow manure was found on the left leg, which looked as if it was off a man's boot. She also saw a mark on the floor at Mrs. Deline's body which looked like the imprint of a knee, which led to her examine Deline's trousers, which bore similar stains to that on Mrs. Deline's clothing. Wm. McMillan also saw dirt splattered out on the floor. Mrs. McQuaig helped to wash the body and found substance like cow manure on a leg, but did not know how it got there. There were marks on the floor under the body, which looked as if they had been beer made by a knee. Mr. Matthew Little saw the marks on the floor also. Deline changed his boots and stocking after returning from alarming the neighbours.

LOST LIFE IN A FIRE

Twenty-Five Thousand Dollar Blaze in London, Ont., Livery Stable This Morning--Young Englishman Burned to Death

SERIOUS CONFLAGRATION

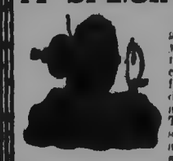
Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., OCT. 13.—William Jeppison, a young Englishman, is dead and there were damages to the extent of twenty-five thousand dollars in a fire which broke out in McAdam and Ferguson's livery barns, at two o'clock this morning. Fourteen valuable horses were destroyed. Jeppison was sleeping upstairs and probably suffocated, although indications were that he had made a desperate effort to escape. The firemen had trouble in preventing the blaze from spreading to neighbouring buildings.

A WOMAN MADE HAPPY

"I could scarcely get about the house to attend to my work and felt miserable nearly all the time," writes Mrs. Alex. Buchanan, Inland Brook, Que. "After using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food my system is wonderfully built up. There is no further trouble from dizzy spells and stomach weakness; and with health and strength restored life has a new pleasure for me."

ALWAYS CONSULT
A SPECIALIST



Never select glasses for yourself, and never purchase glasses from a peddling spectacle seller. The stock of such spectacle sellers is as defective as their knowledge of optics. The lenses are carefully ground and the lens in one eye is frequently different from the lens in the other eye.

BEWARE of SPECTACLE PEDDLERS

Wearing them will soon result in pain in the eyes and injury to the sight. Then there is frequently the condition of unequal vision—that is, your eyes may differ in focus and each may require a different, specially prescribed lens. In such cases similar lenses, such as you would select for yourself or a peddler would give you, must of necessity prove injurious to one or other of the eyes. We, on the other hand, have the knowledge and appliances necessary to detect the unequal vision or any other defect and grind the lenses to suit. Nineteen-tenths of the cases of defective vision require glasses ground especially for the patient.

THE LAURIER DEMONSTRATION.

The demonstration to Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Montreal, and his notable speech on the occasion, reproduced on this page, was a notable event, and shows that he has lost no ground in the affection of his friends in Quebec, as his triumphant tour of the West demonstrated that his popularity is Dominion wide. His cordial welcome in Quebec is especially significant. In this province in particular a peculiar and determined campaign has been waged against his personal and political influence. It is the only province of the Dominion where the assault has taken anything like an organized form, where the new Conservatism, represented by the Monk-Bourassa enfente, is so far as agressiveness is concerned, the only organized and homogenous elements in the Conservatism of the Dominion. This element has been especially busy and energetic in trying to undermine the Laurier and his government influence in Quebec; and the demonstration at the Monument National in its affectionate enthusiasm and reiteration of confidence, is an answer, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech is an answer complete and unmistakable to the attacks on the Government naval policy—on the policy that Canada's self respect will not permit her to be an eternal beneficiary of imperial defence, without contributing a reasonable share to the medium of the protection she has enjoyed, free of charge, for the past hundred or more years.

The enemies of Sir Wilfrid seek to minimize the magnificence of his reception at Montreal, by saying that the reception was organized and therefore that the enthusiasm was artificial. Of course it was organized. Nothing big can be done without organization. Without it a demonstration would be the chaos of a mob. Organization is the vital element of every great or even, small, enterprise. The demonstration to Sir Wilfrid Laurier was organized and therefore successful and seemly. The Liberal party is organized, both in the matter of policy and function, consequently there are co-operation and success. The organs and others of the Conservative party, which, disorganized both as to policy and function, is at sixes and sevens, should be the last to sneer at the legitimate results of legitimate organization. Organization spells cohesion and co-operation, and success; lack of it, disintegration and failure.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

The Royal Commission on Technical Education on its missionary tour is firing a heather, ripe for combustion. New times bring new needs, and this is as true, if not more true, of education, as of other things. Mr. W. S. Ellis, in Queen's Quarterly for the last three months of 1910, aptly says:

> The man who just supports himself but contributes nothing to the community, is on the zero plane of existence so far as productiveness is concerned. He might be blotted out without affecting the general welfare. It then becomes the aim of education to make the individual into an efficient agent in the service of the social order, and efficiency is measured by ability to aid in those services which make for progress in civilization. It is one of the commonplaces of economic observation that there is a tendency to an ever-increasing higher standard of living, which calls for improvement in both quantity and quality of those things that contribute to its maintenance. There is, in consequence, an ever-present stimulus urging to greater excellence in all those activities, both industrial and intellectual, that are designed to meet the growing requirements of the time. This stimulus should affect educational work which is intimately connected with the occupations and pleasures of life. Moreover, education itself has to undergo constant adjustment to meet changed conditions; so that a scheme of training that was quite satisfactory a generation ago will fall far short of the needs of to-day. The complex tangle of modern life that has arisen from world-wide markets, democratic developments, mechanical inventions and spread of knowledge, demands adaptations that formerly were not thought of.

This is a strong plea for technical education, and widens its scope so as to include objects and subjects beyond the range of popular acceptance of its meaning. In many, if not most, minds, technical education is regarded as something that has principally to do with technical operations—making something with tools in a shop or factory.

But theoretically, according to Mr. Ellis and practically according to experts it has a much wider meaning. At the sitting of the Dominion Technical Commission in Brantford on Monday, Professor Robertson, chairman, stated that from what the Commission had already learned, it was an easy possibility, that within twenty years, WITH A SYSTEM OF TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN AGRICULTURE ALONE, Ontario's farm products of 200 million dollars annually, could be doubled.

This is a clarion call to Sir James Whitney and his Government to put their educational house in order, both in the interests of industry as known in factories, and of the great foundation industry of Canada, farming. We all know that Sir James Whitney turns a cold shoulder to technical education; we know that has put the great and rich province of Ontario into the pauper class, by going hat in hand to the Dominion government, begging for a grant of money to justify him in promoting technical education. And we have the evidence of his own political friends to prove that the Ontario government is neglecting the great agricultural interests of Ontario and that through this neglect the farms of Ontario are not yielding up to half of their productive capacity. Prof. Robertson points the way to remedy this—by inaugurating a system of technical education, that will fit the sons of farmers to come into their own and double the crop production of this province. Cheap power is a great thing and a good; but skilled citizens, that will make the best use of it are something far more important, and skilled tillers of the soil areas necessary as skilled mechanics if we are to realize the full possibilities of our soil. Sir James Whitney raises a frightful row over invasion of provincial rights, if the Dominion government gets an inch over the line that separates provincial and dominion legislative jurisdiction in the matter of chartering a company or something similarly weighty; but he is willing to wash his hands of provincial rights altogether when it comes to a matter of—to borrow his own style—the most stupendously important matter — technical education, which can be made to revolutionize the production of our workshops, in quality and output, as well as make the soil yield its full tale of wheat and grains and grasses and roots, and butter and cheese and eggs and bacon.

This work, the systematic application of technical education to provincial needs, is the work and province of the provinces. It is a field the Dominion has no constitutional right to invade, but public spirit and a sense of the crying demand of national interests, has led the government and parliament to sail mighty close to the wind in the launching and navigating of the Royal Commission of Technical Education. It is laying the foundation; it is for the provincial governments to build upon it; and Ontario as the first province in the sisterhood, should be the one to show the way.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Speech Great Feature Of Great Ovation

A magnificent demonstration was given to Sir Wilfrid at Montreal, and on the occasion, he made a memorable speech, reproduced below.

In rising to speak, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: "You will believe me, I am sure, when I tell you that I shall seek in vain for words to express all the gratitude which I feel for this enthusiastic welcome, the most memorable of all those which has been accorded to me in my long political career. I have, as you know, just visited the western provinces of our country. Echoes have carried to you some idea of the demonstration of which my colleagues and myself have been the object. I can tell you without any vain boasting that these echoes were not in the least exaggerated. I have often thought in the course of certain manifestations that it would be impossible for me to meet with any superior to the one I saw at the time, but I am obliged to say, and I say it with pleasure, that all that I have seen in the west does not approach what I have seen to-day in the city of Montreal. But, gentlemen, however flattering this welcome may be, the principal object which this occasion affords to me, in my opinion, is to outline the political situation of our country.

The Opposition.

"We are evidently in the midst of a series of important events, and the most remarkable fact at the present time on the political horizon is that the Conservative party is in process of disorganization and that in a short time it will be fully dissolved, even if dissolution is not already accomplished. This is a very significant fact to which I am going to refer. During last session at Ottawa it had been decided by the chiefs of the Conservative party to hold a convention during the year which is now about to close, and it is a fact no less remarkable that this convention, after having been decided upon, had to be abandoned. I was not at this convention. I shall not surprise anyone if I tell you that I was not there, but I know what took place as if I had been present. I am pretty well experienced in the trade, and I know the moves on the board perfectly. I know those who were present; I could give you the speech of Mr. Borden, the chief of the party. I could give you the speech of his lieutenant, Mr. Foster. I could tell you of the speech of his lieutenant, Mr. Monk. Some wanted a programme which would have pleased the West, but would not have pleased the East; others wanted a programme which would have been pleasing to Quebec, but to which Ontario could not agree. Some wanted an increase of the tariff; others wanted a lowering of the tariff. Some wanted a contribution to the Imperial navy; others wanted neither contribution nor navy. And then, gentlemen, finding it impossible to do anything, they decided that the best thing to do was to do nothing at all.

"The Conservative party, therefore has no programme and in the struggle which will take place before long, there will be as many programmes as there are provinces. In the Province of British Columbia, which I visited with a few of my friends some time ago, a battle will be waged against the Government on the question of Asiatic immigration. In the provinces of the west—Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan—the question will be fiscal and the lowering of the tariff will be demanded.

In certain portions of the Province of Ontario the question will be on fiscal matters, and it will not be the lowering of the tariff that will be demanded, but the increasing of the tariff. In Ontario also war will be made on the Government on the question of the navy, with the assertion—note this assertion well in the Province of Quebec—that the navy is going to lead us not to the enslaving of our province, as we are told here, but to the separation of Canada from Great Britain.

In the Province of Quebec.

"In the Province of Quebec war will also be made. It has already begun, as you know, on this question of the navy is going to lead our country to the loss of her autonomy and to enslaving our province to Great Britain. In the Maritime Provinces I do not yet know what will be the plan of attack, but I am certain that it will be as absurd as elsewhere. In every province the methods of attack will cross one another, and it will simply be fishing in troubled waters, with the hope that in these troubled waters some good morsel may be found. Gentlemen, in the Province of Quebec, as you know better than I, you who are from the city of Montreal, this internal disintegration of the Conservative party began a long time ago since the sensible elements, the healthy minds of the Conservative party separated themselves form this party and became part of ours. I say that they separated themselves from it; I ought to say, perhaps, that they were excluded from it.

Pharisees of Catholicism.

"This violent section—you know it—comprises the Pharisee end of Canadian Catholicism: those who have constituted themselves the defenders of the religion which no one attacked, those who handle the holy water sprinkler as if it were a club; those who have arrogated to themselves the monopoly of orthodoxy; those who excommunicate right and left all those whose stature is a little greater than theirs; those who only seem to have hatred and envy for motive and instinct; those who insulted Cardinal Taschereau when he was alive, and now that he is dead, attack his memory; those who made Chapleau's life bitter; those, finally, whom the people with their picturesque language have designated under the name of Castors. That is what remains, as you know, gentlemen, in the Province of Quebec of the old Conservative party, the party of Macdonald, of Cartier, and of Chapleau. To this group have been joined—I must say it—certain young Liberals whom chance of birth had thrown in to the ranks of the Liberal party, but who had nothing Liberal in their nature, and who, after a few struggles, found their true mentality in the waters of the Castors.

"There is meanwhile one of their tactics whose foolishness I must expose, that is where at all their meetings they affirm that the Laurier of 1910 is quite different from the Laurier of 1902. They affirm with a sob and a tear that Laurier has fallen from the high position that he took when in 1902 he declared that he would never consent that his country should not fall into the abyss of European militarism. This is what is heard at all their meetings. Well, gentlemen, I am here to tell you in effect that there is something of a change, there has been a change since 1902. But I declare to you that those who have changed are not those who made the naval law, which I am going to discuss in a minute, but those who are opposing it.

Conference of 1902.

"What was the situation in 1902? In 1902 there was a convention, the Imperial Conference of London, at which there were present representatives of Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, the Cape of Good Hope and Natal. The Secretary of State for War came before the conference and demanded that all the powers—I say powers, because I no longer feel that the name of a colony applies to Canada. I would use the word Dominion, but that has been translated by Sir George Etienne Cartier by the word 'power'—the Secretary of State for War proposed that all the powers, all the young nations who make part of the empire, should build, equip and maintain a reserve force of the army, which would be always at the disposition of the war office at London. At the same time the Secretary of State for the Marine demanded that the same powers should contribute a sum of money annually for the maintenance of an Imperial fleet. There, indeed, was the entrance to militarism. But the Canadian ministers who were at London and I was one of them opposed this demand of the Imperial Government in a categorical refusal, a refusal respectful in form, but absolute in meaning.

"But we did more than that; we placed before the conference our policy which we intend to follow. We declared our intention to sustain the obligation incumbent upon all nations of defending their own territory, that we had already organized a militia, and that we were equally ready to undertake our naval defence; but that we would at all times follow and maintain the principle of our local autonomy. I feel quite assured that you will now approve this policy and that you will see that Messrs. Monk and Bourassa, and even the chiefs of the party who attacked the naval law, tell you that they are perfectly in accord with this policy. Our policy of 1902 was a wise one, and had the approbation of Mr. Bourassa. But if it had not the approbation of Messrs. Bourassa and Monk, I knew nothing about it at that time. Mr. Monk, for all his facile speech, said nothing on the floor of the House, and as to Mr. Bourassa, if he had that idea, it was hermetically sealed in his bosom. But, aside from that I note the admission that the policy which we proposed in 1902 was wise and sane, and had the approbation of Mr. Bourassa and the others who are now attacking our policy.

The Naval Law.

However, here is the naval law, and I defy contradiction when I say that this law is in complete accord with the policy of 1902 as defined by us, as approved by Messrs. Monk and Bourassa. Now, I have simply to call your attention to two things provided by this naval law. It simply decrees that the Government of Canada should organize another naval service, and that this service should remain entirely under the control of the Government of Canada. Outside of this, there is not a single word which would give to Great Britain that which she demanded in 1902—the organization of a war service to be put at the disposition of the war office—not one word. Is there in this a single word which takes the control of the navy from the Government, the Parliament and the people of Canada? Not a single word.

Charged With Treason

"Now, let us examine the conference of 1907, and see if we have been consistent, and if we remain on the same ground; if we have always had the same policy, which was to develop our defence on land and on sea, but at the same time to preserve our autonomy, and not to contribute to the imperial defence unless we guarded our autonomy in this matter as in all others. But, gentlemen, what is the consequence of this attitude? The consequence of this attitude is that the man you now have before you is accused of crime, is accused of treason. We are accused of treason in this province, treason towards the British Empire. I have been accused of treason, but I have grown accustomed to that charge during the past four years; in fact, I have been accused of that all my life. In 1896 I was accused of treason towards my race and towards my religion because I recognized the rights of the Federal Government not to impose on a sister province a system of schools which they did not want. And now I am accused of treason again by the jingoes of Toronto, by the imperial jingoes, of the crime of violating the national integrity, and of wishing to negotiate a treaty of reciprocity with the United States.

"Gentlemen, there are those who exaggerate, no matter to what race they belong, or to what party or what country they belong. They outrage reason and good sense, and they always accuse those who speak with moderation, of treason."

"Gentlemen, the motive for which we have decided to organize a naval defense is that we fear war. We have on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts thousands of miles of territory, which we are obliged to control for the protection of our citizens. I do not believe in war. I believe that war between civilized countries will become more and more rare. It is a hundred years since we have known war, and I hope that before long we and our neighbours will celebrate this hundred years of peace between us.

"The Liberal party knows no distinction of race or religion. We are all equal in this country. Gentlemen, our rights were in peril, but my English colleagues came forward and offered themselves in defense of those rights. And if the rights of our fellow-citizens of English origin were to be imperilled, I would address myself to you to defend your own. I have been accused of being a traitor to my race; but such accusations do not concern me. And if it is treason to work for this end, then I am ready to accept that reproach.

Trade Negotiations.

"In 1896 I sent two of my colleagues to Washington to negotiate for a treaty of reciprocity. We were received with much politeness, but could obtain nothing. At that time I said we would make no more pilgrimages to Washington, but last winter there was a pilgrimage from Washington to Ottawa. Since that time we have adopted a new policy of preference towards England. That policy has been a benefit to the commerce of the Dominion, and we do not intend to abolish it. On the other hand, we must not forget that we are behind the United States in the matter of industrial development by at least fifty years. I believe it is possible to make a treaty with the United States which will not only be a great advantage to us, but equally to the United States and I would not have a treaty which was not at least equally profitable to one as to the other.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

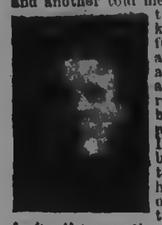
Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. LETITIA BLAIR, Canifton, Ontario.



Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

HAND-TAILORED

The custom tailor who charges you $40 to $50 for a suit would like you to believe that it is hand tailored throughout—every stitch of it. Ask him. As a matter of fact there is a lot of machine work on the finest garments made. The modern tailor knows that certain operations in the making of a garment can be done better by machine than by hand and certain other important operations can be done better by hand than by machine.

The 20th Century Brand people employ scores of highly skilled hand tailors and put hand work on all vital parts of their garments. Their clothes are "Hand Tailored" in the full meaning of that trade term.

And that's worth knowing and remembering.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

The office of C. D. Sheldon, the Montreal broker, has been closed.

The wind was too strong yesterday for Walter Wellman to attempt a trial flight in the balloon with which he hopes to cross the Atlantic.

The German Government has refused satisfaction for the assault which the Berlin police committed on British and American newspapermen.

Garceau and Picotte, who killed Carter as a result of a practical joke, and were found guilty of manslaughter, were fined $25 or three months.

Robert Wardell, aged 83, is dead in Kingston penitentiary. He had spent much time in the hospital from rheumatism. He was sent to prison from Peterboro for arson.

The Minister of Railways warns the C.P.R. that unless construction is commenced within eighteen months route approvals for the second C.P.R. line from Toronto eastward may be cancelled.

Robert Ironsides, the millionaire cattle exporter, died yesterday morning in Montreal, after a somewhat lengthy illness. He had been suffering from enlargement of the heart for some time.

The carriage factory of A. S. Fillmore, at Southampton, 20 miles from Amherst, was destroyed by fire, with twenty sleighs which were in the factory. The loss is $35,000 and the insurance $6,000.

New Food Standards.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—New food standards, prepared during the past year by Mr. Anthony McGill, chief analyst of the Inland Revenue Department, assisted by experts working under him, are now before the Cabinet Council, and will probably be promulgated by an order-in-council this autumn. The new standards, so far prepared, cover milk and its products, meats and meat products, and grain and grain products. After a month's advertisement the new standards become law.

Other standards for medicinal products, etc., are now in the course of preparation.

Tortured, Then Murdered.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Part of a human face, badly burned with acid, was handed over to the chief analyst of the Government yesterday morning by Dr. Fagan, provincial health officer at Vancouver. It is the only clue to the solution of a mysterious murder recently at Revelstoke.

The victim was a miner named Frank Julian, who is thought to have been set upon by members of the Black Hand. He was cut up with an axe, but before being murdered was evidently tortured. A ring around his face was burned in by the use of acid.

A Foxy Trick.

Rochester, Oct. 13.—For some time money has been missed from the cash exchange of a large departmental store. A watch was set, and yesterday the police solved the mystery, when they caught four small boys fishing bank notes off the piles by means of a stick pushed through the steel screens, on the end of which was a piece of gum. The bills readily stuck to the gum, and hauls of from $10 to $20 were made at a time. The boys were arrested.

Used Body as Bullet Shield.

New York, Oct. 13.—Adolph Borg, 21 years, was arrested yesterday afternoon, on a charge of homicide, accused of being the man known as "Pickles," who held 13-year-old Charles Fischer in front of him as a shield from a fusilade of shots from the revolver of Henry Greenwald, alias "Biff" Clark, Tuesday afternoon. The boy was killed, and when Greenwald was cornered, he shot and killed himself.

SLEEP WAS IMPOSSIBLE

ALMOST DRIVEN TO DESPAIR UNTIL CURED WITH USE OF

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

No symptom of nervous prostration is more to be dreaded than the inability to sleep. Man can exist for considerable time without food, but without sleep, and the restoration which it brings, he soon becomes a mental and physical wreck.

When you cannot sleep and rest look to the nervous system and remember that lasting cure can only be obtained from such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which naturally and gradually restores the exhausted nerves to health and vigour.

Mr. Wm. Graham, Atwood, Ont., writes: "My wife had been ill for some time with nervous prostration and we had two of the best doctors we could get, but neither of them did her any good. She gradually became worse and worse, could not sleep and lost energy and interest in life. She was almost giving up in despair when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"From the first box my wife used we noticed an improvement and after using six boxes she is completely cured and as well as she ever was, eats well, sleeps well and feels fully restored. I cannot say too much in praise of this valuable medicine for I believe my wife owes her life to its use."

Many cases of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food come to the knowledge of [illegible] Book, and is therefore entitled to do you good.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. [illegible] free copy of Dr. Chase's [illegible]

ROBBED A BANK

Special Wire to The Examiner.

SAINT RACOME, QUE., OCT. 13.—Daring burglars broke into the Quebec National Bank here at midnight and got away with five thousand dollars in cash. The neighbours heard the crash. The night watchman was away. The indications are that the robbers trekked towards Quebec city.

JOINS IMPERIAL ARMY

Young Man Well Known Here Receives an Important Appointment

The following from the Globe, refers to a Peterborough boy, nephew of Mr. R. B. Rogers and the late J. Z. Rogers. He will be well remembered by many friends in the city.

Mr. Alan Rogers, who stands six feet, five inches in height, son of Provincial Inspector of Charities E. R. Rogers, sails for England to-day to accept an appointment in the Imperial army. He graduated with honors from the Royal Military College at Kingston last June and received a commission in India.

In addition to passing his examination in good standing, he takes with him to the heavyweight boxing championship and the cross-country annual run of the college.

ENDS INDIGESTION IN A FEW MINUTES

Gas, Heartburn, Headache and all Misery in Stomach Vanishes

Nothing will remain undigested or sour on your stomach if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally. This powerful digestive and antacid, though as harmless and pleasant as candy, will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you can eat.

Eat what your stomach craves, without the slightest fear of indigestion or that you will be bothered with sour risings, Belching, Gas on Stomach, Heartburn, Headaches from stomach, Nausea, Bad Breath, Water Brash or a feeling like you had swallowed a lump of lead, or other disagreeable miseries. Should you be suffering now from any stomach disorder you can get relief within five minutes.

If you will get from your pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin you could always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and your meals would taste good, because you would know there would be no indigestion or Sleepless nights or Headache or Stomach misery all the next day; and, besides, you would not need laxatives or liver pills to keep your stomach and bowels clean and fresh.

Pape's Diapepsin can be obtained from your druggist, and contains more than sufficient to thoroughly cure the worst case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. There is nothing better for Gas on the Stomach or sour odours from the stomach or to cure a Stomach Headache.

You couldn't keep a handier or more useful article in the house.

TRENT CANAL PLANT FLEET WORKING ITS WAY HOMEWARD

The dredge, "Little Lake" is working at Lakefield, together with her consort the tug "J. B. McColl."

The dredge "Emmerson" and her running mate, the "Bob Hall" are working between Young's Point and Lakefield.

The tug "Herbert" arived at Lakefield to-day from Lake Simcoe, with two scows and cookery, and returns to Buckhorn for a scow load of wood for Lakefield.

The Government dredges will work till the close of navigation on the Stony Lake and Lakefield divisions, and winter in the Lakefield harbour.

WAIT IN VAIN

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, OCT. 13.—Six hundred disappointed clients, some women with babes in their arms, who had all put their all into C. D. Sheldon's pool-brokers-get-rich-quick scheme, waited in vain around his office this morning for his return as per promise to cash their cheques. The liquidators in charge have no comfort to offer. It appears everything is wiped out.

The Sugar Beet Harvest.

Chatham, Oct. 13.—Many of the farmers of Kent have commenced to harvest their sugar beets, and some are even hauling them to the factory at Wallaceburg. It is reported that an average yield for the year will be about 19 tons to the acre, which is above the ordinary yield.

First Exhibition a Success.

Windsor, Oct. 13.—The first exhibition of the Windsor and North Essex Agricultural Society, which is being held here this week, is a decided success, and is a surprise to some people, who predicted only failure for it. The showing of stock, poultry, fruits, etc., is excellent.

Famous Singer Dead.

Murphy Speaks at Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—At the Discovery Day banquet of the Knights of Columbus last night addresses were made by Hon. Charles Murphy, M.P., Secretary of State for Canada; Vice-President Sherman and Judge Peter S. Grosscup of the U. S. Circuit Court. Political and economic subjects were avoided by Mr. Murphy and the vice-president. Senator Lorimer was a guest at the Speaker's table.

Arrested For Bigamy.

Sherbrooke, Que., Oct. 13.—Joseph Pinneault, alias Alexis St. Laurent, was arrested here on a charge of bigamy, on the complaint of Mrs. Pinneault, his first wife. Pinneault is a resident of Montreal, and lived with his first wife near St. Cunegonde street until he deserted her nineteen months ago. He then came to Sherbrooke, and on May 2 married a Miss Charest of this city.

Fashionable Burglars.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Mrs. Mattie Jennings, 60 years old, and her two daughters, Mrs. R. E. Hayden and Miss Laura Jennings, were arrested in their home in fashionable Prairie avenue yesterday morning, accused of being women automobile burglars who robbed a score of farm houses near Crown Point, Ind., and escaped with the loot.

Not Quite Sure About It.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the Ottawa Publicity Bureau, it was decided to rescind, temporarily at least, the bureau's slogan, "Twice as much power as Niagara at half the cost." Before adopting such an expressive motto a committee was appointed to enquire into the facts.

Caught the Chinamen.

Boston, Oct. 13.—Four Chinamen who were captured in a freight car at Holyoke Sept. 18, and brought here, charged with violating the emigration laws, have been started back to China, the United States being put to an expense of $1,500 for their deportation.

CLAIMS $50,000

Special Wire to the Examiner.

ST. JOHN, N.B., OCT. 13.—Before Exchequer Justice Cassels this morning an echo of the famous Mayes-McAvity election incident, came up, when the trial of the claim of Contractor Mayes for sixty thousand dollars from the Government for harbour work, was begun. Hon. Wm. Pugsley was present. Counsel for the Government said he was authorized to offer five thousand dollars, but that was not considered satisfactory. His Lordship advised settlement, and counsel are engaged in considering his suggestion.

MORE ABOUT TUNGSTEN LAMPS

A great saving by using Tungsten Lamps. Tungsten practically consumes in a twenty candle power lamp 25 watts against about seventy watts in a twenty candle power ordinary carbon lamp. The reason that we speak of twenty-five watt Tungsten lamp is that the manufacturer cannot make a lower candle power lamp at a hundred and ten volts. The filament in a twenty-five watt one hundred and ten volt is so fragile that it cannot be burned at any other position, but the perpendicular with the base uppermost. The life of a 110 volt Tungsten lamp is very short, but that is not the worst feature about them. After they have been burning for a short time you cannot remove them from the socket to clean them, or you cannot put them any place where there is a jarring on the floor above. That is one reason why they are not used in factories. The filament has often been broken by walking on the floor above the electric-leare. Now, the Tungsten filament lamp will save you about two-thirds the cost of that of the carbon filament lamp. The only safe way to use Tungsten filament lamps is on a low voltage system, not over twenty-five volts. The lamps can be made in any desired candle power and the filament is that heavy that they can be used at an angle the same as a carbon filament lamp. The life of these lamps compare favourably with that of the carbon. If some inventive genius would get up an apparatus whereby it could be attached to the ordinary 110 voltage system without any loss for the use of 25 voltage lamps there is a fortune waiting.

Crippen Trial on Tuesday.

London, Oct. 13.—The grand jury found true bills against Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and Ethel Clare Leneve, charging the former as the principal and the latter as an accessory after the fact, with the murder of the doctor's wife, whose stage name was Belle Elmore.

Lord Chief Justice Iverstone, who will preside, later fixed upon Tuesday as the date for the opening of the trial.

Took Rat Poison.

London, Ont., Oct. 13.—Daisy Henwood, a 14-year-old girl, took a dose of rat poison yesterday morning and is dead. She was a ward of the Children's Aid Society, and not very bright. Tuesday night she secured some candy on credit at a store. The grocer thought it was suspicious, and followed her up. She was evidently frightened, and took her life. No inquest will be held.

Worse Than Hanging.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Judge Marcus Kavanagh, in a remarkable opinion, handed down in sentencing Joe. Welcome to life imprisonment for murder, contrasted death with the tortured soul of a life convict to his solitary confinement, and told the prisoner that it is not correct to regard the death penalty as the most severe punishment that can be inflicted.

DEEP-SEATED COUGH

CURED IN 5 HOURS

New Home-Made Syrup.

From Boston Press.

Progress in medical compounds never ceases, and now it is stated by a prominent medical man that any deep-seated cough or cold on the lungs can be actually cured in five hours by the clock. Opium and morphine have been resorted to in the past, as relief measures. But now it is learned that the system must be treated to rid it of inflammation and congestion. A tonic laxative cough syrup does the work so quickly and thoroughly as to be almost magical. What heretofore has taken weeks to cure can be accomplished in hours. Get this formula filled or mix it at home and always keep it on hand: One-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardini and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Shake the bottle and take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then take one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times a day until the system is purified and tones up. Give children less according to age. One filling will usually cure a whole family, as the dose is small.

SWITCH BLOCKED

Minor Accident at Havelock Delayed Traffic This Morning

Traffic was tied up to a certain extent for a couple of hours on the C. P. R. this morning, owing to a slight accident at Havelock. The yard engine shoved a few cars over a switch and blocked the main line. The 5.25 a.m. train was about an hour late. Everything was in running order in two hours.

ECZEMA NOT A SKIN DISEASE

Eczema is a disease of the skin and not of the blood. For this reason internal medicines have never been a success in curing Eczema. Whatever the cause local application is necessary to heal the sores and restore the skin to a healthful, natural condition. For this reason Dr. Chase's Ointment has a world wide reputation as being without a rival as a cure for Eczema.

Broke His Skull.

Brantford, Oct. 13.—At the inquest into the death of Frank Simon, who succumbed to injuries received in a fight with Armenians, two doctors who performed the autopsy, testified that the deceased came to his death from a fractured skull, and that the latter might have been caused by a fall on the pavement after being struck in the face with a dinner pail. The Armenians, Kopaian and Mugarnian, have been remanded for a week.

Make No Arrests on Reserve.

Brantford, Oct. 13.—Members of the Brant County Council have made a request to county constables to make no arrests on the Indian reserve. The county annually foots the bill of the rest of the administration of justice, which is made up largely by Indian cases. The reserve, however, bears no proportion of the cost, and the councillors are of the opinion that the Indian Department should administer its own justice.

Reeve of Tavistock Dead.

Woodstock, Oct. 13.—The death occurred very suddenly about 1 o'clock yesterday morning of George Staebler, reeve of Tavistock, and a member of the Oxford County committee investigating the alleged good roads graft. Mr. Staebler was a prominent man in Oxford County. He was aged 58, and was in the implement business.

IN LOVE WITH WEST

Mr. Andrew Moffat, Formerly of Millbrook, Speaks Highly of the Possibilities

Mr. Andrew Moffatt, a former well-known resident of Millbrook, who is now living in Souris, Man., was in the city today, renewing old acquaintances. Mr. Moffatt is enamoured with the West, and its great possibilities and would not entertain for a moment a proposition that he should take up his residence in the east again. The crops, he informed the Examiner, were this year very good. In some sections the farmers have been known to get as high as forty-five or fifty bushels of wheat per acre. Vegetables can be purchased in Winnipeg as cheaply as here; in fact potatoes are selling at 60 cents per bag, a price that cannot be met with in Peterborough.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

THERE is one reason anyway why I wish women would get the vote, even if I am not a suffragette. I wish they would get it and use it to purify the press. During the recent campaign, with all the talk about "white slaves" and other horrible evils, that I, a grown woman, had scarcely ever heard of before, the papers, were anything but fit for a child to read. Such things should not be printed."

That was actually said by a grown woman before a large women's club recently. I clipped it from the paper.

Think of it. It almost made me an anti-suffragist. It would if I thought there were many women as outrageously narrow and shortsighted as that.

To me it is one of the most splendid signs of the times that papers are giving much space to "all this talk about white slaves and other horrible evils." I wish they gave double. The more space they give, the more rapidly the betterment of conditions that is undoubtedly coming through the awakening of the public conscience, will be brought to pass.

Let me tell you, Mrs. False-Modesty Club Woman, what Eva Booth, the head of the Salvation Army in this country, a woman who ought to know as much as anyone in America of conditions in the underworld, said to me about the white slave traffic in New York.

"There has been a tremendous falling off of this kind of business in the last year, not so much through the enforcement of laws as through the fear which so much publicity has inspired in the white slave dealers and procurers."

"The Rockefeller investigation and the newspaper accounts of it have not only awakened the eyes of mothers of young girls all over the country to the dangers that lie in wait for them, but they have thoroughly frightened these wicked men."

Would you have such things left out of the papers that the papers might be pleasanter to read?

Would you have such things left out of the papers because of the possibility that your child might learn of the facts of life?

Do you know the only kind of child that will get any harm from such articles?

The child who has reached the age when children begin to wonder about the mysteries of sex, and whose father and mother have not done their duty in explaining such things to him, and who is consequently trying to piece together an explanation from everything that he hears and reads.

That child will morbidly devour such articles and may be harmed by them.

But I do not think that any other child or any clean minded man or woman will derive anything from the reading of such evils, except a burning desire to try to better conditions.

I hope the newspapers will go on giving all the space they can spare to telling about such things, and for those who will disagree with me and still disapprove, I want to tell a little story that I always think of when I meet people like Mrs. False-Modesty-Club-Woman.

When Dr. Samuel Johnson published his famous dictionary, a woman came to him and said, "Dr. Johnson, I don't like your dictionary."

"Why, Madame?" said the doctor.

"Because there are too many improper words defined in it," said the lady.

"Madame," replied Dr. Johnson, "I see that you have been looking for them."

NORWOOD FAIR SCORES ITS ANNUAL SUCCESS

Fine Weather, Big Crowd, Splendid Exhibits and Plenty of Amusement Features Combine to Make the Event a Most Enjoyable One---Many Visitors Were Present From Peterborough.

Norwood, Oct. 12.—Bright sunshiny weather with more than a hint of the coming winter in the breeze greeted the big day of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society's annual exhibition here to-day and the climatic conditions rendered the success of the event a surety. The fondest expectations of the directors were realized both in point of number and quality of exhibits and in the attendance which was away above the average. Every road must have led to Norwood to-day judging by the number of vehicles on the grounds and around the town itself. From early morning there was a steady stream of vehicular traffic and the trains brought many people. The biggest crowd came from Peterborough, the noon C.P.R. express bringing three or four hundred people. So large was the crowd that many had to stand in the vestibules.

The big problem before the citizens of Norwood was to feed the visitors. The one hotel here was not able to look after a tenth of the crowd and churches and private citizens went into the restaurant business temporarily. The Methodist Church served meals in the basement of their church. The Baptists had head-quarters over a down-town store and every other private house seemed to have the sign "Hot Meals" hung out while bells were lustily swung on every side, indicating that the needs of the inner man would be attended to.

The crowd began to gather on the grounds early and at 1 o'clock several thousand people had filed through the turn-stile gates. For the greater part of the afternoon the people continued to come until at 4 o'clock there must have been at least 5,000 present.

There was plenty for them to see, both in exhibits and in the amusement line. The exhibits were away above the mark, very both in number and in quality. There was an especially fine showing made in poultry, while horses and cattle were also excellent. Keen interest was taken in the judging in the carriage horses and the ring in which this event took place was surrounded by a deep fringe of interested spectators.

The Mid-way, always one of the features of the Norwood fair was as the circus bills are wont to say, bigger, grander and better than ever. There were Egyptian and Indian fortune tellers, a merry-go-round which operated to the strains of "Take Me Up With You Dearie", a half score of hoop-la games, cane racks and knife board games, the Cerelli show of mirth, music and mystery (without Cerelli), ice cream cone and Coney Island Redhots' booths, and other amusement and refreshment openings of which full advantage was taken.

An interesting programme of horse races, a Marathon race and other features had been arranged by the management which served to keep the crowd in a happy mood throughout the afternoon. The Norwood band gave an excellent programme of music during the afternoon.

The annual inspection of the Norwood High School Cadets was an interesting feature of the day's events. The youngsters in their neat gray uniforms and forage caps marched and drilled with a soldierly precision and made a very favourable impression upon the crowd. The inspecting officer was Lt. Col. Hemming, of Kingston.

The three mile Marathon race was the first item of the track programme. There were three entries, W. Willis, of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A., Willie Edwards of Keene, winner of the Examiner's five mile junior road race last year, and Billy Smoke, another Indian runner from Alderville. The race was an easy victory for Willis, who was never in difficulty and won as he pleased. At the start Willis cut loose with a sprint a la Altie Shrubb and went right way from the other pair. In the first lap he set up a fifty yard lead which he kept steadily increasing. Edwards tried to follo whim but was soon forced to drop back while Smoke was falling away behind the Keene youth. Out in front Willis pranced along with a light, easy, springy stride that carried him along fast and without any apparent exertion. At the finish he was over half a lap or more than 300 yards to the good. Smoke sprinted and caught Edwards at the beginning of the last mile and the two ran bunched until they swung into the stretch for the last time. The Indian cut loose with a sprint but Edwards had something left and stalled off two attempts to pass him after which Smoke weakened and was content with third.

Smoke and Edwards will both start in the Examiner's road race on Thanksgiving Day. Over a longer route both boys would be dangerous.

The horse races brought out big fields in both green race and free-for-all, and to took extra heats to decide both. No less than six heats were needed to settle the green event and th free-for-all took four. There were some exciting finishes and the crowd found the races decidedly amusing.

In the free-for-all there were three Peterborough horses, Colling Rooker, owned by W. Whitham; Patterson, Eddie Jones; and Lulu Chimes, Thos. Melvor. The other starters were Bone's Dot L., Chas. Fife's Tom Tariff and Bourbon Brook, owned by Elmhirst, of Keene. Collingwood Rooker cleaned up. He won the first heat, was second in the second, and breezed home in the lead in the next two. His most serious opposition was from Patterson, who won the second heat and chased Rocker hard all through.

A collision between Lulu Chimes and Bourbon Brook in the third heat, caused considerable excitement. Going down the back ——— the two collided with the result that Lulu's driver, Thos. Melvor was thrown out and Bourbon Brook's bike was badly smashed so that he could not finish. The driver of Lulu Chimes was badly shaken up but not seriously injured. Collingwood Rooker, Whitham.

Five entries in the green race resulted in a lively and exciting battle which was finally won by May Sphinx owned by Dr. Pulkinghorn of Peterborough. Hazel Brook, after being second in the first heat captured the next two and looked to have the race on ice. The Peterborough mare lasted better and came on and won the fourth, fifth and sixth heats. The first heat went to Miller Boy, who could not get closer than third afterwards.

YOU LOOK OLD!

In nine cases out of ten it is not because you are old, but because you are tired, all worn out, and you act as if you just wondered how you are going to get through the season and do your work.

This condition may be caused by a run-down and debilitated condition, or by a bad cold which has left you without strength or ambition.

We want to ask every such person to try Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil. If it does not build you up and make you feel young, strong and well again, we will return the money you paid us for it. Isn't that fair? ## SHOULD BE REPRESENTED ON THE LIBRARY BOARD

Such is the Opinion of the Trades and Labour Council---On account of Needs of the Trades in Technical Literature.

MEETING LAST NIGHT

The regular monthly meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held in their hall, Simcoe street, last evening and it was the best meeting of the council since its reorganization. A large representation from the various unions was present, and by the many lively discussions that took place and the resolutions that were passed during the evening it was quite evident that the new council was a live one. By a resolution passed all the indebtedness of the old council has been wiped out and it is expected at the next regular meeting that ed at the next regular meeting that the Council will have the pleasure of working under a new charter. Attention was drawn to the fact that many non-union stoves, and possibly non-union carpets were being offered for sale in the city and the unions will be notified of the matter. The question of the new library board was opened up, and owing to the needs of the trades generally in technical literature it was considered advisable in these interests that a representative from the Trades and Labour Council should be placed upon the board. A committee was appointed to see what could be done in having the wishes of the council carried out. The question of the long hours of labour that some contractors are making use of in doing city work was brought up and a committee was appointed to investigate and report on the conditions. This committee will be asked also to draft a number of questions to be put to various applicants for municipal honours in the coming elections. Some were in favour of the council nominating candidates, but this step was not considered necessary.

Don't Fail To Hear Prof. Wallace's Lecture

There will undoubtedly be a large attendance in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute this evening when Prof. Wallace, of Toronto University, will give an address upon "The Ballads of the Scottish Border" under the joint auspices of the City and County Teachers' Association. Prof. Wallace is recognized as a scholarly and entertaining speaker and his treatment of his interesting subject to-night is bound to prove a treat. Miss Julia Choate of the Conservatory of Music will give a violin solo, and Mr. George Lynch, the well known local humorist, will also contribute to the programme. There is no admission charge and the public is cordially invited to attend.

LETTER FOR MR. THORPE.

There is a letter at the Examiner office for Mr. Chas. Thorpe, the well known middle distance runner. Mr. Thorpe is not in the city at present, and any of his friends who know his address would confer a favour upon the Examiner if they would inform the sporting editor of this paper where he is to be found.

SPLENDID PROGRAMME FOR FRIDAY'S BAND CONCERT

Two or three hundred additional seats have been secured for the grand concert under the auspices of the band of the 57th Regiment in the Armouries to-morrow night so that a comfortable seat is assured every one who attends. It is undoubtedly the best musical programme that has ever been offered the people of Peterborough at such a low price. Mr. Barnaby Nelson, the tenor who has been secured for the occasion is widely known in Canada and was for two years in the concert company of Miss Jessie McLachlan, the famous Scottish singer. Mr. Nelson will be heard in two numbers in to-morrow night's programme. Pipe Major Pollock, who is to give bag-pipe selections is an expert in his line and those who enjoy this peculiar brand of music will be given a treat. Following is the programme, which will commence at 8.15 o'clock with military precision:

NEWSPAPER MEN PLEASED WITH THE "NAKED TRUTH"

Montreal, Que., Oct. 11. "Press Night" was observed at the Princess theatre here to night when more than five hundred newspaper men of Montreal attended the performance of Henry E. Dixey in a comedy called "The aNked Truth". This was the largest gathering of newspaper writers in the history of this city and their enthusiasm resulted in Mr. Dixey appearing before the curtain at the end of the second act and addressing the scribes in his humourous fashion. Mr. William A. Brady, the producer of the play was present but did not speak from the stage. Following the performance of "The Naked Truth", Mr. Dixey was entertained at a mammoth banquet where prominent Montreal writers indulged in after dinner speeches.

EXAMINER'S RECORD THREE WATCHES IN TEN DAYS

Three gold watches recovered in ten days.

The Examiner's Want Ad. columns seem to be specializing on the finding of missing time pieces just now. The other day a lady lost a valuable watch, but fortunately knew the necessary step to take to recover it. She placed a small advertisement in the Examiner on Tuesday night, with the result that the watch was returned by another lady, who had found it on the street.

You should read the Examiner Want Ads. when you need their services, and above all do not fail to read that department of the paper every day.

MR. KITNEY'S HIGH OPINION OF ROOTS SHOWN AT NORWOOD

Mr. Charles Kitney, the well known wholesale market gardener, was judge of roots and vegetables at the Norwood exhibition on Wednesday. He told the Examiner on his return to the city that everything in this line was superb, second to none that could be ... Mr. Kitney is an expert, and knows what he is talking about. The Kerr District is noted for the splendid quality of its soil products. Last year Mr. Kitney was at the exhibition and took samples of wheat and grain, which he carried on a visit to England. The old country people were greatly surprised that so superior a quality of wheat could be grown in Canada.

ASSAULT CASE HEARD IN POLICE COURT TO-DAY

Defendant and Complainant Tell Different Stories of the Meeting of Percy Dalton and John Richardson---The Latter Objected to Being Called a Navigator or a "Navvy."

Percy Dalton, who was in the police court a few days ago, charged with assaulting an old man named John Richardson, and whose case was delayed on account of necessary witnesses being absent, appeared in court this morning. Mr. G. N. Gordon apeared for the defence, while Mr. E. D. Kerr acted for Mr. Richardson.

John C. Richardson told his story first. It was something like this: "On Sunday evening last I was going along Concession street on my way home, and on the opposite side of the street at a corner were four young men, among whom were Percy Dalton and the other witness, whose name I do not know (John Allan.) When I was about ten yards away, on the opposite side of the street, Dalton called out: "You old navigator, you old jackdaw." I said, "that is no conduct for Sunday night. I'll have protection one way or other." I went over to them then, and Dalton struck me twice in the face. The blow hurt my jaw and nose. I have been sick and hardly able to work ever since. Just then James Conroy came along and wanted me to go home, but I told him I had to go to the stable and attend to the horses. I then went and hitched up one of the horses and drove to the police station where I told my story to P. C. Adams. I do not drink and was not drunk at the time and gave the accused no reason to hit me. The boys have been annoying me for the past three months. As I live alone, they take advantage of me.

Mr. James Conroy was then called. His story was as follows: "I was going along Concession street and saw a few people standing on the corner. I heard some loud talk and saw Mr. Richardson, but thought nothing of it, as he is in the habit of chewing at the boys. He has a good set of lungs and gets easily excited, and when the boys start to annoy him he is pretty loud.

I saw a little scuffle on the corner and yelled for them to let the old man alone and let him go home. Then I went over and he (Richardson) told me if I would hold his coat he would lick any of them and wipe the street with them. However, I got him to come on home, as he has stated, and I went about my business."

John Allan, witness for the defence, then took the stand. He repeated a story pretty much as it had been told, only he understood Dalton to say, "Is that the navvy." Allan then went on to tell a story similar to Dalton's which follows.

Dalton the ntook the witness box to make his statement. He said: "I heard that Mr. Richardson got angry when he was called "navvy," and at the time I did not know his right name. I had only heard him spoken of as the navvy. When he came up, as he has already stated, I said pretty loud, "Is that the navvy?" He got up on his car all at once and ran over to us saying that he did not have to take that on a Sunday evening. He hit me three times and to save myself I struck him on the cheek, not by any means as hard as I could. Just then Mr. Conroy came along and everything resulted just as he has already told."

Mr. Conroy stated that he had heard that the boys annoyed the old man by throwing stones at his house and yelling at him and that he got greatly agitated at such times and made enough noise to wake all the people in East City.

All the witnesses were not present, so judgement was reserved until Monday next.

John Allan, the witness in the above case, was charged with standing on the path on Concession street and obstructing the way. He pleaded not guilty and his case was enlarged until Monday.

CATHOLIC CONFESSIONAL IS BASED ON SCRIPTURAL TEACHING

Power Was Given by Christ to His Apostles to Forgive Sins and that Power Has Been Transmitted Down to the Present---"Whose Sins You Shall Forgive They Are Forgiven" Says Holy Writ.

The "Catholic Confessional" was the subject last evening discussed by Rev. Father Gillis, the Paulist Father, who is delivering a course of lectures to men at St. Peter's Cathedral this week. A large number was in attendance, and followed with interest the remarks of the eloquent speaker. Taking as his text the twentieth chapter of St. John, where the Scriptures refer to the reappearance of the Saviour to His apostles, and to His saying "Receive ye the Holy Ghost," the preacher pointed out that the most conspicuous fact in human kind was the fact of sin. It was the blackest stain on humanity. Sin was the heaviest cross bearing down on man. It was the chief curse on the soul. It was the biggest problem that confronted any religion. No one could deny that Christ was not an orator, a prophet and a poet, but above all these He was the Saviour of mankind. The speaker, continuing, gave several instances of Christ forgiving sins. That was His chief occupation.

But Christ had gone from the earth. His life had been a short one, only thirty-three years. During this period He had gathered around Him a group of men from the commonest walks in life, and to them He explained the deeper mysteries of the Faith. These twelve men were to continue His work. Did Christ reserve to himself among these works alone the power to forgive sins? Certainly not. He said: "You may teach with my power for all power is given me by the Father—either to retain sins or to forgive them. Nobody can throw aside this teaching. We Catholics, at any rate, do not question our Lord's words. Those words are the justification of our faith. These twelve men were not super men, or demi gods, but just ordinary mortals like ourselves.

Some Protestants ask us how can a man forgive sins? Remember Peter, James and John and all of the apostles were only men. But even if the apostles had that power, Protestant will say it died with them. The question was "why did it die?" He gave them power to teach, preach, to baptize, and to administer the Lord's Supper, and why has that not died? Did He alone reserve the power to forgive sins? For the answer I refer you to the 21st verse of the 20th chapter of St. John "Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them. Whose sins ye shall retain they are retained."

From Christ's apostles down to the present time that power has been transmitted unbroken. That is the Catholic explanation of how priests can absolve from sin. We have the witness of Holy Writ. Whose sins ye forgive they shall be forgiven, and whose sins ye retain they shall be retained.

In a non-Catholic community one is often confronted with arguments against the Confessional. I would not have you fight on this or any other point in religion. The teaching of the church is to be charitable, but when questioned by Protestant friends, instance these quotations from the Scripture I have already cited.

Protestants tell us also that it was in 1215, at a meeting of Bishops in Rome that the institution of the confessional was ordered in place of the former custom of confessing privately with God. But that is a theory—a myth. Suppose, for example, that a body of Presbyterian ministers were to suddenly order the confessional to be adopted in their church, would there not be a tremendous outcry? Is not human nature the same now as in the thirteenth century, when they say this edict was first promulgated. Is not the very fact that it has survived through all the centuries proof positive that it is not of man, but of God?

In conclusion, he urged them to confess their sins in humility and reverence.

AT THE PRINCESS

Wizard Illusionists Prove a Strong Attraction

A vaudeville act of unusual merit and interest is being featured at the Princess theatre for the balance of this week. In Kalma and La Farlon, the wonderful illusionists, who come direct to the Princess from the Majestic theatre, Toronto. Manager Loftus has an attraction that is away above the average vaudeville offering. The marvellous feats of magic and illusion performed by these clever artists has earned them the name of the "wizards" and their performance never fails to please and mystify. Any person who appreciates a clean, clever act, should not fail to visit the Princess.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The following teams will meet each other in the Intermediate Novice Basketball League to-night. Hustlers vs. Petes and Joshers vs. Jolters. These are going to be pretty fast games. The gallery will be open for spectators. Come and see a good game of ball.

The Intermediate Bible Study Club will hold the opening session in the board room to-night at 7.30 sharp.

Entries for the "Howden and Eastwood" trophy contest should be in the hands of the Physical Director, J. J. Thompson, by Friday night.

Judging by the number of men who turned out last evening to the first meeting of the evening classes at the Y.M.C.A. quite a number of men have decided to spend their long winter evenings in study. Those who want to take up mechanical drawing were in the majority. This class promises to be the most successful, although the men who want matriculation work are in dead earnest about their classes.

The first session of the class in mechanical drawing will be held on the evening of Wednesday, October 19th, when the instruments will be on hand and the teacher will meet his class. This is the session to start in on, otherwise a man misses some very valuable information.

Much of the work of this class is hand to hand. The individual needs of each student is dealt with and the teacher helps the man through his own problems. The study of shop arithmetic will be combined with the drawing and they will both be given for the price of one. The cost of these lessons has been placed at the lowest possible price, so that any young man can take advantage of them.

The men who have not decided yet whether they will take up the course in matriculation had better get busy. The winter nights will be with us before we realize it and it may then be too late.

There will be a class in electricity taught by a competent man, the very thing for the young men who intend to follow up this line of work. Get your name in to the secretary at once so that the class can start.

A NEW DEPARTURE

By F. N. Burt Company, Limited—Formation of Pacific-Burt Company, Limited

An interesting development is taking place in connection with the business of F. N. Burt Company, Limited. What is known as the Pacific Coast territory in the United States, including the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, etc., has been considered by the Directors of the Burt Company a most attractive field, by reason of its extent and comparative freedom from competition in the special Burt Company lines. The Burt Company are specialists in the manufacture of small paper boxes in large quantities.

A charter has been applied for under the name of Pacific-Burt Company, Limited, and a new Company is being formed in which the F. N. Burt Company will have an interest, and which takes advantage of the management and organization of a company called the Pacific Manifolding Book Company, which has been operating in that territory for years.

The Directorate of the Pacific-Burt Company will include Mr. S. J. Moore, President of the F. N. Burt Company, Mr. A. E. Ames, Vice-President, Mr. F. N. Burt, Managing Director, and Mr. James Ryrie, a Director of the same Company.

It is said that securities of the Pacific-Burt Company, Limited, will be offered to the public, commencing next Monday morning, by A. E. Ames & Co., Limited.

WEDDING BELLS

WATTS—TEDFORD.

On Wednesday evening, Sept. 28, a very pleasant event took place at the home of Mrs. Richard Tedford, Sr., "Cherry Grove Farm," lot 7, concession 1, Dummer, when her daughter, Annie, was united in marriage to Mr. Clarence G. Watts, of Warsaw, in the presence of only the near relatives of the bride and groom. At 7.30 o'clock the bridal couple entered the drawing room to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. Richard Tedford, Jr., sister-in-law of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Brown, of Warsaw. The couple were unattended, the bride looking charming in a dress of cream silk, trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion, and wearing the customary veil and orange blossoms. After congratulations and good wishes the guests entered the dining room, which was tastefully decorated with flowers and evergreens, where a wedding supper was provided. After all had done ample justice to the good things the evening was spent in music and gramaphone selections by Mr. Richard Tedford, brother of the bride.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Tedford and family of Warsaw; Mr. and Mrs. William Tedford, Bellview Farm, Douro; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Calvert and family of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Jos. T. McNeely, Trent Bridge; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tedford and family of Dummer; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon W. Payne, Douro; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tedford, Jr., of the homestead, Dummer, and Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Watts, Warsaw; Mrs. and Miss Fawcett, Indian River, and Miss I. W. Stevenson, Lakehurst. The presents were both numerous and costly, showing the high esteem the bride and groom were held in by their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Watts will reside at Warsaw.

PEARSON—OUGH.

A very pretty autumn wedding took place on Wednesday, Oct. 12 in Port Hope of a popular young Peterborough lady, at the home of Mrs. Harry Keelar, of Sherbourne street, when Cora Victoria Ough was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Joffrey Pearson, of Peterborough. The bride, who was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. H. Keelar, looked charming in a dress of white silk mull. After the ceremony the guests partook of a dainty wedding breakfast, after which the young couple left for their new home on the 4.30 train. The bride travelled in a pretty costume of grey broadcloth, with hat to match, and a Marabou stole. On the arrival at Peterborough an informal reception was held at Mrs. Roberts, Bethune street of the young friends of Mrs. Pearson.

The many costly presents which were received, among which was a cheque from the bride's mother and Mr. Pearson, showed the high esteem in which the bride is held. Mr. and Mrs. Pearson will receive at their new home, 187 Antrim street, on November 3rd, afternoon and evening.

AN APPEAL TO REASON

TWELVE months ago, after prolonged investigation and experiment, we pinned our faith to the Knight motor as the greatest improvement of the decade in automobile construction.

Many believed us, bought cars and are to-day congratulating themselves on their judgment.

There were croakers then, perhaps there are to-day, but we hear less of them.

THEY SAID—The engine was an experiment forgetting that it had stood the greatest engine test on record before the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland.

THEY SAID It will not stand up on Canadian roads; although they knew a challenge of $1,250 was open to anyone who wished to measure his motor against the Knight for reliability.

THEY SAID That it would not be taken up in Europe, and that the Daimler Company were about to discard it. We knew at the time and anyone can verify it now that the leading concerns of six of the countries of Europe have adopted the Knight motor.

THEY SAID—No one in the United States would take it up. We know that over twenty of the largest concerns in the United States have from time to time applied for consideration in the American rights. And we know to-day that leading United States firms will announce 1912 models with Knight motors in another twelve months despite the fact that the agents of some of these concerns profess great skepticism about the Knight motor to-day.

We seldom refer to or bother about the suggestions of interested opponents. We want, however, to repeat our conviction, formed a year ago, and confirmed by twelve months' of experience in the factory, on the road, and in the users hands:

That the Knight motor far surpasses the old valve type, and that it is only a question of time before it entirely supersedes it in all high-grade cars. Get a car that will be up-to-date the longest.

Our 1911 model is out, but our 1910 users can smile, for their car is up-to-date still. 1912 is only a refinement in details on 1910.

The same motor. The same body lines, with high front doors, now pretty universally copied.

Is not this the type of car to buy?

TO SEND FOOD BY RIVER

Paris Markets Which Are Already Hard Hit, Will Be Supplied by Way of the Seine—Strikers Ignore the Call to the Colors, and Declare That They Will Not Respond to Government's Summons.

Paris, Oct. 13 The strike of the railroad men, which threatens to spread throughout the length and breadth of France, was denounced yesterday by Premier Briand as "an insurrection purely, built upon criminal foundations."

The Premier declared that the strike was called while negotiations were going on through himself and the Minister of Public Works, for an adjustment of grievances, and he promised that the instigators of the strike would be criminally prosecuted.

The River Seine, which in January threatened to destroy Paris, now looms up in the role of a savior. The Government has made arrangements to rush food supplies to Paris from the sea, requisitioning all tugs, boats and barges to meet the crisis, brought about by the stoppage of the railway service, and ease the food market shortage, which is already hard hit.

The employes of the Eastern and the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean railways have not yet, to any appreciable extent, responded to the leaders' call to strike, and the Government's weapon of mobilization has induced some of those employed on the northern road to return to their posts. Nevertheless, the Northern and Western railways are prostrated. The call to the colors has been ignored by the large majority, and at mass meetings held yesterday the strikers reiterated their determination not to respond to the call.

Much destruction has been wrought on the western system, where the strikers and their supporters have held up and derailed trains, blocked tracks, destroyed signals, ripped up tracks and destroyed telephone and telegraph wires. The Government has ordered the arrest of a score of strike leaders, and instructions have been issued to the troops to use severe measures wherever occasion offers.

WERE CANADIANS GRASPING?

International Falls, Minn., Oct. 13.—Sheriff Rutledge declares the worst outlaws of the whole scenes following the fire is the attitude of Canadians at Rainy River. He says the King Edward Hotel will not permit refugees to sit down in the hotel, charges them $2 for a bed, 50 cents for a sandwich, and that he paid $1 for two soft drinks at the bar, while making an investigation. He says other prices are in proportion, and that not one of the Rainy River citizens has helped in the work at Beaudette or Spooner of seeking out the dead or burning animals

Governor Eberhart of Minnesota and staff arrived here yesterday morning. Despite the early hour, the governor at once left his car, and looked over the situation, finding less than sixty refugees quartered here, and he ordered that they be at once sent to Duluth and Bemidji. For the stock, which had been saved by the settlers, he ordered three carloads of hay and a car of oats, and they are expected to arrive to-night from Bemidji.

"Everything is in good shape at International Falls," said the governor. "The people do not need soldiers, neither do they need nurses, nor supplies, for there is no danger now. Those who have arrived here from the burned districts and need medical attention will at once be sent to places where they can receive the best attention. The town is well patrolled, and the authorities have the situation in hand."

Twenty-six typhoid fever patients found here during the night are being sent to Duluth. It is the belief of doctors here that the disease was contracted in dirty camps beyond the city. The militia have been forbidden to drink water of any description, and the citizens are warned not to do so. Health officials are now en route from Duluth and will analyze the water.

One merchant who fled panic-stricken to Rainy River on Saturday morning, telling of having seen the flames, did not in reality see one, and there are many others who have spread similar reports without having been anywhere near the fire. Search parties are being sent out under militiamen, and efforts to obtain a true statement of the number of dead are being made through various sources.

There is no wind to-day, and throughout the burned country the authorities have the fires well under control, and nothing is to be feared unless a windstorm arises.

George Watts, chief fire ranger at Port Frances, who was sent to Rainy River by the Ontario Government to report on the fire situation, wired on Tuesday that the town of Rainy River was not yet out of danger. Financial loss would be serious, but there had been no less of life on the Canadian side. He estimated the number of those who had lost their lives on the United States side at 100.

Aubrey White, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, holds the opinion that the reports of losses on this side are exaggerated. Most of the valuable timber in that country has been cut over, and only the small stuff has been burned.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure

This recipe makes 16 ounces of rough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix 2 cups of granulated sugar with with one cup of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guiaicol and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this recipe have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

WEEDMARK TO HANG

Sordid Tragedy at Smith's Falls Is Rehearsed In Court and Judge Finding No Extenuation For Crime Imposes Maximum Penalty—Daughter Saw Her Mother Being Choked to Death.

Perth, Oct. 13.—After being out three-quarters of an hour the jury yesterday afternoon found Rufus Weedmark of Smith's Falls guilty of the murder of his wife Kate, in their home on the morning of April 30. Chancellor Boyd thereupon sentenced Weedmark to be hanged on Dec. 14.

When the prisoner was arraigned yesterday morning he pleaded guilty, but his counsel, C. J. Foy, insisted on a plea of not guilty.

Dr. Stammers swore Weedmark stated to him on the fatal morning, just after he had choken his wife to death by the throat and nose: "I did it, doc; didn't I make a good job of it, doc, eh? She would not send him down any more, her mother and other neighbors talking lies about him." Witness found marks on the throat and windpipe.

Alex. McLaughlin recounted how he had heard Weedmark and his wife quarreling. "Weedmark started to assail her," said McLaughlin, "and I told him he was a coward to strike a woman. He then desisted. Weedmark did not appear to have been under the influence of liquor."

Evelyn Weedmark, a daughter of the prisoner, is 14 years of age; she gave her evidence in a clear voice, though her manner was naturally subdued.

"During the night, about 4 o'clock," she said, "I heard my mother screaming and ran downstairs. Father was holding her by the throat and had his hand over her nose."

"Did you try to do anything?"

"Yes, I tried to pull him off, but he told me to stop."

"What did you do then?"

"I ran out side and yelled."

In reply to Mr. Foy, she said that her father had been drinking, but he was not "good and drunk." Her father had accused her mother of having been bad with Amos Allan.

Mrs. Gilligan, James Handyside, Florence Dowdall and W. H. Code swore that Weedmark had told them he had killed his wife, and boasted he had make a good job of it.

Rufus Weedmark was called on his own behalf. He was twice married. His first wife died 14 months after marriage, and he had been married to his second wife about twenty years. He impugned his second wife's chastity, and stated she was running with other men within 24 hours after their marriage, but admitted this did not cause him to murder her. She had been a good wife to him for fifteen years. On the night of the tragedy he was drunk, having drunk in a few hours about three pints and a half. His wife was drunk that evening, too.

When he came home that evening his wife asked him to go and get whisky for her, but he refused, he swore, as he was drunk. Then he says she cursed him. Both continued wrangling, and witness told his wife if she didn't go away and leave him alone he would slap her mouth. Later both had several drinks and they fell asleep downstairs. About 2.30 he ordered his children to bed, and asked his wife for a drink of water. She replied to him, "Go to ——— and get it." He got the water, but stated in reply: "You are pretty stiff." With that Weedmark swears his wife threw a galvanized tenpot at him, bruising him on the shoulder.

"Then I grabbed her on the floor and choked her," said Weedmark. "I lost my head altogether, and didn't realize it until Evelyn stood in the door and said: 'Pa, you are killing ma.' I then went over to Mrs. Gilligan's and said I had killed Kate. When I killed her I was drunk. She made me mad by throwing the teapot at me. I was angry at her for sending me to the Central Prison last year. I never intended to kill her, and I am sorry for myself and little children."

On the resumption of the trial after intermission for lunch, Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of prisons, said he visited the Perth Jail on May 11, 11 days after the tragedy. "I made a careful mental, as well as physical, examination of the prisoner," said the doctor. "On the left chest I saw a coffee brown stain. I asked him what had done that, and he said it was the result of his wife having thrown a teapot at him."

"When you examined the prisoner," said A. E. DuVernet, prosecuting counsel, "did you find him to be a strong, well-developed man?"

"Yes," said Dr. Smith. "He was in excellent condition, both physically and mentally."

Charles Edwards, the chief of police of Smith's Falls, said that the prisoner, when arrested, spoke quite rationally.

Dr. Stammers said that when he was called in after the commission of the crime, about half an hour later, the prisoner appeared to be perfectly sober.

HAD TALK WITH FALLON

French-Canadian Press Publishes Ontario Provincial Secretary's Description of an Interview With the Bishop of London—Mgr. Fallon Charges a Conspiracy on the Part of Certain Politicians.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—Le Devoir and a number of French-Canadian papers throughout the province of Quebec are giving considerable prominence to an article by Michel Renouf, recently published at Quebec, dealing with correspondence between Hon. Mr. Hanna and Hon Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, regarding bilingual schools in Ontario, and the part taken by Mgr. Fallon in that regard. The article strongly attacks Mgr. Fallon, and professes to expose his protestations of amity to the French race and language in Canada.

In opening, Mr. Renouf quotes a declaration of Bishop Fallon at London last September, in which he takes exception to articles published in various papers to the effect that he was opposed to the French-Canadians, and declares that he is as friendly to them and as careful of their needs as of any people in his diocese, and categorically declares that he has never made any statement whatever regarding the teaching of French or any other language in the schools of his diocese, separate or otherwise.

Bishop Fallon further stated that he has not the slightest objection to the teaching of French or any other language conformable to the laws of the province and the rules of the Education Department. He therefore declares that the whole agitation was not only without foundation, but supremely unjust to him.

The letter says in part,—

"Dear Dr. Pyne,—Yesterday afternoon Rev. Father Kennedy (Cure of Sarnia) telephoned me asking myself and Mrs. Hanna to go to meet Mgr. Fallon, Bishop of London, who was to officiate here on the occasion of his first visit to this part of his diocese. After some conversation Bishop Fallon expressed the desire to see me particularly with regard to a matter of great importance to this part of the province, which concerned the whole question of bilingual teaching in the schools. He has resolved, so far as it is in his power, to cause to disappear every trace of bilingual teaching in the public schools of his diocese. The interests of the children, boys and girls, demand that bilingual teaching should be disapproved and prohibited."

"I observed to his grace that, according to my views, in districts where the French-Canadians were numerous and spoke French it was believed that the master of such a school would succeed better and would be able with better advantage to conduct the children to the use of English by speaking French.

"To this he replied that it was a mistake, and if it was thus in theory it was never put honestly into practice; that the argument in favor of having a French master in French-speaking districts was the argument of clerical or political agitators, and, shaking his arm and fist towards me, he said: 'I will engage myself to look after the clerical agitator, but I cannot control the political agitator, if it is in the sphere of politics, without the aid of others.'

"He proceed to say that the politicians and the French-Canadian political agitators did not fail to say that the French-Canadians controlled 15 or 17 counties of Ontario. He replied that the French-Canadians did not control anything of the kind, that they had worked for ten years under falsified or stuffed census lists as in the province of Quebec, always with one end, their single aim being to secure control of church and state, and that instead of being crushed or choked off, they would dominate in both.

"That in order to make the Government take the attitude which is believed to be the desire of the great majority of the Catholic Church in this province, the bishops had recently met and had formulated resolutions, and that soon a deputation representing this episcopal gathering would go to the Government and submit their views. That they were resolved to put this question as one which outranked all others in so far as it concerned them and their subordinates. That up to now they had let it go, but had lost much ground by their silence.

"Throughout his attitude was not that of an enemy, but we must not deceive ourselves. He is an extremely energetic man, and has this question very much at heart, and whatever comes of the matter he will either give it all his support or all his opposition in his diocese.

"I suppose that you and Sir James Whitney will be glad to know how much this question is taken to heart by the bishop, and, therefore, I am sending a copy of this letter to Sir James. Sincerely yours,

"W. J. Hanna."

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

OF course the Pandora Range is a few dollars more than an ordinary range. But it will soon pay for itself in the fuel it will save for you.

The Pandora Flue System and Wide Fire Box, designed by our brainy stove experts, save about half a ton of coal per year, because they supply more air than the flue systems and fire boxes of ordinary ranges, causing better combustion of fuel.

The Steel Oven saves some more fuel, because it heats up more rapidly than a cast iron oven. The heavy Fire Clay Coating on the main bottom of range prevents any heat wasting towards the floor. It drives the heat back into the oven, and thus saves still more fuel.

But the big economizing feature is this: The draft for cooking on top of the range is also the draft for baking in the oven. The heat does double duty and your fuel bill is largely reduced.

Get the Pandora---the range that pays for itself. No other range is high-class enough for you.

Contestants are required to fill out the blanks in connection with whichever race they desire to enter and send in this coupon to the sporting editor of the Peterboro Examiner as soon as possible.

MORE ENTRIES FOR THE EXAMINER ROAD RACES

Another new entry came along for the Examiner's senior Thanksgiving Day Road Race yesterday, and as a result the fans have another dark-horse to contend with in attempting to pick the winner. Charles Brimble, 103 Westcott street, is the latest entrant in the big race. He is a dark-horse in the truest sense of the word as nothing is known about his form here at all. His name may be more familiar after the big race is over. There will be at least one Indian runner in the senior event. Billy Smoke of Alderville, who was third in the three-mile race at Norwood yesterday, stated that he would be along for the Thanksgiving Day event. He is bigger and heavier than his Chemong namesake, who cleaned up last year, and should make a good showing. He is just rounding into shape, and, with a couple of weeks' hard training under his belt, will have to be looked out for. Edwards of Keene who won the junior event last year, will also be on hand, but it is not known whether he will start in the junior or senior event.

Willie Downer, 496 Parnell street.
Cecil Armstrong, 480 Sherbrooke St.
John Downer, 496 Parnell St.
Mr. Williams, 339 Burnham St.
Leroy Chambers, 264 Reid St.
Tom Ball, 413 Sheridan St.
Bert Lipsett, Hunter St., East.
Norman Graham, 122 London St.

Dick Sheehy Making Hit With Ottawa College Rugby Team

Examiner Special.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—"Dick" Sheehy, son of Mr. Richard Sheehy, a well known contractor of Peterborough, is at present the idol of all the football enthusiasts in this city. The dark-haired boy surpassed the expectations of his host of friends by his clever running, punting and manipulation of the pigskin in the College-Queen's game last Saturday. Although a new recruit, "Dick" displayed the grid-iron brains of a veteran, jumping into the game in the last quarter, he infused confidence into his fellow-players and by his long, low drives was instrumental in scoring College's only point.

"Dick" will accompany the College team to Toronto on Friday, and no doubt a number of his Peterborough friends will be at the station to see him, when the train passes through here at 5 o'clock, p.m.

Some Requests For Street Lighting Cannot Be Granted

The City Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night, Chairman Aldermam Morgan presiding. There were also present, Mayor Morrow, Aldermen Graham, Batten, Metheral and Butler.

A report was read from Fire Chief Howard, stating that the Bell Telephone Co., had installed the power for the fire alarm and recommended its acceptance from July 1st, 1910, and suggested that the battery supplies not needed be disposed of.

The chairman was authorized to sell any of the supplies that were not necessary.

Ald. Metheral moved, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the light at the corner of Smith and Concession Streets, be moved to the south-west corner and that an incandescent lamp be placed on Brock street between George and Aylmer streets.

Mr. Herbert Fife, of the Peterborough Light and Power Company was present and the account for street lighting was satisfactorily adjusted. A deduction of $21.40 was made from the company's bill for lights that were not burning during contract hours.

Ald. Metheral moved, seconded by Ald. Batten, that the order for a light on Maitland avenue, and one on Pearl avenue, be cancelled. It is understood that the residents on these streets do not want these lights. Residents petitioned for an arc lamp on corner of Maitland avenue and John street. This matter was left in abeyance. Citizens asked for an arc lamp at the corner of Maria and Burnham streets, Ashburnham. This matter was left in abeyance.

His Worship here offered that this committee was already overdrawn and he wanted all expenditure that was not imperative to be avoided. Citizens on Lansdowne street asked for lights.

Ald. Butler suggested that as this street and others asking for street lighting were on the boundary line, arrangements should be made with adjoining townships for their assuming a share of the cost of street lighting in such localities. This will be looked into.

Ald. Morgan here enquired if firemen who had quitted the brigade after one year's service and signed with the brigade again a year later, should be entitled to first or third year pay. There seems to be one instance in which a fireman is drawing third year pay under the foregoing conditions. No action was taken in this matter.

The mayor moved, seconded by Ald. Butler, that the clerk notify the Water Commissioners that the water was shut off on Sunday, and the fire department not notified. Also to request a reason for such action.—Carried.

THE SERVICES AT PARK STREET CHURCH

The subject of Dr. Luttrell's address last night at the Park street Baptist church was "The Personality of the Holy Spirit." It was a most instructive message and full of vital importance to those who have slighted the third person of the Blessed Trinity. The text was taken from Ephesians, 4:30, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit."

A man would not think of wilfully grieving his mother, although many do it, and the Holy Spirit might be called the mother-God, and it is possible for us to grieve Him by our actions. He is a person, not a thing. You grieve Him by refusing to testify for Him.

You grieve Him by speaking and gossiping about God's children.

You grieve Him by scorning, with your religious pride, the poor fellow who is down and out.

You grieve Him, by refusing to accept Christ as your Saviour, and you are sorry for it afterwards. I often grieved my mother by my drunken carousals and folly, but thank God from her dying lips I received her forgiveness, ere she went to be with the angels.

A man in his sober senses will not grieve his mother, but when he is drunk, he has no sense, no shame, no honour. Oh, the cursed stuff. It made me send many a dagger into my mother's heart. There is something about the Holy Spirit that cures even the most vilest of sinners.

A man will swear by God. A man will swear by Jesus Christ, but who ever heard a man swear by the Holy Spirit. A sin against God will be forgiven, a sin against Jesus Christ will be forgiven, but we read that a sin against the Holy Ghost will not be forgiven, neither in this world nor in the next. The Holy Spirit seals us unto the day of redemption. God don't save men on the instalment plan. He does a complete work.

Quite a number came out at the close of the meeting for Christ. Mr. Mahlican will sing at to-night's service, at 8 p.m.

Another mass meeting for men will be held next Sunday at 3 p.m. The George street male quartette will sing. All men made welcome. Come to-night.

Acomia

Many Men Have It and Most of Them Worry About It.

ACOMIA—it's a magic word, what does it mean? Simply absence of hair.

A baldheaded man has ACOMIA—absence of hair.

A million more men will have ACOMIA a year from now if they do not get rid of disgusting dandruff.

Dandruff is caused by a germ. This germ is a persistent sort of germ. He works while you sleep and when you awake. He breakfasts, dines and supps on the vitality stored in the hair roots, and the longer you tolerate his presence the surer you are of displaying a shiney headpiece later on.

Kill the dandruff germ; that's the only way to keep from growing bald. Any capable doctor will tell you so.

How can you be sure that you are killing the dandruff germs? Simply by using daily for two weeks Parisian Sage, the most pleasant tonic for the hair the world has ever known.

Parisian Sage is the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing in the world. It is not sticky or greasy. It will make women's hair soft, silky and luxuriant in a few days. The girl with the auburn hair is on every bottle. Fifty cents a large bottle at druggists everywhere and at Wm. Madill's, who guarantees it. Mail orders filled, all charges prepaid, by the Canadian bankers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

NOT FROM HERE

Kingston, Oct 12—Robert Wardell, an inmate of the penitentiary, died on Monday evening. Deceased was sentenced at Peterborough to three years for arson. He arrived last ... and had been in the institution hospital most of the time suffering from rheumatism. He was the oldest prisoner who ever entered, being over 83 years when he commenced his term.

Deputy Sheriff Hall stated to the Examiner this afternoon that there had been no such prisoner committed from Peterborough to the Penitentiary.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE CONCLUDES SESSIONS

Feature of Last Meeting Was Address by Mr. J. Lovell Murray, of New York

The last session of the Missionary Institute was held in St. Paul's church last evening. There was a very large attendance. Rev. H. J. Keith, of Knox church, was the chairman. The proceedings opened with a hymn. At its conclusion Rev. H. J. Keith made a short speech, in which he introduced Rev. H. J. Lovell Murray, of New York, students' secretary of the Volunteer Movement in North America. The speaker commenced by saying that it seemed a strange thing that this was the first generation that had ever tried to make the nati... J... Christ known to humanity at large by the Missionary Movement. Some asked the questions, What lies behind this movement with its thousands now in the mission field? What is back of the Young People's Missionary Movement? What lies back of the Young Women's Missionary Movement? There are many answers to these questions, but the real basis of the enterprise lies in the character of God, and its foundation is in His personality. Some tell us that the real basis is to be found in the character of the church we belong to, and some again, that it is in the teachings of our Saviour, and this, indeed, is the true basis. Think of what that teaching is! Remember the terms He used when He spoke, and see if you find that it was only intended for one section of the human family. Some have said, "If my faith is false, I am bound to change it, and if it is true, I am bound to propagate it." The religion of Jesus Christ, looked at from even a purely commercial aspect, benefits commerce and nations generally. To be a missionary is the most difficult enterprise a man can undertake. Napoleon said of China, "There lies a giant, let him sleep." But China is now awakening and beginning to realize its power, and when it fully awakens, what will it do? The world is waiting for the answer. Now is the time for our work to be pushed forward. Soon it will be too late. Corea is probably the first non-Christian country to be evangelized. This will probably be completed in the next 25 years. In Africa, Madagascar, India and in China, the spiritual tide is rising. The struggle between paganism and Christianity is now on, and the crisis is approaching. These nations are desperately in need of Christ. Writers have said that the Christian religion is not fitted to the eastern mind. Commander Peary has also said that the Esquimaux should be left as they are. But if Christ is not for China, He is certainly not for America or Canada. But we are not prepared to accept such a conclusion. Either Jesus is the world's to-night, or he is not.

Look at idolaters, worshipping sticks, stone images and departed spirits. Shall demonology ... the world? Speak of Buddhism as a religion and as the light of Asia! Why it is absolute darkness. Then Mahommedanism, what's that? It is no religion at all. A Mahomedan will barter his children born or unborn. Then Hinduism, what of that? It is no better than the others. Does not what I have said go to show the essential need of missionaries?

The government has forbidden the sacrificing of children to the Ganges, and the horrible rites of Suttee, but those widows are living in bitterness. Things are still being carried on in the name of religion, which are too revolting to mention. A man just returned from the east, was asked what impressed him most whilst there, and he answered, "the multitude of people and their sad need of the gospel."

MISSING SON IS HEARD FROM AFTER A SILENCE LASTING THREE YEARS

After hoping and fearing for three long years, Mrs. Thomas Duggan, 730 Bethune street, has been made the happy recipient of a letter from her son, Mr. Anston Duggan from Seattle, who left his home in this city, about five years ago for the west, and from whom no communication has been received for the past three years. Mr. and Mrs. Duggan advertised for the missing boy and made enquiries at Leicester, Washington, the last place where he had been heard of, but all to no avail, and last Monday, when Mrs. Duggan received the letter, the happy surprise it contained to her, can not easily be expressed.

Mr. Duggan was twenty-four years of age on Monday. He spent the letter on his birthday. Before he left the city he had a host of friends, to whom the intimation will be a source of relief. Whether he had written before, he did not say, but if he did it failed to reach the right destination. He did not say whether he would come home soon, but desired an early reply. His parents had written to Seattle before, but circumstances point to the fact that he had left there some time ago and had only returned.

M'CORMICK'S EMPLOYEES ARE HIGHLY PLEASED

Reduction in Hours of Work is Very Popular

A very enthusiastic meeting of the employees of the McCormick Manufacturing Company, was held last evening at 5:30, Mr. Thomas Duff being in the chair.

The meeting was called in order to express to the firm in some way the appreciation of the employees at the recent reduction of hours in work and other changes that have been inaugurated of late for their comfort and benefit.

After a thorough discussion, in which it was pointed out that one firm in the city had already followed the example of the firm, the hope was expressed that other manufacturers would all fall in line.

A committee was appointed to draw up a suitable resolution and have it engrossed and framed and presented to the firm.

ELLIOT'S

The Reason Why Taffeta Silk Shrinks.

There was a demand for cheap silk that would rustle, a silk that would almost stand alone. A rich gros grain silk would do this. But it is quite expensive as it takes so much silk to make this quality.

After much experimenting and many trials it was discovered, that if they used a light silk thread and "loaded" the woven fabric with very finely ground glass, the finished article would have the desired rustle and stiffness and when the silk was ready for the market it could be sold for just a fraction of the price the solid silk would cost. They did this and called it taffeta. When the taffeta is very heavily loaded with the glass varying humidity and temperature causing expansion and contraction of the silk is the reason why silk cuts when simply hanging up. Also the friction of wear will cause it to cut. When the silk is flimsy it hasn't so much glass in it and it won't cut so quickly.

In our waist section we are showing all the newest designs in dressy waists for Fall in all the new silks and warm fabrics.

STRUCK FLOATING WRECKAGE

St. Pierre, Miq., Oct. 14.—Seven men, including the captain, are missing, following the loss of the fishing schooner St. Pairaise of Granville, France, 25 miles off St. Pierre.

News of the wreck became known yesterday when the thirteen survivors reached Miquelon Island. The St. Pairaise was coming to Miquelon from the Grand Banks. When about twenty-five miles off St. Pierre on Tuesday night she struck some floating wreckage. A great hole was torn in the vessel, and she sank quickly. The thirteen men who escaped were able to launch their dories, but, after the waters had closed over their vessel, they could see no sign of their captain or six comrades, and it is believed they were drowned.

The survivors headed for Miquelon, but it took thirty-six hours of steady rowing to reach the island, and when they finally set foot on shore, they were nearly exhausted from cold and exposure.

DISCLAIMS THE BLAME

Provincial Secretary Says Letter Published In French Papers Did Not Emanate From His Office—Mgr. Fallon Is Preparing a Reply to His Assailants Which He Says Will Surprise Them.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—The publication of the translation of a memorandum of a conversation, which Hon. W. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, had with Mgr. M. F. Fallon, Bishop of London, in Sarnia on May 22 last, brought a vigorous statement from the ecclesiastic.

Hon. Mr. Hanna sent the following telegram to the bishop on Wednesday night: "Publication in Quebec press of memo prepared by me for Dr. Pyne and Sir James after my discussion with you last summer, amazes me. Am investigating and shall write you fully later. It did not get out from my office."

Yesterday morning the following interview was secured from Mgr. Fallon, who was at St. Augustine, Ont.:

"I stand by and reiterate every word of the statement I made on the 22nd of September, the only statement which I authorized to have published. On that occasion I stated that the assertions made in the public press that I am unfriendly to the French-Canadian people are false and malicious. I stand by that statement again to-day and reiterate every word of it, notwithstanding the publication of an interview that may have been had with me and the saying that I am opposed to the teaching of French or any other language in the separate or any other schools in my diocese."

"The Provincial Secretary did have an interview with me, some four and a half months ago. It took place at Sarnia, and this is how it was brought about. Rev. Father Kennedy, one of the pastors there, told me that Mr. Hanna was in town, and he asked me if he might request Mr. Hanna to call on me. I told him I would be pleased to have the Provincial Secretary call, and from what Mr. Hanna told me he was equally pleased to see me. At least he told me so.

"The conversation we had lasted about half an hour and the school topic took up most of the time. What transpired between us was by no means confidential, but it was not meant for publication. Whenever I want anything published I am quite capable of looking after it myself."

His lordship is taking the matter seriously, and is preparing a statement which he will issue in a few days. He promises something of a sensation, for he says, "I might add that the reply will prove quite a surprise to some people, and will act considerably like a bomb. Pending the reply I might state that there is no hostility, but in the contrary there is absolute friendliness to the French-Canadian people, their language and their interests in my opposition to the bi-lingual school system and its results in my diocese."

From the tenor of his remarks it appears that Mgr. Fallon jumped at the conclusion that the memorandum was given out by Mr. Hanna. "Politics are politics," he said, "and when one is in the game one has to use the methods. I'm not in the game, so when I have anything to say I hit straight out."

"The letter was written by the Provincial Secretary to Dr. Pyne. Whether the giving out of it was a piece of office robbery or of political treachery I don't know, but I will deal with it when I make the statement I am going to make at an early date, giving the facts to show the condition of public education under the bilingual system in the County of Essex and other parts of my diocese."

As to his attitude indicated by the text of the letter, the bishop said: "I don't care what Mr. Hanna says, I am not being fooled. I know what I said to Mr. Hanna, and the opinions I expressed to him then do not in any way conflict with the statement I authorized to be made public. I'll attend to Mr. Hanna when I get the time."

French Teachers Scarce.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Le Temps yesterday published another anti-Fallon story. It reproduces the text of a long resolution passed at the recent meeting of the Canadian Education Association here, when the bilingual school was discussed. This resolution, according to Le Temps, took up the denial of Bishop Fallon that he was adverse to the French language.

The resolution, after citing sworn documents about the bishop's utterances at Windsor, went on to say that, in view of these sworn documents as to the bishop's anti-French utterances, it could not accept his denial.

It is stated that owing to the scarcity of qualified teachers some of the French separate schools in Ottawa will be ordered closed by the Department of Education within a few weeks.

Excoriated Teddy.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Vice-President Sherman was the guest of honor at the Columbus Day celebration in Chicago, and at the banquet Wednesday night made a speech excoriating "men who bluster and flaunt honesty." Sherman's speech was aimed at Roosevelt, but the vice-president refrained from mentioning the lion hunter's name.

Young Lad Missing.

St. Catharines, Oct. 14.—The police of the district are baffled over the disappearance of David, the 12-year-old son of David Ryan of Merritton, three weeks ago, since which time no trace has been seen of him. The lad, who is of dark complexion, has a scar on the left side of his face.

SIX WERE KILLED

Three Men, Two Children and a Woman Are Discovered to Have Perished In Burning Building Long After Fire Started—One of Them Died With His Two Little Children In His Arms.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—Six persons, three men, a woman and two children, lost their lives in the disastrous fire that early yesterday morning completely gutted the King's Hall building on West St. Catharine street. That anyone had perished was not known until nearly noon, ten hours after the fire had started, when the checking over of a list of persons supposed to have been in the building during the night resulted in the discovery that six were missing.

At 1:30 the firemen working in the debris on the top floor of the building found the first positive evidence of the tragedy. In a small room near the front wall of the building the body of Frank Withall, 33 years of age, night watchman of the building, was found. In his arms were his two children one, a little girl of four years of age and the other a little boy of a year and a half. Thirty feet away from the father and the two children the searchers presently found the body of the mother, a young woman 30 years of age. Her hands and feet were badly burned, but death, as in the case of her husband and two children, had evidently been the result of asphyxiation.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon a fifth victim was found, Charles Thessier, a man 52 years of age. The body was found in a passage way outside his bedroom door on the top flat. It looked as if he was returning to his room to dress, preparatory to making his way to the fire escape leading to the roof. Thessier was manager of the King's Hall billiard and pool room and had come here from Boston only about a month ago, to take charge of the rooms for the United States firm of Billiard, Limited. It is said that he was once amateur billiard champion of the United States at 14-inch balk line billiards, and had also held the professional championship of New England.

The last victim was found about 6.30 o'clock in the evening. He was Harold Richards, 50 years of age, assistant manager of the King's Hall billiard and pool room. The body was found, not on the top floor, as in the case of the five other victims, but on the third floor of the building, in a bedroom that he occupied.

During the progress of the fire several firemen sustained severe injuries, and some of them were taken to hospitals. They include: Patrick Reilly, arm broken and bruised; William Daniel, burns and bruises; —Beauchemen, internal injuries; J. Saunderson, overcome by smoke.

Two men, Edgar Coats, elevator man, and John Jones, colored, attendant at King's Hall billiard room, had a thrilling escape. They were asleep in the fourth storey of the building, when awakened by the danger. They fled to the roof of the building, where, enveloped in great clouds of smoke, and surrounded by flames, in the very midst of a roaring inferno of fire, they remained for 15 minutes. They were rescued by Sub-Chief Mann.

Dr. H. P. Adams, a dentist, whose office and living quarters were in the building, saved himself by getting out of the third storey window with a rope.

The Hamilton departmental store was threatened, but was very little damaged.

Twenty-five business concerns, agencies, dentists, dressmakers, etc., shared in the losses. The ground floor was occupied by the uptown branch of the Eastern Townships Bank and the Knit-to-Fit retail stores.

Let Himself Down by Sheets.

Galt, Oct. 14.—As the result of a fire which occurred at his home on Blenheim road at an early hour yesterday morning, John Egerton is homeless, without furniture or other effects, but thankful that he escaped with his life.

Mr. Egerton was awakened at 2 o'clock by the noise of something falling, only to find the house on fire, the noise being the plaster falling from the ceiling in the room below. When he opened the door of his room smoke poured in and he could see that the staircase was burning.

Realizing that prompt action was all that would save him, Mr. Egerton took the sheets from the bed and tying them together and one end to the children's cradle, let himself down to the ground through the window at the front of the house, clad only in shirt and shoes, and nearly smothered. The house is a total loss. It was valued at $5,000, no insurance.

The catastrophe might have been worse but for the fact that Egerton's wife and two daughters spent the night at the home of her father, John Clelland of Rockton, having gone there to attend the fair.

The Italian Cholera Epidemic.

Rome, Oct. 14.—Twenty-three new cases of cholera during the past 24 hours have been officially reported, one in the Province of Bari, seven in the Province of Caserta, one in the Province of Foggia, 13 in the province of Naples, and one in the Province of Salerno. Eleven deaths have occurred from the disease during the same period.

Almonte Man Killed in Manitoba.

Austin, Man., Oct. 14.—John Arthur, a prominent farmer, who came from Almonte, Ont., was fatally injured by falling from a traction engine on Fred Wicklund's farm, near here. The wheels passed over his body, and he died three hours later. He was 62 years of age, and was on a visit to relatives in this province.

The anarchists who gathered in Barcelona to celebrate Ferrar Day were overawed by troops and no demonstration took place.

The ten-year-old daughter of Thos. Kennedy of Kingston, was bitten about the eye by a cocker spaniel, almost destroying the eye.

A deputation of Winnipeg business men waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Ottawa and urged an appropriation of $2,500,000 for the Winnipeg World's fair in 1914.

The death is announced of John T. Molson, of the brewing firm of J. H. R. Molson Brothers, at 72 years of age. In early days, he was a prominent civic politician and is the third generation of the Montreal Molsons.

The wet, wriggling end of a snapped lawser, as thick as a man's wrist, suddenly coiled about the neck of Oscad Hansen, of New York, a deckhand aboard an East River tug yesterday, and then, like a gigantic snake, strangled the man to death.

Burglars at Calgary.

Calgary, Oct. 14.—The offices of the John Deere Plow Co. here was entered by burglars Wednesday night and the safe cracked, checks amounting to about $10,000 were stolen, but no cash was secured. The checks were recovered yesterday, having been thrown away by the things. A meat market small clothing store was also entered.

Fell Off Train.

North Bay, Oct. 14.—Omar Racicot, the 12-year-old son of the section foreman at Bonfield, died Wednesday night, from injuries received when he fell from the work train at Rockliffe. The boy had accompanied his father to work and, while the train was in motion fell off, breaking one arm and both legs, besides receiving other injuries.

British Coasting Steamer Sunk.

Sheringham, Eng., Oct. 14.—The British coasting steamer Heathfield sank off Blakeney at noon yesterday. Two sailors arrived here in a ship's boat, and reported that sixteen others were missing.

A SPECIALIST

Never select glasses for yourself, and never purchase glasses from a peddling spectacle seller. The stock of such spectacle sellers is as defective as their knowledge of optics. The lenses are carefully ground and the lens in one eye is frequently different from the lens in the other eye.
BEWARE of SPECTACLE PEDDLERS
Wearing them will soon result in pain in the eyes and injury to the sight. Then there is frequently the condition of unequal vision—that is, your eyes may differ in focus and each may require a different, specially prescribed lens. In such cases similar lenses, such as you would select for yourself or a peddler would give you, must of necessity prove injurious to one or other of the eyes. We, on the other hand, have the knowledge and appliances necessary to detect the unequal vision or any other defect and grind the lenses to suit. Nineteenths of the cases of defective vision require glasses ground especially for the patient.

The Nameless Yacht

A Case of Mystery of the Sea

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

There have been two cases of ships discovered in good condition, but deserted by their crews. One was found on the open sea under sail, the other at anchor on a coast. These two are all that thus far have been recorded.

It remains for me to record a third. I am a gentleman of leisure given to yachting. I am fond of cruising on my yacht either with a party of friends or a single male companion. During the last season I started from the New York Yacht club's dock at New York for a cruise eastward along the coast. I put in at several places on the route—New London, Marblehead, Portland and other ports—for fresh table supplies, then steamed on, intending to enter the St. Lawrence river and visit the Thousand Islands.

We met a number of yachts, for it was in the season, and yachtsmen are prone in hot weather to occupy the cooler regions of the northeastern coast. One evening while steaming across one of those beautiful bays that indent the rocky coast of Maine we saw near the shore a steam yacht riding at anchor within a cable's length of the shore.

Alec Wingate was with me on this cruise. Alec was the son of a British baronet and had domestic troubles. He had married the daughter of a colonel in the English army, a very beautiful girl, who, after a couple of years of married life during which she and her husband had lived very happily together, suddenly disappeared. Whether she had been kidnaped or had gone off with a lover no one could tell. There was no evidence, at least none that any one had ever got hold of, to point in either of these directions. The only other theory was that she had been murdered. Wingate had hunted for her all over the world and had come to America for the purpose. I had met him and, having taken a liking to him, begged him to divert his mind from his loss by going on a cruise with me.

Our course lay near enough to the anchored yacht to enable us to see with glasses what she was; that is, we could have seen any flags, people or other distinguishing marks. But there were neither people nor flags. She was a steamer yacht, but no smoke was being emitted from her stack. Her stern was at one time toward us, and what was my astonishment to see no name on her.

We slowed up, expecting every minute to see some one appear on the deck, but after waiting half an hour without any one appearing it began to look as if either a party had gone ashore from her for some purpose or she had been deserted. The first of these theories was not very likely correct. In the first place at least one member of the crew would have been left in charge, and in the second this was a perfectly wild coast, and there could be no object for any party to go ashore unless for water.

I gave orders to steam up alongside the nameless yacht. The hour was about 7 in the evening, and a fine dinner was set in the cabin. A fire was burning in the galley. Every boat belonging to the yacht was in its place. In the lockers in the after part of the vessel were articles of male and female wearing apparel, the latter indicating that ladies had been aboard.

And here the mystery changes from those sea secrets I have mentioned, or, rather, another mystery is added. Alec Wingate recognized a dress contained in a rosewood locker as one that had belonged to his wife. He at once became wild with varying emotions. There was pleasure at this evidence that his wife at least had been recently alive. There was bitterness lest she might have been living on this yacht with a paramour. There was fear lest though she had so recently lived, she had met with some misfortune.

To allay this excitement I told Wingate that he might easily be mistaken in the dress. But he said that it was the one in which he had most liked to see his wife arrayed and the only one of her wardrobe that he would surely recognize.

We went through the yacht from stem to stern looking for some explanation of the mystery. Every stateroom, every receptacle, was ransacked. The firebox door stood partly open, and I looked in to see if materials had been put in to light a new fire. The old fire was still smoldering. The only thing we discovered was that the yacht had undoubtedly been made in England. All the maker's marks on the finishing and furniture were English. The upholstery had been purchased of a well known upholsterer in London.

Having satisfied ourselves that there was no one aboard, we left "the nameless" and returned to our own vessel. I induced Wingate to sit down to dinner—he would eat nothing—and discuss the matter. He wanted to go ashore the next day and search the coast. This seemed to me a useless expenditure of time. I had come out for a cruise and did not like the prospect of waiting while a search party beat the beach in a desolate country where there was nothing but wild moose or caribou. But Wingate suggested that the party on "the nameless" might have gone ashore for hunting purposes, and I at last consented that the next day he might take three of the crew, go ashore and spend twelve hours in looking for the deserters of the yacht.

But overnight something occurred to render this inadvisable. We set a light on "the nameless" and left one man to watch on our own vessel, which was all that was necessary since we were at anchor in a small bay in good weather. One man watched till eight bells, midnight, when another man took his place. Wingate wished me to put a man on "the nameless," and I did.

At two bells in the morning Wingate, who had slept little during the night, looked out of the porthole in his stateroom for the yacht. Not seeing her and supposing that he was not on the right side to see her, he got up and went on deck. "The nameless" was nowhere to be seen. He came to my room to announce the fact. I asked him what the watch reported about the disappearance, and he said that he had found the man sound asleep.

Putting on a bath robe, I went on deck. The first watch said that "the nameless" was in position when he was relieved, so she must have pulled out during the second watch. I asked if anything was known of the man who had been stationed on her, but was told that he had neither been heard of nor seen since he had been put aboard. He had disappeared with the mysterious vessel.

Among my crew there were several ignorant, superstitious men—sailors of low rating—who were paralyzed with terror. They rushed without orders to pull up the anchor, but I stopped them, though I feared they were going to brain me with capstan bars they had taken up. I didn't propose to take any action till I had received further information and had consulted with my guest, Alec Wingate. One of my men said that during the night he thought he heard the sound of oars.

Wingate was very much agitated over this part of the mystery. Indeed, he seemed more disturbed at the disappearance than he had been at the discovery of the yacht. I suggested that he make a reconnoitering trip ashore, as had been intended, but with a different purpose. He might find traces of people having been there. He followed my advice, but the keenest eye in the party could discover no indications of human beings. For my part I believed "the nameless" had been taken possession of by shore desperadoes; that they had been in hiding somewhere near by; had gone aboard in the night, surprised the man on watch, killed him and towed the yacht out of our hearing with muffled oars; then they had lighted the fires and steamed away. There was nothing against this theory except the fact of Wingate's having found one of his wife's dresses aboard. But I took no stock in this, for Wingate had suffered so much at her loss that probably his mind had become afflicted and he had himself created the remembrance of this dress.

After consultation with Wingate, whom I told that I would adopt any course he wished, it was determined that we get up the anchor immediately and go out to the open sea with a view to discovering if "the nameless" was in sight. This we did, running directly southeast in a direct line from the coast, but notwithstanding that we had a clean sweep either way and excellent glasses we saw nothing of her. I believed she had got too much start, but nearly all of my crew by this time considered her a phantom.

Nor did we afterward hear anything of her, though we spoke every vessel we met, asking if she had seen her. One vessel described her pretty well, but the yacht observed was the Acadia, with the name painted on her stern. We completed our voyage without any other information.

But the mystery of "the nameless" was destined to be solved. During the winter Wingate got wind of his wife's being in Montreal. He went there and found her.

Though the story of her disappearance was never made entirely clear to me, the mystery of the nameless yacht was. To keep Mrs. Wingate from testifying in litigation where British people in high life were concerned she had been kidnaped and kept at sea in a yacht. Her kidnaper while on the New England coast saw by a New York social paper that her husband had embarked on a cruise with me. As soon as my yacht appeared his sailing master recognized her. At the time a leak in the boilers was being repaired, and there was no heat in the firebox, so the yacht could not steam away.

The kidnaper, supposing Wingate knew that his wife was on the Acadia and that he was on her track, ordered a paint brush to be run over her painting.

An idea occurred to him. There was at the time no one aboard but himself, an engineer and his captive. He drugged the captive, carried her into the firebox and got in there with her. The engineer got in also, and the party, two on one side of the door and one on the other, were hidden from view of any one looking straight into the box, especially as there was very little light there. They all stayed in this concealment until we left the yacht and returned there when we put our watch aboard. During the night they surprised, gagged and tied him; then, having cut the cable, the two men got in the dinghy and with muffled oars pulled out of hearing. To get up steam and speed away was the next move. The Acadia, being one of the fastest English yachts, was soon at a safe distance.

NO HOSPITAL FOR HIM

SAVED JUST IN TIME

Mr. Lewis MacPherson, of Dunvegan Inverness County, Cape Breton, had been suffering tortures from his Kidneys and Bladder, which were terribly inflamed. Finally, his doctor could do nothing more for him and advised him to go to the hospital.

A neighbor, who had used Gin Pills—but read Mr. MacPherson's letter.

"It affords me more than ordinary pleasure to convery, not only to yourselves but also to all sufferers from Kidney and Urinary Troubles, the instant and complete cure that Gin Pills effected in my case.

"I suffered untold misery even when under treatment from the best doctors for over ten months, and nothing seemed to do me any good or relieve my painful condition. My trouble was Inflammation of Kidneys and Bladder.

"I finally determined to take my doctor's advice and go to the Victoria Hospital at Halifax, for treatment. Two days, however, before my intending departure for the hospital, a neighbor called and, happening to have a Gin Pill in his pocket, insisted on my taking it. I did so and six hours after taking it, the results and benefits I derived were simply nothing more or less than miraculous. Instead of going to the Hospital, I sent for a box of Gin Pills with the result that I am a cured man. I recommend Gin Pills to every one suffering from Kidney Trouble."

VOLLON'S PUMPKIN.

A Painting That Drove Parisian Artists Into Hysterics.

It is a part of the duty of the official picture hanger of the Societe des Artistes Francais to distribute the canvases which are offered for the Paris Salon throughout the rooms of the Palais des Beaux Arts. The jurors are then summoned to examine these and commend or condemn as they see fit. The artists are at liberty to appeal to the jurors, and an influential artist can make trouble for the picture hanger. In this connection a story is told of Vollon, the painter of still life.

Some years ago Vollon had painted what he deemed his masterpiece, a luxurious pumpkin, orange in color and heroic in size, such as one sees at an agricultural show. The jurors did not approve the official picture hanger's choice of a place for it. A second choice also was found for it and condemned.

By this time the pumpkin had become the principal topic of conversation in all the studios of Paris, and the leading artists began to look in at the Salon to make sure that their exhibits were not being injured by an unfortunate contrast. One—Bouguereau—nearly fainted with horror on seeing the pumpkin not far from his pictures. "Take that thing away!" he shouted; "it kills my white and pink nymphs!"

So the pumpkin was removed. But here Cormon objected. He declared that it should not stay in the same room with his pictures. "Its juxtaposition to my lions and bears and tigers," said he, "makes them look like tame cats."

Tattegrain was the next artist to protest. "Don't place it near my work!" he exclaimed angrily. "What becomes of the martial spirit of my canvases, and what is the use of exhibiting starving garrisons with a big pumpkin alongside?"

So the pumpkin was shifted about till it had passed through fifteen rooms, and not a member of the society would tolerate its presence. Finally the picture hanger placed the pumpkin in the entrance hall, officially called "Salle d'Honneur," but popularly dubbed the "Chamber of Horrors." Naturally Vollon became the mortal enemy of the unhappy picture hanger.—Harper's Weekly.

OYSTERS ARE LAZY.

They Spend Practically the Whole of Their Lives In Beds.

Just like confirmed invalids, oysters spend their lives in beds. The principal parts of an oyster are salt water and a handsome stomach.

Every oyster has a mother-of-pearl lined overcoat with the moss on the outside. But a Waldorf-Astoria oyster gathers no moss.

Oysters, as a rule, keep their mouths shut, but when they have been in society too long they begin to gape. They are fond of playing games, one of their favorites being ring-around-a-rosy. In this game they join shells in a circle on a plate. They live in the ocean in summer and during the winter months frequent the principal hotels and restaurants, where they have reserved seats on cakes of ice specially prepared for them. They are rarely met with at buskings or church fairs.

An oyster is a conchologist by nature, a bivalve by profession and an appetizer because he cannot help himself. There are girl oysters as well as men oysters; but, so far as is known, one is not superior to the other.

Oysters vary in size according to their circumstances and their bringing up. Some are harder to swallow than others. There is no particular rule about this. But if at first you don't succeed, try, try again.

In June the oysters ought to be as rare as the days.—Thomas L. Masson in Judge's Library.

Stomach Troubles
OFTEN COME FROM WEAK, EXHAUSTED NERVES — GREAT RESULTS FROM USING.
DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

When the nerves become exhausted the first sign of trouble often comes from the stomach. The nerves which control the flow of digestive fluids fail and the result is loss of appetite, indigestion, nervous headache and sleeplessness.

Opiates and narcotics cannot possibly do more than afford temporary relief, and aids to digestion are merely make-shifts. To get well you must get the nervous system back into condition by such treatment as Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. Here is a letter which illustrates the point.

Mr. John McLean, 310 Hunter St., W., Hamilton, states: "My trouble was principally with my stomach. As a result of weak nerves my appetite was poor and I had severe attacks of indigestion. I found that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food relieved me and since using it regularly for some time my digestion is excellent, my appetite is good, my nerves strong and vigorous and I feel an altogether different person. I feel very grateful for the benefit I have derived from this medicine."

If you are in earnest about a cure why not make it thorough by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food regularly and persistently until the whole nervous system is restored and you can know again the joys of living.

IMPALED BY AN ARROW.

Pinned Through the Neck to a Tree, Yet He Survived.

It was in the summer of 1830 that George Wainwright and Ben Spencer, each in charge of a train of freight wagons, were headed for the Missouri river to bring supplies back to Colorado points. The Indians were very troublesome in those days, and these two outfits always camped together for protection. One night they had arranged the camp, with the wagons forming a circle, and everybody but the guards was to be inside. Wainwright preferred to sleep in a clump of cottonwoods about a quarter of a mile off, and there he fixed himself with his negro servant as a bodyguard. Neither the camp nor Wainwright was disturbed during the night, but early the next morning while Wainwright was sitting on the ground with his back to a tree drinking his tin of coffee an arrow from an unseen foe entered his neck at the right of the jugular vein and was driven with such force as to impale the victim to the tree. The negro, believing his master was killed, ran to Spencer's camp and gave the alarm.

Spencer and some of his men rushed over to Wainwright. Instead of being dead Wainwright was not even seriously injured. Spencer cut the arrow off close to the point of entrance and then gently drew Wainwright's head forward until he was released. The victim suffered but little inconvenience from the wound, and by the time the trip was completed it was entirely healed.—Los Angeles Times.

THE WAY OF THE SWISS.

Foreigners Regarded as Egyptians and Treated Accordingly.

A foreign resident in Switzerland was fined 10 francs because his little girl had plucked three buttercups growing on a piece of land on which she and some half dozen Swiss children had for years been accustomed to play. The land had recently changed hands, and its new owner had put up a notice forbidding the plucking of flowers. A passing gendarme had found the children flagrante delicto and had forthwith instituted proceedings against the little foreigner, while letting the little natives go scot free. The child's father appealed against the sentence and by dint of hard fighting, which entailed, of course, expense, forced the higher court to reduce the fine from 10 francs to 3—i. e., 1 franc for each buttercup.

When I tried to learn the whys and wherefores of this case I was told by a Swiss that one-half of every fine levied goes to the gendarme who reports the offense for which it is levied, and also that Swiss gendarmes cannot fairly be expected to be quite so alert in taking proceedings against their own country people as against foreigners.

Further, I was told by an American that in Switzerland all foreigners rank as Egyptians and that the one Scriptural injunction that is faithfully obeyed there is that which ordains that Egyptians shall be spoiled.—From "The Latter Day Swiss" in Cornhill Magazine.

A Famous Opal.

The most famous opal in history was that which was worn in a ring by the Roman senator Nonius in the day of the triumvirate. Its size equaled that of a medium sized hazelnut, yet its beauty and brilliancy rendered it a marvel among the dilettanti of Rome, especially when it was known that the goldsmiths and money changers had set its value at $1,000,000. Mark Antony made overtures to Nonius for its purchase, intending, it is thought, to present it to Cleopatra, but the senator refused to part with it and for fear that it would be taken from him by sheer force bought safety in flight. Here history loses all trace of this famous gem, there being no record of its transference from Nonius to any of his family.

At a Wedding Breakfast.

After a marriage recently the bridal party partook of a sumptuous breakfast, toward the end of which a younger brother of the bride got up and said solemnly, raising his glass:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have to propose a toast, which, however, must be drunk standing. Please take your glasses and rise up."

The guests, although somewhat bewildered, did so.

"Now," said the young scapegrace, "if you will remain standing for a few minutes I'll find out who had been sitting on my new hat."—London Tit-Bits.

FOUGHT TO A FINISH.

Tiger and Crocodile in a Battle in the Water.

In India a native went to bathe in a ravine. He was in the water up to his neck when a tiger on the hill above gave a leap toward its prey. But the tiger had not calculated that, since his victim was much lower than himself, a leap of the right strength for a horizontal range would carry him far beyond his mark; consequently he fell some ten feet on the other side.

Now, it happened that a hungry crocodile was at the same time drawing a bee line under water toward the native. When the crocodile had almost come upon his prey he heard a splash just in front and made a dash, bringing his enormous jaws down on the tiger's paw.

The bather nearly fainted with fright when he saw the tiger fall into the water, and for a few moments he could not understand why the creature did not devour him. Why did he persist in keeping one of his paws under water, beating savagely with the other? And the water turned red!

Then all at once the assaults of the tiger became more furious, and his growls developed into roars. The huge tail of a crocodile reared up out of the water. The obvious intention was to pull the tiger under water and drown him, and the tiger, understanding this purpose, tried to frustrate it by beating the snout of the crocodile with his other paw. But the snout was too far down, and he left much of his force on the surface of the water. His struggles became more and more feeble, and at length he disappeared altogether, only a cluster of bubbles remaining to show where he had been.

His fight, however, had been a game one, not entirely in vain, for when the bodies of the two beasts finally came to the surface it was seen that the tiger had literally torn away the whole front of the crocodile's face and had blinded it so that its victory was a useless one.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Chicle Tree.

Chewing gum is nothing but chicle mixed with sugar and flavoring, and chicle is the gum of a tree that grows plentifully in Mexico and Central America and that of recent years has been cultivated on a large scale in Yucatan. The chicle tree is not unlike the india rubber tree, and the gum was first shipped to America by men who believed that in it they had a perfect substitute for rubber. In this, however, they were mistaken, as it was found that the chicle gum was insoluble. Not to this day has any medium acid or alkali, spirit or ether been found that will dissolve it.—Argonaut.

TO take solid acres of worthless land—hummock and weed and standing shallow water—and to convert it into acres of huge earning capacity, all of that comes very close to be creation. Moreover, it sounds the high text of modern intensive farming.

Eastern farmers—the men who have had to hear dinned into their ears that their farms are worthless and already beginning to be abandoned—are doing that very creative work. There are many thousands of acres of that sort of swamp in the great agricultural State of New York to-day, but every square foot of those acres has begun to show a new possibility. Drained and properly protected against reflooding, those swamps become muck, and any farmer who is even half a farmer will tell you that muck spells money. Upon muck garden truck—celery, onions, spinach, asparagus and the like—grows with tropical fervor.

So to drain and to keep drained those swamp lands a new specialty in the many sided profession of agriculture makes itself first known—farm engineering. Just as men have made a science of the construction of the railroad and the profession of railroad engineer one of no mean importance, so shall the farm engineer—the man who takes dry farms and by science, which in this case means nothing more than a little application of ordinary hard sense, by irrigation makes them moist and fertile; who takes the swamps and dries them far enough for practical and profitable vegetation—come into his own. Already that new profession offers unusual rewards for the man of practical mechanical aptitude, for the man who can see one thing and then in the clear perception of his far seeing mind see its possibilities under development. That is an engineer's business—to dream in practical realities.

The engineer that can dream these practical realities for the waste swamp lands within close striking distance of the great market cities of the North Atlantic seaboard will rank with the best man who ever ran the smooth bed of a trunk line railroad through a mountain range. That engineer—the first of the new profession of farm engineers that is bound to come—will blaze a great way for himself in the economic development of the land.

Take the case of Bonney & Ware, of Batavia. There is a concern that because of the development of its own idea already deserves the new title of farm engineer. Modestly those two partners disclaim that they have blazed a new path.

"There are other folk who are growing garden truck in the muck, and making a success of it, too," they told us when we went to see them.

Perhaps there are. But Bonney & Ware are at least typical, and, better than typical, they are an illuminating example, for they have led the way, at least in the great garden State of New York. Around Batavia are several swamps—an increasing number of them as you go north from that enterprising county seat. Bonney & Ware took one of the worst of these swamps, within two miles of the centre of the village, and in nine years they have done much to change the map of that particular part of Genesee county. The old "Ware farm marsh" with its almost impenetrable second growth of pine and elm, rising from a morass where elephant grass stood like year around, has almost disappeared. In its stead there has come a fine black farm, a farm where garden truck grows in a fashion such as the county of Genesee never before had known.

The Mechanical Tricks.

You ask the why and the wherefore of that transformation, what has become of that rank swamp that stood there unconquered in 1901, and whence came that rich truck farm, and Bonney will look at you mumblingly and answer:—

"Just a few little mechanical tricks—that's all."

Ware supplements that, saying:—

"A little common sense and a lot of hard work."

But you know differently. It is farm engineering—that new born science that is yet to revolutionize this land—which is to give to New York agriculture a new dignity and a new importance.

Go back in very recent history to the beginnings of this magic black farm.

W. W. Ware is a lifelong resident of Batavia. His father before him held and worked that big farm out on the Ellicott street road, a splendid big farm, barring, of course, that nasty eighty acre swamp at its back. The upland farm was more than ordinarily productive, and when W. W. Ware came into that farm as a matter of inheritance he had a good property, as ordinary New York farm properties go. He had been raised in all the traditions of honest, sensible farming, and for a good many years he kept those traditions in practical working form. He was a good farmer, a good citizen. He was prominent in the local grange, president of the county fair, a decent, God fearing man. But if that pestiferous swamp had not continually overflowed and spoiled one of his fine upland gardens this story would never have been written.

The last time that swamp went upon a rampage was ten years ago, and it will not happen again. After Mr. Ware had charged a good round sum off his books because of that overflow he took new notice of that damp slab hole on the back of his property. He got a gang of men and built an earthen dam across the porch end of the swamp, four feet high and thick and about a third of a mile long. After that the swamp began to flood again, but this time the nice upland garden was not ruined. Farm engineering on the Ware place had been a success in the very first instance.

So much of a success had it been that it set the farmer proprietor thinking. He had read of draining swamp land down south of Rochester, and he wondered if something of that sort would not be worth while on his own place. Mustering up a small courage just a few acres near the dam—and some of the Batavia folk wondered if Farmer Ware, a sensible, hard headed citizen, was going to make a big mistake for the first time in his life. One of them came and leaned over the road fence and discussed the matter in the frank and friendly fashion of the up-State folks.

"It won't do you any good to pump the water out there in the swamp," he told Ware. "It will still be standing under there all the way."

Ware was silent.

"And if you do get this piece of the muck drained," continued the sceptical neighbor, "you won't be better off than before. There's a swamp three-quarters of a mile off, and that other one two miles away, and they are all connected under surface. You'll have to be draining half the swamps in the township, Ware."

Ware was still silent. It might be true, every word of that grim assertion, but he was going to find out. And find out he did. It was discouraging work at first. The pumping itself was a deal of a problem for a man who was feeling his way in the dark, but finally that solved itself. Before the solution was reached, however, Mr. Ware found that he was on no piecemeal job. He had to have a plan, and he found himself in need of a mechanical expert. So he sent down to East Bethany and there he found W. L. Bonney. Bonney had had some experience in farming in muck. He is quite as fully a farm engineer to-day as if some smart technical school had created such a degree for his particular benefit. Bonney had the experience, Ware the land; the partnership was the natural result.

Looking After the Kinks.

"Mr. Bonney looks after the kinks," Mr. Ware will tell you. "I am only the financial man. That is the rough way in which we divide the work."

"You do the marketing?" you suggest.

He is puzzled for a moment, then breaks into a laugh.

"Marketing? Well, hardly marketing for us," he finally admits. "We do about all of our growing under contract."

That of itself pays full tribute to this science of modern farm engineering.

You are standing facing the black farm at the very point where the service road, coming down from the comfortable farm buildings, ceases to cut across the upland farm and passes through a break in that original dike of nine years ago.

Ahead of you the black farm rests in mathematical symmetry. It is eighty rods in width—perhaps twice as deep, for there are fifty-five acres of it under cultivation—and every ten rods there is a drainage canal. These eight parallel canals lead into a main canal, or ditch, which twists around the base of a low hill to a pumping station, where a twenty-horse power gasolene engine lifts surplus water over another dike to the waters of a creek, natural drainage. Bonney is apologizing for the canals.

"They are crude and only did as starters," he says. "When fall comes, our crops are harvested and we can spare the time we will begin to replace them with tile. That will be a big improvement. These canals are not satisfactory. They are expensive to keep in repair and the banks breed weeds and insects. But, worst of all, they steal too much valuable room away from us. We want to work almost every inch of our muck farm."

He speaks with the real enthusiasm of an engineer, a dreamer of big dreams, this Bonney. When he wants to find a machine to do his work and cannot find it he invents one. He wanted a machine to bank the earth to bleach the celery—the farm was too big to do it by hand—and when the agricultural implement people looked blank he went ahead and devised one, simple enough to be of easy adjustment, complicated enough to have required something of an in-

At the back of the farm there is a tangle of bush and of second growth timber, where the exquisite regularity of the fine green rows of growing things lose themselves in a riot of underbrush; there are springs, the original trouble makers of the Ware farm, the sources of its troublesome swamp waters. Those springs have been turned to workmen on that place. When the weather grows dry they are turned over the black land to irrigate it. The canals form natural conductors. Earthen dams thrown across them here and there regulate the watering, section by section.

"We'll do that better another year," Bonney tells you. "For at the vital points on our tile lines, we'll place small boxes of concrete with metal dams. We will radiate a few lines of tile from each and then we'll be able to regulate our irrigation pretty accurately."

You understand. The canals that are drainage in the wetness of the spring help dampen that rich, fine land in the dryness of the summer. Ware picks up a handful of that land, soft and black and moist and crumbling. He closes his hand hard upon it. The water exudes between his fingers. But when he opens his hand the earth is still moist and crumbling.

"That is the test," he tells you. "It wouldn't have the value if it had caked there under the pressure of my hand."

You start to ask a question, but he halts you. From the far off town, just showing itself over the trees of the Ware orchard by a group of tall brick chimneys from which the smoke rises almost straight in the windless air, comes a long whistle call. You wonder if Bonney & Ware belong to the Batavia Fire Department and are about to be called a long two miles into action. Ware must read your unspoken question, for he says:—

"There's our weather."

There is a pause, but the whistle spoke but once.

The Weather by Signal.

For ten miles about Batavia in the heart of that great farming country the farmers have stood still for that moment at eleven to get the Washington weather report. Ware's grange—Stafford No. 418—made the arrangement with the harvester works in the town to sound the signal. The report comes through by telegraph from Washington just before eleven o'clock in the morning on the even hour and the whistle sounds its warning note to a whole countryside—once for fair weather, twice for local rains, three times for a cold wave, and the like. You come back to the matter in hand. Ware takes you into his little wagon and you start toward the back of the farm, where a tiny strip of the swamp still remains undrained.

When you turn from the main service road to the left your eye is attracted by gay flower beds laid in symmetrical fashion, at the very centre of that rich black farm. Pansies already run riot; a little later the asters will begin to bloom. Your eye travels from the charm of the distant scene, the exquisite regularity of those rows of growing things, the hedge row of trees in the riot of early July foliage, the workers in the fields, great three horse farm wagons laden with produce clattering over the service roads, to the delicate flowers, to the hard headed Western New York farmer beside you in the buggy, the man who was responsible for those flowers. Once again he reads your thoughts.

"They kind of give a finish to the place," he says, in half apology. "You like the idea?" he queries.

Of course you do. You tell him how big factories are doing the same thing, placing their huge commercial selves in the heart of open lawns and flower beds, growing green ivy over the hard brick walls of their buildings; how a big trolley road in New York floats the American flag every day over each of its barns and shops.

"That flag idea rather hit me, too," says Mr. Ware. He points with the butt of his whip and your eye follows. He has set out a great flag there, close to the roadside. It is set out in asters, and throughout August it will be radiant in living red, white and blue.

"I don't know," says Mr. Ware, "but I'd a lot rather have that big flag growing there than to be taking produce off that tract."

You drive right up to the edge of the original swamp—only twenty-five of the original eighty acres are left in it, and these twenty-five will all be bearing truck within the next five years. This spring has seen another tract cleared, trees cut and carted off to the farm's own shop to be cut into shipping crates, underbrush fired and retired. After that the plough teams come and root out the stumps. Then the reclaimed soil is ready for work.

"We cleared one tract back here during the first two weeks of April," Mr. Ware tells you, "and on the 12th of July we planted it to potatoes. That softens up the land and helps get it ready for the finer crops. We ought to get another crop from it this year."

"How many crops?" you venture.

"We ought to get three crops a year off this land," he says. "Say one of celery, with two of spinach or three of spinach. Your celery will never grow anywhere near as fast as your spinach."

All of which gives you quick contemplation of the value of this black farm. Ware is loath to give you the profits in his business, which is a right that is shared by most concerns, but the increase in land value speaks for itself. You could have bought the entire swampland ten years ago for less than $40 an acre, and Ware might have thanked you for taking it off his hands. To-day it is worth between $400 and $500 an acre, and not for sale at any price. That fifty acre black farm filled forty cars with lettuce last year, twenty-three more cars with celery, besides sending spinach, tons upon tons of it, into the canning factory in the village.

That sour swamp has redeemed itself.

That thought obsesses you as you drive across that farm for the final time, past the clattering wagons gathering up the produce from the rich gardens, past the Polish men, women and boys working in the fields up to the main high road again.

That sour swamp has redeemed itself.

No.

You are wrong.

There is that new agricultural science—farm engineering, and you had forgotten that for a moment. Farm engineering has accomplished the transformation, redeemed the sour swamp and made the black

Woman's World

No More Flossie's Fair—Miss Libbey's Stopped Writing Novels.

MISS LAURA JEAN LIBBEY.

Terrible calamity!

Girls, it's something awful!

Laura Jean Libbey has written her last book.

Positively her last!

Her press agent says so.

Georgiana, the beautiful silk spinner, will never again clasp Alexander Algernon Du Bois Vere de Vere in her strong young arms while the liquid starlight flames in the burning depths of her lapis lazuli orbs. Alas, how perfectly horrible if true! No more marriages of garbered dukes to the sweet singing little canary in the chambre de cuisine. Never no more will the proud earl discard his son and heir and cut him off with a shoe button for marrying the lodgekeeper's magnificently pulchritudinous adopted daughter who eventually turns out to be a lost duchess and heiress to all the coffee lands in Brazil.

L. J. Libbey's threat must carry consternation to every kitchen in the land, and 10,000,000 factory girls will tear their hair with pitiful wails when they get the stupendous news.

And what will the distinguished authoress-vaudevillian turn her pen to now?

Hist! She e'en will become a playwright. The playwright hanker grips her soul and mayhap she will strip the brows of Theodore Kremer and Owen Davis, vaudeville playwrights, of their tollfully won laurels.

What Women Are Doing.

There is to be a lady chapel in the new Liverpool cathedral, for which is planned a scheme of stained glass windows commemorating the deeds of good women. On one the inscription reads, "Queen Victoria and All Noble Queens," and others are inscribed: "Grace Darling and All Courageous Women," "Catherine Gladstone and All Loyal Hearted Wives," "Elizabeth Barrett Browning and All Women Who Have Seen the Infinite in Things."

Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, it is reported, will be appointed policewoman of Los Angeles, Cal. It was Mrs. Wells' efforts, backed by the ministers and clubwomen, that caused the ordinance to be passed creating the office of policewoman in Los Angeles.

"My work is to be chiefly where young people gather for entertainment in parks, penny arcades, moving picture shows and dance halls," Mrs. Wells explained when asked to talk about her new work. "I will deal chiefly with the proprietors of such places and will see that all laws are obeyed and the places are kept clean and moral."

Although Miss Clara Barton, the founder of the Red Cross society in the United States, is ninety-one, she still takes personal charge of one of the branches of the society. Miss Barton's relief work dates back to the civil war, when she became a nurse on the battlefields and organized searching parties for missing soldiers.

Still a Housekeeper at 104.

Living far up in the Alleghany Mountains is a remarkable woman who is more than 104 years old. She has the proofs of her age, and the inhabitants for miles around gather on Aug. 2 each year to make merry on her birthday and to express hope that she may live many more years. She is Mother Shoemaker, and her home is near Dubois, Pa. She was born in 1806. Bent with her years, but happy and contented, she sits in a tiny house built in the mountains. She does not have a housekeeper or a servant. She says she is strong enough to do her own work and to attend to her own wants. It would not bother her if she did not have an income for her support. She says she could earn her own living without any trouble. She has lived the simple life. She has worked in the fields, and she has been a mother.

If You Want to Be Liked.

Don't, when people say nice things to you, think that they must necessarily be insincere. It is quite as natural for some persons to put their nice thoughts about you into words as it is for them to breathe.

About Blackheads.

Blackheads are among the most trying blemishes. They are ugly and give the appearance of lack of cleanliness. Sometimes they do indicate that not sufficient care has been taken in washing the skin and removing the impurities, but there are times when they are due to some internal disorder, and then a physician should be consulted. A lotion which can beapplied externally and which is said to be very beneficial is made as follows: Pure brandy, three ounces; cologne, one ounce; liquid potassa, one-half ounce. Apply at night after washing the face thoroughly with soap and water.

A Beauty Tip.

When the skin takes on a shiny appearance one should take especial care of it. Rinse the soap off well with water when washing. The face should be dried with a very soft towel. Apply a simple remedy of one dram of boracic acid mixed with four ounces of rosewater. Before the face is quite dry a little powder should be placed on it. Then rub the face gently with a chamois after the powder has dried. In many cases where the blood is not at fault for the condition this remedy will be found entirely sufficient to take away the shiny appearance.

Encouraging Wrinkles.

Have you ever caught a glimpse of yourself in the mirror when you are doing your hair, brushing your teeth or putting the finishing touches to your toilet? If you haven't, just try it once and you will probably see, to your amusement, that you are making horrible grimaces and twisting your forehead into all sorts of frowns and wrinkles while doing these simple duties. Many people encourage wrinkles in this way and when too late to remedy matters wonder how in the world they got them.

A Good Tooth Powder.

Never use a tooth powder with camphor in it. It certainly whitens the teeth for a time, but it makes the enamel so brittle that the teeth are apt to decay very quickly. The best tooth powder to use is simple precipitated chalk. It should be kept in a wide mouthed glass stoppered bottle and can be perfumed by adding a few drops of eau de cologne or any favorite perfume.

Housekeepers' Hands.

If the hands are thoroughly greased with vaseline before using dyes it will prevent the stain penetrating deeply into the skin.

After washing clothes the hands are generally disagreeably rough. If a little olive oil is rubbed well into the skin and left for ten minutes, then rubbed with a cut lemon and well washed with hot water and soap, the hands will become smooth and white again.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

WILL OPEN ON THE 17th

The Number of Issues Coming Up This Year Presages a Warm Series of Debates—Sir Wilfrid Is Expected to Hurry Things Owing to His Proposed Trip to the Coronation Next June.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Parliament will assemble on Thursday, Nov. 17. The date was decided upon at a meeting of the Cabinet Council yesterday.

The coming session is expected to be of more than ordinary interest, in that there is the possibility that it will be the last before another general election. The Opposition, therefore may be expected to make the most of the chances they will have to embarrass the administration. The Government is weaker numerically than it has been since 1896, its majority occasionally falling below 20.

What will lend especial interest to the coming conflict of parties is the situation in Quebec. Whereas a year ago there was a small outbreak on the part of F. D. Monk on the Conservative side and Col. McLean on the Liberal side over the naval policies of their several parties, the outbreak has grown to larger proportions in the Government party. The Bourassa campaign in Quebec is now of a more serious character, while other incidents which occurred lately have caused the English-speaking supporters of the Government to look with suspicion upon its actions.

The Government legislation will not involve much discussion, the most important being the revision of the bank act, which was sent over from last session. The Ministry hopes to have a short session, in view of the imperial conference in May and the coronation in June, both of which Sir Wilfrid Laurier will attend.

As already announced, Hon. Mr. Templeman will introduce a bill providing for more adequate Government supervison of the manufacture and sale of explosives. The outlines of this bill were announced at the recent conference of provincial representatives here to consider the matter.

Whether or not the long-deferred question of the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec will come up for final action this session will depend largely on the attitude of Manitoba and Ontario. If these two provinces can come to an agreement with each other on the question of the territory to be annexed, and if the Roblin Government will meet the Federal Government in any reasonable compromise on the question of financial terms as intimated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier last July in Winnipeg, there will be nothing to prevent the boundary extensions from going through this session.

Questions of transportation will as usual bulk large on the sessional program. These will include the question of the Government's policy in regard to the construction and operation of the Hudson Bay Railway, the deepening of the Welland Canal, the carrying out of the Government's policy of constructing a thirty-five-foot channel in the St. Lawrence up to Montreal, and provision for the proposed international tribunal for control of railway rates on international traffic.

The Chanler Case.

New York, Oct. 14.—Justice Guy in the Supreme Court yesterday granted to Mrs. Julia C. Chanler, first wife of Robert Winthrop Chanler, an injunction against R. W. Chanler, Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler and Winthrop Chanler, the Union Trust Co. and the New York Insurance & Trust Co., as trustees of the Chanler estate, and Lina Cavalieri Chanler, restraining them from disposing of or transferring any property belonging to Robert Winthrop Chanler, until the action brought by the plaintiff to set aside the pre-nuptial agreement, entered into by Robert W. Chanler and Lina Cavalieri, is determined in court.

C.N.R. Agent in Britain.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Thomas Howell, general superintendent of immigration for the C.N.R., announced yesterday that the company had secured the services as British agent of F. J. Morse, formerly editor of Salvation Army publications. Five inspectors sail today for England. They will be stationed in Great Britain, and report to Morse.

Morgan Was Disgusted.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 14.—Delegates to the convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which is in session here, yesterday are discussing the attitude taken Wednesday by J. Pierpont Morgan, the financier, when modern miracles were discussed.

Morgan declared that he had heard more ridiculous statements from delegates to the convention than he ever had heard before. He left the convention in the middle of the discussion and went to "Dalvay," the million dollar home of the late Alexander MacDonald, rather than remain and listen.

"It is disgusting," he said, as he jumped into his automobile. Clergymen delegates and laymen are fearful lest the debates have so offended Morgan that he will withdraw his support from the church.

Welcome to the Rainbow.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 14.—The arrival of the cruiser Rainbow at Esquimalt the first week in November, will be welcomed by the Provincial Government, detachments of regiments from various parts of the province, and local bodies. A holiday will be declared and a program held. A strip of land owned by the British Admiralty and known as Goose Spit in the Comox district has been set aside as a permanent shooting range for Imperial and Dominion troops.

A Serious Charge.

Chatham, Oct. 14.—Rev. W. A. Ouston, provincial inspector of the Children's Aid Society, assisted by Constable McCrea of Bothwell, Wednesday arrested James O. Coulter on Smoke street, Camden Township, on a charge under the Charlton Act. The girl in the case is fifteen years of age and is a stepdaughter of the accused. Coulter is about forty years of age.

Stamina in Men and How to Possess It.

(Dress Must Match.)

A prominent physician being asked the question "What do the times in one's life a man needs most?" answered, "Physical health, strong nerves, mental efficiency, money and social success." Any man possessing these five attributes is a success. Any man possessing the first three can be a success and have the other two. Possession of a sound body with strong nerves is really the requirement which men need most. Men need stamina, courage, staying qualities, endurance, and perseverance but in order to have these qualities the nerves must be strong and keenly sensitive to every emotion. When a man has forebodings, sensations of fear, timidity, accompanied with such symptoms as trembling hands and limbs, weak voice, nervousness, sleeplessness, numbness dizziness, heart palpitation, restlessness, forgetfulness, melancholia, weariness without cause, and many others of a similar nature, it cannot be expected that he will be a success financially, socially or otherwise.

Strong virile magnetism comes only to those whose nerves are properly nourished in a sound body. Nature in her wisdom has supplied certain extracts, essences, etc., which, if properly blended, will restore a normal keenness to the nerves so that any man can feel the rich red blood surging through his body supplying all the elements necessary to derive the most out of life in all its various phrases.

For the benefit of those temporarily deficient in nerve strength the following ingredients can be obtained of any good druggist and prepared in the privacy of home. Purchase three ounces of syrup sarsaparilla compound in a six ounce bottle. Add one ounce of compound fluid balmwort, shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture cadomenn compound (not cardomom) and once ounce compound essence cardiol. Mix. Shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring. All distressing symptoms will soon vanish and a complete restoration to normal health follows.

Request Chief's Resignation.

Cincinnati, Oct. 14.—Because of conditions in the police department, revealed by Safety Director Small's investigation of graft, Col. P. M. Milliken was asked to resign from the office of chief by Mayor Schwab yesterday. No mention of Col. Milliken as an alleged partaker of "graft" had been made, but the mayor held that he should have been conversant with conditions and corrected them.

Col. Milliken refused to tender his resignation, and said he would fight every effort made to cause his removal.

Robbed Jewelers' Windows.

Winnipeg, Oct. 14.—At two yesterday morning, when the noise of a long line of cars returning to the barns drowned their operations, one man threw a stone through Porte and Mark's window, and his confederate abstracted two hundred dollars' worth of jewelry. Proceeding to Main street, and pursuing similar tactics, they took three hundred dollars' worth from Matthew's jewelry store. The men are not caught yet.

G. T. P. Telegraph Completed.

Fort William, Oct. 14.—The Grand Trunk Pacific telegraph system between here and Edmonton, a distance of 1,200 miles, was completed yesterday afternoon. A. R. Smith, superintendent of telegraphs, said twenty new stations with operators, would be opened to-day between Winnipeg and Fort William.

Indians Were Unruly.

Brantford, Oct. 14.—High County Constable Kerr, in arresting an Indian on the reserve this week, was attacked by a mob, which relieved him of his prisoner. He will return to the reserve and make things hot for the assailants, some of whom he recognized.

Destructive Rain in Jamaica.

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 14.—Heavy rains have fallen here since Monday, and considerable damage has been done.

The thoroughfares are flooded and the railway and street car services interrupted. The telegraph wires are down between important centres.

It is feared that the squalls accompanying the rain will have a bad effect on the banana crop, but so far no serious damage of this sort has been reported.

LITTLE NEW IN EVIDENCE AT THE DELINE INVESTIGATION

Magistrate Edmison Thought the Circumstances Sufficient to Warrant the Prisoner Being Committed for Trial and He Will Appear at the Fall Assizes---Was Unmoved by Verdict.

HAVELOCK, OCT. 14—Hugh Deline, the alleged murderer of his wife in Belmont Township, was yesterday committed for trial by Magistrate Edmison at the fall assizes, which commence on Oct. 25, at Peterborough. The evidence so far put forth against Deline is not very convincing, but the circumstances look very suspicious. The difference in time between when he left Jas. Buchanan's home, and gave the alarm at Mrs. Newell's is not very well accounted for.

The prisoner was brought down on the noon train from the county jail, at Peterborough by County Constable Cochrane, and looks greatly improved in appearance, since the inquest, showing that his life during the past few weeks has not had any bad effect on him. He sat unmoved by the evidence submitted in his presence, and looked on as calmly as the ordinary spectator, although he kept his attention on the testimony given.

Magistrate Edmison commenced the hearing at 1.30 o'clock. Magistrate Joyce of Havelock, sat beside him during the taking of the evidence, while Mr. R. E. Wood, of Peterborough, appeared for the Crown, and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the prisoner. Provincial Detective Reburn, who has had charge of the case, was also present.

All the witnesses heard at the inquest were re-examined, and gave very nearly the same evidence as before, except in a few instances, when some additional evidence was brought out. Four new witnesses were also heard. Part of the evidence was of such a nature that the spectators were asked to leave the hall. There was not nearly so large a crowd as at the inquest.

Margaret Newell was the first witness. She said that Deline had notified her of his wife's death shortly after she retired. In a conversation with deceased, Mrs. Deline had said that she and her husband were cousins and that she did not want to have any more children. Shortly after Deline's return to the house he went to bed and slept until daybreak.

Mrs. Little said that when she examined the body she found cow manure on her leg, which looked as if it was off a man's boot. There was also a mark on the dirt on the floor which looked like the impression of a man's knee and this had led her to examine Deline's trowsers, and the dirt on his trousers looked similar to that on Mrs. Deline's clothing.

Mr. William McMillan said that he had got the trousers for Deline to change. Deline, after returning home had complained of a pain in his head and he had told him to go to bed. He had also seen the impression on the floor, but could not say how it was made.

Mrs. McMillan described the condition of the body. She had not noticed any marks on the floor.

Mrs. McQuaig, who helped Mrs. Little to wash the body, had also seen the stains, like manure, on the deceased's leg, but could not say how it got there. She had seen marks like the impression of a knee, under the body, but to Mr. Gordon she said that the mark might have been made by something other than a knee.

Matthew Little corroborated the evidence of previous witnesses as to the marks under the body. Deline had changed his boots and stockings when he returned to his home, but gave no reason for it. Little could not tell whether the boots were dirty or not.

Mrs. Parks, the mother of the dead woman, who lives near Bannockburn, said that her daughter had been married for five years. When her daughter had visited her a year ago, she had remarked: "Oh, ma, you don't know the life I lead."

Mrs. Alisetto Parks, who lived about a quarter of a mile from the Deline home when they lived in Hastings County, gave evidence of a conversation she had with the deceased about two years ago. She had told the witness of unnatural relations, which Deline had with her.

Dr. Kindred, who saw the body of the deceased, about 8.30 o'clock on the day following the tragedy, described the marks which he had found on the body. The marks were fresh and must have been caused immediately before death.

Dr. Holdcroft, who made the post mortem examination along with Dr. Ford of Norwood, said that he believed death was caused from shock or fright. There were a number of bruises and abrasions, but none to cause death. The condition of the heart indicated sudden death.

Cora Parks, sister of Mrs. Deline, who saw her sister about a year ago, before they moved to this district, told of a conversation she had with her, when she had found her crying at her home one day. She had remarked: "When you are away from here you don't know what I put up with." When they were going to the Parks' house, about two miles distant the next day, Deline went ahead and refused to carry the baby. The witness was put out at this and had not spoken to Deline since that.

Constable Williams, who took charge of the soiled clothes, and had sent them away for examination, told of his conversation with Deline about his trousers. Deline, at first, said he had only changed his shirt, but Williams had said with emphasis to him: "Do you mean to say those are the pants you wore when you worked for James Buchanan?" "Oh, no," said Deline, and went and got his discarded trousers.

Ethel Buchanan saw Mrs. Deline on the day before the tragedy. She was carrying vegetables into the house and was, apparently, in good health, and spoke of her head feeling better.

Jas. Hilton, who lives about a mile from Deline's home, said that Deline was going to fix up an old house of Robt. Buchanan's, near the road. It had formerly been used as a sheep pen and Deline had cleaned it partly out. One day Deline appeared and said: "I have given up fixing the house, but I have some potatoes to dig and after that will move out, if my wife is all right. I don't expect she will live very long, as she has had pains in her head." He had said several times that he would not be surprised to find his wife dead. Deline had said that his wife was also afraid the pain in her head would prove fatal.

Robert Buchanan told about Deline being at his home and saying his wife had pains in her head, that he thought of going to the doctor, but his wife would not take medicine.

Sam Buchanan testified that Deline left his father's farm about 7 o'clock in the evening of the tragedy. Deline had said to him: "I don't know what to think about my woman." He said he would not be surprised to find his wife dead. Deline had also made the same observation to him.

G. N. Gordon said that the prisoner should not be put on trial as there was nothing to connect him with the charge, that the stains on the garments had been accounted for, and that there was not sufficient reason to commit the man on a charge of murder.

Magistrate Edmison made several comments on the evidence that the circumstances looked suspicious and that the difference in time was not well accounted for; that it seemed funny that if he found his wife dead he did not give notice at once. His Honour expressed the opinion that Deline might not be sane, as he had gone to bed with his wife lying dead in the shed and never looked at the body to see if she was really dead. That he thought the man should not be discharged and if sent to a higher court, the matter of his sanity will be looked after. "Therefore, I commit prosecuting lawyer at the fall assizes," said Magistrate Edmison. Deline winced not a bit, but kept the same tranquil appearance he had throughout the afternoon.

Mr. Meredith, K.C., will be the prosecution lawyer at the fall assizes.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF THEFT

Young Man Named Sullivan is Apprehended by Constable Newhall in Connection With Recent Thefts From Jas. Edgar

APPEARS IN MORNING

Constable Newhall made an important arrest today at noon on the street. It will be remembered that on the night of the 6th of October, the store of James Edgar, George street, was entered and robbed, the thieves gaining an entrance through the window. A quantity of gum, a box and a half of tobacco, some cigars, a box of taffy and some 'Breathlets' were stolen. At the time of the robbery, the guilty parties took the spoil and hid it in the rear of the old City Hotel. A few days ago some men were making a few changes and came across the loot. While they were home at dinner, some person came and moved the stuff into a pit some distance to the rear. The men engaged on the alterations, notified the police and after a short search they found the hidden loot. Chief Thompson set a watch on the hiding place, which resulted in the arrest of a young man named Sullivan to-day. Sullivan denies having anything to do with the robbery, but the evidence is strongly against him. He will appear in the police court in the morning at 10 o'clock.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Sunday Schools of City Will Have a Service in George Street Church

In connection with the service to be held on the morning of Thanksgiving Day by the children of all the Sunday schools in the city in George street Methodist church, the committee announce that the hymns to be sung are as follows:

"Come ye thankful people, come." Tune, "St. George."

"We plough the fields and scatter," Tune, "Pflugen."

"God sees the little sparrow fall." Tune, "Providence."

"Stand up, stand up for Jesus." Tune, "The Morning Light."

Sheets with the printed words will be sent to all Sunday schools on Saturday. Leaders who have not any of the tunes please notify Mr. R. J. Devey, 285 Park street, who will gladly furnish them.

HAD A SUPPER

Mr. Weedon Grossmith Treated the Stage Hands

The stage hands of the Grand Opera House, together with the workmen of the Peterborough Fuel and Carting Company who assisted in removing the scenery and effects of "Mr. Preedy and the Countess," which appeared at the Grand last evening, enjoyed a supper at Jacobi's restaurant at the conclusion of the performance, through the kindness of Mr. Weedon Grossmith, the leading man of the company. His kindness, needless to say, was greatly appreciated.

FEW DOSES PUT BAD KIDNEYS IN ORDER

Most Severe Backache, Bladder and Urinary Misery Vanishes

In all the world there is no man or woman who can afford to neglect the slightest kidney disorder for one single day.

Kidney diseases are the most dangerous, because the first signs are seen in other parts of the body before anything wrong is noticed with the kidneys themselves.

Some of the symptoms, though, cannot be mistaken: for instance, a constant aching or misery in the back, sides or loins, or headaches and dizzy spells, nervous twitchings, disturbed sleep, inflamed or puffy eyelids, heart palpitations, rheumatic pains, weakness, bilious stomach or a feeling of languor and fatigue. Sick, unhealthy kidneys also cause thick, cloudy, offensive urine or it is full of sediment, irregular of passage and often uncontrollable or attended by a sensation of scalding.

The time to cure kidney trouble is before it settles into Diabetes, Dropsy, Gravel, or Bright's Disease. The moment you suspect the slightest kidney, bladder or urinary disorder, begin taking Pape's Diuretic as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, at any price, made anywhere in the world, which will effect so prompt a cure. In just a few days you feel and know that the kidneys, bladder and urinary organs are healthy, clean and normal and all danger passed.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will vouch for the responsibility of Pape, Thompson & Pape of Cincinnati, Ohio, who prepare Pape's Diuretic—50 cent treatment—sold by every druggist in the world.

STORM STILL RAGES

Examiner Special.

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 14. — It is thought that more than one hundred lives have been lost in the fearful hurricane which swept the English and Irish coast last night. This morning despatches from the sea coast points indicate that the shores are strewn with wrecked fishing boats and coasting vessels and sixteen are known to have been drowned in the foundering of the steamer Heathfield. Several life boats which put out to rescue vessls distressed are missing. Greenwich has issued a warning that it is dangerous for ships to venture out as the storm shows no abatement.

GODERICH MYSTERY

Special to The Examiner.

GODERICH, ONT., OCT. 14.—With the arrival here last night of George Tate Blackstock, K. C., the famous crown prosecutor renewed interest is given the investigation into the brutal murder of Lizzie Anderson. Blackstock went over the scene this morning with Detective Greer. It is understood that new witnesses will be called to-night at the continued investigation and that Jardine will be further examined.

NEW YORK, OCT. 14—Colossal graft is alleged in the indictment to-day against Senator Gardner, charging him with offering Otto Falker twenty-five thousand dollars to vote against Hughes' anti-gambling bills.

JOHN GILBERT ALLIN.

The death occurred at Nicholls' Hospital last night of Mr. John Gilbert Allin. He was 31 years of age and death was caused by typhoid fever. His parents reside in Clark Township, Lot 23, Con. 8. His remains were shipped to Pontypool on the morning C.P.R. train for interment.

JESSIE SMITH.

Jessie Smith, a Barnardo Home girl, passed away at the Nicholls Hospital at an early hour this morning, at the early age of fifteen years and three months.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Mr. Couch officiating.

ANOTHER WRECK

Examiner Special.

WINNIPEG, MAN., OCT. 14.—Delayed trains east of Port Arthur have led to the rumour that there has been another bad wreck on the Schreiber division, but there are no particulars as yet.

WARRANT FOR THE ARREST OF SHELDON

His Manager Swears Out Information Against Him on Charge of Obtaining Money Under False Pretences

MANY VICTIMS

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, OCT. 14.—A warrant was sworn out this morning for the immediate arrest of C. D. Sheldon, the blind pool operator, by Dave Burnside, his bookkeeper, charging him with obtaining money by fraud. It developed this morning that Sheldon returned to his house after it was thought he had disappeared and stripped it of everything of value. Also his office was raided and there are no books left there now by which investigation can be made. The liquidator says Sheldon must have kept a record of his transactions in his head. Thousands of claims are pouring in from all over the country, but there is nothing to meet them. Perhaps the greatest tale of woe comes from the little town of Walkerton, which contributed from seventy-fie to eighty thousand dollars. It seems that Truax, his confidential man, was a native of Walkerton and was able to convince school children and almost everybody in it, and the anxiety is intense. Other places estimate their investments in the Sheldon blind pool as follows: Hamilton, four thousand; Niagara district fifty thousand; Kingston, eighteen thousand; London ten thousand; Quebec, eight thousand; Guelph, forty thousand; St. Thomas, fifty thousand.

CONCLUDING LECTURE

To Men at St. Peter's Cathedral This Evening

To-night will be the closing lecture of Rev. Father Gillis, at St. Peter's Cathedral. To-morrow evening will be given to hearing confessions and the men will all meet at the 8 o'clock mass on Sunday morning, for the closing exercises of the retreat, when the imparting of the Papal benediction will take place. Father Gillis will preach at the 10.30 mass and at Vespers at 7.30 he will begin his series of lectures to women.

CAUGHT IN STORE

Two Well Known Young Men Arrested on Serious Charge

Police Officers Newhall and Meagher this morning at 12.30 o'clock caught two well known young men, apparently engaged in the act of burglarizing the south confectionery of Mr. T. H. Hooper. The pair were arrested and spent the night at the police station. They appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning and asked for a remand for a few days in order to allow them to procure counsel and prepare a defence. The case was enlarged for a week.

A HARD JOB

Special to The Examiner.

WINDSOR, ONT., OCT. 14. — The main topic of discussion in this district is still the Hanna-Fallon episode and there is a great diversity of opinion on the subject. Generally speaking, the feeling here is that both Bishop Fallon and the government would have a hard job in abolishing bilingualism in the schools around here. No matter what their personal opinions were, the French Canadians are surely rooted here strong, and would fight before sending their children to schools where there was only English taught.

This advice will be better than gold to you if you will but follow it.

BLACKLISTERS ADD TO THE REVENUES OF THE CITY

Heavy Fines Were Inflicted by Magistrate Dumble in Police Court To-day---A Man With a Thirst Drinks Up the Equivalent of a Load of Grain.

Fred Pluard, who arrived a few days ago with a load of grain, put up at a local hotel and has been having a jollification all week. He spent the price of his load of grain in liquor, and a bill of $10 for the keeping of his horses, stands against him at the hotel. The world was no trouble to Fred while the price of the grain lasted, but when he went on the rocks, he was rescued by the life saving station, and this morning gave an account of his week's holidays to Magistrate Dumble in the police court. A communication was received by the license inspector to the effect that Mr. Pluard is a terrible drunkard, and requesting the former to put him on the black list. He was fined $2.60 and given ten days in which to pay it.

Manly Smith, a blacklister was the next to tell his tale of woe. He was charged with being drunk and having liquor on his person while on the list. He pleaded guilty. He said that he was at an East City Hotel when a man came along and he (Smith) asked the man if he every drank anything. The man replied that he did, whereupon Smith gave him a dollar and told him to get a bottle. He went in and procured the spirits and the two men went into an alleyway and had a few swigs. Smith then took what was left in the bottle home with him, but it leaked out. Not the liquor, but the news that he had procured some, so this explains why he appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning. He was fined $12.60 with ten days in which to pay it.

Harry Mitchell was the next name on the list. He was charged with being drunk while on the black list. He pleaded guilty. He and another man were at the shop of a local carriage painter, where he was having a buggy painted. He gave the painter $10 for his work and gave another $1 to get a bottle. The bottle was procured and the result need not be described. Both Mitchell and the carriage painter appeared before Magistrate Dumble. Both had been drunk and both were on the black list. It cost them $12.60 each for their fun.

Animal Circus Here For The Balance Of The Week

The Dorris Circus of trained animals which appeared at the Royal theatre the first three days of this week, made such a pronounced hit that Manager Pappas decided to keep them for the balance of the week, in order to give everyone an opportunity of seeing the wonderful performance. More clever canines than the bunch of dogs with this attraction have rarely been seen here, certainly never before at such a price. There are dogs who waltz, dogs who turn somersaults, who hurdle each other going at full speed around a narrow track, who juggle toy baloons and do a score or more of interesting and unusual feats. A horse that marches to music, a pair of comical monkeys and an entertaining donkey are among the other features of the act. Patrons of the Royal for the rest of the week are really getting two shows for the one admission as the programme includes one of the cleverest dancing teams that has appeared here in a long time.

Examiner's New Story Is To Commence To-morrow

The Examiner's new serial story, "The Betrayal," by E. Phillips Oppenheim, will commence in to-morrow's issue and the Examiner has no hesitation in saying that this fascinating story of intrigue and adventure will meet with the same popular approval as its predecessors in the Examiner's string of serial successes. A more entertaining, mystifying story than this tale of Oppenheim's has never been offered to Examiner readers. A strong love interest is interwoven with the mystery, and the romance holds one from the introductory paragraph to the last sentence. Don't fail to read the opening instalment of "The Betrayal" in the Examiner to-morrow.

New Wharf at Pengelly's Appreciated by Farmers

The Dominion government in response to the representations of Hon. Mr. Stratton, has provided an important and much appreciated convenience for the farmers of South Monaghan and vicinity, in the new wharf at Pengelly's. This affords ample facilities for shipping and enables the farmers convenient access to the city for their farm products.

This was shown in part, on Thursday, when the steamer Monarch, of the Ottonabee Navigation Company, brought to Peterborough a tow of two scows, one laden with 288 hogs and the other with a thousand bags of potatoes and a large quantity of grain.

Former Resident of Ashburnham Is a Sufferer at Beaudette

Mr. Thomas Cathcart, at one time a resident of Ashburnham, but who left here some years ago for Beaudette, the scene during the past week of terrible forest fires, has, it is learned, been a sufferer from the devastation that the fire left in its tracks. Mr. Cathcart conducted a hotel business in Beaudette, and also was the owner of considerable property in the new town. Only recently he has been successful in recovering money for his property, through the courts, that had been utilized by railway corporations and private individuals, who had assumed ownership of the lands without the proper course of procedure.

O'DONAGHUE—CROWLEY.

The marriage of Miss Cora Crowley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Y. Crowley, Ennismore to Mr. Robt. O'Donaghue of the same township, was solemnized at St. Martin's church on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick presiding. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Lizzie Crowley, and the best man was Mr. Edward O'Donaghue. The wedding march was played by the organist, Miss Scollard. Many friends from Ennismore and Emily witnessed the ceremony, afterwards assembling at the home of the bride's father, where hearty congratulations were bestowed and a dainty dejetner served. Mr. and Mrs. O'Donaghue will reside in Ennismore.

BARTLEY—ROME.

The wedding was quietly solemnized at the Park street Baptist church parsonage last evening when Miss Lottie Rome and Mr. Geo. M. Bartley, both of Peterborough, were united in marriage by Rev. W. C. Riddiford.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes:

"For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifing the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

TEN PER CENT. HAPPIER.

Brantford is not in the Hydro-electric belt; but it is not complaining. It got its own electric power, by its own arrangement, and at a considerably cheaper rate than most of the municipalities served through the commission. To show how Brantford feels in the premises, two paragraphs may be quoted from the Expositor, indicating how Brantford stands in relation to the Hydro-Electric supply, of "white coal" energy. Here is one:

The kudos in connection with the Hydro-Electric business falls the way of the Whitney Government, but the risk and expense fall upon the municipalities.

Berlin has Niagara power, and is happy. Brantford has no Niagara power and is 10 per cent. happier, because it is guaranteed electric power 10 per cent. cheaper than any Hydro-Electric community similarly situated.

THE DUTY OF THE PROVINCES.

The Technical Education Commission is not only doing its own investigation, but is stimulating other interests to activity in the same direction. In Brantford, in advance of the visit of the Commission, the chairman requested the Brantford Board of Trade to take up on its own account an enquiry into the special educational wants of the city. This is the proper way of doing. The Dominion Technical Education Commission, excellent as it is in its objects, is in reality an intrusion into a domain in which it has no constitutional right to enter: it is more; it is acondemnation of the provinces which have neglected their duty in this very important matter. It is only by general cooperation that the full beenfits of the Commission will accrue. Its reports, which will be certain to contain an extensive and comprehensive mass of valuable information, will be so much waste paper if the provinces upon which falls the duty of providing the machinery of technical education do not take advantage of information which the Commission is constituted to collect, solely for the use of the provinces. They will find in this information, the material for practical legislation and administrative action, ready to their hands. If they do not take advantage of it, the blame will fall upon them with greater force, than it has done in respect of their previous neglect of the interests of Technical Education; they will have no excuse for lack of information. They will be equipped in this regard, to so recast our provincial educational systems as to provide the greatest educational need of the time.

A FAIRLY DEBATABLE PROPOSAL.

On another part of this page is printed an article from the Ottawa Free Press advocating a Permanent Tariff Commission. While there is much force in the contentions of the Free Press, they, at the same time, it involves elements of danger. Encouraging tariff tinkering would not be in the interests of the country at large however much it might redound to the advantage of special beneficiaries, and this, it seems, a commission might incidentally do. Tariff stability has advantages whose removal would require a very decided tariff injustice to justify. One of these advantages is the confidence it gives to enterprise and capital, the latter very sensitive to any impairment of conditions of stability and security of employment. The demands of unduly acquisitive interests would stand to be more numerous and possibly more difficult to parry. The principle of a commission is easily defensible, as shown by the instances cited by our contemporary, to which might be added the promise of the Conservation and Technical Education Commissions, and the success, where tried, of municipal government by commission. Another point upon which the justification of a Tariff Commission might be based is raised by the suggestion advanced by Hon. Mr. Stratton in an interview with the Toronto Star, that a commission might advantageously deal with the questions, from a Canadian standpoint especially, involved in presumably imminent negotiations for reciprocity of trade with the United States. A Tariff Commision, permanent, or otherwise, would naturally be excellently qualified to deal with this phase of fiscal adjustment or readjustment. There is as much need of assistance and relief from investigating work, for which departments are not equipped, on the part of the Government in respect of reciprocity arrangements, as there is in the matter of tariff changes. And, perhaps, more need; for reciprocity of trade involves, more radical and far reaching tariff adjustment than the measure of tariff modification that our domestic conditions are held to demand.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir J. P. Whitney thinks Ontario should have the right of approach to the colonial office through its own agent-general, and not through the office of the Canadian High Commissioner. Such a concession would mean, says the Brantford Expositor, the practical undoing of Confederation. As the union is now constituted, there is no more reason why the Province of Ontario should have what the Premier claims than that the County of Brant should have it.

Last year the four largest occupations in Canada employed the following numbers: Agriculture, 716,937; manufacturing, 369,873; domestic, 257,755; transportation, 234,236. Besides these the professional class number 94 839, mining employed 36,908, the fisheries gave work to 25,054, the forest and lumber industry employed 17,113, and a miscellany of occupations engaged 4413. In considering matters of trade, including such questions as reciprocity, the fact must be borne in mind that agriculture is today, and is likely to remain for all time, the chief industry of Canada, and cannot be ignored.

DEMAND FOR PERMANENT TARIFF COMMISSION

(Ottawa Free Press)

Sir Wilfrid Lamier has promised to appoint a commission to inquire into the tariff, as was done when the Liberals first came into power in 1896. That also is very good as far as it goes, but does it go far enough? The task to be imposed upon such a commission is an herculean one. Its members will tour the country hearing deputations and gathering information. They will kick around in it, like the frog in the cream, and finally they will find themselves sitting on a pat of butter, which may or may not be the remedy for injustices from which the Canadian people are undoubtedly suffering.

But supposing they do find the remedy, how long will it take for other injustices to crop up on the tariff? How long will it take the Canadian Manufacturers' Association to pick holes in it and create wrongs which shall be just as bad?

A temporary commission does not appear to the Free Press to be sufficient. What is needed is a permanent commission—a commission that shall be investigating the working of the tariff all the time, a commission that shall collect and tabulate statistics, watch the trend of trade, inquire into the reasonableness of "infant industries" that have been protected, are seeking protection, ascertain how much the increased cost of living in Canada is due to the protective tariff, spot and find remedies for injustices immediately they come into existence, see whether it is worth while longer to bonus the steel industries, hear the complaints of any who may have them to make.

For years Parliament tried to remedy the grievances that the Canadian people suffered under in connection with the railways. The method was a failure. Then a permanent Railway Commission was appointed. That commission has been a splendid success. We wonder how on earth we ever got along without it. It is the best intermediary between the railway companies and the people that has ever been devised. The commission sees that both get prompt justice.

Similarly, we believe that a permanent tariff commission should be appointed to act as the intermediary between the manufacturers and the people.

It may be argued that this would be taking the responsibility for the tariff away from the Government of the day. Not necessarily, indeed we would be opposed to such a proposal. The responsibility of changing the tariff should finally be left in the hands of Government and Parliament. We would rely upon the commission to create public opinion—after the manner of the conciliation boards under Hon. Mackenzie King's (Hon. Rodolph Lemieux's) labour act. The tariff commission would report to the Government and to Parliament and when the commission and the Government failed to agree it would be for Parliament as representing the people to hear its defence.

Manufacturers entitled to tariff protection and doing legitimate business under that protection would have no reason to fear the findings of a tariff commission any more than the railways have reason to fear the findings of a tariff commission any more than the railways have reason to fear findings of the Railway Commission so long as their schedules are reasonable and their operation in the public interest.

Is it contended that the permanent tariff commission would be increasing the already heavy expenses of Government. The Socratic answer would be: Is it any cheaper for the Canadian people to pay in blissful ignorance probably a hundred times as much as the tariff commission would cost?

STRONG DRINK MOST FAR-REACHING EVIL CONFRONTING MORAL REFORM

"No Passion," Father Gillis Declares, "Can Compare With It"---Enough Money Spent on it in the United States to Banish Poverty From North America---Only Means of Battling the Evil is Total Abstinence.

The men of St. Peter's Parish listened last evening to some of the strongest arguments that have ever been advanced in support of temperance. Rev. Father Gillis, in his series of lectures at St. Peter's Cathedral, chose as his subject last night "Temperance," and for over an hour in strikingly forcible language pointed out the evils of strong drink. In his line of argument the reverend father maintained that drinking of intoxicants was the most fundamental and far-reaching evil that confronted men reform. No passion, he believed, could compare with it. Some persons claimed that the love of money was a stronger passion, and there was Scriptural warrant for believing so. In all reverence, he was of the opinion, that the Scriptural teaching "The love of money was the root of all evil" must have had reference to conditions thousands of years ago. Then no love of money, he urged, that could compare with the love of drink. He had made some inquiries as to the amount of money spent in Canada, annually, on drink, but without result. However, in regard to the United States, he could speak more authoritatively, there being an expenditure of $1,500,000,000, annually, on drink. It was sufficient money to abolish poverty, to provide home, food and clothing for every poverty-stricken man on the North American continent. If gold and silver would tickle the palate and burn in their veins, he was sure they would boil it down and drink it. The poor man will work hard all week, not for the purpose of accumulating money, for in some cases, he scarcely sees it. It was gone before he got it. The drink bill was often ahead of his wages.

The lecturer referred to the fact that pride was considered man's most powerful passion. "What did he care for pride in comparison to the drink?" he asked. Rolling in the gutter and staggering along the streets was little cause for pride. Then, again, ambition was advanced as a powerful passion. How often a man starting in boyhood, to achieve a result, sacrificed everything to attain it, but let the passion of drink come in contact with ambition, and the former prevails. "Have you never seen," the lecturer asked, "a man start at the bottom of a ladder and climb, rung by rung, until close to the top, and just as he is about to reach his hand out for the long-desired, he turns aside for a drink, and another, and another, until he tumbles from his lofty place, and lies a wretched, broken, hopeless man, where he began?"

The question was how to overcome this most powerful passion. The only way was to use a radical remedy, which was nothing short of total abstinence. The only practical way was to leave drink absolutely alone. As soon as a priest mentioned total abstinence he was styled a "fanatic." But Christ was a "fanatic" on moral lines. He said "If the eye offend, cut it out; if the hand offend, cut it off." "Must a priest be termed a "fanatic" because he says 'drink offends, leave it alone'"? he asked. St. Paul thought it his duty to not only save his own soul, but the souls of his brothers, too. That was the essence of Christianity—the unity of Brotherhood.

Rev. Father Gillis next dealt with some excuses for not signing the pledge, such as "I'm no sot," "I'm no drunkard," "I'm a moderate drinker." Every drinker was moderate once. The pit of hell was choked with those who professed to be moderate drinkers, with those who claimed to have strong wills. The supreme reason for temperance was that Christianity meant the cross and that cross meant self denial. When Catholic men went to confession they promised to "confess their sins and to do penance." Here was a penance—to leave drink alone.

LADIES!

Do you want to wear an up-to-date Suit or Coat? If you do, call and see me. I was in New York for two months this season and have imported an excellent assortment of cloths in different colors. I also made myself acquainted with the most popular styles for this fall and winter, and can reproduce them as satisfactorily as you could obtain them in New York. My prices are moderate for first-class garments. You can bring your own cloth and it will receive the same attention.

AUCTION SALE
— OF —
Valuable Farm Property
IN THE TOWNSHIP OF DOURO.

I am instructed by the administrator of the Estate of the late MAURICE O'BRIEN, to sell by Public Auction at the

MUNRO HOUSE, IN THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH,
— ON — SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1910,

at three o'clock p.m., the following property.

THE EAST HALF OF LOT NUMBER 6, in the third concession of the Township of Douro, containing by admeasurement seventy-five acres more or less, and excepting thereout a highway running across the said East half of lot number 6.

Upon this farm is a substantial two storey barn about 35 feet by 55 feet, upon a stone foundation, and also a log house, two wells, and a small orchard. The property is fenced with rail fences in a good state of repair. This farm has good arable soil with the exception of ten acres of low lying land, and is one and a half miles from a school and two and a half miles from Douro Church and Douro post office.

This property will be offered for sale in one parcel, subject to a reserved bid.

The standing conditions of sale of High Court of Justice except as hereinafter varied, will be the conditions of sale under which this sale will be made.

TERMS.—Ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid at the time of sale and the balance in thirty days without interest. Further particulars and conditions of sale will be given at the time of sale, or on application to the undersigned.

Dated at Peterborough this 8th day of October 1910.

THE EXAMINER ROAD RACES

Thanksgiving Day, Monday, Oct. 31st., 1910

SENIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing, and fulfil the required conditions in other ways and wish to be entered in the Examiner Senior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Name.....

Address.....

JUNIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing and am under eighteen years of age. I wish to be entered in the Examiner Junior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Name.....

Address.....

Contestants are required to fill out the blanks in connection with whichever race they desire to enter and send in this coupon to the sporting editor of the Peterboro Examiner as soon as possible.

Entries Pouring In For The Examiner Road Races

Three more entries, received since yesterday, bring the total in the Examiner's junior Thanksgiving Day road race up to eleven already. With the event over two weeks away, it begins to look as if the bunch of juniors facing the starter will be larger than ever before. Nagle Phelan, who finished sixth last year, is among the latest bunch of entries, and he will have to be counted upon by the talent. He made a good showing last time out and may do better two weeks from last Monday. The other two entries received since yesterday are Cyril Flowers and Henry Drummond, both among last year's starters.

The prizes will, in all probability, be announced in to-morrow's Examiner. They will be even better than the splendid awards given last year and will be well worth training and running for. There is more uncertainty than ever about the probable winner of the senior race. Physical Director Thompson of the Y.M.C.A. has a dark-horse up his sleeve whom he is quietly getting into shape, and the "Y" will make a big effort to carry off the big event. The Y. M. C. A. Harriers won three years in succession with Ray Best in 1906, Ernie Wilson, in 1907, and J. H. Adams in 1908. Last year Albert Smoke, the unknown Indian boy from Chemong, upset all the calculations of the wise ones and cavorted home first by a good margin. The Y. M. C. A. were not represented last year, Charlie Thorpe, who ran under their colours the year before, running for the Victoria Harriers last year.

MAHMOUT WON AN EASY VICTORY OVER BELLING

A wrestling match between Yussiff Mahout, the Bulgarian, and Paul Belling, the Viennese giant, for £200, under catch-as-catch-can rules, took place at the Holborn Empire on Wednesday, and proved a very one-sided affair, Mahmout beating his opponent by two straight falls in less than ten minutes.

Mahmout, who is twenty-seven years of age, scales 14st. 7lb., whilst Belling stands 6ft. and turns the scales a few pounds short at 17st.

Mahmout was at once aggressive, nearly rushing the Austrian into the orchestra, the ropes alone saving him. He again soon had his man in difficulties, and, bringing him down with a toe-hold, tried to turn him over, but Belling's weight and strength thwarted him, and he was able to regain his feet. He was, however, again quickly brought down on the mat. Mahmout, who has developed the toe-hold to almost a degree of perfection, occasionally forced his opponent's toe so far back that Belling's heel was touching his buttocks, and after four minutes the Bulgarian twisted his man over, and, standing him on his head, gradually forced him on his shoulders, and after 4 min. 47 sec. he was placed on his back, with both shoulders fairly and squarely pinned down.

The second bout lasted a little longer, and Belling did well to escape from an awkward scissors-hold. Finally Mahmout grabbed his opponent's right arm and right leg and lifted him up and swung him round and round waist-high till he was dazed, and then put both his shoulders on the mat, the time being 5 min. 9 sec.

EASTWOOD-HOWDEN TROPHY GAMES TOMORROW AFTERNOON

There is a fine list of entries for both the Howden and Eastwood trophy contests, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. at Riverside park to-morrow afternoon, and the result should be a splendid athletic meet. The games are billed to start at 2 o'clock and the public is cordially invited to be present. There is no admission charge and any one who likes athletics is urged to be present. The Howden Trophy, for seniors, will be contested for by a number of well-known local athletes, and there will be a good field in the junior event, as well. The latter class is open to all boys who have not yet reached their eighteenth birthday. An interesting programme has been arranged.

THE COUNTY TEACHERS HAVE AN INTERESTING SESSION

At this morning's session of the County Teachers' Association, Mr. F. W. Rowan, B.A., gave an interesting paper on "Primary Arithmetic With a Class."

Miss Jessie C. McRae contributed an address upon "Elementary Art." Mr. H. C. Dpff. B.S.A., of Norwood, dealt in a convincing manner with "The Relationship of Agriculture to Rural Education." The session was brought to a close by an effective paper by Mr. H. P. Andrews on "Spelling."

The Association concludes its convention this afternoon.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, the Teachers' Choice on Public Library Board

In the morning session of the City Teachers' Association, much routine and new business was transacted and a number of interesting papers and addresses given.

The treasurer's report showed a good balance and was read and adopted. Messrs. Srigley and Rosser were re-appointed as auditors. Mr. Mowat, the chairman of the Library committee, read a report in which he recommended that the Association take advantage of the regulation permitting the Teachers' Association to appoint a representative to the Library Board and urged that one be elected. It was decided on motion, that the representative hold office for a term not longer than three years. Mr. T. F. Matthews was the teachers' choice.

Following the report of the Nominating committee, the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President—H. A. Yenney.
Vice-President—Wm. J. O'Brien.
Secretary-treasurer—Mr. Pettit.

Executive committee—Miss O'Connell, Sister Principals of Sacred Heart School and St. Mary's Convent, Mr. Walkey, Miss Staples, Mr. Kerr, Miss Denne, Miss Cairns, Miss Jenkins, Miss Rush and Miss Alford.

Mr. S. J. Stubbs read a carefully prepared paper on "The Public Library in its Relation to Education," and the lengthy discussion following its reading, showed the deep interest taken in the paper and the fact that the Association will do its part to make the library a source of benefit to its members and the pupils of the city schools. A motion to have the address printed verbatim in the local press, was unanimously adopted, and for that reason a further discussion of the paper is unnecessary at present.

Miss Stubbs, Miss Lochead, and Mr. W. J. Neale, the new vice-principal of the Central school, dealt with the subject, "Spelling" in a very practical and complete way. Each of the speakers criticized the new Public school speller and many suggestions regarding methods were made and discussed.

Inspector Mowat read an instructive paper on the important subject, "Studying." The inspiring value to the students of books, was emphasized, but if the author's problem is to be assimilated and the best value taken out of them, a proper selection should be made, there must be a proper attitude between teacher and pupil, and independent judgement must be developed in the student.

BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT

At the present time the Boy Scout movement in Peterborough is assuming quite noticeable proportions, and every man interested in the welfare of his boy should begin to consider whether or not the movement deserves his cooperation and support.

There are so many phases of the Boy Scout's life that it is difficult to give a detailed statement of all that the idea is supposed to convey. However, it might not be amiss to outline very briefly what the Scout Law teaches:

1.—It teaches a love of God and of the King.

2.—It tends to make a boy honourable, courteous, kind to his fellows and to dumb animals, and to inculcate a patriotism and fellow feeling that will never cease to be.

Of course, as in all other organizations, the aims often miscarry and it is a mistake to judge any such body by a few; the only fair way is to judge the organization as a whole, and see whether or not it measures up to the standard of other organizations, which have for their object the betterment of the human race. Appended is a form of application that every boy must fill in, and it must be passed upon by the Committee before such boy may become a member.

As winter is drawing on and it will be necessary to outline a new plan of work, it would be well if all who intend joining this worthy organization would do so at once. Anyone wishing to join may get an application blank from the Scout Master, Mr. W. J. Neale, at any time.

The necessary qualifications are to be either eleven years of age or four feet, six inches tall.

A local Advisory Board, in connection with the Boy Scout movement, has been formed. It consists of His Honour Judge Huycke, Mr. D. O'Connell, Col. Stevenson, H. R. H. Kenner, J. H. McClellan and F. D. Kerr, Secretary.

It is understood that there will be a representation of Canadian Boy Scouts at the King's coronation, next June, and, from the good showing made by the Peterborough Patrol at the Toronto National Exhibition it is probable that several will be drafted, for the transoceanic visit, from the local Patrol.

In view of this probability training will be actively carried on during the winter, in order that the highest possible degree of efficiency may be reached.

Annual Meeting Of The Women's Art Association

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the W. A. A. was held on Monday evening, Oct. 10th, in the Y.W.C.A.

There was a large attendance. Mrs. A. Stevenson, the president, occupied the chair. In the absence of Mrs. Currier, the minutes of the last annual meeting were read by Miss Hatton, who acted as recording secretary pro tem.

Miss M. Rush gave the financial statement, which showed a most satisfactory balance on hand. The annual report was read and adopted. It is as follows:

It is five years since the organization of this association in Peterborough. The number of its members has varied from year to year. In 1908-9 we had 42 members; in 1909-10 we had 45. We hope our membership will be increased this year.

Six executive meetings were held during the year; arrangements for lectures and the offering of school prizes necessitating a great deal of work.

Last November an open meeting was held, which was addressed by Miss McCron, of the Normal School staff. Miss McCron gave a most interesting talk on the object and method of teaching art in the Public Schools.

In November also we had Fraulein Stolle's lecture and exhibition of pictures; and we were able to have one lecture for the school children for the small admittance fee of 5 cents. There were about 90 children present. In the evening we had an appreciative audience of 400.

Later the Association held two lectures, one by Mr. Wely Grew and the other by Mr. Wadley. We had good audiences upon both occasions. The evening with Mr. and Mrs. Wadely showed Peterborough people that it was not always necessary to go out of our own town for talent and the Association feel very much indebted to both Mr. and Mrs. Wadely for that very pleasant and profitable evening.

When Dr. Symonds lectured to this Association three years ago he urged that we undertake some practical work in connection with our Public Schools. We have endeavoured to do this and prizes and honourable mention have been awarded in all the Public School classes this year. The work sent in by the pupils was most creditable. These prizes have proved a great encouragement to both teacher and pupil, and it is hoped the Association will continue to interest itself in this work.

The prize of $5.00 offered annually for drawing at the Industrial Exhibition was won this year by Miss May Nesbitt.

We regret very much the loss of our Recording Secretary, Mrs. Cyril Currier, who has left Peterborough to reside elsewhere. Our Reading Club this year decided to study Old China. An excellent travelling library, bearing on the subject, was procured from McGill University, but the attendance at the meetings was not encouraging.

The officers for the coming year are as follows:

Hon. President—Mrs. Dignam.
Hon. Past President—Miss Bertram.
President—Mrs. Morris.
1st Vice Pres.—Mrs. Rush.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. R. R. Hall.
3rd Vice Pres.—Mrs. A. Stevenson.
Cor.-Sec.—Miss Bennet.
Recording Secretary—Miss Dorothy Aylmer.
Treasurer, Miss Maud Rush.

After the election also of conveners of committees and honorary members representatives, the new president, Mrs. Morris, took the chair, and discussion followed with reference to plans for the coming season.

Although our local president is always a member of the head Executive Committee, we have never sent her as a delegate to Toronto. This year, however, it was decided to ask Mrs. Morris to represent our association at the annual meeting, which is to be held this month in Toronto.

A vote of thanks was tendered our retiring president, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, and the meeting adjourned.

HAND-TAILORED

The custom tailor who charges you $40 to $50 for a suit would like you to believe that it is hand tailored throughout—every stitch of it. Ask him. As a matter of fact there is a lot of machine work on the finest garments made. The modern tailor knows that certain operations in the making of a garment can be done better by machine than by hand and certain other important operations can be done better by hand than by machine.

The 20th Century Brand people employ scores of highly skilled hand tailors and put hand work on all vital parts of their garments. Their clothes are "Hand Tailored" in the full meaning of that trade term.

And that's worth knowing and remembering.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"I NEVER explain anything I do, no matter how badly it may look," a man said to me the other day. "I think explanations are weak. My enemies won't believe them anyway, and if my friends can't believe in me whatever I do, without explanations, they aren't friends worth having."

Sounds well. Sounds splendidly. But is it wholly wise or fair?

I once knew a woman who practically wrecked her whole life simply because she was too proud to explain how she happened to be in a very compromising position.

She was in a man's room in a hotel. She had a very proud, although very peculiar reason, for being there. She refused to explain it to his mother who found here there, and the scandal went forth. The mother was a very reasonable woman who would gladly have believed the explanation, and who did believe it when it came to her later from other sources. Too late, however, to save the girl's name.

I think any man or woman who is placed in a position where the most natural inference is that they have done wrong, owes the world an explanation.

Ought not their friends to believe in them without explanations?

Some of them.

But if a man can count on the fingers the friends who will believe in him despite any appearances, he is fortunate.

Nor is that an aspersion on human nature.

I think it is inevitable. For it is hardly humanly possible to know more than half a dozen people so well that you can judge them by what you know they are, irrespective of what they do.

But it is not for these friends that a man should explain.

Nor for his enemies—for doubtless, as my friend said, they will probably think ill of him if they have an opportunity, no matter what he says.

But it is inevitable that the vast majority of every man's world should be made up of people who are neither such close friends nor yet enemies.

To them I think he owes his explanation.

If he does not give it, I think they are justified in believing ill of him.

And if he does give it, I think the better part of them will receive it and think well of him.

"What difference does it make what these people think?" protests someone.

None, if you are sure you will never need the co-operation and approval, and good opinion of your world.

Elbert Hubbard's "Don't explain, don't argue, get the thing done and let them howl," is all right when there is no other way of getting what you want done.

But when you can have the world on your side by saying a few words, I think it pays.

Don't you.

Ruth Cameron

The Evangelistic Campaign At Park Street Church

Another interesting meeting took place last night at the Park street Baptist church. A large audience greeted Dr. Sam Luttrell and a deep and profound stillness pervaded the gathering, as he spoke upon the subject of "Treed men, or men, who had tree experiences." He spoke of Adam, who had hid behind a tree from God. What a foolish thing to try and hide from God. You cannot do it. You may hide your sin from man, and sugar-coat it with religious morality, but God can see right through the cover.

Come out in the open with your sins. Don't be a hypocrite. Confess your sins and go away with the smile of great eternal forgiveness.

Then there was Nathaniel. Christ saw him under the fig tree, although Nathaniel did not apparently see Christ. Zaccheus also had a tree experience. But Jesus made him come down. There is no use getting up on yourself. You must come down for your pedestal and fall at the foot of the cross.

Then Jesus had a tree experience. He hung upon Calvary's tree for our sins. No mortal tongue can describe that experience. It was a most effective service. Service to-night at 8 p.m.

Dr. Luttrell will preach next Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. At 3 p.m. there will be a mass meeting for men at the Park street Baptist church. The George street Methodist male quartette will sing, and Dr. Luttrell will take for his subject, "The man you can't down." All men made welcome.

On Tuesday night, the 18th, Sam Luttrell will give the story of his wonderful conversion from a drunkard's life, to the life of Christ.

Mr. Mulligan sang the gospel last night in an able manner.

Ballads Of The Scottish Border The Subject of An Interesting Address

A very pleasant time was enjoyed at the Collegiate Institute last evening when a large crowd gathered in the Assembly Hall to listen to an address by Professor Wallace, of Toronto University, upon "The Ballads of the Scottish Border," under the auspices of the City and County Teachers' Associations. In addition to Professor Wallace's address, the evening was featured by musical selections by Misses Sisson and Choate, of the Conservatory of Music, and Mr. George Lynch the well known humourist, also contributed to the programme. The chair was occupied by Mr. H. A. Yeney.

The first item on the programme was a violin solo of unusual skill and merit, by Miss Julia Choate. The number was greatly applauded. Miss Sisson acted as piano accompanist throughout the musical part of the programme.

Mr. George Lynch then recited one of the late Dr. Drummond's humourous poems, "The Old Stove-pipe Hole." He was greeted with loud applause and encored. The second number, "An Englishman's Opinion of Life," was also much appreciated.

Professor Wallace in his address first gave a description of the origination of ballads. He said that ballads were the very breath of past life. They were made up on the border land between England and Scotland. This strip of land, which was sometimes called the debated land, was occupied by a people who did little in summer but fight and little in the winter but have a good time." He was speaking of the country as it was in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, and said that at that time life was very primitive as compared with the life of modern people. The chief occupation in winter was taking care of the cattle, which was almost the only wealth. There was very little grain grown, for when they sowed they were not sure who would reap the harvest. Winter months were the scene of happy times; several weeks would be occupied at a time with festivity and merry making. But when they wanted to have a really good time and a social time as we do in the latter days, they would assemble and listen to the minstrels singing ballads. These ballads were usually songs of boasting of the Scottish bravery, what they had done and what they could do.

The speaker also went on to say that along the supposed boundary line, wardens were stationed on both sides of the line, representing England and Scotland, and these men often engaged in bloody battles. If a cow was driven off from one side the wardens of that side would follow the thief, and when they captured him, they would bring him back and hang him. In the capturing of these thieves battles of horrible ferocity often ensued, which would result in large numbers being left dead upon the field. The ballads were written to remin their descendants of the fights that their brave ancestors had taken part in.

Professor Wallace told many tales of Scottish romance and recited some of the ballads of Sir Walter Scott. His whole address from start to finish, was listened to with the deepest interest by the audience.

At the conclusion of the address, Miss Choate again favoured the audience with a much appreciated violin solo, which was encored, and the meeting was concluded by singing the national anthem.

CITY AND COUNTY TEACHERS HOLD A JOINT MEETING

The spacious Assembly Hall of the Normal school was well filled yesterday afternoon, when the joint session of the City and County Teachers was held.

Dr. Park of the Normal school staff gave a masterly address on "The Elements of Literature. He stated and illustrated the intellectual, emotional and aesthetic qualities to be found in good literature. His illustrations were apt and strikingly entertaining. The address was most instructive and was appreciated by the teachers.

Inspector Broderick gave a talk on Primary Reading. He outlined and explained the different methods, with particular reference to the hand book recently issued by the Department of Education. He commended this book and advised the teachers to study it carefully. While he commended the word and sentence methods, he warned the teachers not to neglect the phonic side.

Mr. J. A. McKone, of the Peterborough Business College, gave a very helpful talk on writing in the public schools. He spoke on the subject from the standpoint of the teacher, the pupil and the Educational Department. He held that the teacher must be a good writer himself if he expected the best results from his pupils. The pupils should be given more time in which to practise writing and the Educational Department should be stricter in the writing examinations.

"THE NAKED TRUTH" IS A VERY FUNNY COMEDY

Speaking of "The Naked Truth," the English comedy which will be presented by Mr. Henry Dixey and his company at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, Oct. 19th, the Montreal Gazette has the following to say:

With an audience not far short of capacity proportions and a practically unceasing flow of laughter from start to finish, "The Naked Truth," which has enjoyed a long run in the English metropolis, was presented by Henry Dixey and company under the happiest auspices at the Princess Theatre last evening. It is one of the funniest pieces that have been in Montreal for some time, and, indeed in point of mirth-provoking qualities could hold its own with even such rivals as "Charley's Aunt." Not that it contains any one character head and shoulders over the others in wealth of humour. The individuals depicted were practically all amusing, with the exception of Norah Creighton, the pretty girls in love have no wish to be funny. The trouble started, as it has usually done since Adam lost his head in Eden, with a married woman.

The plot of the comedy centres in the magic qualities of a certain ring which forced its wearer to tell the truth on all occasions. As he happened to be connected with company promoting, the results may be imagined. When would-be investors inquired whether they should place their money in his hands, they were met by a candor that fairly took their breath away. After a time the morally transformed Bunny began to suspect that he must be ill, as he had previously been an habitual liar. The doctor diagnosed his case in a highly amusing scene and was astonished at length to be told by his patient he was a quack. Mendacity had abandoned Bunny for good. He told some plain truths to his fiancee and nearly drove her to break the engagement. He insisted that the bogus company o which he was secretary should be put into the receiver's hands. Everybody got the plain, unvarnished truth from his lips.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Rev. Robert Pogue will speak to the men at the popular Men's Meeting in the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoon at 4.15. There will be the usual bright singing by the men, and there will also be some special singing, either solo or quartette. There is no better way of spending an hour on Sunday afternoon. Every man is welcome at this meting. It is held in the back parlour on the first floor. The Board of Directors will meet next Tuesday evening to pass the applications for membership and to transact other important business. Mr. Frank Tait is getting into harness in the Boys' Department. The boys are quite pleased with him, and from all appearances he will make it possible for the boys to have a good time and do some very good service for the other boys in the Association.

There will be a Boys' Meeting next Monday afternoon to be addressed by Dr. Luttrell. This will be one of the most interesting meetings held this year in the Y. M. C. A. The Doctor understands the boys and will talk to them like a good father. This meeting will be held right after school is out on Monday. Parents! Get your boys out to this meeting.

The Intermediate Bible Study Club met last evening and had a very profitable hour of Bible Study. This has been voted the best thing yet. Mr. Thompson teaches this club.

There were two fast games of basket ball on the floor last night. The Jollers trimmed up the Joshers to the tune of 16 to 6, and the Hustlers had to go some to beat the Pets by two points, the score at the finish was 7 to 5.

There is more activity in the gymnasium than there has been for a long time and many of the old members are getting back into class again. The business men are turning out well to their class and this promises to be one of the interesting classes this year.

Mann Lumber Co's Planing Mill and Cheese Box Factory in Operation After the Fire

The Mann Lumber Company's planing mill on Dublin street is again in running order after the disastrous fire which visited the plant last Saturday night. The mill had to be shut down until the insurance adjusters had inspected the mill, but everything is running as usual. The cheese box factory, which was almost totally destroyed has been repaired temporarily and the season's operations in this line, now almost over, will be completed.

Went Through With Fifteen Prisoners for the Central Prison

Bailiff Ryan, of the Central Prison, Toronto, passed through the city yesterday evening. He had in his custody on reaching here twelve prisoners for the Central. He had been down the line making a collection, and three more were added here. Gaoler Nesbitt having sent word to have the local inmates destined for the Central at the local station. The local contributions consisted of a 'rag' who was recently sentenced to two years less one day, and the other two were for offences of theft.

BARGAINS

If you want to be regarded as strange erratic and peculiar just tell the truth, for there is very little competition in this line.

In this sense our Bargain advertisements are always peculiar. Whenever any of our departments advertise a bargain, before passing on the list to the printeas, the office scrutinizes very closely to see that the goods are fully ur to what they say about them.

In this way we have gained the confidence of our customers.

Bargains are always interesting to us and to you. We get bargains in different ways. Sometimes the manufacturer needs the money and is willing to sell at a great reduction.

Sometimes he makes a bad guess and makes a few hundred more than he can sell and these we get at a tempting price. And the best of it is these are always the cream of the season's fashion.

To-morrow, Saturday, we will place on sale a case of the new made up veils in navy, black, brown motor blue, etc. These veils are longer and of finer fabric than the regular 75c quality, to-morrow you can have your choice for..... 49c

Warm comfortable Winter Waists with style to them, regular price $1. Special on Saturday only .... 79c

Several cases of new collars and belts have come in this week.

A lot of the November styles in pretty dress-skirts just come in today, let us show them to you.

In stockings we excel. See our pure worsted stockings, double heel and toes, all sizes ..... 25c

Boys' warm wool fleeced shirts and drawers, all sizes..... 29c

Visit our fur department, it will save you money.

Our corset department has all the new up-to-date corsets.

Try our shoes, for style, comfort and wear our 'Canadian Lady' boots are winning many compliments.

TO-NIGHT'S CONCERT

Under Auspices of 57th Regimental Band Will Be a Treat

The concert, under the auspices of the 57th Regimental Band to-night, in the Armouries, promises to be one of the most enjoyable musical events of the season, and will, undoubtedly be greeted with a bumper crowd. Arrangements have been made for much better seating accommodation than at the last concert. The artists who are to assist the band in the programme have arrived. With pipe solos, Scotch dances, Scotch songs and Scottish airs by the band the evening should be a delightful one.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

MR. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS

As refreshing as a spring in an oasis in a desert was "Mr Preedy and the Countess," the farce comedy by R. C. Carton, with Mr. Weedon Grossmith, the eminent English comedian, in the stellar role, which appeared at the Grand Opera House last night and which convulsed a very large audience with merriment for two hours and one half. No comedy has been seen here in many seasons that has been responsible for such a spontaneous tribute of laughter or has been more cleverly acted. The superiority of the histrionic ability of the English players over the average United States actors has never been more clearly demonstrated to a Peterborough audience. If only in one particular alone, clearness in enunciation, this superiority was indicated. Each member of the cast from Mr. Grossmith himself to those portraying in the minor roles, delivered his or her lines with a clearness and expression that was indeed pleasing. Mr. Grossmith is original and refreshing in his comedy methods. Contrasted with Mr. G. P. Huntley, who appeared here last season in "Kitty Gray" and with whom he was compared by many of last night's audience, it must be admitted that the star of "Kitty Gray" is more inclined to exaggeration than Mr. Grossmith, and lacks the realism which the clever comedian throws into his work. Mr. Grossmith is eminently funny, according to the best traditions of the stage, never for a moment allowing his methods to drop to the level of buffoonery. He received a most enthusiastic reception from the audience and was given an ovation at the end of the second act, when after responding to half a dozen curtain calls he expressed his thanks in a neat speech. It was, he said, his first visit to Peterborough and he hoped that it would not be the last. He thanked the audience for their enthusiastic appreciation of Mr. Carton's play and of the work of his colleagues. Miss Granville and himself. It made acting very pleasant indeed.

The supporting cast was excellent. Miss Granville, "the Countess," gave a deliciously clever portrayal of her part. Among the other roles the acting of Mr. Arthur Murray as Bilson, a servant, was a decidedly clever bit of comedy work. In fact there was not a histrionic flaw in the cast.

Mr. Carton's play deals with the complications that ensue when an eloping Countess is forced to take shelter in the apartments of a young man of irreproachable character who "with the exception of sacred concerts or something of that kind, you know, knows nothing of the life of the man about town." Trouble naturally commences at once as Mr. Preedy has successfully proposed to a young lady of rigid morals and with parents possessing the same characteristics. The suspicions of a jealous suitor and the shocked dismay of his man servant, also a gentleman of rigid morals, adds further to the complications which after serving their purpose of causing an amazing amount of laughter are finally smoothed away.

"Mr. Preedy and the Countess" should meet with splendid success on its American tour.

"THE BETRAYAL"

(By E. Phillips Oppenheim.)

CHAPTER I.

THE FACE AT THE WINDOW.

Like a clap of thunder, the north wind, rushing seawards, seemed to suddenly threaten the ancient little building with destruction. The window sashes rattled, the beams which supported the roof creaked and groaned, the oil lamps by which alone the place was lit, swung perilously in their chains. A row of maps designed for the instruction of the young—the place was a schoolhouse—commenced a devil's dance against the wall. In the street without we heard the crash of a fallen chimneypot. My audience of four rose timorously to its feet, and I, glad of the excuse, folded my notes and stepped from the slightly raised platform on to the floor.

"I am much obliged to you for coming," I said, "but I think that it is quite useless to continue, for I can scarcely make you hear, and I am not at all sure that the place is safe."

I spoke hastily, my one desire being to escape from the scene of my humiliation unaccosted. One of my little audience, however, was of a different mind. Rising quickly from one of the back seats, she barred the way. Her broad comely face was full of mingled contrition and sympathy.

"I am so sorry, Mr. Ducaine," she exclaimed. "It does seem a cruel pity, doesn't it?—and such a beautiful lecture! I tried so hard to persuade dad and the others to come, but you know how they all love hearing anything about the war, and—"

"My dear Miss Moyat," I interrupted, "I am only sorry that a mistaken sense of kindness should have brought you here. With one less in the audience I think I should have ventured to suggest that we all went round to hear Colonel Ray. I should like to have gone myself immensely."

Blanche Moyat looked at me doubtfully.

"That's all very well," she declared, "but I think it's jolly mean of the Duke to bring him down here the very night you were giving your lecture."

"I do not suppose he knew anything about that," I answered. "In any case, I can give my lecture again any time, but none of us may ever have another opportunity of hearing Colonel Ray. Allow me—"

I opened the door, and a storm of sleet and spray stung our faces. Old Pegg, who had been there to sell and collect tickets, shouted to us.

"Shut the door quick, master, or it'll be blown to smithereens. It's a real nor'easter, and a bad 'un at that. Why, the missie 'll hardly stand. I'll see to the lights and lock up, Master Ducaine. Better be getting hoam while thee can, for the creeks 'll run full to-night."

Once out in the village street I was spared the embarrassment of conversation. We had to battle the way step by step. We were drenched with spray, and the driving rain. The wind kept us breathless, mocking any attempt at speech. We passed the village hall, brilliantly lit; the shadowy forms of a closely packed crowd of people were dimly visible through the uncurtained windows. I fancied that my companion's clutch upon my arm tightened as we hurried past.

We reached a large grey stone house fronting the street. Miss Moyat laid her hand upon the handle of the door and motioned to me to enter.

I shook my head.

"Not to-night," I shouted. "I am drenched."

She endeavoured to persuade me.

"For a few moments, at any rate," she pleaded. "The others will not be home yet, and I will make you something hot. Father is expecting you to supper."

I shook my head and staggered on. At the corner of the street I looked behind. She was holding on to the door handle, still watching me, her skirts blowing about her in strange confusion. For a moment I had half a mind to turn back. The dead loneliness before me seemed imbued with fresh horrors—the loneliness, my fireless grate and empty larder. Moyat was at least hospitable. There would be a big fire, plenty to eat and drink. Then I remembered the man's coarse hints, his unveiled references to his daughters and his wish to see them settled in life, his superabundance of whiskey and his only half-veiled tone of patronage. The man was within his rights. He was the rich man of the neighbourhood, corn dealer, farmer, and horse-breeder. I was an unknown and practically destitute stranger, come from Heaven knew where, and staying on—because it took a little less to keep body and soul together here than in the town. But my nerves were all raw that night, and the thought of John Moyat with his hearty voice and slap on the shoulder was unbearable. I set my face homewards.

From the village to my cottage stretched a perfectly straight road, with dykes on either side. No sooner had I passed the last house, and set my foot upon the road, than I saw strange things. The marshland, which on the right reached to the sea, was hung here and there with sheets of mist driven along the ground like clouds before an April tempest. White flakes of spray, salt and luminous, were dashed into my face. The sea, indriven up the creeks, swept the road in many places. The cattle, trembling with fear, had left the marshland, and were coming, lowing, along the high path which bordered the dyke. And all the time an undernote of terror, the thunder of the sea rushing in upon the land, came like a deep monotonous refrain to the roaring of the wind.

Through it all I battled my way, soaked to the skin, yet finding a certain wild pleasure in the storm. By the time I had reached my little dwelling I was exhausted. My hair and clothes were in wild disorder, my boots were like pulp upon my feet. My remaining strength was expended in closing the door. The fire was out, the place struck cold. I staggered towards the easy chair, but the floor seemed suddenly to heave beneath my feet. I was conscious of the fact that for two days I had had little to eat, and that my larder was empty. My limbs were giving way, a mist was before my eyes, and the roar of the sea seemed to be in my ears, even in my brain. My hands went out like a blind man's, and I suppose broke my fall. There was rest at least in the unconsciousness which came down like a black pall upon my senses.

It could only have been a short time before I opened my eyes. Some one was knocking at the door. Outside I could hear the low panting of a motor-car, the flashing of brilliant lamps threw a gleam of light across the floor of my room. Again there came a sharp rapping upon the door. I raised myself upon my elbow, but I made no attempt at speech. The motor was the Rowchester Daimler omnibus. What did these people want with me? I was horribly afraid of being found in such straits. I lay quite still, and prayed that they might go away.

But my visitor, whoever he was, had apparently no idea of doing anything of the sort. I heard the latch lifted, and the tall bulky form of a man filled the threshold. With him came the wind, playing havoc about my room, sending papers and ornaments flying around in wild confusion. He closed the door quickly with a little imprecation. I heard the scratching of a match, saw it carefully shielded in the hollow of the man's hand. Then it burned clearly, and I knew that I was discovered.

The man was wrapped from head to foot in a huge ulster. He was so tall that his cap almost brushed my ceiling. I raised myself upon my elbow and looked at him, looked for the first time at Mostyn Ray. He had the blackest and the heaviest eyebrows I had ever seen, very piercing eyes, and a finely shaped mouth, firm even to cruelty. I should have known him anywhere from the pictures which were filling the newspapers and magazines. My first impression, I think, was that they had done him but scanty justice.

As for me, there is no doubt but that I was a pitiful object. Of colour I had never very much, and my fainting fit could scarcely have improved matters. My cheeks, I had noticed that morning when shaving, were hollow, and there were black rims under my eyes. With my disordered clothing and hair, I must, indeed have presented a strange appearance as I struggled to gain my feet.

He looked at me, as well he might, in amazement.

"I would ask you," he said, "to excuse my unceremonious entrance but that it seems to have been providential. You have met with an accident, I am afraid. Allow me."

He helped me to stagger to my feet and pushed me gently into the easy chair. The match burnt out, and he quickly struck another and looked around the room for a candle or lamp. It was a vain search, for I had neither.

"I am afraid," I said, "that I am out of candles—and oil. I got a little overtired walking here, and my foot slipped in the dark. Did I understand that you wished to see me?"

"I did," he answered gravely. "My name is Mostyn Ray but I think that we had better have some light. I am going to get one of the motor lamps."

"If you could call—in the morning," I began desperately, but he had already opened and closed the door. I looked around my room, and I could have sobbed with mortification. The omnibus was lit inside as well as out and I knew very well who was there. Already he was talking with the occupants. I saw a girl lean forward and listen to him. Then my worst fears were verified. I saw her descend, and they both stood for a moment by the side of the man who was tugging at one of the huge lamps. I closed my eyes in despair.

Once more the wind swept into my room, the door was quickly opened and closed. A man-servant in his long coat, and cockaded hat tied round his head with a piece of string, set down the lamp upon the table. Behind, the girl and Mostyn Ray were talking.

"The man had better stop," he whispered. "There is the fire to be made."

For the last time I heard her voice, very low and soft, almost languid, yet very pleasant to listen to.

"No!" she said firmly "I am a campaigner."

"Get back as quickly as you can, Richards," she directed, "and get the things I told you from Mrs. Brown. Jean must bring you back in the motor."

Once more the door opened and shut. I heard the swish of her skirts as she came over towards me.

"Poor fellow!" she murmured. "I am afraid that he is very ill."

I opened my eyes and made an attempt to rise. She laid her hand upon my shoulder and smiled.

"Please don't move," she said, "and forgive us for this intrusion. Colonel Ray wanted to call and apologize about this evening, and I am so glad that he did. We are going to take no end of liberties, but you must remember that we are neighbours and therefore have privileges."

What could I say in answer to such a speech as this? As a matter of fact speech of any sort was denied me; a great sob had stuck in my throat. They did what was kindest. They left me alone.

I heard them rummaging about in my back room, and soon I heard the chopping of sticks. Presently I heard the crackling of flames, and I knew that a fire had been lit. A dreamy partial unconsciousness destitute of all pain, and not in itself unpleasant, stole over me. I felt my boots cut from my feet. I was gently lifted up. Some of my outer garments were removed. Every now and then I heard their voices. I heard her shocked exclamation as she examined my larder. I heard the words "starvation," "exhaustion," scarcely applying them to myself. Then I heard her call to him softly: She was standing by my bookcase.

"Do you see this?" she murmured. "'Guy Ducaine, Magdalen,' and the college coat of arms. They must belong to him, for that is his name."

I did not hear his answer, but directly afterwards a little exclamation escaped him.

"By Jove, what luck! I have my flask with me, after all. Is there a spoon there, Lady Angela?"

She brought him one directly. He stooped down, and I felt the metal strike my teeth. The brandy seemed to set all my blood flowing once more warmly in my veins. The heat of the fire, too, was delicious.

And then the strangest thing of all happened. I opened my eyes. My chair was drawn sideways to the fire and immediately facing the window. The first thing that I saw was this. Pressed against it, peering into the room, was the white face of a man, an entire stranger to me.

CHAPTER II.

GOOD SAMARITANS.

They both hurried to my side. I was sitting up in my chair, pointing, my eyes fixed with surprise. I do not know even now why the incident should so much have alarmed me, but it is a fact that for the moment I was palsied with fear. There had been murder in the man's eyes, loathsome things in his white unkempt face. My tongue clove to the roof of my mouth. They gave me more brandy, and then I spoke.

"There was a man looking in. A man's face there, at the window!"

Ray took up the lamp and strode to the door. When he returned he exchanged a significant glance with Lady Angela.

"There is no one there now, at any rate," he said. "I dare say it was fancy."

"It was not," I answered. "It was a man's face, a horrible face."

"The omnibus is coming back," he said quietly. "The servants shall have a good look round."

"I would not worry about it," Lady Angela said, soothingly. "It is easy to fancy things when one is not well."

So they meant to treat me like a child. I said nothing, but it was a long time before my limbs ceased to shake. The tall servant reappeared with a huge luncheon basket—all manner of delicacies were emptied out upon my table. Lady Angela was making something in a cup, Ray was undoing a gold-foiled bottle. Soon I found myself eating and drinking, and the blood once more was rushing through my veins. I was my own man again, rescued by charity. And of all the women in the world, fate had sent this one to play the Lady Bountiful.

"You are looking better, my young friend," Colonel Ray said presently. "I feel—quite all right again, thank

ALWAYS CONSULT
A SPECIALIST

Never select glasses for yourself, and never purchase glasses from a peddling spectacle seller. The stock of such spectacle sellers is as defective as their knowledge of optics. The lenses are carefully ground and the lens in one eye is frequently different from the lens in the other eye.

BEWARE of SPECTACLE PEDDLERS

Wearing them will soon result in pain in the eyes and injury to the sight. Then there is frequently the condition of unequal vision—that is, your eyes may differ in focus and each may require a different, specially prescribed lens. In such cases similar lenses, such as you would select for yourself or a peddler would give you, must of necessity prove injurious to one or other of the eyes. We, on the other hand, have the knowledge and appliances necessary to detect the abnormal vision or any other defect and grind the lenses to suit. Nineteen-tenths of the cases of defective vision require glasses ground especially for the patient.

Find Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winchester, Ind. — "Four doctors told me that they could never make me regular, and that I would eventually have dropsy. I would bloat, and suffer from bearing-down pains, cramps and chills, and I could not sleep nights. My mother wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking one and one-half bottles of the Compound, I am all right again, and I recommend it to every suffering woman." — Miss. MAY DEAL, Winchester, Ind.

Hundreds of such letters from girls and mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them have been received by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by its use.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

HOW TO SUCCEED WITH POULTRY

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. Chas. Love, Huron Co., Ont.

To be successful with poultry I find that it is necessary to have only young birds. I do not keep any birds more than two years and very few that long. My flock consists of 100 single combed Black Minorcas.

Mrs. Charles Love

During the latter days of September, the fowls begin to moult. If we are to get good results during the winter we must give the fowls the best of care during this period and get them over it as quickly as possible. Give them a place free from draughts where they may enjoy the sunshine and feed liberally.

WINTER FEEDING

I give hot feed in the morning, consisting of oats and barley chop scalded. At noon they receive table scraps, a generous feed of cooked potatoes and skim milk. Mangles cut into small pieces are given occasionally for a change. At four in the afternoon, mixed grain is thrown amongst cut straw. A little flax seed in a self feeder makes a good tonic during the fall and winter months. Keep lime where the fowls can get at it at any time. Fresh water with a few drops of tincture of aconite, is a good preventive against disease.

When the weather becomes so cold that the fowls do not run out I gather up daily a basket of clover leaves, where the clover is thrown from the mow and throw into the hen house. This clover is much relished by the hens. Coarse sand, coal ashes and oyster shells are kept before them at all times. A dust bath of wood ashes is very useful in keeping the fowls free from lice. Do not overfeed the fowls and keep them busy scratching all the time. I have no trouble in keeping the hens laying all winter by following the methods I have just outlined.

HEALING POWER A MARVEL.

So remarkable is the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment that the results of a single application are often a marvel to persons who witness them for the first time. Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., tells how her son was cured of blood poisoning which got started in a wound received at a threshing. Relief was prompt and cure effected by three boxes.

Peerless Peninsular

—the right range for your kitchen

When we say that the "Peerless Peninsular" is the right range for your kitchen, we mean right in every respect. There is no range on the market which combines so many good points in efficiency, convenience and economy as the "Peerless".

It is the best type of cast-iron range. And a cast-iron range will last longer than any other kind. At the same time, it includes all the advantages of the best steel ranges in its construction, having a steel oven, steel drop oven door, and a larger oven than any other range in proportion to size.

All "Peerless" Ovens are 20 inches deep. And this is 20 inches actual depth of oven floor, no account being taken of the projection of the oven door. When opened, the oven door drops down level with the oven floor, forming a shelf on which the largest baking dishes or roasting pans can be drawn and basting done without holding the pan.

"Peerless Peninsular" has a damper that lets you regulate the heat just as you want it. You know the ordinary damper — either wide open or shut tight — which means no heat or too much heat. This adjustable damper may be set for quick baking at full draft or anything between, and regulated to ¼ inch. The oven door being made of 2 sheets of steel with air-space between, keeps the heat in the oven and saves fuel.

PATTERNS OF ALL PARTS ARE KEPT FOR 20 YEARS.

If accidents should happen, and any part of your range get broken, you can always duplicate Grate Bars, Fire Backs, Legs, Doors, etc., at any time. We keep patterns of all parts for 20 years —so that your order through your dealer can be filled quickly and exactly. This is only one of the satisfactory features in connection with buying ranges made by an old and reliable Canadian Foundry.

Adanac Peninsular—plain in design with swing door for those who prefer it.

Mrs. Jinks—And how is that pretty young widow? Is she reconciled to her loss yet?

Mrs. Binks—Well, she ain't exactly reconciled yet, but they say she has the man picked out.

BUTTON IN A PIE

"See here, waiter, I found a collar-button in this pie!"

"Didn't see nothin' of an umbrella, did you, sir? There was one lost here last night."

HOT BUSINESS

Beggar—Say, mister, would you give a poor fellow a quarter to save his life?

Stranger—I should say I wouldn't! I'm an undertaker.

THEN SHE SUBSIDED

"I tell you I won't have this room," protested the old lady to the boy in buttons who was conducting her. "I ain't a-goin' to pay my good money for a pigsty with a measly little foldin' bed in it. If you think that just because I'm from the country——"

Profoundly disgusted, the boy cut her short.

"Get in, mum. Get in," he ordered. "This ain't yer room. This is the elevator."

SLOW PROCESS

Tourist—So that's the oldest inhabitant? One hundred and four years old! No wonder you're proud of him.

Native—I dunno; he ain't done nothin' in this yer place but grow old, and it's took him a sight of time to do that.

WHAT HE FEARED

Heiress—"But, father, that handsome foreign Count says he will do something desperate and awful if I will not marry him."

Father (dryly)—"He will. He will have to work."

FANCY!

At Bournemouth, after Grahame White had made one of his marvellous flights, one of the spectators was heard to remark to a by-stander: "Do you know why Grahame White never buys fancy socks?"

"No, I'll give that up," said the man addressed.

"Why, because he prefers to biplane," replied the flight individual.

DEMONSTRATION WANTED

Bobby—Are you an old sea-dog?

Sailor—Yes, that's what they calls me.

Bobby—Well, then, let's hear you bark.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION

"Now," cried the Socialist, speaking at a public meeting recently, "what is the question of the hour with the working man?"

"Generally speaking," said the middle-class man, "it's 'Is it dinner-time yet, mate?'"

THE SONG OF BABY

Dietimer—"Is your married life one grand sweet song?"

Newlywed—"Well, since our baby's been born it's been more like an opera, full of grand marches, with loud calls for the author every night."

HIS PLACE

Hawkins: "How's Henpeck getting on since his marriage? He used to vow that no woman could ever get ahead of him."

Hagg: "Oh, he's still leading, I suppose; but she's behind—holding the reins."

A DIFFICULT LANDING

"Did you and Jack have trouble in getting your father's consent?"

"No; but father and I had a hard time getting Jack's."

KIND TO THE CRITTERS

"Micky," said Mrs. Flanagan, "it takes you twice as long to drive the pigs as it used to."

"I know it. You wouldn't expect me to speak harsh to a lot of critters that's worth fifty dollars apiece, would you?"

PRESERVING HIS MODESTY

Sailor—Man overboard!

Man in the water—Man overboard! How dare you, sir? Mr. J. P. Golsplosh overboard you mean.

DEAD WEIGHT

"My word doesn't seem to carry much weight," protested the young wife.

"Never mind, my dear," rejoined the brutal other half, "your apple pie more than made up for it."

AT THE RESTAURANT

Old Gentleman (to waiter): "Can you tell me if my wife is here?"

Waiter: "Yes, sir—eighth hat to the left."

CAREFUL

A mother of four daughters, one of whom had recently married, cornered an eligible young man in the drawing-room.

"And which of my girls do you most admire?"

"The married one," was the prompt reply.

A cablegram has been sent from China to England, and a reply received in seven minutes. The double distance is over 30,000 miles.

SAYS AMERICA LACKS FIGHTING MEN FOR NAVY

Japanese Editor Says Country's Wealth Is Useless in Time of War.

CAN BUILD SHIPS BUT NOT MAN THEM

Declares Love of Gold and Want of Patriotism Are Asserted to Prevent Efficiency.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.)

TOKIO, September 5, 1910.—Continuing his criticism of the United States as a naval power, the editor of the Chuo Koron, or Central Review, in his most recent article makes light of the vast wealth of the American Republic, which, he says, would be useless in the event of a great war, as there would not be a sufficient number of men animated by patriotism to fight the battles.

"When we stated in our preceding editorial," writes this publicist, "that the standard of Japanese naval increment should always be the size of the American fleet a certain person approached and interrogated us about the advisability of entering into a race of naval building with a power like America, which he described as the richest nation on the face of the earth, pointing out that if such a power once set itself to the task, with the aid of its immense wealth, a country like Japan could never hope to win in the struggle, and the latter, if persisted in, could for her end only in national bankruptcy. It would require a Great Britain or a Germany to cope with such an antagonist.

"To this," says the editor, "I replied that America was truly as rich as my acquaintance had represented, but at the same the Republic was in such a position that it could not invest all its millions of dollars in the building of battle ships and armored cruisers, for the reason that, while it could certainly build ships, it had not the men to operate them. My friend became curious and wanted to be further enlightened on this point. Thereupon I answered:—

"'It would be easy for America with her tremendous wealth to turn out one hundred, nay a thousand battle ships, but she cannot find the officers and men with the necessary knowledge to operate and utilize them to their best advantage. Look, for example, at the State in which the American battle ship fleet, with the outward semblance of dignity, made its round the world tour. When it reached the Magellan Straits many sailors had already deserted, and by the time the fleet got to Chili and Peru these desertions had become still more common, and the number of men who thus abandoned their posts might be counted by the hundred.

"'This fact but served to illustrate that the American people are not a race of fighters. Probably as many as fifty per cent are either foreigners or descendants of foreigners, and are lacking in public spirit and patriotism. They have not the faintest intention of serving in the army or navy for the sake of their country; and even should they do so they would be but a band of mercenaries whose actions would always be determined by the amount of their remuneration and the nature of the work assigned them. Seeing that the circumnavigation of the globe has something quite out of the ordinary, wholesale desertions were the result. If this is the case in time of peace, we can readily conjecture what would be the condition in time of war.

"'Moreover, Americans have an inordinate love of gold. If there is money in a thing they will go for it and are quite indifferent to the rôle of protector of their country. Thus it is difficult to obtain good officers, and even if some are forthcoming the nation can never hope to get many of them. When it comes to the rank and file this difficulty is still more keenly felt. If good sailors are not on hand good officers alone cannot achieve anything; it is a case of a head without body and limbs. Although, therefore, it will hereafter be possible for America with her wealth to build ships, she will be building merely empty ships.

"'Providence has thus imposed a handicap upon America by making it hard for her to secure the men, while Japan can get all the men she needs, but not the ships. The Almighty would seem not to have granted these two factors equally to either of the two nations. This limitation is felt by both of them in an equal degree. Such being the situation, we do not see how America can build up her navy to the superlative standard, and it is therefore needless to say that Japan can easily compete with her in this respect.'

Disarmament the Ideal.

After indulging in all this outburst of chauvinism the writer develops into an advocate of the limitation of armaments.

"Competition in naval increment is not a very desirable thing," he reflects. "Although armaments may be a guarantee of peace, the benefits that would accrue to humanity at large if the nations could but get together and agree to disarm, either totally or in part, would be incalculable. It is a fact that the finances of the Powers are being jeopardized by big appropriations for armies and navies, and if we could limit this accordingly we might enormously lighten the popular burdens and direct these funds into channels of peaceful industrial development, the benefits of which cannot be immediately estimated.

"Congress has been discussing the appointment of a commission to investigate the question of universal disarmament. The initiative of this movement must have emanated from genuine Americans in whose veins flows the blood of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. The Honorable Lloyd George, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, has said that 'the peoples of the world have succumbed to the contagious disease of wasting money on armaments, and yet Great Britain can do nothing so long as she has a vast empire to protect. The warlike guarantee of peace is too costly, and yet we are powerless to do otherwise than resort to the grand old means of maintaining universal peace.'

"We are equally powerless to do otherwise than upbuild the Japanese navy for the maintenance of peace in the Pacific. It is, of course, our ideal to effect universal disarmament, and yet it is the height of folly to advocate this at the present moment of the world's history."

HOW AMERICA'S ARMY OF IMMIGRANTS IS DIVIDED

ONE YEAR'S IMMIGRATION INTO AMERICA AS AN ENGLISH ARTIST VIEWS IT.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

European observers are much impressed with the fact that the immigration into the United States during the fiscal year ended June 30 has again passed the one million mark, as it did in 1905, 1906 and 1907. This total included the following number of representatives of various races and nationalities:—Italians, 253,453; Poles, 128,318; Jews, 84,289; Germans, 71,380; English, 53,488; Irish, 38,382; Magyars, 27,302; Black Africans, 4,366; Japanese, 2,798; East Indians, 1,782; Chinese, 1,770; Islanders, 61; Coreans, 19.

In the above view the artist has endeavored to visualize a portion of this huge invading army. For more effective arrangement of the whole the numerical order has not been followed. Italians are shown on the left, next come the Poles, a smaller group of Chinamen, Jews, and so on through the many nationalities represented.

The firm hand of the United States administration was shown in the 24,270 aliens debarred. There were 180 polygamists, 2 anarchists, 156 idiots, imbeciles and feebleminded, 166 insane, 9 professional beggars, 11 paupers, 2,451 persons with diseases, 12,632 persons likely to become public charges and 1,365 contract laborers.

SIR GILBERT TO CONDUCT OPERA IN AMERICA

Insists on Choosing His Own Company and Personally Conducting Rehearsals.

MR. LAUDER'S PLAINT

Miss Constance Collier Is Coming to New York to Star Under Mr. Charles Frohman's Management.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

Sir W. S. Gilbert has received a tempting offer to direct a revival of Gilbert and Sullivan operas in the United States. Although he is more than seventy years old his age does not deter him from accepting it, but what he will insist on is that he shall be allowed to choose his own company, select his own musical directors, superintend the costumes and scenery and personally conduct the rehearsals. Otherwise he will not go.

"The great librettist has had a somewhat bitter experience of American maltreatment of his operas," says M. A. P. "With one exception he and Sir Arthur Sullivan never got a penny out of all the thousands of performances of their works in the United States. The exception was a Boston manager, who sent £10 each to the composer and librettist."

Miss Constance Collier is about to start for New York to star under Mr. Charles Frohman's management. For some reason Mr Frohman wants the name of the play kept secret. That looks as if he were giving his press agent a helping hand with mystery paragraphs. When Miss Collier and her husband, Mr. Julian L'Estrange, return to London next spring they hope to lease a theatre of their own to manage and act in.

The Earl of Yarmouth has closed his engagement as actor-author-manager at the Court Theatre. The Earl sings and dances better than most members of the House of Lords.

"Jellyfish Morality."

In "The Man from the Sea" the Bishop denounces the "jellyfish morality of the present day." Are not even jellyfish to be exempt from the tongue of scandal?

At the Lyric Theatre they are beating all records in the way of long distance advance booking. The Pelican is authority for the statement that the other day a block of seats was sold for the performance of "The Chocolate Soldier" to be given there on September 9, 1915.

For the last few weeks Mr. Henry Arthur Jones has been down in Sussex, at the Beacon Hotel in Crowborough, finishing up his new play, which is to be first given in America. Mr. Jones himself will go over in about a month to superintend its production and while there probably will avail himself of several invitations to deliver college lectures.

"Mr. Harry Lauder can have but small sense of humor off the stage," stated London Opinion, "to whine about managers being unsportsmanlike in not cancelling his contracts so that he might make even larger ones elsewhere."

Mr. Lauder says the managers are getting all his young life and energy without giving anything in return. How about all those thousands of dollars he received weekly in America?

Mr. Lyn Harding is also ambitious to become a West End actor-manager. If he doesn't get a theatre of his own he threatens to get even somehow and present Shakespeare in the provinces.

In an interview in the Daily Telegraph Mr Seymour Hicks describes the music hall stage as a domain bounded on the north by an acrobat, on the south by a conjurer, on the east by a ventriloquist and on the west by a troupe of performing dogs. Mr. Hicks thoughtlessly neglects to satisfy our curiosity and tell us which section of the stage he is wont to appear on.

Reality Versus the Stage.

While Mr. George Grossmith was playing his rôle of a would-be thief in "Sir Miss Gibbs" the other night a real one got into his apartments and made quite a respectable clean up of his jewelry. If it were not for Mr. Grossmith's sex this story would somehow sound rather familiar.

Miss Lena Ashwell is going to America again soon to play the gloomy heroine in Mr. Charles McLellan's "The Sins of People." The play was a failure in London, but that doesn't signify. She will be under the management of Mr. Cecil Tyler.

In discussing the price of theatre tickets Sir Herbert Tree says:—"I have always advocated cheap priced seats for entertainments which can afford to have cheap prices. You have prime English beef at a certain price and imported quality at a cheaper price. Both are excellent."

Unfortunately there is no pure food law concerning theatrical fare and you have to take the manager's word as to whether the beef is prime or not.

SIR CONAN DOYLE ABANDONS PLAYS

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

Playgoers will be sorry to learn that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has decided to give up playwriting. "I have no intention of ever again writing for the stage," said Sir Arthur yesterday just as he was leaving for his country place. "Don't think I am leaving stage work because it does not interest me. It interests me too much. It is so absorbing that it draws one's mind away from the deeper things of life and makes it difficult to settle down steadily to any special course of reading or literary work. For those who can treat the deep matters of life dramatically it is different, but I recognize my own limitations in that respect and so I make an absolute vow that I will not again write for the stage.

"I still have in my desk a one act play that I wrote some time ago. If it is ever produced it will have to be at my own expense. The cost of production would prevent it ever being accepted by any manager, and I'm afraid it would frighten the most experienced of stage carpenters. I called it 'The Lift.' The scene lies at the top of the Eiffel Tower. All the characters must ascend and descend in a regular working lift. Entrances are perpendicular instead of horizontal. The piece ends with a startling sensation—a terrific catastrophe.

"Lately I have been very busy with stage work," continued Sir Arthur. "You see I have produced three plays in a little more than a year. That means giving the theatre pretty close attention. All three I produced entirely myself, and at my own expense simply because I could not find a manager who would accept them or undertake the cost of producing them on his own account.

"King Edward's death eventually knocked the life out of my play 'The House of Temperly.' That made an awkward situation, for I had signed a contract to take the Adelphi Theatre until the end of the season. So, as the position was serious and as I had nothing with which to replace 'Temperly,' I was compelled to make an effort, and I wrote 'The Speckled Band.' We had that drama actually in rehearsal three weeks after I had commenced it. By the way, what I would like to do, and what I probably will do, will be to take 'The House of Temperly' and its prize fight to Paris. I think they might like to see it there."

CAT NOW BLAMED FOR HUMAN ILLS

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

Cat lovers are very much upset by the indictment which has been brought against their pets by a London veterinary surgeon. According to him they are the most dangerous animal known to man.

"The cat," he says, "is responsible for more human ills than any other creature that walks on four legs. I cannot think of one good reason why cats should be tolerated, for even at mouse catching they are excelled by traps. In nine cases out of a dozen if a post mortem examination were made of a cat's lungs it would be found that it was either actively tuberculous or had been at some time of its career

"King of the Wild West" Organizes a Dramatic Shooting Gallery in London

Invading American Indians Delight the British Small Boy by Gun Play.

DESTINED TO SUCCEED

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

SHOULD "Young Buffalo's" stock of blank cartridges hold out he is likely to shoot himself into popularity in the cheap priced English theatres, and incidentally so swell his bank account that he will be well able to pay a barber to cut his hair, which at present seems to be beyond his means. He and his play, "King of the Wild West," began caroling at the Borough Theatre, Stratford, and woke up that unlovely suburb with Indian yells, revolver shots and cowboy whoops. Stratford has not had such a night of it since the suffragettes held a meeting there.

This force of invading Americans consists of "Young Buffalo"—he keeps his other name in solitary confinement—"Wild Nell," a cowgirl, with lots of leggins and her hands always full of young Gatling guns; three Indian bucks, a squaw and three pappooses, a cowboy band, three broncos and a mixed herd of camp followers in the shape of actors and actresses. They captured Stratford all right at the first onset.

The play is the silliest kind of trash, but every scene winds up with a general and promiscuous orgie of gun play. It's a sort of dramatized shooting gallery. The Indians, too, are all decked out in the gaudiest of war paint and feathers, and screech and pound on tomtoms, while two of them clumsily hop around in a war dance. The programme stated that the management paid Uncle Sam $5,000 to let these Indians come to England. Uncle Sam made a good trade. The pappooses though, were cute, and might easily be mistaken for Alabama pickaninnies.

I haven't the slightest doubt that "Young Buffalo" and his outfit will have a highly profitable time of it over here, and that they will set thousands of cockney boys dreaming of the joys of shooting Indians and other "varmints." When the play was about half through a boy standing behind me, open mouthed and breathless, asked his mother:—

"Is there any more?"

"Yes, dear."

"Lots more?"

"I think so."

"Oh, good!"

That boy was the real critic. On his liking I base my belief that "The King of the Wild West" will have just the success it was brought to England to achieve. But I can't help pitying any actor in the company who is gun shy. His lot will be a hard one. AN AMERICAN FIRST NIGHTER.

SMART SOCIETY ESCHEWS QUIET

False Alarms of Fire, with Amazing "Rescues," Are Features of British House Parties.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

The time has now arrived for what, socially speaking, is termed the "autumn campaign," and with it the usual round of country house parties. It was Lord Rosebery who once said that England "is becoming the playground and plaisance of the plutocracy of all nations." One thing is certain, and that is that it is the American or Anglo-American hostesses who have done most to liven things up in London, and in the country, too.

Neat and quiet for the "smart" woman are now considered quite out of date. So when she goes to the country she takes with her a troop of servants. As for amusement, there is, of course, bridge, that maddening game jig saw, and now the newly revived poker. Society lives to gamble and part of it gambles to live, but music, dancing and acting are sometimes provided. In any case, late hours are generally the rule, and the evening is often wound up with practical jokes and a regular rough and tumble. The lady who writes in the Tatler under the pseudonyme "X" tell of some amusing occurrences which she has witnessed at certain country house parties. Sometimes, she says, an alarm of fire is given in the middle of the night, and for the men of the party to "rescue" the ladies, each and all clad the scantiest attire, is reckoned a charming diversion. Then occasionally each guest's belongings are moved into some one else's room, and boxes are rifled, the contents of drawers upset on the floor, and when bedtime comes the confusion is, of course, absolute. A cat and kittens have been put into a girl's bed, a toad into an old lady's, and a doll dressed as a baby into the bed of a bachelor. Masks are put on faces which peer round screens and even from under dressing tables. In fact, the word "rowdy" is a mild one to apply to some of the best known country mansions of England.

Some of the daylight amusements are just as "go-so." At one "smart" house a gymkhana was held at which the women, blindfolded, were driven round the lawns in ribbon harness, the course marked out by champagne bottles. In another donkey rides were got up, the women riding astride either in tights or breeches.

"Sette of Odd Volumes" a Quaint Society

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

THOUGH so accustomed to queer people and quaint societies that he is supposed not to shy at anything, even the worldly wise Londoner rubbed his monocle and read over and over again the announcement that the Lord Mayor, Sir John Knill, would entertain the "Sette of Odd Volumes" at dinner at the Mansion House. He suspected a hidden joke, but the announcement was a serious one. Fears that the Lord Mayor was contemplating a plunge into literature also were allayed when it was discovered that the "Sette" is a dilettante club society of quaintness, and that it has been in existence since 1878, the first president of the organization having been Mr. Bernard Quaritch, the bibliographer.

"The Sette of Odd Volumes," explains the records which hold the rules and history of the society, "shall consist of twenty-one, this being the number of volumes of the Variorum Shakespear of 1821, but Supplemental Odd Volumes to the number of twenty-one may be elected and incorporated in the Sette as vacancies arise. It shall be open to the Odd Councillors to the Supplemental Odd Volumes including Honorarius Odd Volume any Odd Volume who has served as Supplemental Volume who has served the Society of this Sette for a period of not less than seven years, and who is unable by absence, ill health or other sufficient cause to attend with regularity the meetings of the Sette."

Each Odd Volume is designated as His Oddship, and among the present Odd Volumes are such distinguished men of the artistic, literary and professional fields as Sir Alfred East, Mr. John Lane, Professor Silvanus P. Thompson, Dr. Scott Keltie, Mr Alfred J. Davies, Mr. Henry B. Wheatley, Sir Ernest Clarke and Mr. Arthur Divey, while those numbered among the Supplemental Odd Volumes include Mr John Hassall, R. I.; Sir Edward Sullivan, Mr. Martyn Piggott and Sir George Frampton.

GREAT SCIENTISTS ABOUT TO RETIRE

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

THE scientific world will shortly be the poorer by the retirement from active life of two prominent men. One is Sir William Christie, the Astronomer Royal, and the other Sir Patrick Manson, who holds the important post of medical adviser to the Colonial Office.

Sir William Christie in the forty years he has held office has seen many new worlds added to human knowledge. "The progress made in astronomical work," said Sir William in the course of an interview, "is hard to date in chronological order. The power of instruments has increased so greatly during those years, photography has been brought into use and knowledge has been brought to bear in various directions. The great thing was the introduction of photography. It was in 1874, in the days of the old wet plate, that I first tried to get a picture of the sun. From that time I studied photography and became a photographer. The remarkable results that have since come from the use of photography are due to the introduction of rapid plates of extreme sensitiveness."

Sir Patrick Manson, who is sixty-six years of age, is best known as a parasitologist, many of his years having been devoted to the warfare against the malarial mosquito. To him was due the original discovery that the filariasis of tropical diseases was largely due to the agency of the mosquito.

WORRY DOES KILL.

It Slowly but Surely Destroys the Cells of the Brain.

Modern science has brought to light nothing more curiously interesting than that worry will kill. More remarkable still, it has been able to determine just how worry does kill.

It is believed by many scientists who have followed carefully the growth of the science of brain diseases that scores of the deaths set down to their causes are due to worry and that alone. The theory is a simple one, so simple that any one can readily understand it.

Briefly put, it amounts to this: Worry injures beyond repair certain cells of the brain, and, the brain being the nutritive center of the body, the other organs become gradually injured, and when some diseases of these organs or a combination of them arises death finally ensues.

Thus worry kills. Insidiously, like many other diseases, it creeps upon the brain in the form of a single, constant, never lost idea, and as a dropping of water over a period of years will wear a groove in the stone, so does worry gradually, imperceptibly and no less surely destroy the brain cells that lead all the rest, which are, so to speak, the commanding officers of mental power, health and motion.

Worry, to make the theory still stronger, is an irritant at certain points, which produces little harm if it comes at intervals or irregularly. Occasional worriment the brain can cope with, but the iteration and the reiteration of one idea of a disquieting sort the cells of the brain are not proof against.

It is as if the skull were laid bare and the surface of the brain struck lightly with a hammer every few seconds with mechanical precision, with never a sign of a stop or the failure of a stroke. Just in this way does the annoying idea, the maddening thought that will not be done away with, strike or fall upon certain nerve cells, never ceasing, diminishing the vitality of the delicate organisms that are so minute that they can be seen only under the microscope.—Journal of Physiological Therapeutics.

JUVENILE BLOCKHEADS.

Stupid Boys Who Developed Into World Famous Men.

There is quite a long record of famous men who in their boyhood were regarded as fools and dullards. Sir Walter Scott was called a "blockhead" by his mother. The mother of Brinsley Sheridan despaired of teaching him the simplest elements. Her death aroused him to activity and he became a scholar, philosopher, poet, wit, statesman and orator. Dean Swift, the keenest wit of his age, was "plucked" at Dublin university. Newton, Shakespeare, Michelangelo and Oliver Goldsmith all come in the category.

One day a slatternly woman rushed out of a little grocer's shop gripping an unkempt boy by the ear, and as she pulled him along she shouted to her neighbor:

"My heart is fairly broke with that brat, Tammy, and he is so stupid he can learn nothin'!"

That stupid brat Tammy became the poet Tom Moore.

In a country schoolhouse in Queen's county, Ireland, a boy with a blunt knife cut in the desk "A. W." the initials of his name. The teacher, who caught him in the act, cried out:

"Stupid, you are better at cutting letters and destroying desks than you are at learning your lessons!"

That boy was Arthur Wellesley, known to fame as the Duke of Wellington, hero of Waterloo.

In the middle years of the last century, in St. Malachy's college, Belfast, a boy carved the letters "C. R." in the wood. The French professor reported him and declared that he "was besides a worthless boy, who would never amount to anything."

"I will amount to more than you!" returned the youth.

He did, for he became lord chancellor of England—Lord Russell of Killowen.—London Graphic.

CARRIED OFF BY A LION.

Thrilling Experience of a Ranger In the Transvaal.

Two men at least have given accounts of their sensations when they were carried off by lions—the great explorer Livingstone and a man named Wolhuter, a ranger of game preserves in the Transvaal. Wolhuter's adventure is not secondary in interest to Livingstone's experience. His story, which was attested by the certificate of the magistrate of the district, was substantially as follows:

He was riding along a Kafir path about an hour after sunset. It had been a long march, and he had pushed on ahead of his companions. His dog barked at something, and a moment later Wolhuter saw a lion crouching close to him on the right hand side. The ranger turned his horse sharply, a circumstance that no doubt caused the lion to miss the spring.

Wolhuter was unseated. At the same moment he saw another lion coming from the opposite direction. The horse rushed off, with the first lion in pursuit, and the second lion picked Wolhuter up almost before he touched the ground and gripped him by the right shoulder in such a position that he was face up, with his legs and body dragging underneath the beast. The lion trotted down the path, uttering a loud, growling, purring noise.

Wolhuter's sensations were not those of Livingstone, who said he was in a state of apathy, with entire absence of pain during the time the lion had him. The game ranger suffered terribly, both mentally and physically, and saw no possible way of escape. The lion took him nearly 200 yards.

Suddenly Wolhuter bethought him of his sheath knife, which he carried in his belt behind his right hip. On reaching a large tree with overhanging roots the lion stopped, whereupon Wolhuter stabbed him twice in the side with his left hand. It was ascertained afterward that the first stab touched the bottom of the heart and that the second one slit it down for some distance.

The lion immediately dropped Wolhuter, and again the game ranger struck him, this time in the throat, severing an artery.

The lion jumped back and stood facing him, growling. Wolhuter scrambled to his feet, shouting at the top of his lungs. He expected the beast to come at him again, but it did not. Instead, it turned slowly and, still growling, went a few paces. Soon its growls turned to moans. These, in turn, ceased, and the ranger knew that the beast was then dead.

Wolhuter got up the tree as fast as his injured arm would permit, and hardly was he seated when the first lion, which had been after the horse, came back on the trail of blood. By this time the plucky ranger was so faint that he tied himself to the tree to prevent himself from falling out.

He was found by his companions, who took him to a place of safety. The lion he had killed was an old male, and the weapon used was an ordinary sheath knife.—New York Tribune.

FALLING HAIR STOPPED.

Baldness Cured by Destroying the Parasitic Germ That Causes It.

Baldness follows falling hair, falling hair follows dandruff; and dandruff is the result of a germ digging its way into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality of the hair. To destroy that germ is to prevent as well as cure dandruff, falling hair, and, lastly, baldness. There is only one preparation known to do that, Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new, scientific discovery. Wherever it has been tried it has proven wonderfully successful. It can't be otherwise, because it utterly destroys the dandruff germ. "You destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

For sale by McDermid and Jury, druggists; also Payne's drug store. $1 bottles guaranteed.

The Meteoric Zone.

The August meteors are believed to originate from a large cluster or zone of meteoric bodies, which revolves around the sun in an elliptical orbit, extending far beyond the orbit of the remote planet Neptune, and through which the earth plunges annually. The earth is about ten days in passing through the entire cluster, which, from our velocity in space, indicates that the thickness of the cluster is about 16,000,000 miles.

Three Metals.

A cubic foot of aluminium weighs less than 160 pounds, a cubic foot of cast iron 450 pounds and a cubic foot of copper 560 pounds.

The Turkish Language.

Turkish is the softest toned of modern languages.

Darkening of Hair.

Hair darkens some 55 per cent during the first five years of life and a further 33 per cent up to the age of forty-five. This darkening is more marked in males than in females.

Iridescent Fishhooks.

Natives of a number of south Pacific islands make fishhooks of mother-of-pearl, so bright that no bait or other lure is necessary.

Government Land.

The land owned by the United States government exceeds in area the region east of the Alleghanies, enough to make two states like Texas, twelve like New York and fifty like Massachusetts.

Related Antiquities.

Striking resemblance has been pointed out between the remarkable, ancient ruins at Zimbabwe, in Rhodesia, and similar ruins in Cornwall, England.

Sleeping Sickness.

The Crow.

Although the common crow is one of the slowest of flying birds, it with ease can maintain a speed of thirty miles an hour for many hours at a time.

Ice and Water.

A ton of ice will cool about 284,000 pounds of water one degree.

Peculiarities of Lichens.

The lichen is remarkable for the great age to which it lives, there being good grounds for believing that the plants endure for 100 years. Their growth is exceedingly slow, almost beyond belief, indicating that only a little nourishment is necessary to keep them alive. In a dry time they have the power to suspend growth altogether, renewing it again at the fall of rain. This peculiarity alone is enough to make the lichen a vegetable wonder, as it is a property possessed by no other species of plant. Another interesting fact about lichens is that they grow only where the air is free from dust and smoke. They may be said to be a sure indication of the purity of the air, as they are never found growing in cities and towns where the atmosphere is impregnated with dust, soot, smoke and other impurities.

Tingling Ears.

If your ears burn, people say, some one is talking about you. This is very old, for Pliny says, "When our ears do glow and tingle some do talk of us in our absence."

Shakespeare in "Much Ado About Nothing" makes Beatrice say to Ursula and Hero, who had been talking of her, "What fire is in mine ears!"

Sir Thomas Browne ascribes this conceit to the superstition of guardian angels, who touch the right ear if the talk is favorable and the left if otherwise. This is done to cheer or warn.

One ear tingles, some there be
That are snarling now at me!

THE TERROR OF THE PARISIAN BOURGEOISIE

There are very few nights in the year when Paris policemen on their rounds do not stumble upon a body lying in a gory pool; sometimes the handle of a long slender knife protrudes between the shoulder blades; sometimes an ugly gash bleeds from ear to ear; not seldom, blood oozes from the mouth, nose and ears, although the dead had not sustained any apparent wound; or three little starlike bruises may dot the temple; or, again a bluish line, an inch wide, may mar the back of the neck, just above the collar line. "Les Apaches", the "cops" whisper to each other (for Parisian police officers always go two by two), and they call for an ambulance, much relieved not to have witnessed the accident.

A map of Paris shows three concentrical lines of boulevards: the grands boulevards, along which (on the north side, at least) fashionable life flows in two continuous opposite streams; then the boulevards extérieurs, and finally the wide avenues that separate the cits from its old fortifications, the still extant mur and wall. The grands boulevards form a dangereux honing ground for the sinister prowlers whom too much light scares away. On the avenues skirting the cits almost every house tenant is a poor workingman, who, except on Saturday nights, is not worth while slaughtering.

The boulevards extérieurs, however, which constitute, so to say, the border line between the land of the well-to-do and the haunts of the "prolits-bourgeois", are a different proposition. Shady amusement places, cheap dancing halls, suspicious restaurant-hotels, cut-throat wine shops, will make a whole block a patch of glaring light, and then a hostile pall of darkness, sprinkled here and there with flutterings as flames, will stretch over a mile of sidewalk.

It is here that the man from the provinces in quest of adventure, the foreigner without a guide, the little bourgeois who lingered too long at his friend's house may meet their fate, about 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning.

DEATH BY "TOLLING"

The steel blade, the blackjack, the brass knuckles, will serve the purpose according to the man's size and presumable strength. For the prey of small stature, however, the Apache reserves what in his slang he calls "tolling"; it may be an allusion to those pretty of Easter bells rung by angels who hold fast to the bell's "ears". For this is the Apache's modus operandi. A sharp blow dazes the victim and throws him down, the Apache's knees bore themselves into the chest, while his hands seize the ears, lift the head and ram it a couple of times on the pavement until a dullet thud tells of a fractured skull.

Until an Apache is an adept at the same way in which a Spanish torero dispatches a bull with a single thrust between the shoulders, or at cracking a skull Lone at one slam, he is held in little esteem and never allowed to tackle "big jobs" in a dangerous neighborhood; for Paris is a well-policed city. To the one policeman on a beat in a Canadian city there are two such on a Paris beat. The nighthawk must strike like lightning, empty the dead man's pockets in a wink and clink away into the dark. Therefore, Apaches very seldom carry guns; the knife is silent. Tolling, too, is safer—many people are known to have chipped and fractured their skulls. Unless the victim is especially well dressed there is not much of an enquiry.

When it is all over, the gang, that scatters like a flock of frightened sparrows, meets again at some wine shop, where no one is welcome who is not "in the business."

Over glasses of red wine the spoils are divided up. Cash in equal parts goes to the four or five "brothers"; the jewels are turned over to the discreet "cabaretier", who converts them into specie the next day and returns that extra bonus to "him that did the job."

Peacefully then, the gang gets a pack of greasy cards and plays well into the night. With their three ruffled caps, the "three-deckers" their scarfs of bright hue tied loose around necks left bare by the collarless flannel shirt, with their short coats fitting snugly at the shoulders and the waist; with their velvet trousers that widen out at the ankle like sailors' jeans or Mexican calzones, they make a fascinating and at the same time repulsive picture.

WOMEN OF THE APACHES

Young they are all of them. Their little mustaches are trimmed short. None of them wears a beard, but they all grow curious side chops, to which a turning motion of their whetted palm gives twist of a Hungarian bandmaster's moustache.

About two or three in the morning their women come from the streets, their toil done. Bare-headed, most of them, some with artificial flowers in their hair, some with extravagant bonnets or wrapped in light colored shawls, they walk in, one by one, two by two, gulp a last coffee or absinthe with their men and walk out with them toward their hovels. Or sometimes one woman will glide in and whisper something. The gang throw cards on the table and follow her. An hour later they are back with the booty and treat "the great girl" to champagne at times.

There are several Apache settlements in Paris, but the largest one is around the Butte Montmartre, the historical hill of the martyrs which civilization's onslaught has not yet succeeded in robbing of its picturesqueness. Trees, country hedges confront the visitor, now and then; stairways that closely resemble ladders, little winding lanes, a vegetable garden, a goat or two, a rabbit, the animal that symbolizes suburbanism in France, and yet we are in the very heart of Paris.

Lack of means of communication, however, makes land and rents very cheap; nine houses have been abandoned by their owners; brush and weed were allowed for several years to invade several acres of fernal gardens which topped the hill, and until 1905 many suspicious characters were left in absolute possession of what was known as "the jungle". There are still three windmills up there, whose wings ceased long ago to churn the clouds. Dark passages, old-fashioned houses with endless corridors, secret doors, subterranean vaults, curious cellars, make this the best place on earth to hide and elude pursuers in case of serious danger.

The landlords and janitors of the rookeries where Apaches hang out, know very well who they are and by what means they make a living, but what do they care as long as the monthly rent is paid? Should detectives be seen hovering around the house, they would be the first ones to "put their tenants wise" to the impending search of the premises.

MAKE NO EFFORT TO CONCEAL IDENTITY

Apaches themselves never try to conceal their social status. Their very clothes are a sort of warning to the public. They even affect a peculiar walk, the body bent from the loins, shoulders hunched and hands plunging deep into the trouser pockets. But who would dare to molest them? The Apache is young, bold, and has nothing to lose, except his freedom; and that freedom means constant warfare against man, against the police; it means the monotony of playing cards and drinking bad wine, and as to the future, not a gleam of hope.

The Apache is a marked man; he joins a gang at three or four and twenty, and by thirty or thirty-five he has gone. The maws of a jail hold him for the balance of his earthly existence. He knows that. He expects it. Therefore, while his freedom lasts, there is no desperate chance he will not take to get at the gold that alone could save him.

Apaches are not born, they are made made by the peculiar laws of France. Every citizen of the republic without distinction of rank or class, must serve under his country's flag for two years. Only the physically unfit escape the servitude. At the end of his term in the ranks every Frenchman seeking employment must present as a means of identification his certificate of honorable discharge.

Then it is that tragedy looms up for some unfortunate. Woe to the one whose certificate mentions the "African battalions."

The African battalions, garrisoned at the edge of the Sahara Desert, are made up of all the boys who had the misfortune of being arrested before they reached the age of twenty-one. Trivial as their offences may have been whether they were due or not to the indiscreet exuberance of youth or to some absurd entanglement, they are sent to the desert outposts, kept on convict fare, sleeping mostly in trenches which they dig, watched over by sentries that shoot to kill, commanded by the most brutal officers who go about armed to the teeth, and who make short work of the rebellious.

Under the boiling sun that lays them down fast with fever and cholera they build roads, swept over the next day by the sand. They are "the front" whenever Arabs or Moroccans threaten to shake off the French yoke. When they fall by the wayside they are tied to a horse's tail, which they protect, spurs cause the horse to tear.

And when the creepy water of sand wells, bullets from the sentries of from the nomads and the hosts of vicious horses have spared them they return to their native city with hatred in their hearts, with the loathsome memories left by association with the depraved and the morally diseased.

SCORNED BY SOCIETY

They return to their native city to find doors and hearts locked to them, their military book, which they must produce, proclaims them jailbirds. Who wants to employ an ex-convict? During their two years in the African inferno, they have atoned for their errors of the eighteenth or nineteenth years; for the second time they have settled their account with society. And now society refuses them a chance to show that they have (for some of them have) shed the old hide, to prove that a new heart is beating in their breasts.

The papers published a month or so ago accounts of an Apache's execution which stirred Paris to an unexpected degree. Liabeuf was the man's name. Anti-government sheets protested violently against the carrying out of the death sentence; on the morning of the execution some two thousand troops were required to keep back a disorderly mob, bent on taking the guillotine by storm.

The writer shared the surprise expressed by all his acquaintances at "all the fuss made about an Apache getting his due One day, though, he chanced to meet a man who some years ago had given that very Apache employment in his shop. He had followed the case with unusual interest and this is the story he had to tell:

Liabeuf was employed in a machine shop. One night, while still a mere boy, he went out with a woman of doubtful reputation, had a little wine, and expressed his exhilaration by shouting some popular refrain louder than the hour warranted. Two policemen ordered him to stop the noise. With childish bravado he only raised his voice a little higher. They remonstrated more positively. From words it came to blows. The face of one of the policemen was badly damaged in the scuffle. Liabeuf was arraigned for assault and battery and, owing to his companion's presence, for "special vagrancy", otherwise for being a cadet.

What the penalty was I could not ascertain: at twenty-one, however, he went to Africa. He came back. No shop had any work for him. He tried his hand at many trades, from running errands to dishwashing. Always there was an obliging secret service man to tip his employer. Hunger soon dogged his footsteps. One night he met the woman who had befriended him once. She took pity on him; she offered him money; he was starving; it was either that or committing suicide.

HIS EXECUTION DEMANDED

Now he really was a "special vagrant"; but, instead of becoming reconciled to that life of shame, he conceived a savage desire to avenge himself on the man who was responsible for it all. Day after day, month after month, he looked for him in every corner of the capital. For several months aside from eating the bread of shame, it is not recorded that he committed any theft or crime. He looked for a man he found him.

The jury pronounced him guilty of murder in the first degree. There was undeniable premeditation. The crime had been committed in cold blood by a man who had been living in Apache rookeries, who had been associating with the most desperate characters.

That meant death; the president of the republic could have pardoned him; the prefect of police threatened to tender his resignation unless the "cop-killer" was sent to the guillotine; if this one escaped his force would be decimated every night.

I do not say that every one of the Paris Apaches is a victim of absurd laws. There are men everywhere who prefer adventure to work who would rather take a woman's money than look for employment; but, however few the true victims may be, there are still too many victims.

The police seldom interfere with the Apaches. Interference means death, for every Apache knows that his days are numbered and acts recklessly in consequence.

THE AWAKENING

"Jean't eNd, honstely! I hate to hurt you by saying this, but it would hurt more to say that I love you if I don't. I more than like you, you know that, but I haven't thought of loving anybody at least, not so soon."

"But, Sylvia, I can wait," the man pleaded.

"Ned, let's not talk of waiting. Let's drop it altogether for now, won't you? You know I want to succeed with my music. I'm young, there's plenty for me to do, and plenty of time for doing it, before even thinking of getting married. Now, isn't that so?"

The girl bent towards him with the open-handed tomboy gesture he knew so well.

With a swift pang, the man realized that she was still girl and not yet woman. Her argument, too, was reasonable. His love should not be selfish by dimming her prospects. She was fine enough to wait for.

"All right, Sylvia, but just remember that I love you. So when you feel like loving, just call on Romeo, and I'm there." He essayed a grin.

"Shake," she said. "It's a go!"

Sylvia was being made a success. Besides learning to sing, she was learning to acquire a graceful use of her tomboyish arms, to express herself in slangless English, and to assume the poise of the successful professional.

Through the influence of her teacher she had gained the notice of a wealthy and well known patron of aspiring musical students, and already had secured entree to several well barricaded circles. She enjoyed the friendship of three or four clever actresses and musicians, studied at the school of opera, and could manage a stage gown without especial consciousness.

She made her debut in a small role, but had studied hard and was given a good press notice.

But alas for ambition!

The death of her patron changed Sylvia's plans entirely. The people in power lost interest in her. The doors of the exclusive homes began to swing stiffly on their hinges. She felt the unjust battles of caste strengthened by influence.

However, she didn't have time to indulge in a broken heart, for she was in debt and needed money.

Her glimpse of stage life had disillusioned her somewhat as to the ease of existing in the rarefied atmosphere of art, so she turned her back, albeit regretfully, upon the enchanting grand opera stage of love and tears, and proceeded to don the mask of mirth on light opera boards.

With the exception of flashy gowns, an engaging smile, and some stage, she made good. Her houses were packed, and she received even more flowers than she wanted. By degrees, she learned to kiss the leading man without a thrill to tolerate little familiarities by pig-necked managers who could make or break her, and to regard her associates as savage competitors in the race for fame and money.

The lines of her mouth were getting a bit thinner.

It was the 1000th night of the performance in Boston, and a big time was on.

Excitement ran riot with all.

The girl was at her gayest. Never before had she so sparkled and sung!

She had the audience at her feet, yet as the curtain fell, she sighed wearily.

"Oh, for one loyal friend in this land of sham!" she thought.

In her dressing room, prior to the second act, she glanced listlessly over the flowers heaped about.

Her eye caught the blue of forget-me-nots. His flowers! Did he still remember, then?

She looked eagerly for the card. Her eyes were so blurred with tears that she could scarcely read the name. "Mr. Edward Morton"

She came on, more gay, more dashing than ever!

She read approval even in the sphinx like face of the orchestra leader. She caught the adoring glances of a stage-struck girl in a near row. From a box on the right she could feel the greedy, sensual gaze of a man who had offered her his money and his past, and thought himself giving her a good bargain.

She shivered and sang her love song with a purity and exquisite emotion to which she had thought herself irretrievably dulled long before.

A tribute of silence met her rendition. Then broke a perfect storm of applause!

She did not respond with her usual flash of teeth, and quick nodding of the head, but stood stripped of stage mannerism gazing unseemingly into the audience.

Like truant birds, which, weary of their flight,
And fearful of the unwonted, lonely night,
With beating wings her refuge from their plight,
My thoughts fly home to you, my dear, to you.

There shall they find a long-desired rest,
Held safe in the dear prison of your breast
By sweet surrender all their love confessed,
No more they'll roam from you, my dear, from you

The house broke into thunderous applause!

But there was one silent man in the audience whose face was lighted with a great joy. Boston Post.

This being "I is curious business.

It usually commences in a subtle fashion, almost unconsciously.

Yet if you do not check your illness, it grows and grows.

And one fine day you find you're sick.

The greatest scavengers of the body are the white corpuscles, or phagocytes in the blood.

These white corpuscles attack and eat up every germ of disease that invades the body.

That is when they are strong enough and in sufficient numbers.

If they're not strong enough, then they wage an unequal warfare until they are finally overcome by their more powerful enemies.

The body becomes steadily sicker and sicker until actual disease sets in.

Now, we have had all sorts of so-called cures.

And a great many people have seriously endangered their health experimenting with them.

But years ago—before even science was able to tell us the right treatment for disease viz., herbs, nature's own remedies.

Now that science can tell to an absolute certainty, we know why certain herbs cure disease.

Because they strengthen and increase the white corpuscles or phagocyte.

A third of a century ago Psychine made remarkable cures.

To-day it is making remarkable cures.

In the interim, millions of bottles of Psychine have been sold.

Hundreds of thousands of people made well and kept well.

Why?

Because Psychine is largely made up of those herbs that scientists now know increase and strengthen the white corpuscles, the phagocytes.

That's why we have received hundreds of thousands of unsolicited testimonials, that's why we can afford to buy and give away hundreds of thousands of 50-cent bottles of Psychine, that's why Psychine benefits these diseases:

Baldheads Will Be Scarce When Parisian Sage Is Better Known

It Keeps Women's Hair Soft and Glossy Says Elizabeth House

No man likes to look older than he is. Every woman on earth absolutely abhors such a condition.

You may be 30 in years, but if you are bald-headed or grey, people will surely take you to be many years older, and you will be helpless to prevent.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. It is parasitic germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause; there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage, America's greatest hair restorer, will keep you looking young and attractive.

It is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to make hair grow, and stop falling hair; to cure dandruff in two weeks; to stop itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Parisian Sage is the most invigorating, satisfying and pleasantest hair dressing made; it makes the hair soft, luxuriant and handsome; it is especially praised by women who have beautiful hair. Parisian Sage is for sale by Wm. Madill at 50 cents a large bottle, or charges prepaid, from the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co. Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the auburn hair is on every bottle.

"I have only used one bottle of Parisian Sage, and, of course, I can not praise it as much as if I had used more, but I find it a good tonic for the hair.

"It keeps the hair soft and glossy, the scalp clean, and makes the hair grow long, and stops falling hair.

"I recommend it to any one as a good tonic."—Elizabeth House, Manchester, Conn.

FARMERS SHOULD CULTIVATE GARDENS

From Farm and Dairy.

It has been remarked on many an occasion that the more land a farmer has, the smaller is his garden patch. The truth of the remark has been bette out fairly well in my observations of farms that I have known. It is a mistake to do without a good garden, and why so many will do without good garden stuff, grown right at home, has always been a mystery to me. Perhaps the reason that gardens are so often neglected is to be found in the indifference on the part of the women folk. Some women I know have been so used to going out to the woods, or along fence-rows, hunting for wild fruit that they overlook, or do not know of, the possibilities of growing better fruit right at home with much less labor. I shall make special reference in this letter to raspberries. What is true of them so far as labor and the fruit is concerned, will apply to a greater or less extent to any other fruit that may be grown in a farm garden.

REMOVING OLD CANES

The berry bushes are planted out in short rows four feet apart. At such times as the men folks find it convenient in winter time or in early spring while the frost is in the ground, the patch is gone through and the old canes broken out. These break off readily, and a man with leather mits on can do the work without inconvenience from thorns. The growing canes, or those that have life in them, are thinned out to a moderate stand and the tops of those left for the coming crop cut off about four feet from the ground.

About once every two years, or as often as it is required, the men folks bring a couple of loads of wet strawy manure and mulch the patch quite thickly between the rows and close up to the canes. This mulch prevents all weeds and grass from growing so that there is no need for cultivation. There is always lots of moisture in the ground under this mulch and the success of this method of caring for the patch is vouched for in the splendid large berries that we have to pick.

I would advise anyone who lives on a farm and who has never grown berries in the garden to plan at once to have some plants set out. It takes too much time altogether for any busy woman to go hunting over the country for wild fruit. It is much better to grow it in the garden at home.

A MISMATED POET

The Tardy Marriage of Fitzgerald and Lucy Barton.

A UNION PITIFUL, YET COMIC

The Couple Were Utterly Unsuited to One Another, and He Fled From Her During the Honeymoon—A Reunion That Failed to Reunite.

The incidents leading up to and those following the marriage of Edward Fitzgerald, translator of the "Omar Khayyam," were of a ludicrous and at the same time somewhat serious character. Mr. Francis Gribble gave the facts in the Fortnightly Review:

"The Lucy Barton story is very pitiful, but it is also rather comic. She was a Quaker's daughter, who had joined the Church of England as a means, one imagines, of climbing the social ladder, and she was just the sort of person whom Fitzgerald would esteem, but detest—prim, pious, methodical, fussy, not quite a lady and yet in a weird provincial way worldly, the sort of person to whom it seems equally important to teach in the Sunday school and to be a leader of society.

"Fitzgerald and she had known each other for the greater part of their lives and were both nearly fifty years of age when marriage overtook them. He did not even know that he was engaged to her. But she told him that he was, and he was too polite to contradict her.

"Politeness only broke down when, after the ceremony, she assumed proprietorial airs and insisted that her husband should pay afternoon calls [illegible] and dress for dinner. That was the last straw, though very likely it was also the first.

"Fitzgerald supposed apparently that in marrying Lucy Barton he had merely acquired a housekeeper who would know her place, who would confine her new dignity to her housekeeper's room, leaving him as free as of old to slop about in slippered ease, unkempt, unshaven, enveloped in a dressing gown until the evening, with books all over the floor, pipes all over the mantelpiece and tobacco ash all over his clothes.

"It would not have mattered, of course, if he had married for love and if his bride had been a woman of grace and charm. Such a one would have changed all that like a fairy waving a magic wand. But Fitzgerald had only married 'to oblige,' and Mrs. Fitzgerald was not in the least like a fairy. She was more like a female drill sergeant, conventional, stiff and starched, yet with pretensions.

"Her flow of fussy small talk was a nuisance, and her interruption of Fitzgerald's meditations with the demand that he should shave and wear clean linen assumed the proportion of a tragedy in his eyes.

"He stood it for a fortnight and then fled, leaving the honeymoon unfinished, going off to stay with friends, bolting like a rabbit for its burrow.

"There were a reunion and an attempt at reconciliation, but in vain. Fitzgerald's letters to his friends at this period are like the letters home of a boy who is being bullied at school.

"'I believe,' he writes to Professor Cowell, 'there are new channels fretted in my cheeks with many unmanly tears, and there really is no evidence that he had anything to cry about beyond the fact that he was being hustled out of a comfortable dressing gown into a starched shirt with high collars.

"That fact was symptomatic of the general discrepancy of tastes and points of view. So we find him writing again, 'Till I see better how we get on I dare fix on no place to live or die in,' and then before long came definite separation and the drafting of a deed of settlement.

"Fitzgerald, it is said, used long afterward to walk up and down a certain garden path for hours together calling himself a fool, and when in later years he met his wife again he first put out his hand and then changed his mind and turned his back."

His Other Self

A Forgery Within the Law

By MARY D. BLAKE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

A man was sitting on the piazza of a summer hotel in Maine when another man came up the steps and, after eying him sharply, advanced toward him and said:

"Mr. Pierson, I believe."

"You have the advantage of me, sir."

"I have seen you several times and have been introduced to you. Are you not Richard Pierson of Chicago?"

"If you will excuse me, sir, I prefer not to tell you who I am until I learn something about yourself. Doubtless you are perfectly honest and sincere in taking me for an acquaintance, but you must admit that such methods are so often taken with a sinister motive that it behooves us to be on our guard on the advances of a stranger."

"You are perfectly right. I am Mark Anderson and have often been in Chicago. There I have met Mr. Richard Pierson. If you are not he you resemble him sufficiently to be his twin brother."

"I confess," replied the other, softening, "that I have often been taken for this man Pierson. I wish that I could say that I am he, for I understand he has a fortune. When were you in Chicago, sir?"

Anderson told him that he had left Chicago but a few weeks ago, adding:

"If you are not Richard Pierson of Chicago will you now kindly tell me who you are?"

"Lovering is my name—Alexander Lovering."

Mr. Anderson, while he carefully refrained from appearing to court Mr. Lovering, lost no opportunity of putting himself in his way. Lovering at first appeared to be trying to avoid the man, but gradually gave way and suffered himself to become intimate with his new acquaintance. Finally Anderson mentioned a certain young widow—a Mrs. Markland. Lovering pricked up his ears.

"The man you resemble," said Anderson, "was at one time attentive to her."

Lovering winced.

One morning the two men were in the writing room of the hotel. Lovering was writing a letter. He had finished and addressed it and was beginning another when he was called away, leaving the addressed letter on the table at which he had written it. When he returned Anderson said to him:

"Do you know that your handwriting is very like that of the man I mistook you for?"

"How do you know that?" asked Lovering.

"I could not help seeing the address on the letter you left on the table when you went out."

"Are you familiar with this man—what's his name?"

"Pierson."

"Pierson's handwriting?"

"Yes."

"How did you become so?"

"Well, the fact is that Pierson was a suitor for the hand of a woman I know."

"And she showed you his letters?"

"She did once."

"Did she consider that honorable?"

"Well, the truth is I had heard things about Pierson, and, the lady being my friend, I thought it my duty to tell her. She showed me a letter to convince me that I was mistaken, but I convinced her at last."

Lovering did not seem to take enough interest in the matter to follow it further.

"I wonder," said Anderson, "if your signature is as much like Pierson's as your handwriting is."

"We're not of the same name."

"Write his name, Richard G. Pierson."

Lovering wrote the name and showed it to Anderson, who studied it carefully. "I think I have a note from Pierson," he said. "I'll get it and compare the two signatures."

Going to his room, he returned with the note. It simply informed Mr. Anderson that a certain request of his could not be granted.

"Not even an expert," said Anderson, "could tell the signatures apart."

He looked up at Lovering and found Lovering looking at him with a changed, a cunning, expression.

"Let's drop this fencing," said the latter. "I understand what you are up to."

"Well?"

"I'm your man, but I won't have anything to do with the matter except the printmaking."

"You mean"—

"I'll write the check. You'll have to do the rest."

"You tremble too much. I'm afraid of you."

"Nothing risked, nothing gained."

"What amount do you propose to go for?"

"What do you propose? This is your suggestion. I assume you have figured on getting funds out of this man before and are posted on what he will stand."

This was true. Anderson had figured on getting funds from Pierson and knew where he kept his bank account and what was his credit. It was agreed between the two men that Lovering

For Skin Sufferers

If you, or someone dear to you, have undergone the itching, burning, sleep-destroying torments of eczema or other cruel skin eruption and have suffered from its embarrassing, unsightly disfigurement; if you have tried all manner of treatment, no matter how harsh, to no avail, and have all but given up hope of cure, you can appreciate what it means to thousands of skin-tortured sufferers, from infancy to age, when the first warm bath with Cuticura Soap and gentle application of Cuticura Ointment brings instant relief, permits rest and sleep, and proves the first step in a speedy and successful treatment.

should draw a check for $25,000 on a certain bank in New York where Anderson knew Pierson kept an average balance of $50,000 he used for margins on stock operations. The rascals were to go to New York together to perpetrate the swindle. One thing Lovering insisted on, to which Anderson demurred—Lovering claimed that since he would do the forging he alone would be guilty. Anderson could throw the whole burden on him. Lovering also changed his mind about the method of drawing the money. Resembling Pierson so closely, he would need no identification at the bank. He could present the check with certainty that it would be paid without question. He therefore required Anderson to write him a proposition to get $25,000 out of Pierson by forging his name and personating him. Lovering refused to proceed with the matter until Anderson gave him this paper, and Anderson finally consented.

The conspirators parted to meet in New York on a certain day in September. Anderson went first, in order to investigate Pierson's bank account with a view to determining if it would stand a draft upon it such as was meditated. Anderson wished to defer the execution of the paper Lovering required till the time of drawing the money, but Lovering refused to go to New York at all without the paper in his possession. He succeeded in convincing his pal that a proposition to perpetrate a fraud was not in the eye of the law the same as perpetrating a fraud. Indeed, there was a great difference. This removed Anderson's objections so far as to induce him to sign the paper.

When the day appointed came round Anderson and Lovering met in the lobby of a New York hotel.

"Well," said Lovering, "what do you know?"

"I know that a certain lady on whom Pierson has long been sweet is in the city. Therefore it is probable that Pierson himself is not far off, though he's not so thick with her as he was"—

"You mean since you broke up the intimacy between them?"

"Well, that's about it."

"How could you, a crook, prejudice a lady against a gentleman?"

"It's never been in a scheme like this before. I belong to a good family."

"Well, never mind your family. What have you found out about Pierson's bank balance?"

"He had over $70,000 in bank yesterday."

"How did you find it out?"

"I'm in with one of the bookkeepers."

"Ah! You are! Well, did you get one of the bank's blank checks?"

"Yes. Here it is."

He produced his pocketbook and took out several blank checks. "The only risk," he said, "is this—Pierson's checks have printed numbers on them. The teller may notice this is not numbered."

"I'll fix that by calling for one of the bank's checks and signing it right there before him."

"Good! I never thought of that. Then you can pay me my share, and we'll think you drew the money for a special purpose."

The same afternoon the two men entered the bank where Pierson kept his account. Lovering went to the paying teller's window and said:

"Good-by, give me a blank check. I want some money."

"All right, Mr. Pierson." And he handed the bit of paper through the window.

Lovering took it to a desk where he were writing materials and wrote the check and signed it with as firm a hand as if he were drawing his own money.

"You're a cool one," said Anderson, who was trembling like a leaf.

Lovering presented the check and asked for the money in $500 bills. The two men waited till the sum was counted, then received it through the teller's window.

As they left the bank Anderson drew a long breath. "You did that splendidly," he said. "How could you keep your nerve?"

"An honest man's nerve is never strained by his conscience," replied the other. "I drew my own money."

"What do you mean?" asked Anderson, starting.

"I am Richard Pierson, the man whom your lying tongue separated from Virginia Markland. You needn't shiver; you are in no danger. I have simply got you down in black and white that you are a swindler. How you ever fooled a lady of Mrs. Markland's good sense is a mystery to me, though I admit you are as plausible a rascal as I ever met. Now go before I kick you down these steps."

Anderson lost no time in obeying the order, and Pierson, re-entering the bank, deposited the money he had drawn.

That evening he sent a card up to Virginia Markland, who was staying at one of the uptown hotels. On it was written "I have an explanation to make." He met the lady in her parlor, but was coldly received.

"It is only recently," he said, "that by accident I have discovered who poisoned you against me. I confess that I am astonished at your having listened to a man who should be in state prison."

"To whom do you refer?"

"Edward Anderson."

"Mr. Anderson is a gentleman."

"If you think so read this."

He drew the contract by which he and Anderson were to obtain money by forgery. Then he told the story of how he acquired it.

The lady admitted that without this written evidence she would not have believed that one she had long honored with her friendship could be a common swindler. She asked forgiveness and was forgiven.

Russia.

Russia did not break into European history until comparatively recent times. Ruric, a Varengian chief, seems to have been the first to establish a government, about 862. Ruric's descendants ruled amid many ups and downs till 1598, at which time the real history of the country may be said to begin. With the solitary exception of the United States of America, the progress of Russia under Peter the Great and Catherine II. is unequaled for rapidity in the history of the world.

Bringing Down the Average.

"It is said that there are 120,000 hairs on the average human head," said the baldheaded man.

"Too bad that you've pulled the average down so low, my dear," said his wife.—Yonkers Statesman.

A Cruel Companion.

"Why does he say that her face is like one of Browning's poems?"

"Because it has some hard lines in it."—Buffalo Express.

Successive Cooks.

"I make a pretty good thing out of that client."

"Plenty of litigation, eh?"

"Oh, no. She thinks she ought to leave something to her cook, and it keeps me busy drawing up new wills."—Kansas City Journal.

Cyclists' Paradise.

Denmark is described in the report of the American consul at Copenhagen as a wheelman's paradise, with an abundance of good roads, good inns and special tracks in cities and few gradients. In Copenhagen, he says, there are 80,000 cyclists—probably a larger proportion to the population than will be found in any other city.

CRIPPLED WITH LAME BACK

THIS RESULT OF LONG STANDING KIDNEY DISEASE WAS OVERCOME BY DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY LIVER PILLS

This letter gives you some idea of the definite and certain results you obtain by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills for kidney disease.

This medicine is very prompt in action and very direct in effecting cure. You do not need to keep up the treatment long before you find most marked improvements.

Mrs. Richard Patterson, Haldimand, Gaspe Co., Que., writes: "I want to tell you that I was cured of kidney disease of long standing by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. I used to suffer a great deal, not knowing just what was the cause of the trouble and got so bad that I was almost crippled with lame, sore back.

"Before I had used two boxes of these pills I found my back better and less than three boxes made the cure complete. I have never had a sore back since and believe the cure to be lasting."

Backache, headache, bodily pains, scanty, painful urination, deposits in urine after standing, fickle appetite, indigestion and irregularity of the bowels are among the symptoms which warn you of serious trouble from kidney disease.

You can be practically certain that Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills will help you and help you quickly. Make the test for yourself to-day. One pill a dose, 25 cts. a box, all dealers; or, Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

AN APPEAL TO REASON

TWELVE months ago, after prolonged investigation and experiment, we plinned our faith to the Knight motor as the greatest improvement of the decade in automobile construction.

Many believed us, bought cars and are to-day congratulating themselves on their judgment.

There were croakers then, perhaps there are to-day, but we hear less of them.

THEY SAID—The engine was an experiment—forgetting that it had stood the greatest engine test on record before the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland.

THEY SAID—It will not stand up on Canadian roads, although they knew a challenge of $1,250 was open to anyone who wished to measure his motor against the Knight for reliability.

THEY SAID—That it would not be taken up in Europe, and that the Daimler Company were about to discard it. We knew at the time—and anyone can verify it now—that the leading concerns of all of the countries of Europe have adopted the Knight motor.

THEY SAID—No one in the United States would take it up. We knew that over twenty of the largest concerns in the United States have from time to time applied for consideration in the American rights. And we know to-day that leading United States firms will announce 1911 Models with Knight motors in another twelve months despite the fact that the agents of some of these concerns profess great skepticism about the Knight motor to-day.

We seldom refer to or bother about the suggestions of interested opponents. We want, however, to repeat our conviction, formed a year ago, and confirmed by twelve months' of experience in the factory, on the road, and in the users' hands.

That the Knight motor far surpasses the old valve type, and that it is only a question of time before it entirely supersedes it in all high grade cars. Get a car that will be up-to-date the longest.

Our 1911 model is out, but our 1910 does can smile, for their car is up-to-date still. 1911 is only a refinement in details on 1910.

The same motor. The same body lines, with high front doors, now pretty universally copied.

Is not this the type of car to buy?

you." I answered. "I wish I could thank you and Lady Angela."

"You must not attempt anything of the sort," she declared. "My father, by-the-bye, Mr. Ducaine, wished me to express his great regret that he should have interfered in any way with your arrangements for this evening. You know, there are so many stupid people around here who have never understood anything at all about the war, and he was very anxious to get Colonel Ray to talk to them. He had no idea, however, that it was the night fixed for your lecture, and he hopes that you will accept the loan of the village hall from him any night you like, and we should so much like all of us to come."

"His Grace is very kind," I murmured. "I fear, however, that the people are not very much interested in lectures, even about their own neighbourhood."

"I am, at any rate," Lady Angela answered, smiling, "and I think we can promise you an audience."

Colonel Ray, who had been standing at the window, came back to us.

"If I may be permitted to make a suggestion, Lady Angela," he said, "I think it would be well if you returned home now, and I will follow shortly on foot."

"Indeed," I said, "there is no need for you, Colonel Ray, to remain. I am absolutely recovered now, and the old woman who looks after me will be here in the morning."

He seemed scarcely to have heard me. Afterwards, when I knew him better, I understood his apparent unconcern of any suggestion counter to his own. He thought slowly and he spoke seldom, but when he had once spoken the matter, so far as he was concerned, was done with. Lady Angela apparently was used to him, for she rose at once. She did not shake hands, but she nodded to me pleasantly. Colonel Ray handed her into the wagonette, and I heard the quicker throbbing of the engine as it glided off into the darkness.

WHEN HEALTH IS RUN DOWN

A Tonic Such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Is Promptly Needed

When the health is run down from any cause whatever, a tonic is needed. A feeling of weakness, poor appetite, loss of breath after slight exertion, indicates that a complete breakdown is near. Sometimes these troubles are due to overwork or worry, or again they may be due to the after effects of fever or some wasting illness. But whatever the cause the trouble should not be neglected, and for the purpose of gaining new health and new strength there is absolutely no better medicine than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which fill the veins with new, rich blood, which tone and strengthen every nerve and every organ in the body. Mrs. Rose A. Smith, Roblin, Man., says: "Some years ago I had a severe attack of typhoid fever. When I recovered sufficiently to be able to get about I found that I was not able to gather up my strength. I tried tonic wines and other medicines, but without avail. For months I could hardly go up stairs, and if I took a walk I was always obliged to take a friend with me to help me home again. A doctor had again been called in, but he said I would grow out of it in time and gave me more medicine, but instead of gaining I kept getting worse, and was at last obliged to take to my bed. One day while lying reading I chanced to come across a cure made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this decided me to try them. Before I had taken the pills long I began to feel a decided improvement and my friends also said I was beginning to look like my old self again. From this on the improvement was steady, but I continued to take the Pills for a couple of months, when I felt that the cure was complete. Several years have passed since then and as I have remained in the best of health I am warranted in saying that the cure is permanent, and I freely give this statement for the benefit it may bring to others."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

OCT. 16TH, 1910.

(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Last Judgment. Matt. xxv.: 31-46.

Golden Text—Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me. Matt. xxv.: 40.

Verse 31—Are these words of Jesus to be taken as a parable, that is figuratively, or literally? Why?

When will be the day of Judgment?

How long will it probably take to render judgment upon all the people that have ever lived?

Verses 32-33—Where at the present time are all the bad people, and all the good people, that have died since the birth of the human race?

By what rule, or law, will the separation of the bad from the good be made?

Will a man's orthodoxy have any weight with the judge in that great day? Why?

Will a man's heterodoxy, if he has been ruled by the law of love, in any way prejudice the judge at the judgment day?

Why may we hope that many, who have never heard of Christ among the heathen, will be found among the sheep at the judgment?

Verse 34—What is the nature of the kingdom which God has prepared for his children?

The agencies of cause and effect in relentless, for example, poison kills, like begets like, sin produces suffering etc. In what sense is this law the explanation of the statement, "the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world?"

Verses 35-36—If the "kingdom of heaven is righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost," do all those necessarily inherit that kingdom who are loving and kind to everybody? Why?

Why is it impossible for a selfish man to inherit the kingdom of heaven?

Verses 37-40. Why does Jesus take an act of kindness done to a fellow man, as done to Himself?

From the standard here given what is the most important work that a church, or an individual, can be engaged in, and why? (The question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Should the church have the same zeal, and the same compact organization, for caring for the poor, comforting the sick, and making glad the sad, as she has for missionary work? Why or why not?

Verses 41-46 What does the expression "everlasting fire" stand for here?

Is the punishment of the wicked everlasting, because God would not be willing to forgive in the future state, or because the character of the wicked is fixed, having no desire for forgiveness, or for both these reasons?

Without any formal sentence, why is not a stingy, hard-hearted, close-fisted, cruel man, who pays no heed to the pitiful cry of suffering around him, necessarily in an eternal hell?

Why does the identification of Jesus with his people really make them one with him?

Lesson for Sunday, Oct. 23rd. 1910—Review.

BROTHERS IN CART STRUCK BY AUTO ONE CANNOT LIVE

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, OCT. 14.—On two little cots in New York Hospital James Cahill, aged nine, and his brother, Eugene, two years older, of No. 555 West Eighteenth Street, are lying beside each other, the former dying and the other seriously injured as the result of having been run down by an automobile while driving in their pony cart yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock.

James was unconscious last night, but Eugene was mindful of his surroundings, and though he tossed about in physical pain, his greatest suffering was the knowledge that his small brother was dying. This almost crazed the boy, who pleaded continually to be allowed to sit on the bedside of James and comfort him. Eugene's appeals brought tears to the eyes of the nurses.

TURNED OUT FROM BEHIND CART

The father of the lads is James R. Cahill, a liveryman, with a stable at No. 528 West Twenty-second Street. Yesterday afternoon the boys went driving in their basket cart, which was drawn by their pony Nuggets. They went through Central Park and about 5 o'clock were going west on Twenty-second Street, in the direction of the stable. A slow-moving coal wagon was in front of them, and as they were about opposite the stable they turned from behind it, intending to pass the cart and cut across to their father's establishment.

At a word from one of the boys the pony jumped forward. The small vehicle was broadside to the street. At that instant a touring automobile owned by the White Car Company, operated by Walter Felting and containing a woman passenger, appeared not ten feet away. Felting cut off power and jammed on the emergency brake, but it was too late. The machine had lost scarcely any momentum when it struck the pony cart in the middle. Above the crash of the collision could be heard the woman's shriek.

James Cahill was tossed twenty feet, struck on his head and lay still. Eugene was thrown in another direction and fell on his face. He was dazed for a moment, then jumped to his feet and taking his unconscious brother in his arms carried him to the sidewalk, where he sank to his knees overcome by the shock of his fall.

Stablemen and employees of an American Tobacco Company's factory, opposite the Cahill building, surrounded the automobile and were on the point of mobbing Felting when he explained that he had no intention of trying to escape, that he was blameless, and wanted to take the injured boys to the nearest hospital. The woman, her face white said nothing, but opened a door of the auto.

TAKES BLEEDING BOY IN HER ARMS

Felting and a stableman handed James in first. The woman, who was stylishly dressed, took the unconscious boy in her arms and pillowed his bleeding head on her breast. Eugene was placed beside her and she put one arm around him as he leaned his head on her shoulder. Then the machine started swiftly for New York Hospital.

The father of the boys was sitting in his office looking out the window when the auto smashed into the pony cart. He saw his boys hurled to the street, watched his employees and those from across the street threaten the chauffeur; watched his injured sons being placed in the machine, and saw them driven off. He seemed paralyzed by what had happened. Then just as the auto turned south at Tenth Avenue, he dashed into the street, jumped on a truck, lashed the horse to a gallop and drove to the hospital.

After remaining with his sons for a little while he went home to tell his wife and the smaller children what had happened. All evening he walked the floor repeating the name of his dying son. James was an altar boy at St. Francis Xavier's Church on West Sixteenth Street.

Felting was not arrested. The woman in the car did not tell her name. She had engaged it at Twenty-third Street ferry to take her home.

A LITTLE FRIENDLY ADVICE

There are several "don'ts" which should be observed whenever two or more women are gathered together, but which, alas, are frequently disregarded. For instance, don't say to a friend "How stout you are growing." No lady likes to be told that she is growing or has grown stout. If it is a fact she is doubtless quite well aware of it and anxious to keep others from discovering it. Don't say "How well you are looking," it is better to make no remark on the personal appearance of your friend.

Don't tell a friend who has a particularly becoming gown or bonnet that she looks ten years younger in that than in anything you have ever seen her wear. Don't tell her, rather, that it is the most becoming thing you have ever seen her wear. This is an impeachment of her taste heretofore, though you probably have no such thought.

KILLED IN COLLISION

Imperial Limited Crashed Head-on Into Heavy Stock Train and Fireman Dies From Injuries Received in Accident

MANY CATTLE GONE

Special Wire to the Examiner.

SUDBURY, ONT., OCT. 15.—Fireman Vice, of Chapleau, was killed, and a number of others injured this morning at three o'clock when the Imperial Limited crashed head on into a heavy stock train at Geneva, a small station near here. The morning was very foggy. Most of the train crews jumped, but Vice died from his injuries on the way to the hospital. Thousands of dollars worth of cattle were destroyed in the wreck. They were consigned to various Ontario points. Particulars are coming very slowly and some rumours say that several more are dead and many injured.

Engineer McLennan, Fireman Vice and Engineer, whose name is not given at present, are all dead, and Fireman Summers is fatally injured, as a result of a head-on collision between cattle train and Limited Express. Engineer McLennan lived long enough to take blame of collision on himself for running without orders. Both engines are locked together and standing in air. Traffic both ways is delayed some hours.

GYPSIES ARE HERE

Forty are Encamped Near Downer's Corners Just Now.

Peterborough is being invaded just now by another bunch of gypsies in characteristics very closely resembling the agregation who caused such a sensation here a year ago last June. Fortunately, however, there has not yet been a general inroad into the city, as on that occasion. A colony of about forty men, women and children are at present encamped in Wilson's lane near Downer's corners and some of the tribe have made begging trips into the city. They have a couple of performing bears as an attraction.

WHOLE COUNTRY IS RINGING WITH IT

Wonderful Cure of Rheumatism by Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Hutchins, of Dunham, Que., could not walk across the room —Story of her speedy and complete cure.

Dunham, Que., Oct. 14.—(Special).—Missisquoi County is ringing with the story of Mrs. O. M. Hutchins, who after suffering from Rheumatism, Lumbago and Neuralgia, is again a strong, hearty woman. In an interview Mrs. Hutchins says:

"I was affected with Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Lumbago. My limbs would swell; my muscles would cramp; I was nervous and had a heavy dragging sensation across the loins.

"I could not even walk across the room. Then I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and after taking six boxes found myself in the best of health as well as ever I was in my life."

Mrs. Hutchins' troubles were all caused by Kidney Disease. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured them so completely and quickly. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure only Kidney Diseases, but they are a sure cure for any form of it from Backache to Bright's Disease.

PUBLIC PLAY GROUNDS ARE ADVOCATED BY TEACHERS TO PETITION THE COUNCIL

Matter Was Discussed at Closing Session of the City Teachers' Institute Yesterday---County Teachers Have Also Concluded Most Successful Series of Meetings.

The closing session of the local Teachers' Association produced two papers of great interest and value to the members.

This paper, "Some Important Phases of Elementary Education," Mr. W. J. Kelly showed a complete and true knowledge of his subject. The system in vogue years ago, the present system, and the system to be expected, were dwelt upon. In the past the outlook for the boy, who could not, through force of circumstances, aspire to a profession, was not a bright one. The addition of manual training has given the boy with a leaning towards the industrial life, an opportunity to beg a in the development of the hand. The duty of the teacher was to guide the child in the selection of his life work, and to convince him of the necessity of an education.

Dr. McPherson's address, "The Health of the Child," made a profitable and entertaining close to a convention successful from every point of view. His subject, always of paramount interest to the teacher, was presented in a most practical manner, and as the speaker was for some years a member of the local High school staff, he was quite conversant with the hygienic environment necessary to the pupil. The questions of ventilation and seating were well treated and illustrated. At the close of the convention the thanks of the association were tendered the speaker for his able address.

The public play grounds question received considerable attention during the session and recommendations will shortly be made to the municipal authorities to do something in the matter.

The session closed with the singing of the national anthem.

G. T. R. Employees To Get Their Old Positions Back

Mr. P. J. Lynch superintendent of the Grand Trunk Railway remained over night. He came to the city in his private car in the evening and left for Lindsay this morning. He held a conference with some of the local railway men last night, and it is rumoured that the local men who have been out of work since the strike, will be restored to their positions. Conductor Haskill and Mr. John McLean, formerly part of the crew of the Peterborough flyer were asked to be in Lindsay this morning to talk matters over. Information has been received to the effect that both Mr. Haskill and Mr. McLean will be restored to their former positions, and Mr. Chas. Adams, who is now in charge of the flyer, will be put in his old position on the Bellville train. These changes will take place in the course of a few days according to the information received.

Boy Who Is Charged With Theft Remanded

Fred Sullivan appeared before Magistrate Dumble in the police court this morning on a charge of stealing a quantity of tobacco, cigars and other articles enumerated in yesterday's issue of the Examiner, on the night of the 8th of October from Jas. Edgar. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence, while Crown Attorney R. E. Wood conducted the prosecution. Mr Gordon asked that the prisoner be remanded, as he was not prepared to go on with the case. The prisoner was not asked to plead. His Worship Magistrate Dumble remanded the case until Thursday, the 20th of October. $1,000 bail and two sureties of 500 each are asked, and unless this is put up the prisoner will remain in gaol until the morning of the 20th.

Fund Will Soon Have Reached The Five Thousand Dollar Mark

Most encouraging features in the Chimes movement are reported today. The Peterborough Lodge, Independent Order of Oddfellows, very liberally donated twenty-five dollars. This was the Society's own idea and the response was most spontaneous. The staff and guests of the Oriental Hotel, through the head waitress, Mrs. Smith, furnished a pleasant surprise to the committee by sending in forty dollars, which was, needless to say, greatly appreciated. Dr. Ernest Hammes, of St. Paul, Minn., sent a kind donation. Many of the old subscriptions have been paid and are now coming in every day. Most of them having been due on October 1. The fund at noon to-day stood at $4,911.72.

A meeting of subscribers will be held on Thursday evening next.

TO TEST THE WATER

Water Commissioners Have Fitted Up Laboratory in the City Buildings—City Water Can Now Be Tested Here—Will be Examined From Week to Week

M. H. O. IN CHARGE

For the purpose of testing the city water from week to week, the Water Commissioners have fitted up a laboratory in the city buildings. These tests and bacteriological experiments will be conducted by Dr. McPherson, Medical Health Officer. The water will be tested under different weather conditions, after a heavy rainfall and after the snow has melted, to ascertain if it is pure. Dr. McPherson has taken a course in the Provincial laboratory and henceforth it will not be necessary to send the water to Toronto. The room has been equipped with the sole object of making water tests, by the Water Commissioners, but no objection would likely be made by them, to the Council adding the proper equipment for the examination of milk.

In company with Dr. McPherson, an Examiner reporter visited the new laboratory this morning and various tests in the examination of water were explained. In pure water the normal percentage of chlorine should be six parts in a million. If it contains more than six part s,it is the initiative for further investigation for animal contamination. City water at the present time shows eight parts chlorine, but that does not necessarily mean that there is contamination. A test was made for chlorine in well water, which was drunk by the only typhoid patient in the city. Chlorine was found to be present in 80 parts and Dr. McPherson stated that there was bound to be contamination. Further test is now under way for gas producing organisms and typhoid bacteria.

The room is fitted up with an apparatus for sterilizing, and hot and cold incubators for the development of organisms.

This addition to the city hall departments is an innovation that will be greatly appreciated and the results of tests will be followed with interest.

FAIR DIRECTORS MET

Meeting Was Held Last Evening in City Council Chambers

A meeting of the Fair Directors was held last evening in the City Council chambers, when ways and means were discussed for the purchase of grounds for the Peterborough Industrial Society. The President, Mr. R. H. Leary, was in the chair, and practically all the directors were present. It was decided that if the city would spend $15,000 in buying the present exhibition grounds, the directors were prepared to spend $12,000 in the erection of new buildings and other improvements. A meeting of representative men of the city will be held next Thursday evening, when the matter of holding a public meeting will be discussed and a decision reached as to what plan of action will be taken at this gathering of citizens.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE WINNING MISS."

"The Wining Miss" proved to be just as winning as the advance notices said she was and theatre-goers who were at the Grand in goodly numbers last night were greatly pleased with her and her fine company.

This is one musical play that came out of the west, and made good.

The comedy part is in the hands of Max Bloom. He has not the reputation in this city of several other near-comedians, but he is really funny, and a hard worker.

The supporting company is excellent.

Miss Loraine Lester, the winning miss, is a most attractive little lady, as graceful and as winsome as the most critical could desire, and she both sang and danced well. She is as fragile as a summer girl's engagement, but she made a big hit last evening. The chorus was large, well trained and musical, and the girls above the average in looks. They could dance, too, with more than ordinary grace.—Toronto World.

GUS WEINBERG COMING

Our old friend, Gus Weinberg, who is a big favourite in Peterborough on account of his very funny work in "The Ginger-bread Man", and in the title role of "The Butter-maker", will be seen here shortly in "The Alaskan" the musical comedy in which he is co-star with Richard F. Carroll.

BISHOP FALLON APPEARS TO BE DETERMINED TO PUT END TO BILINGUAL SYSTEM

Gives as His Reason the Tardy Development of French Canadians in Southwestern Portion of the Province ---Should Be Leaders Instead of Hewers of Wood and Drawers of Water.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, OCT. 15. Right Rev. Fallon, Bishop of London, intends to abolish the bilingual system of education within his diocese, no matter what the cost. This is more and more evident as the intensity of the situation increases. The resignation of Secretary Maisonville, of the Hon. Dr. Reaume's department, doesn't relieve things on the least. It only brings the crisis nearer. Bishop Fallon is now touring the northern end of his diocese and his hasty reply to queries respecting the trouble is that he is not against the French. That may be, but he has no hesitancy in letting it be known that he against bilingualism. He blames the bilingual school system for the somewhat tardy advancement of the French speaking people in the south-western end of the province. That is the reason he says that there are so many French Canadians among the hewers of wood and drawers of water, instead of being leaders in industry and education.

He feels that his French Canadian parishioners are standing in their own light in insisting on dual language. As to political aspect situation this morning, both Conservatives and Liberals here say it is serious for the government. Bishop Fallon's opinion is that of majority of Ontario government, that bilingualism should be abolished, but that means the loss of Dr. Reaume for the Department of Public Works, and probably two or three constituencies in extreme ends of the province.

Meetings Will be Held.

WINDSOR, OCT. 15. It is expected that several meetings, some secret and public, will be held, dealing with the bilingual school system. French Canadian opinion here is roused to fever heat. In interviews which your staff correspondent had with prominent French Canadians, it was quite evident that they stood for bilingualism as strongly now as ever. They will resent any interference, and if the government tries to abolish French will extend French Catholic schools without government aid or control.

Instructive Address On Art In Third And Fourth Book Classes

The closing session of the county teachers' convention, held in the assembly hall of the Normal school yesterday afternoon, was largely attended.

Miss Jessie C. McRae gave a very instructive address, based on the subject of art in third and fourth classes. She said that a great deal of attention should be paid to design and in training inventive faculty. She also spoke of the pencils to be used in advanced grades.

These should be medium and harder. Soft pencil 3B.—Continue with crayon and charcoal work.

In colour work the lecturer advised beginning with water colours in the three primary colours—red, yellow, and blue. Large brushes should be used. Then she spoke of brush and ink in the second class—continue in fourth, then harder pencils, 2B and H.B.

Mechanical drawing in fourth class was then spoken of. Theory of colour and hues of secondary colours should be taught. Then the numerous drawings of pupils of the third and fourth forms were shown to the teachers. Miss McRae spoke of simplified and mechanical drawings taught in these classes. She advised that in art, in all grades, to have good pictures and study them. She also told the assembled teachers to train the children to know what is good in pictures; have free discussion of pictures, tell something about the artist also to have pupils make a collection of pictures and help them to pick out good pictures. She also said it was good to put the children's work upon the walls and invite parents to come and see them.

After this much appreciated address had been given many questions pertaining to it, were asked by the teachers, and a great deal of discussion ensued.

Mr. Richard Lees, County School Inspector, made quite a lengthy discussion of examination papers, about which the teachers asked many questions regarding weather records, nature study, etc.

A general discussion also took place regarding the advisability of changing the library from Norwood.

BUSINESS EXPANDS

Thos. Barrie & Co. Becomes "Barrie's Limited"—Series of Branches Are to be Established Throughout the Canadian Northwest

THE NEW OFFICERS

The issuing of letters patent by the Ontario government granting the change of the former business of Thos. Barrie and Co., to that of "Barrie's Limited". Furriers, calls attention to the rapid and substantial growth of this well known enterprise. Ten years ago the business was purchased by Thos. Barrie & Co., from Fairweather and Co., of Toronto. The Peterborough store was the original home of the Fairweather business and was established as far back as 1867.

Under the management of Thos. Barrie & Company, the business has had a history of steady growth and expansion until at the present time it is recognized as the most complete and best managed fur business in Central Ontario. This successful career is undoubtedly due to the energetic and untiring efforts of Messrs. Thos. Barrie and Edward Hiland, two expert furriers who have been connected with the fur business ever since their school days. Mr. Barrie, who has always been associated with the buying of raw and dressed fur skins, has had many years experience in every department of the business end of fur and hat manufacturing and selling. Mr. Hiland, on the other hand, while the handling of raw and dressed furs has become of second nature to him is above all an expert designer, cutter and manufacturer of all kinds of fur and fur-lined garments. The new company of "Barrie's Limited" is capitalized at $100,000 and has the following officers.

President.—Dr. M. A. Morrison.
Vice-president.—Edward Hiland.
Managing Director and Secretary-treasurer.—Thos. Barrie.

The head office will be at Peterborough.

As a proof of the growth of the business it may be mentioned that the firm has opened a branch store under the management of Mr. W. W. Armstrong in Regina, the capital city of Saskatchewan. The company intends to open a series of branch stores at leading points in the Western Provinces. The manufacturing however, will all be centralized in Peterborough and only such work as the nature of the business requires will be done in the west.

This decision on the part of the firm will mean a constantly increasing staff of fur-workers at the local store with steady work guaranteed throughout the year and inevitably better work because continued occupation will mean increased efficiency.

The Examiner is assured by Mr. Barrie that Peterborough will receive a marked benefit from the expansion of the business as it will necessitate more money being put into circulation and the buying public will get choice well-made furs at the lowest possible prices because the purchasing power will be bettered and the manufacture cheapened be specialization and the making in quantity. It should be understood however, that no cheapening process will be introduced as in the large wholesale houses where hand-work has been replaced by machinery. The sole aim of the firm is to make quality first and foremost.

"THE ENQUIRY OFFICE"

Will Be Subject of Address at the Princess Theatre To-morrow

Under the above caption, an address will be given to men of the Guild of Good Fellowship in the Princess Theatre on Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. These meetings are being well attended, and have evoked considerable enthusiasm. All men of 18 years and over are most warmly welcomed. There is no roll call, or formal initiation, and all men have to do is to sit where they like and listen to the address.

It is hoped that before long the Princess theatre will be filled to its utmost capacity, as these meetings are both helpful and interesting. A hearty welcome awaits all who attend.

O, BOARD OF TRADE.

What is the Board of Trade doing, or going to do, about it? A gentleman called at the Examiner office this morning to state a remarkable and a remarkably disagreeable fact. A few days ago he brought a load of spring wheat to market, and was paid 85 cents a bushel for it. The same day a neighbour, a South Monaghan farmer took a load of spring wheat to Millbrook and brought home a round dollar for every bushel of it. There was no difference of quality to account for the difference in price. There is something wrong. There is an injustice being done to the farmers whose natural market is Peterborough, and great injury is being done to Peterborough's reputation as one of the best markets in Canada. The Government has spent, and the people have spent large sums in building wharves and bridges to make access to Peterborough market easy, especially for South Monaghan farmers, and here we have this whole expenditure neutralized by a difference in prices of wheat equal to every mile of distance between Peterborough city and a country village. The board of trade is respectfully asked to explain.

A GREAT GATHERING.

Toronto, the last four days of October, will witness an international gathering in the interests of the greatest of enterprises—making men. The importance of the work of the Young Men's Christian Association is shown by the work it has done, and is doing, in Canada, and the interests it brings into cooperation with its work. There are 57 Associations in Ontario and Quebec, employing 106 officers, and the membership roll totals 19,000. A million and a half of dollars is invested in buildings and equipment, not counting more than a million pledged for new buildings. In Toronto $850,000 is to be devoted to four new buildings, and in Montreal $325,000 has been raised for a similar purposes. Ottawa has just entered into possession of fine new quarters, costing $250,000.

These seem to be large sums to expend for these purposes, but the outlay is well worth while. The association, in a city like Peterborough and in larger and smaller cities, vitally touches the people and the needs of the time at many points. It meets the needs of men and boys exposed to the influences of deterioration, to be found in cities. The modern association is a great popular college, a great Bible school on popular lines; a radiating centre of clean, wholesome athletics; a home for the homeless, A city of refuge from the avenger of misfortune; a rendezvous, a social club, with all the unwholesome possibilities of club life eliminated. In a word it is an institution for making men, for restoring and developing clean manhood, with high ideals—and healthy equipment of mind, body and spirit for the battle of life and the strengthening of the moral fibre of the nation.

The Association idea is great, as shown from the influences it commands. It is recognized by great railway systems, for the value of its work in connection with their employees. Its tenets and aims practically find a place upon the curriculum of our great colleges. It is indirectly recognized by the Government, for its association with military camps, is encouraged—the Minister of Militia testifying to the improved conditions in military camps, due to the work of the Association.

The convention in Toronto on the last four days of October will be a conference of men, representing the greatest moral influences on the continent Leading workers from the United States and Canada will take part in the deliberations and the whole conference will enlist more widespread and potent interest than any other enterprise of the character the Young Men's Christian Association represents.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

The Children's Aid Society is itself an object of aid. The society can no more make bricks without straw, than any other undertaking that needs money can conduct it successfully. The City and County of Peterborough Children's Aid Society, needs money badly to carry on its splendid work.

It may not be generally known that the Shelter has had for the past year and a half, an average of eleven inmates, and that it requires about $100 a month to keep things going. The Society is getting pretty close to the bottom of the purse, the lining is getting very thin. It has no regular source of income; and in this respect very much resembles the fowls of the air, that have to depend upon Providential bounty for the supply of their daily wants. When the charitably disposed are disposed to be charitable the Society is in funds—sometimes "flush" and sometimes in embarassed financial circumstances. The officers cannot be expected to finance the society at their own expense, and they can't be expected to see its interests suffer.

The society as mentioned is badly in need of funds, and has decided to resort to an expedient, which, undignified as it may seem, to some, to be, will have this advantage, that it will permit everybody to contribute to the society's funds. It is proposed to observe at no distant date what is known as a tag-day. That is upon a certain day an army of solicitors invades the streets, and requests a contribution—the smallest amount not being refused—from every person encountered. No person is prevented from giving as much as will discharge his conscience. The contributor is ornamented with a tag, which, affixed to the person, like vaccination or measles, insures against a second attack. This expedient has proved in other places a great money-making enterprise, the whole community being contributors. Vancouver, British Columbia, is aiming to raise $20,000 for its Society, and a short time ago held a tag-day, which yielded something like $8,500. And there is no reason why a similar undertaking in Peterborough should not add two or three thousand to the Society's coffers. It is proposed to hold the tag-day on a Saturday, so that visitors from the townships on that day may enjoy the privilege of contributing. The Society derives no small part of its "cases" from the country, and spends no small proportion of its funds in caring for them.

There should be no necessity for appealing for liberal support for the Children's Aid Society, when it is realized that every dollar contributed to the help of its objects saves the payment of another and often of many another, dollar in taxes to maintain criminals, and control the vicious, the direct result of the conditions the society operates to remove, or neutralise. Its work is the prevention of vice by rescuing from vicious environment, children which, without its good offices, are bound to grow up criminals and a menace to, and burdens upon, society.

We are moving to amalgamate, with a view of more effective work, our local charitable organizations; but there would be less necessity for this if the Children's Aid Society were sufficiently strengthened financially, to do the great work it is capable of doing; if its machinery were kept in full and effective operation.

There does not seem to be any good reason why the state should not contribute substantially to the money support of the society. The argument that this would decrease personal interest on the part of the public, in its work, could very well be met and converted into an advantage by making government money aid contingent upon private contribution—a dollar of government money for every dollar of funds contributed from private or local sources; or as, in the case of hospitals and charities, the government grant might be made pro rata to the work done. Instead of the Public Accounts of the Province containing a total of some $8,000 or $7,000 frittered away on trifling services in the interests of the society, there should be something like the $85,000 or $90,000 devoted to correctional schools, which could be very much reduced if the Children's Aid Society were financially equipped to do the prevention work, which would make so large expenditure upon these schools unnecessary.

Considering the immense value, local and national, social and moral, of the work done by the Children's Aid Society it is surprising that so few of our men of means take a practical interest in its work. They give big sums to missions, to colleges, to churches, and charitable institutions; but they seem to ignore the greatest secular moral movement of them all, the Children's Aid Society, which prevents vice and the train of evils, and burden of expenses that result from the vicious element of our population.

The main point for the moment, however, is not to forget that the Peterborough Children's Aid Society needs money. Those who do not feel it their duty to come to the rescue in a direct way, should at least prepare for a liberal response to the appeals of tag day when it comes.

A NEW FORM OF FALSEHOOD.

The devices of political vindictiveness to colour facts a general yellow monotone are endless, and one form of lying about the Canadian navy is found in a despatch from Ottawa, published in the Mail and Empire, to the effect that the ships of the Canadian Navy will not be built in Canada because the British Admiralty is unwilling to send the plans to Canada. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said in Parliament last session that the navy would be built in Canada, and only a few days ago Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine, repeated the assurance, and he probably knows as much about the intentions of the Admiralty as some scandal monging correspondent. The improbability of the yarn is thus referred to by the Montreal Herald:

It must appear to anyone of ordinary good sense that the Admiralty would be very unlikely to adopt towards Canada any such attitude as that indicated. What must appear even more plainly is that Canada would never be content to put up with an industrial veto of that kind. As the years pass it will become more and more plain to all concerned that in this affair of the navy Canada is simply assuming a responsibility for which the time has come. It is the beginning, it is true but the beginning in a small way of something that will be permanent, that will grow with the country's growth, and that will be as distinctively Canadian as are the two seaboards, which furnish the immediate occasion for its existence. If Great Britain were to feel that the secrets of her navy were imperilled by sending the plans across the ocean, Canada would have to do what the United States has done, learn how to make her own plans. They know that so well in Great Britain that there is not the least danger of any coercion being applied to force the giving of contracts to firms in England. The work will be done, as Mr. Brodeur says it will, and as Mr. Borden used to say it should be done, in Canadian shipyards.

TRADE LOYALTY.

(West Lynn (Mass.) News.)

No word appeals more strongly to the average person than loyalty. We all love to be spoken of as loyal to family, friends, country and to our ideals. We should also include our home city.

There is no doubt of our sincerity in this and we would feel very much offended were it questioned, but is this loyalty always of the right sort; is it intelligent and active or is it sometimes a sentimental and pleasing fancy with which we delude ourselves?

The happiness of the people of a city depends largely on the prosperity of the community as a whole, and this prosperity depends in part upon the amount of money circulating there. The more money the people send away for things they can buy from their own merchants, the poorer the community will become and, conversely, the more they spend at home, the more the place will thrive.

Do those who patronize distant mail order houses ever think of the harm done? If all the good people in Boston, for instance, should ignore the local merchants and for one year buy all their supplies in Chicago, Buffalo and New York, there would be "For Sale" signs on the city hall, Young's, the public library and the old North church. The same principle applies to all communities.

Patronage of home merchants is the life of a city. These mail order houses by offering attractive (?) premiums with indifferent goods, have drawn from us large amounts of money which, if spent at home, would have helped to pay for schools, paving, lighting and general civic improvement. Outside business houses do not pay any part of our city taxes.

But, "Business is Business," some say. Yes, but business is more than that, it is reciprocity, and it should be apparent to everyone that business dealings with those who are working for the same local interests as ourselves will be far more productive of good, than trading with people who are far away, who buy nothing from us, and whose only interest in our community is the amount of money they can get out of it.

Do you recall when times have been hard that these mail order houses ever extended you credit to help you over the hard places? Will they? Not in a thousand years—it's money down, or no goods. The local merchants are the ones to whom we must then turn for assistance, but how can we do with good grace or reason unless we support them in a prosperous times?

They are alert, intelligent and progressive, and, if given the opportunity, will sell better goods at the same or lower price, than the mail order houses can of will and deliver them at once—no express charges, no long delays, no disappointments.

Let us cease, then, enriching a few people in whom we have no sort of interest, at the cost of lasting injury to our own community. Try supporting our own home business for a time.

Surely, loyalty, in this instance, means spending your money at home.

A Visit To The Flagship Of Canada's New Navy

("Kit" in the Mail and Empire.)

The following interesting, if unofficial and feminine account of a visit to the "Niobe," the training ship nucleus of the coming Canadian navy, which sailed for Canada from Plymouth on Oct. 10th, is written by "Kit," her of the "Woman's Kingdom" of the Mail and Empire. It might be noted that before the Niobe sailed for Canada, she was presented by Her Majesty the Queen with a white silk ensign:

But the Government boat is waiting to take us to the world's greatest arsenal, and, boarding it, we sweep past Drake's Island, with its grim fortress shining in the sunlight, and on down that Imperial waterway in which lie the Dreadnoughts and cruisers which more than any words proclaim the might of Britain upon the seas. The woods line one side, the great dockyard the other. On on cleft, it groups of three or four, sit those gunboats and cruisers which are destined for the scrapheap. To us they appear fit to enter into action to-morrow if the need were, but every year sees change and improvement in types of war vessels, and that which was first-class a few short years ago is now deemed obsolete. We are bound for H.M.C.S. Niobe, Captain MacDonald commander, but on the way stopped to board a training ship, where many new scientific naval devices were explained to us and a mine was exploded for our benefit. With a tremendous detonation it shot the water high in the air, and for some time afterwards this was dotted with dead fish—killed by the explosion. Landing presently near the dock where the super-Dreadnaught Lion—the largest ship in the world — is receiving the finishing touches, we boarded the training ship of Canada's navy, the Niobe. She was preparing for her sail to our shores on October 10, and there was noise of hammers and smell of fresh paint. As the first Canadian woman to board her, your correspondent was decorated by Captain MacDonald with the ship's ribbon, bearing the legend H.M.C.C. Niobe. "It was the "C" that bore the greatest significance. We were standing on Canadian ground, and when you are far from home you appreciate this little fact more than may be told. There came a wild moment in which one felt that one must voice one's emotion in "The Maple Leaf" or "O Canada," but one decorously refrained, contenting oneself by marching proudly about and pulling the navy ribbon, which was worn across the breast, as the Queen might wear her Order of the Garter. It was rather a big moment. There is nothing picayune about the Niobe's good commander, Captain MacDonald, her officers and crew. They are splendid men, eager to come to us and begin work. There seemed to be some doubt in the mind of the captain as to "getting boys enough"—four hundred and fifty are required. "If we could only get the boys" said Captain MacDonald in kindling tones. He was assured that they would be forthcoming in round numbers. Some one, some time, had expressed the fear that the youth of Canada was "wild" and would not take easily to restraint and discipline. Perish the thought! We stood up for the honour and manly worth of the Youth of Canada. We pledged the Youth of Canada in very fine Plymouth water, and told Commander MacDonald, his officers and the crew generally that they would have the finest stuff in the world to handle, and that Young Canada was there ready to go in and win. The Commander, by the way, is a Canadian, having been born in Victoria, B. C., where his people still reside. He is a young and very good-looking man of kindly eye and gentle voice and sympathetic manner. His hero is Nelson, of whom he has many relics hung round his quarters; and his hope—here's to it—is that he may cast anchor in Canadian waters on Tratalgar Day. He is fired with energy, hope, ambition. A man more intimately fitting for his post could not have been been found.

A Pathetic Figure.

A little incident which occurred on the day of our visit must be recorded. A very small woman, dressed in deep mourning, was standing in a corner of the main deck behind some piles of coldage and other ship's matter. Her tired face and shrinking little figure suggested a grief and loneliness which was not without cause. Only that day she had buried her husband, a man of thirty, and a member of the Niobe's crew, who, a few days before, had dropped dead immediately on leaving his hammock. Returning after a few kindly words to the little creature, Captain MacDonald informed us that she had been left absolutely without a penny, and the men of the Niobe, headed—we have no doubt, though this was unexpressed—by the captain and his officers, promptly gathered the sum of eighty pounds (about four hundred dollars) for her on the spot. It was done quickly, therefore was blessed. It was done unostentatiously, quietly, and with a large human sympathy, therefore was thrice blessed. Nor was the tiny woman in black—a more pathetic little figure it would be difficult to find—to be forgotten or neglected.

These are the sort of men that are coming to us to take our boys in hand and train them in their country's service. Big-hearted, quiet, gentle strong men, men to whom we can give our youth with the greatest confidence and in whom we can have perfect trust.

DRINK AND DRUG HABITS CURED IN THREE DAYS

Drink Habit Absolutely Cured in Three Days

The Neal Institute for the Cure of the Drink Habit and Drug Habit is in full operation in Toronto---The Only Neal Institute in Ontario

So remarkable have been the cures, so lasting and permanent have been the results, that institutes have been rapidly established in all the principal cities, and the Neal Institute Company opened their beautiful institute in Toronto some months ago, fully equipped for administering the Neal Cure under most favourable circumstances, with a regular medical physician in attendance, who will devote himself wholly to the care of patients of the Toronto Neal Institute. The Neal Cure is different from any other known form of treating the drink habit. It is purely vegetable and harmless, is taken internally, no hypodermic injections being used; and it is absolutely guaranteed to cure the habitual drunkard, the occasional dripker or social tippler, no matter how much or how little liquor is used, in three days. Not a single failure has yet been recorded against The Neal Cure, an almost unbelievable record, and the cures are permanent and lasting, leaving the patient in the possession of every faculty—strong and healthful.

We Give a Guaranteed Bond to Cure in 3 Days

HOPE FOR BROKEN HEARTED WIVES . . BALM FOR THE MOTHER'S TEARS

To Whom It May Concern: Feb. 9, 1910

My attention having been called to the Neal Treatment for the drink habit, and their claim that it did cure in three days, elicited my personal investigation, and to do so, it became necessary for me to send one of my people to the Institute to be treated. This I did, and I am pleased to say that he was cured perfectly, and the patient assured me with great forcefulness that he no longer had the least inclination to drink, and that all desire, craving and appetite for drink had been taken away. It is a grand, good work, and a great benefit to humanity. [Signed] FATHER FLAVIN.

Pastor St. Ambrose Church, Des Moines, Iowa.

Office of J. F. Landry, M.D., No. 7, Sixth St. So.
Minneapolis, Minn., March 23, 1910

Dear Doctor Neal: My attention was called to the Neal treatment in a professional way. I had the opportunity of watching its instantaneous action and noting its remarkable results in three days. They are given by the processes of neutralization and elimination—the only practical and sane methods of treating the drink habit. That the Neal treatment thoroughly cleanses the system of all alcoholic poison and effects a permanent cure in three days, in any case, without hypodermic injections, there is no question.

Fraternally yours, J. F. Landry, M.D.

St. John's Church, Rev. D. F. Mulvihill, Rector
1915 University Ave, Des Moines, Iowa, May 31, 1910

I am in a position to state that the Neal Institute does all that it claims for its patients. I am personally acquainted with three cases (two of whom I thought were beyond treatment) that took the treatment and are to-day a different type of men. It is beyond doubt a saving grace for poor fellows that wish to get rid of a shrivish habit, but have not the strength to do it themselves. I can safely recommend the Neal Institution and hope that all who have a desire to rid themselves of a vicious habit will give it a trial.

D. F. Mulvihill

List of the principal Neal Institutes in operation up to July 18:

Albuquerque, New Mexico; Buffalo, New York; Baltimore, Maryland; Boston, Massachusetts; Des Moines, Iowa; Cincinnati, Ohio; Davenport, Iowa; Denver, Colorado; Fargo, North Dakota; Houston, Texas; Indianapolis, Indiana; Los Angeles, California; Louisville, Kentucky; Murphysboro, Illinois; New York City, New York; Omaha, Nebraska; Portland, Oregon; San Francisco, California; Sioux City, Iowa; Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Springfield, Missouri; St. Louis, Missouri; Superior, Wisconsin; Topeka, Kansas.

The Neal Treatment Gives Perfect Relief from Drink Craving.

NO INJURY TO HEALTH

Cured of the morbid craving for strong liquor in three days and forever freed from bondage—this is the marvellous work now being performed by the Neal Method. This safe and effective remedy that affords suffering humanity this wonderful aid was first employed several years ago. Since then many hopeless human wrecks have been returned clean men to their families and have become useful and enterprising citizens by its aid. Year by year, also, the remedies employed have been improved upon, making the treatment even more effective, and absolutely safe. Sociologists long since realized that the spirituous liquor habit was rapidly gaining a fearful headway in Canada, particularly among young men, thereby robbing the country of untold millions of wealth yearly and that unless some radical method to check the evil could be discovered, the ravages of alcohol would soon amount to a national calamity. The medical profession was appealed to and several so-called cures were placed at the disposal of the public. But in the majority of instances it was soon discovered that these did not fill the bill. There were too many drawbacks of one kind or another. Several required too long time for the treatment, making it prohibitive to all but men of independent means, men who could afford to remain idle while being "cured." With others the cured man nearly always returned to the life-sapping habit after a short time, every recurrent relapse leaving the victim with reduced will power to fight against the craving. Again, nearly all of them were made too expensive for the average man, and nearly all of them were more or less injurious to the patient's health, frequently resulting in mortal diseases. It was when humanitarians had almost despaired of obtaining relief by medical help that the Neal Method, short, safe and effective, was perfected and offered to the world. Since then the claims of the originator have been demonstrated and proven beyond all doubt so that the treatment stands to-day pre-eminent and unrivalled in its line. Institutes are being established in the principal cities of the world.

No Hypodermic Injections Given

A Treatment that Includes Hypodermic Injections is Positively Dangerous

If you are asked to take a treatment for the drink habit that includes hypodermic injections, refuse.

It is not necessary for you to bare your arm and submit to having the hypodermic needle jabbed into it 4 or 6 times a day from 28 to 42 days, to be cured of the drink habit. This is the old, crude treatment, which, through carelessness of others, or an infected needle, carries with it all the dangers of blood poison. The Neal treatment is not administered hypodermatically but is taken internally, and being a harmless vegetable compound, it neutralizes and eliminates every trace of alcoholic poison from the system, and can not possibly injure anyone or leave any bad after effects. A child may take the entire treatment with perfect safety.

Treatment at the Institute

Patients at the Neal Institute are afforded the Comforts of a Refined Home WITH THE UTMOST PRIVACY.

Every patient after taking treatment at a Neal Institute recommends the treatment and Institute to his friends. The treatment is all that is claimed for it, and more. The comforts of a refined home are afforded all patients, with the utmost privacy. The names and addresses of patients are not given to any one or used in the advertising, or in any way referred to. No violation of the confidence existing between the Institute and its patients would be permitted by the Neal Institute Company.

An Internal Treatment

The Neal Treatment is an internal remedy, pleasant to take, quick and mild in its action, very effective and thorough in its work of elimination, neutralising and eradicating every trace of alcholic poison from the system. This treatment strengthens and invigorates both mind and body, leaving the patient in a normal condition, as far as the effects of alcohol are concerned; brain clear, nerves steady, eyes bright, step elastic, feeling fine, with no craving or desire for drink—a new man—who, at the end of three days can return to his occupation or business.

Guaranteed Bond and Contract Given Each Patient

To Effect a Perfect Cure in Three Days without Hypodermic Injections

WRITE FOR A COPY OF THIS CONTRACT

Each patient taking the Neal Treatment for the drink habit is given a legal written contract that a perfect cure will be effected in three days. With this contract in his possession, the patient takes no chances, for the cure must be satisfactory. There is no doubt, for every case is assured of a cure by this treatment; failure is unknown. This is true whether the treatment is taken at the Institute or at home.

HOW TO REACH INSTITUTE—Take a Yonge Street Car to St. Alban Street, walk up St. Alban to No. 78. ADVISE US WHEN YOU WILL ARRIVE and we will meet you at railroad station.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

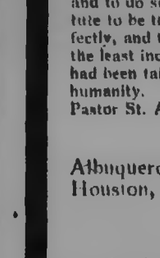
LETTERS OF A SUCCESSFUL WOMAN TO HER NIECE.

VI.

DEAR NIECE—What's all this I hear from your mother, about your working evenings and lying awake nights worrying about some important document?

My dear Joan, you are right about the bread of independence being sweet eating, but let me tell you one thing. There's one mighty good way to make it sour on your stomach, and that is, buttering it with the butter of overwork and nervous exhaustion.

I don't believe your father will think that a few dollars a week repays him for having his jolly, sweet tempered daughter transformed into a nervous, irritable creature who flies off the handle over nothing and has hysterics every time her big brother teases her a bit.



Of course, you are nothing like that yet, but that's the goal you seem to be aiming for.

Now, niece, no doubt you've read a good deal in the newspapers, and so forth, about the clerk who doesn't see Miss Opportunity when she beckons to him, because he is too all fired busy watching the clock.

Of course, there's plenty of truth in that kind of dope. But as usual, there's another side to that question. There's the man who's worked evenings and lain awake nights worrying over his business so much that he's too dead sleepy to open his eyes wide enough to see the lady of the beckoning finger even when she shakes it right under his very nose.

To keep yourself bright, and alert, and efficient, is your duty, both to yourself and your employer.

And that doesn't mean that you should always refuse to work overtime either. That would be absurd. There are exigencies in every business that demand that occasionally, and the girl who has her hat pins all poised ready to turn them into the correct holes at the first stroke of five, and who acts like an ubsd wife when her employer asks her to stop a few moments and take an important letter, loses as many jobs as she deserves to. But being asked to work overtime or in the evenings as a regular, is something that no girl should stand. When that happens it means that your employer is trying to make you do the work of two girls. And you can't do that even though you think you'd like to, except by drawing on the future. That means that some day you will have to pay up on that overdrawn account by not being able to do the work of one. And that doesn't pay.

Now for the lying awake and worrying. That's got to stop right here, niece. Believe me, if you spend your first year just learning to leave your work at the office when you come away at night, and learn nothing else, you will have done well.

And doing that isn't lack of devotion to your employer and your business, either. It's the height of devotion.

Which do you think a business man would rather have come to work in the morning for him—a tagged-out, nervous girl who was so devoted to his interests that she spoiled her evening's relaxation and her night's rest worrying over a fancied mistake, that she couldn't correct until morning anyhow, or a bright, efficient young person who had put her business out of her head the minute she left the office, and rested and relaxed so all she was worth, and came back to her desk with a clear, steady brain, ready to correct any past mistakes and to minimize mistakes in the future?

Well then, niece, why don't you prove your common sense by being the right kind and justifying the stylish good opinion of

Your busy but devoted-to-your-interests

Old Aunt.

(Copr. 1909, by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.)

I wasted time, and now doth time waste me.

Richard II., Act V., Sc. 5.

Man is born into the world with three great assets, opportunity, energy, and time. From the earliest moment that he is capable of activity till his latest days he is surrounded with opportunities for the exercise of his powers. All men have energy, power of operating; whether they develop that energy or let it lie dormant depends on themselves. But time is a man's chief privilege. He has length of days in which to seize his opportunities and exercise his energies.

The successful man is invariably the one who puts a proper value upon time. Take the example of Shakespeare himself—the most successful of the world's dramatists. He knew the value of time. There is the clearest evidence in his plays that he was a most diligent student. Inspiration was not sufficient. To achieve greatness as a poet he seized the fleeting moments and crowded them with study. But unlike many students he was no miser of his learning. He gave to his age and to all time, with generous hand, the treasure he had garnered from the past, glorifying it with his transcending intellect.

The vulgar crowd sees with jealous envy the wealth accumulated by great manufacturers, railway builders and others. The heads of these enterprises knew the value of time. While the crowd looked on helplessly they seized their opportunities, put forth their energy, and made the most of every minute.

The saddest cry that ever came from a human heart was that uttered by Richard II.,

"I wasted time, and now doth time waste me."

Richard was a king; he had had a king's opportunities. He had buried his talent in the ground, and was judged for his weakness. The talent was taken from the unprofitable monarch, and bestowed on the energetic Bolingbroke.

He is not alone. Down the ages come a myriad voices uttering the same tragic moan. Time wasted cannot be recalled; a year misspent is worse than if a man's life had been shortened by a year. He has missed opportunities and formed habits in that time that injuriously affect his entire future existence.

The difficulty with most men is that they act as though life were to have no ending, as if they were on earth for eternity. To-morrow is ever on their lips. Deferring action has caused the loss of fortunes, the ruin of lives. "Do it now!" should be the watchword of every individual. "Dost thou love life?" said Benjamin Franklin. "Then do not squander time, for this is the stuff life is made of." Longfellow expressed the same thought in his Psalm of Life. "Art is long and time is fleeting." To acquire eminence in any walk of life time is a great factor. There are no doubt hundreds of sculptors, painters, poets, born into the world for every one who wins recognition. The one who does is the one who knows the value of time.

There are various ways of wasting time. The most common is the method of the sluggard. He eats and sleeps, enjoys sunlight and cool breezes. So long as he has food, clothing and a bed he is content. He is on a level with the beasts of the field. But time works its revenge. The old age of the sluggard is usually spent in poverty and suffering. There are those who squander time. They have energy and intellect, but they deliberately seek a life of pleasure. They flee from fever to flower gathering sweets. They call faith excesses. They live purely sensuous lives. Sin has been described as energy gone wrong. These men had energy and opportunity. They misdirected their energy; they neglected their opportunities and their sin is the end brings its own punishment. They become surfeited with pleasure, but not until they have squandered their fortunes and wasted their strength and intellect. Their closing days are filled with regret and bitter complainings. They really cry: "Oh, call back yesterday, bid time return." In life that is the one thing that is impossible; our yesterdays are dead beyond recall. Life may be spent in a tyrannous use of power. Macbeth and Richard III. were energetic, but they passed their time in plots and murders.

To the sluggard, to the spendthrift, to the abuser of his power, the destroyer of the works of time, a glance backward at life is a sad thing. The cry of Macbeth at the close of his career finds an echo in such hearts. To him life was "a brief candle," "a poor player, who struts and frets his hour upon the stage and then is heard no more," "a tale full of sund and fury signifying nothing." This is the jaundiced vie wof life. To the man of righteous actions it is the opposite of this. It is a sturdy giant, a powerful actor, whose influence will be felt to the end of time. It signifies much. The Richards and the Macbeths perish and are but as shipwrecked hulks warning others from the rocks, but the Henry Fifths serve as beacons to cheer and guide storm-tossed humanity. Its work is salvation. Time crowded with good deeds is already a part of eternity.

LIFE NOT WORTH LIVING

is the way Miss Alta Abel, of West Baden, Ind., summed up her existence after having sought in vain for health. She writes, "I was a complete wreck—always tired, worn out and nervous. I had to spend about one-third of my time in bed, and my life was not worth living.

"Vinol, your delicious cod liver and iron tonic, was recommended, and I can truly say it has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took in my life. The nervous and tired feeling is all gone. I have gained in health, flesh and strength, until I feel like another person." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

What Vinol did for Miss Abel, we know it will do for every nervous, run-down, over-worked, tired, thin and discouraged woman in this vicinity.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. McDermid and Jury, druggist, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets, Peterborough.

The sweetest and dearest interests of life cluster around our homes. Homes should be the centre of our love, the Mecca of all our journeys, the goal of all our endeavors. When home is lost, all is lost.

CHILDREN'S EYES

Allow us to say a few words in regard to the children's eyes. Years ago, when the children studied their lessons from their books, we did not hear very much about their eye giving out. Let us consult our blackboards and see what they can tell us about the world-wide subject.

Parents and guardians all over this broad land, how many hours through the day are your little children sitting in school staring at a blackboard upon which are placed by the teacher most of the lessons for the day, many times the lines being so fine and pale they could not be easily read more than half or two-thirds the way across the room, but the children are required to see them all the way across and to mike respectent corners. Many of the children when first looking at the board do not see much of anything, but by looking very sharp for a few seconds the lines reveal themselves. This, my friend, means strained eyes and strained eyes means weakened or diseased optic nerves, possibly no yes at all, it all depending upon the severity of the strain. Even when the work is quite distinct, for children who have naturally weak eyes the distance many times is so great that the air waves coming between the poor, tired eyes and the board cause the lines to waver and flicker, and especially is this the case when the light is poor and the ventilation bad. Anything put on the board for children to see, whether old or young, should have large proportions and bread, clear lines throughout, so no extra efforts will have to be made to discover it. There is a great difference in eyes; one child will readily see what another could not without the fatal strain.

JUST DUTY TO BE DOING

How often we see the living slighted and neglected, through a long, hard life never cheered by one word of praise or one caress, and when they be still and silent, no longer needing or heeding, then the words, caresses and tears are not stinted, which saying his would have been welcome, helping them over many rough places.

People kiss the dead who never kiss the living. They hover over open coffins with hysterical sobs, but fail to throw their arms about their loved ones who are fighting the stern battles of life. A word of cheer to the living, to a struggling soul in life is worth all the roses of Christendom piled high on casket covers. The dead can not smell the flowers, but the living can. Scatter them broadcast in their pathway, therefore, and pick out the thorns before it is too late.

When it is too late how many unavailing regrets it would save us to know that while they were with us we had loved them well, and did not fail to let them know how very dear they were to us.

"It isn't the thing you do, dear;
It's the thing you've left undone,
Which gives you a bit of heart ache
At the setting of the sun;
The tender word forgotten,
The letter you did not write,
The flowers you might have sent, dear,
Are your haunting ghost to-night."

NO MORE DISTRESS FROM THE STOMACH

No Dyspepsia, Gas, Heartburn or Indigestion Five Minutes Later

Every family here ought to keep some Diapepsin in the house, as any one of you may have an attack of Indigestion or Stomach trouble at any time, day or night.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a distressed, out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin, and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach. Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery at any drug store, waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to cure almost any chronic case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other Stomach trouble.

A DAILY THOUGHT.

Lean not, on one mind constantly.
Lest where one stand before, two fall;
Something hath God to say to thee
Worth hearing from the lips of all.
—Owen Meredith.

For the Society Girl.

Do not throw away or give away old evening gowns, no matter how worn out they may be. The woman was making a mistake recently: "When I go to Europe I throw my worn-out evening frocks overboard on my way home. The Atlantic must be paved with my old clothes."

Evening dresses are always made of material that is worth saving. Whether it is silk or velvet or one of the pretty silk-and-wool or silk-and-cotton mixtures, the fabric or the trimmings can be utilized and transformed into an afternoon frock.

Here is one example: A gown of light green silk Henrietta had reached the point where its lace insertion gaped at every movement, where a single wearing was a succession of mortifications, and where ruffles and furbelows were things to inspire shame instead of pride. Then the clever owner had an inspiration.

With a sharp penknife she ripped out all the lace and removed the worn tunic and draperies, leaving the fresh, bright goods beneath. It was very pretty, it had been much admired, and she determined it was worth saving. So she fashioned herself a yoke and undersleeves of dotted net, worked dots over in green to match the Henrietta, and bought, by chance, a remnant of green silk that happened just to match also. "I'd have got that or panne velvet in the same shade anyway," she said, "but I just happened upon this."

Of the silk she made pipings, buttons and lapels, effectually covering all the parts of the fabric that still showed wear. On the shirt, where the part covered by the tunic still showed brighter than that beneath, she pinched a soft fold of silk, that hid the unpleasant contrast. At the bottom of the yoke revers and a double row of silk-covered buttons concealed in the same way the ravages of the drapery. The collar, the oversleeves and the girdle were piped with silk to give a unified appearance.

Still all was not complete. The sleeves were distinctly dingy by the side of the rejuvenated waist and bodice, and she felt she must in some way hide the difference. This she did by embroidering down them two rows of silk dots like those on the net yoke, but just a shade darker. By contrast, they made the worn Henrietta seem lighter, and yet they themselves appeared the same shade as the yoke dots, which were too far away for close comparison.

Here, at a trifling cost, was a new dress which her most critical acquaintance would never recognize. "The most I ever had said to me," she laughed, "was when someone remarked that I must be very fond of green silk Henrietta to have two dresses of it in two successive seasons. I am fond of it, my dear,' I answered. Besides, the frocks are used for such different occasions.

SOME RECIPES.
Grape Jelly.

Wash the grapes, but do not stem. Put them still wet over the fire at the side of the range and leave until enough juice has exuded from them to prevent their scorching. Cover and simmer until the grapes are all broken. Rub through a coarse strainer or a colander and strain through a jelly bag. Measure the juice and to each quart allow two pounds of granulated sugar. Return the juice to the fire and boil for twenty minutes. Meanwhile put in the sugar in broad, shallow pans in the open oven where it will heat, but not melt or scorch. Stir frequently while heating. When the syrup has boiled for twenty minutes pour the sugar into it and let it boil up once, and take from the fire as soon as the boiling point is reached and fill glasses.

Oatmeal Cookies.

Into a cup of sugar stir two well-beaten eggs, work in one-half cup of butter, make warm, but not melted, and, gradually, add a cup of flour mixed with two cups of oatmeal. Add three-fourths of a teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in enough warm water to make the mixture so soft that it will drop from the point of a spoon easily. Last of all, stir in a cup of seeded raisins, plentifully dredged with flour. Drop on a buttered pan and bake.

Mock Lobster Salad.

One cupful each of cold, boiled cream, string beans, cut small, cold boiled potatoes, cut into dice, young beets, boiled and cold and cut into tiny bits, two raw tomatoes, peeled and sliced and five stalks of celery, cut small. Mix carefully in a bowl, taking pains not to bruise the vegetables. Arrange on crisp lettuce leaves and pour a mayonnaise dressing over them.

Fudge.

Mix together one and a half pounds of brown sugar ,one-fourth pound of bitter chocolate broken into bits, one-eighth of a pound of butter, one-half gill of cream and a pinch of baking soda. Set at the side of the range to melt before cooking. When all the ingredients are melted put over the fire and boil without stirring until a little dropped into cold water forms a ball between the fingers. Boil up once more, beating steadily, stir in a tablespoonful of butter, beat until it is melted, take from the fire, add a tablespoonful of butter, beat until it is melted, take from the fire, add a teaspoonfuls of fine gum arabic, and, beat hard until too stiff to stir. Turn into buttered tins, press flat and cut into squares.

Marshmellow Cake Filling.

Into a gill of cold water stir five teaspoonfuls of fine gum arable, and, when it is dissolved, add one-half cup of powdered sugar and put all into a granite saucepan. Boil until a little cold water forms a soft ball between the thumb and finger. Beat the white of an egg very stiff and strain the boiling syrup upon this, beating the white hard all the time. Flavour with vanilla and spread over the cake layers.

Vanilla Ice Cream.

Beat five eggs light ,adding to them three cupfuls of granulated sugar. Put a pinch of soda into a quart of milk and bring to the scalding point, then beat gradually into the eggs and sugar. When all are mixed return to the fire in a double boiler and cook, stirring until the custard coats the spoon. Take from the fire and when cool stir in vanilla extract to flavour to suit taste. Add a quart of cream and freeze.

GIVE BABY A CHANCE

Don't dose the baby with soothing mixtures and narcotics — they were never known to help any baby. You might just as well dose the grown up man or woman with opium or cocaine—the result would be the same—a permanent injury to mind and body. When baby is ill give him a medicine that will cure—a medicine free from injurious drugs. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They are baby's greatest friend. They never do harm—always good. Concerning them Mrs. Richard Mulloy, Lanigan, Sask., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets should be in every home where there are small children. We gave them to our baby when he was teething and they kept him good natured and healthy." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c. a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Boy Is Swept To Death In New York Aqueduct

While Playing "Indian" He Takes Shelter in Over-flow Pipe and Tumbles Into Deep Water---Is Carried Many Blocks.

NEW YORK, OCT. 14.—Intent on a childish triumph at his game of "Cowboy and Indians," eight-year-old Joseph Plenty of No. 504 West One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street walked into a four-foot overflow pipe from the Croton Aqueduct in Highbridge Park yesterday afternoon. While the "cowboys" behind him were pausing at the open end of the pipe, the little boy walked some twenty feet to the point underground where the overflow pipe meets the aqueduct. Th "cowboys" outside heard a yell as the boy pitched into the six feet of water in the aqueduct and was swept away to be drowned undoubtedly.

SAID THEY'D RECOVER BODY

Employees of the Highbridge pumping station said the body would be carried down until it met a screen near the pumping station at One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street and Convent Avenue and that they would shut off the water late at night and recover the body.

The boys had begun their game at Amsterdam Avenue, near One Hundred and Seventy-second Street. Little Plenty, who lived with his eighteen-year-old brother and his mother, a widow, and little Edgar Mornington of No. 504 West One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street, were the "Indians."

They were armed with a popgun and an air pistol. The "cowboys" who were chasing them ranged in ages from seven to eleven. They were John Clappanburg of No. 507 West One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street, Fred Smith of No. 511 West One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street, and Joseph Gilmore of No. 1998 Amsterdam Avenue.

As the "Indians" ran east toward Highbridge Park through 172nd Street the "Cowboys" followed. In the park close by the reservoir, "Lovers' Lane" crosses the aqueduct. At the end of this the four-foot overflow pipe runs toward the Harlem River in the valley below. The pipe does not, however, extend to the river. Halfway down the hillside it shoots out to the inclined surface of the hill. From this point to the Harlem a paved gutter runs down the hill

COMPANION SHOUTS A WARNING

Little Plenty, who has a reputation among his playmates for daring, went straight to the mouth of the pipe, followed more slowly by Mornington. As the little fellow entered, Mornington called to him:

"Don't go in there; you'll be drowned," he shouted.

The little boy laughed and ran into the opening. Within a few moments the "cowboys" arrived. They heard a shout, but thought Plenty was daring them to follow.

It was then 4:30 in th eafternoon. The "cowboys" sat at the mouth of the overflow pipe, which is dry except when the aqueduct contains more than six feet of water. After half an hour they decided to search for young Plenty. They went in with lighted pieces of paper, but dared not go very far. Then their matches giving out they walked to Amsterdam Avenue and told Policemen Horn and Funvesian. They got lanterns, crawled into the pipe as far as the aqueduct but found no trace of the boy.

FIREMEN CALLED TO SCENE

Somebody had turned in a fire alarm and a company came from the house at One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and Amsterdam avenue with Battalion Chief King, but the firemen could do nothing.

Richard Blake, the engineer in charge of that portion of the aqueduct, told the police it was simply a question of recovering the boy's body. Last night he set the men to work lifting manholes along the aqueduct in quest of the boy's body. Other men were at manholes over the screen at One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street waiting for the appearance of the body.

Child Shoots Another Then Carries Her Home "I Didn't Mean To Do It"

Examiner Special.

Special to The World.

HARTFORD, CONN., OCT. 13.—While Mrs. F. M. Naylor, of No. 26 Westland Street, this city, was washing her dinner dishes this afternoon seven-year-old Margaret McGregor came sobbing into the kitchen and told the woman she had accidentally shot Mrs. Naylor's three-year-old child, Harriet.

"I was playing with my brother Dan's rifle," said little Margaret, "and I didn't mean to, but it just went off."

She had carried the little girl home—more than a mile—and when Mrs. Naylor went out into the backyard, there was her child with blood flowing from a wound in her breast just over her heart.

The child did not seem to mind the pain, and wondered what all the fuss was about.

Mrs. Naylor summoned the nearest physician and, after an examination, he said the little girl would recover. The bullet was extracted.

The McGregor child couldn't be consoled and cried again and again, "I didn't a'an to do it."

"Jack The Ripper" Is As Big A Mystery As Ever

Examiner Special.

LONDON, OCT. 8.—"Jack the Ripper," who terrorized the Whitechapel district of London twenty years ago by the atrocity of the murders he committed, is as much of a mystery to the police now as in the days when they were following his crimes. His victims were always women and the peculiar mutilation to which he subjected them horrified the public.

Sir Henry Smith, who was Commissioner of the City Police during the perpetration of the crimes, has written a book of reminiscences in which he admits that all the investigations he conducted came to nothing, although no police work in London was ever more actively prosecuted. The book bears the title "From Constable to Commissioner."

"No man living," he writes, "knows as much of these murders as I do, but I am free to say that the police never had a satisfactory clue to the identity of the murderer. One night I arrived at the scene of his crime within five minutes after its commission. I obtained then and there a very fair description of him. It led to nothing.

"He beat me and every other police officer in London. I have no more idea now where he lived than I had twenty years ago. He covered his tracks better than any criminal with whom the police ever had to deal.

"After the second murder I discovered a man who seemed to fit the case exactly. He had been a medical student, an inmate of a lunatic asylum, and he spent his time with loose women. It was his practice to cheat them by giving them polished farthings for sovereigns. Two of these pieces had been found in the pocket of a murdered woman. I sent two policemen for this man. They found him in Rupert Street, Haymarket. He proved an alibi beyond the shadow of doubt and was liberated."

The book ridicules the stories and alleged clues published by Sir Robert Anderson, formerly chief of the Criminal Investigation Department of Scotland Yard, and sums up his remarks on this subject by saying that "Jack the Ripper" remains the great unsolved mystery of modern police annals.

Smith rose from the ranks to the Commissionership of the City Police in six years, an unprecedented promotion.

FOUGHT AND SLEW THREE WOLVES IN THEIR DEN

Special to The Examiner.

CHAMBERLAIN, S. DAK., OCT. 14.—To crawl into a wolf den with a rifle and fight a life and death battle with gray wolves was the experience of George Porch, a rancher living in the region between the Missouri River and the Black Hills, in Western South Dakota.

The gray wolves of that part of the State are unusually large and fierce. Recently the small ranchers have suffered considerable loss from their depredations, and Porch and four of his neighbors started out to run down and kill some of the animals that had been killing their young cattle and sheep.

The five men came upon the trail of four full-grown wolves, which they followed for many miles, succeeding in killing one of them on the open prairie. The other three animals took refuge in their den. When Porch reached the opening to the wolves' den he never hesitated a moment, and was soon well into the hole after the wolves.

Porch found that the tunnel through which the wolves made their way to their den ran along one hundred feet nearly parallel with the ground. With a huge hunting knife in one hand and his rifle in the other, he crawled the whole distance, ready for instant action when he came upon the wolves.

In making his way into the den it was necessary to enlarge the hole, which while large enough to admit the passage of the wolves, was not large enough at many places to admit the body of a man.

After digging into the bluff for a distance which seemed to be a half mile or more, Porch suddenly saw ahead of him in the darkness six sparkling bright eyes, all centred upon him.

Bang went the rifle and in an instant all was darkness and smoke. Porch had provided himself with a lantern and this was extinguished by the concussion when the heavy rifle was fired. Porch relighted the lantern, the light from which revealed the body of one dead wolf.

As he reached forward to drag out the body one of the live ones attacked him. The sharp teeth of the animal closed upon his coat sleeve, tearing it to shreds, grazing his arm and leaving a scar. A rough and tumble fight between Porch, who is an old cowboy, and the wolf then followed. After a fierce battle the cow puncher overpowered the wolf and shot it.

The remaining wolf was attacked by Porch, who did not cease his efforts until it, too, lay dead before him. When Porch emerged from the wolf den he was covered with grime and dirt. By his feat he has won the distinction of being the champion wolf killer of Western South Dakota.

It is the first instance in the history of that part of the State that a man has dared follow gray wolves into their den and fight a hand to hand battle with them.

HOW TO KEEP YOUNG

Keep in the sunshine. Avoid excesses of all kinds. Eat moderately at regular intervals. Cultivate a spirit of contentment, and keep the bowels regular and liver active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. No treatment is so definite and so satisfactory for this purpose. None so trustworthy and economical.

IN MEMORIAN.

In loving memory of Peter Warner, who died October 10th, 1910:

When Father breathed his last farewell,
The stroke means more than tongue can tell.
Without the smile of Father's face,
The world seems quite an empty place.
Rest on, dear Father, thy task is o'er
Thy willing hands shall toil no more.
A faithful Father true and kind,
None on this earth like you we find.
One year has gone, and yet to memory ever dear
His name I breathe and shed a tear.
Time cannot sever love so good and true,
For this day brings to me my grief anew,
Thy hands are clasped upon thy breast,
We have kissed thy marble brow,
And in our aching hearts we know
We have no Father now.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

The Chimes Fund.

The Chimes Fund is making most satisfactory progress, but perhaps, more gratifying even than the success which is attending the efforts of its promoters is the manifestation of broadmindedness and generosity of those members of other denominations in the city who have helped with voice and purse towards the object in view. That the authorities of St. John's church fully appreciate the kindness that has been shown, can, of course, go without saying. It is a certainty that the people of Peterborough will never have cause to regret having helped towards the instalment of the chimes.

Care of the Roads.

Not for the playful purpose of reawakening the agitation against the use of tar on the streets, but simply as an addition to the data already obtained on the subject, we publish the following item, recently culled from an English periodical:

"At the Paris Academy of Science on Monday a professor denounced the use of tar on the high roads because of its injurious effects on the eyes. He said that the dust caused by the tar caused inflammations and catarrhs and other dangerous affections."

Origin of Certain Names.

The late Lord Spencer's uncle, the third Earl, added a word to the language in consequence of a wager. The bet was that, by cutting off the tail part of his overcoat, he could bring into fashion overcoats so short that the skirts of the undercoat would show beneath. He won his wager, and "spencer" became the name both of that garment and of the feminine one afterwards constructed in its likeness. The peerage has added more than one name to the terminology of costume. Everybody knows "Wellingtons", and the billycock hat is said by some to be really "Billy Coke," from Coke of Norfolk, Earl of Leicester. But none of these examples in the sphere of clothes rivals what the Earl of Sandwich did, when he contrived the slice of meat between bread as a device to enable him to go on gambling without leaving off for a meal.

Summer Holidays.

In an age when everybody goes for summer holidays, and when those who cannot are often driven to the devious device of drawing their blinds and retiring into the back kitchen, it is good to hear what the great Doctor Johnson thought of the custom in his day. This is how he expresses it:

"At this time of universal migration, when almost everyone has retired, or is preparing with all the earnestness of distress to retire, into the country; when nothing is to be heard but the hopes of speedy departure, or the complaints of involuntary delay I have often been tempted to inquire what happiness is to be gained, or what inconvenience is to be avoided by this stated recession."

Obviously the great lexicographer had little belief in the benefits to be derived from the "recession," for after detailing the pleasures of country life, he adds:

"Yet even these easy pleasures are abused by the greater part of those who waste their summer in the country. Should any man pursue his acquaintants to their retreats, he would find few of them listening to Philomel, loitering in the woods, or plucking daisies, catching the healthy gale of the morning, or watching the gentle coruscations of declining day."

The polysyllabic doctor was pretty near the mark. How many of us who, after a winter's toil, yearn for the breezes of Stony Lake, really take a rest as it ought to be taken? Very few. Most of us look at it as a time not for plucking daisies, or watching the coruscations of declining day from the depths of an easy chair on the verandah, but as a time of strenuous frolic, with the evening dance at Juniper Island as the chief attraction. When all is said and done, Home seems to be the real place for rest, notwithstanding all the romantic nonsense that people indulge in when talking about holidays.

Are We as Loyal as We Might Be?

When there is anything doing in the patriotic line, Canadians are never backward in clashing the loud cymbals and beating the big drums and to do them justice they are just as anxious to prove their fealty by imperilling their lives in defence of the king, his crown and dignity as they are in making themselves heard in the noisy way aforementioned. But there is one thing that the writer has noticed wherever he has travelled in this country, and he has travelled a good deal, and that is that when it comes down to the finer points of patriotic feeling, Canadians are somewhat deficient. As an instance, Last night there was a splendid concert at the armouries. Everybody enjoyed it immensely, who had the good fortune to be present—but during the singing of the national anthem people were crowding through the door in shoals, spoiling the enjoyment of those who remained, and causing their rendition of the anthem to be a meaningless and distorted thing. Such conduct is not becoming to citizens of a city of the style and proportions of Peterborough.

THE PLOW
(London Spectator.)

From Egypt behind my oxen, with their stately step and slow,
Northward and east and west I went to the desert sand and the snow;
Down through the centuries, one by one, turning the clod to the shower,
Till there's never a land beneath the sun but has blossomed behind the power.

I slide through the sodden ricefields with my grunting, hump-backed steers,
I turned the turf of the Tiber plain in Rome's imperial years;
I was left in the half-drawn furrow when Cordolanus came,
Giving his farm for the Forum's stir to save his nation's name.

Over the seas to the north I went; white cliffs and a seaboard blue;
And my path was glad in the English grass as my stout, red Devons drew;
My path was glad in the English grass, for behind me rippled and curled
The corn that was life to the sailormen that sailed the ships of the world.

And later I went to the north again, and day by day drew down
A little more of the purple hills to join my kingdom brown;
And the whaups* wheeled out to the moorland, but the gay gulls stayed with me
Where the Clydesdales drummed a marching song with their feathered feet on the lea.

Then the new lands called me westward; I found on the prairies wide
A toil to my stoutest daring and a foe to test my pride;
But I stooped my strength to the stiff, black loam, and I found my labour sweet
As I loosened the soil that was trampled firm by a million buffaloes' feet.

Then further away to the northward; outward and outward still (But idle I crossed the Rockies, for there no plow may till!)
Till I won to the plains unending, and there on the edge of the snow
I ribbed them the fenceless wheat fields, and taught them to reap and sow.

The sun of the southland called me; I turned her the rich brown lines
Where her parramatta peach trees grow and her green Mildura vines;
I drove her cattle before me, her dust and her dying sheep,
I painted her rich plains golden and taught her to sow and reap.

From Egypt behind my oxen, with stately step and slow;
I have carried your weightiest burdens, ye toilers that reap and sow!
I am the ruler, the king, and I hold the world in fee:
Sword upon sword may ring, but the triumph shall rest with me.

HOW ACTORS SPEAK LINES

Henry E. Dixey Says Two Voices Are Needed For the Player's Equipment

One of the most prominent comedians on the American stage—Henry E. Dixey, says that few playgoers realize just what it is that makes the actor's stage voice seem entirely different from that used away from the footlights.

"Many of my friends have remarked about the actor's "two voices," said Mr. Dixey in a recent interview, "and have wondered why a player seems to talk differently on the stage and off. There is, in reality, no difference in the voice itself, but in the two distinct tones required. In short the actor has a 'street voice' and a 'stage voice,' yet both voices are exactly the same. The former, however, is used at a lower pitch than the latter, and the actor's knowledge of this art of voice changing measures his ability to hold an audience in either place.

"The actor who tries to speak naturally on the stage will be sure to fall in the rut of mumbling his words. There the speech must be forced up and up until it seems to the owner a thing that is shrill and unharmonious, while to the audience it appears quite natural and moderately low. There must be plenty of wind in the bellows, as it were, and the sound must come from the front of the mouth, just as the singer's. When an actor speaks before a large audience, he is required to pitch his voice much higher than when addressing a half-filled auditorium. As the sentences are spoken the breath is exhausted so quickly that ,unless the player watches carefully, the voice will go down so far as to be almost a whisper. Actors must learn to breath deeply, too, and take the breaths at the proper intervals, otherwise, at the close of a long speech, he will be exhausted and the annoyance of this will cause him to forget his lines and 'go up' on his next speech.

"If the average business man would go upon the stage and use there the same tones he brings into play during his daily conversation, no one in the audience would hear him, except, possibly, one or two persons in the very front row, and even to them it would come in a mumble. Correct stage speaking can be acquired only by keeping at it continually, by daily practice and constant rehearsals. Although English and American actors may have their faults, I believe that they speak better than the actors of the old school, who were given to ranting and shouting and false tones.

"The actor must have certain standards, too. He must always avoid shouting and always avoid mumbling. He must have the proper pronunciation, which is not always to be secured from dictionaries, but from the accepted usage among persons of culture. In Paris the best French is spoken, and the French actor has to govern his words accordingly. In London the best English is spoken, and so the English players have to adapt their mode of speech to that used among the higher classes there. In America everything is different; there is not much to choose between the English spoken in Boston, New York, Pittsburg, Washington and other cities. There are so many so-called dialects in America, the Southern, the Eastern, the Western and so on and so on. The American actor will follow the best practice among the cultured of every city he visits.

"And so on, when you hear your favourite player speak his lines on the stage, you will realize what an important part it is of his entire performance. You will be surprised, too, when you hear this same actor speak at his hotel. It will seem like another voice. It is all in the actor's school of experience and study and it is a mighty factor to his success on any stage."

Splendid Concert Under Auspices Of The Band

The second of a series of popular concerts by the band of the 57th Regiment and assisting artists, in the armouries last night scored as big a success as its predecessors two weeks ago and delighted an enthusiastic audience of over eight hundred people. Mr. Gliddon had announced the programme as a Scotch night, and Scotch it unmistakeably was—as Scotch as the button on Harry Lauder's Tam o' Shanter, and yet varied enough to be always thoroughly delightful. It was a thoroughly pleasing programme of Scotch songs, Scotch dances, bag-pipe solos and airs reminiscent of the "Land o' Cakes," by the band and the big audience was most enthusiastic in its approval of the different numbers.

Mr. Barnaby Nelson, of Toronto, a tenor, with a sweet, powerful, well-controlled voice, had a large share in the success of the evening, his songs being rendered with an expression and feeling that was irresistible in its appeal to the audience, and the hearty applause which followed his numbers could only be checked by his re-appearance to give an encore His first number was a double one, the favourite old ballad "Mary Morrison" and the stirring song "The March of the Cameron Men," selections widely separated in theme, but united by the singer's successful rendition of both. Mr. Nelson was equally successful in his recall solo. Later in the programme he sang the old Scotch song, "The Hundred Pipes," with a dashing swing that earned him an unqualified demand for an encore, which he answered with an artistic rendition of "Annie Laurie."

The Scottish dance duet by little Misses Esme Aylmer and Hilda Cubitt to the music of the bag-pipes, was gracefully and skilfully given by these clever little ladies and the audience insisted on the dance being repeated.

Pipe Major Pollock demonstrated that he was an expert on the instrument that is so dear to Scottish ears and hearts. His numbers, a medley of old Scotch tunes, and the Market Place of Inverness" were played with spirit and skill, and the skirl of the pipes resounded through the auditorium in a manner that caused the Scots in the audience to unconsciously throw back their heads and expand their chests. The last number was greeted with so much applause that Pipe Major Pollock had to play an encore. The numbers by the band served to demonstrate that Mr. Gliddon's organization has never been in better form during its long and successful career than it is at the present time. Their opening number was Slater's stirring Scotch march "The Bonnie Brier Bush," a compilation of old Scotch airs, written in march tempo, and played in a dashing, swinging manner that delighted the audience. Sir Henry Bishop's beautiful overture "Guy Mannering" was played for the first time here by the band last night and proved a magnificent number, magnificently played. Bonnislaw's selection "Robert Bruce" another arrangement of favourite Scotch music, was brilliantly presented by the band, the audience insisting upon an encore, to which Mr. Gliddon responded with that delightful little patrol "Wee McGregor". The Band's last number was Godfrey's "Reminiscences of Scotland," a selection that afforded many opportunities for solo work for cornet, euphonium and clarionets, and every opening was taken full advantage of, the result being a most artistic and thoroughly pleasing finale to a most enjoyable programme.

The next in the series of concerts may take the form of "An Evening with the Operas," although Mr. Gliddon has not definitely decided. He is to be congratulated upon providing the people of Peterborough with such meritorious concerts at such a low price.

Miss Sisson of the Conservatory of Music staff, added much to the success of the occasion by her skilful work as accompanist. The seating arrangements were carried out most satisfactorily under the direction of Mr. Metheral, chief caretaker of the armouries.

The Evangelistic Campaign At Park Street Church

The meeting at Park street Baptist church was well attended. The interest sustained at these week-day services have been wonderful, when we consider the many religious attractions that have been going on in the city during the past two weeks.

Dr. Sam Luttrell founded his remarks last night upon the 6th and 21st verses of the 12th chapter of John, his subject being, "The right and wrong way to come to Jesus."

There is always a right and wrong way to do things. At the close of the service several came out on the right side.

The services to-morrow will be of vital interest to all. In the morning the doctor will speak on "The Home," a very important subject, and the doctor is a master of it.

In the afternoon there will be a mass meeting for men at the Park street Baptist church. The male quartette of the George street Methodist church will sing, and Dr. Sam Luttrell will takefor his subject, "The man you can't down."

In the evening the subject will be, "The Crucifixion of Christ."

Next Tuesday the doctor will give the story of his life and rescue from a drunkard's grave. All will find a welcome.

PRIVATE SALE—Of two coal heaters, Sideboard, Dining Table, Writing Desk, and Baby Sleigh. Apply 337 Downie street.

AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Rev. Robt. Pogue Will Give the Address To-morrow Afternoon

It will be an interesting hour in the Y.M.C.A. to-morrow afternoon, when Rev. Robt. Pogue will speak to the men who will meet there at 4.15. There is no doubt about the fact that the talk will be a hear-to-heart one. Mr. Pogue has a habit of saying what he thinks, and this is never more in evidence than when his hearers are men. He has a message for men for this occasion and every man who has that hour free should hear him. The singing by the men is one of the best features of these meetings. You simply cannot help singing. Everybody sings and you feel that you must sing. Come in at 4.15 to-morrow afternoon and you will agree that it was an hour well spent.

MR. TULLY RETIRES

To my customers and the Public of Peterborough and District—

On my retirement from the retail drug business conducted by me on George street, Peterborough, for the past forty years, I desire to thank all those who have been my patrons during that period. I also desire to say that I have disposed of my business to Mr. Coleman M. Moncur, a man of ability and experience in the drug business. I believe that the same confidence can be placed in Mr. Moncur as has been placed in the business that I have conducted, as the store has been noted for the high quality of drugs sold ,and Mr. Moncur has given evidence that this will be the line he will follow.

Again thanking my old customers, and bespeaking for Mr. Moncur a liberal schare of your patronage, I am,

Yours truly,
J. D. TULLY.

In connection with the above article referring to my purchasing from Mr. J. D. Tully, his drug business, I just wish to say that I appreciate the position Mr. Tully has held for the past forty years in the business life of Peterborough. Mr. Tully has had the reputation of keeping an excellent stock and a high standard of quality in his business and has earned a reputation that I will endeavour in every way to follow.

I have had a first class drug experience and trust to have the same confidence that has been imposed in Mr. Tully and hope to receive the patronage that has hitherto been extended to this place of business and also to see new faces all the time

12 Tumors Removed Without An Operation

Silver Lake, Ont., Sept. 20, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—I am enjoying better health than I have for eight years, and I think I am entirely cured. I have none of the old symptoms. I am very grateful for my present health, and think Orange Lily is the greatest treatment for women the world knows. Its use in my case caused 12 tumors or growths of some sort to be expelled. Some were as large as a hen's egg, and others smaller, down to the size of a walnut. You may use my case in your advertisement, for it is the solid truth, and pen cannot describe all the good it has done for me. Mrs. Louise E. Bolteridge.

This letter gives an indication of the positive benefits that always follow the use of Orange Lily. It is an applied treatment and comes in direct contact with the suffering organs. It produces results from the start in all cases of women's disorders, including painful periods, falling of womb, irregularities, leucorrhoea, etc.

I will send a sample box containing 10 days' treatment absolutely free to any suffering women who has not yet tried it if she will send me her address. Enclose 2 stamps and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

REFUSED TO COME

Crown Will Insist on Mrs. Jardine and Her Son Frankie Testifying at Inquest Into Death of Lizzie Anderson at Goderich—Some Startling Evidence at Next Session Held on October 25.

Goderich, Oct. 15. Warrants were issued last night by Coroner Holmes to compel the presence at the next session of the inquest of Mrs. Jardine and Frankie Jardine, mother and younger brother of Edward Jardine, whom witnesses have said was seen with young Lizzie Anderson about 10 o'clock on the night she was murdered.

This rather sensational proceeding was adopted because they failed to appear at the resumption of the inquest last night, and the crown was particularly anxious that they should attend as witnesses.

"They went to Hagersville last week, and when we notified them that their presence was required here tonight, refused to come," said Inspector Greer to a reporter.

This necessitated another adjournment. The enquiry will be resumed on Tuesday, Oct. 25, at 10 a.m.

The Jardines have been closely watched while in Hagersville, and will be brought back as prisoners unless they give substantial assurance that they will return peaceably.

George Tate Blackstock, K.C., was here yesterday to conclude the examination of witnesses for the crown. He returned to Toronto in the afternoon. Yesterday morning he visited the scene of the murder and the lair grounds, going carefully over the ground that has been referred to in the evidence to date. There are 17 witnesses still to be examined, and some startling evidence is promised by the provincial inspectors.

Interest in the case is growing daily. The spacious town hall was again jammed to the stairways and out into the street, the people surged long before the hour set for last night's session. People drove in from all parts of Huron County.

The long adjournment is to convenience some of the witnesses and jurors.

A MURDERER'S SUICIDE

Quincy, Mass., Oct. 15.—The body of Luigi Restelli, the former granite manufacturer, who shot six persons, two fatally, including his mother, in this city last summer, was found yesterday in 90 feet of water in an abandoned quarry hole near the scene of one of his crimes. He had committed suicide, apparently, on the day of the murders.

In order to make death by drowning certain, Restelli had attached to himself two pneumatic brass hammers, weighing 75 pounds, and then had handcuffed his wrists together.

A Young Traveler.

NEWS OF SHELDON

Montreal Stock Operator's Clients' Losses Are Now Estimated at $100,000—In His Letters to His Manager He Says That He Will Not Come Back, But Will Carry On Business From a Distance.

Montreal, Oct. 15.—The chief incidents in the Sheldon affair yesterday were the swearing out of an information for his arrest by Manager David Burnside and a warrant or two for the "blind pool" broker, and the receipt of two letters from Sheldon in person saying that he cannot return, but, with the capital secured, in New York he will make money to pay off all his indebtedness in this city.

It has also transpired that a loan company in this city gave out no less than eight thousand dollars lately to people who mortgaged their property to give it to Sheldon. This fact is vouched for by the inspector's statement, made to his board yesterday and indicates pretty well the mentality played upon during the past year or more by the absconding broker.

There is one thing, however, which no one can understand, and that is the fact of a business man like Manager Burnside remaining in Sheldon's office for many months and being hoodwinked completely by the leader, and the same observation will apply to all the other clerks in the office.

Although very little can be made of the books, it is stated that Sheldon did not get away with more than $100,000, so it may be that the losses will not be as large in the aggregate as was at first supposed. It will also be noticed that Sheldon does not give his address in the two letters he has written, if even he wrote the documents at all. Some say that Sheldon has already crossed the Rio Grande, although he mailed the letters in New York or had a friend to do it for him.

There is a story also that Mrs. Sheldon was the daring operator and, screened behind the husband, but there is nothing to corroborate any such supposition. There is great terror among the ladies for fear a list of the dupes are published, as in many cases hubby was ignorant of the whole business.

Mr. Burnside put in a great deal of his own money, and his influence led to his friends doing the same. He is one of the most highly-respected business men in Montreal, and his association with Sheldon must have been worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to the absconding broker. When Sheldon failed to return on Thursday, as he had promised, Mr. Burnside took steps to furnish the authorities with the books and all the information, which he had at his disposal.

Thousands of claims are pouring into the liquidator's office from all parts of the country, and it is besieged by a big crowd of Montrealers at all hours.

It has been discovered that Sheldon's office was visited on Monday night and every paper dealing with stock transactions was destroyed. On this account it is difficult to find the extent of Sheldon's stock transactions.

Five years ago Sheldon was a school teacher on a small salary in Boston. He was always deeply interested in the stock market, and had followed it closely. He started a small business as investment broker, and was successful for a time. After operating for three years, however, he failed and disappeared. He came to Montreal, where he had a number of friends, and claims to have paid off all of the money he owed to his Boston clients soon after his arrival here.

At first Sheldon began quietly in Montreal. He did not court publicity, and his clients were confined to a few hundred, and it was not until quite recently that he started to advertise extensively. A few months ago Sheldon began to extend his operations on a large scale. He employed several hundred agents, many of them commercial travelers, who procured a big flock of clients for him from all parts of the country. About six thousand people are now on his string.

It was Sheldon's boast that he had never lost a dollar for any client, and that he had never paid less than 20 per cent. per month.

CHARGED WITH FRAUD

Toronto, Oct. 15.—On going down to the offices of Ralph Pielsticker & Co., Traders' Bank Building, yesterday to give instructions to sell 14,000 shares of stock, Johnson G. Newsome, broker, room 50, Toronto Arcade, discovered that the Pielsticker firm had been out of business for two days.

As a result of this discovery, Wm. M. Forrest, manager, was arrested at his home last night, 689 Palmerston avenue, on a charge of defrauding Newsome out of nearly $10,000 worth of stock. No further charges have been laid by any other parties as yet.

Ralph Pielsticker is said to have been in England since last May.

It is alleged that Newsome gave an order for 14,000 shares of Little Nipissing stock, which he was purchasing on margin, and gave as security 11,300 shares of Little Nip, and 500 shares of Temiskaming as a holding order till Oct. 31. It is these shares which Forrest is charged with selling and with retaining the cash received from the sale.

To the detectives, Forrest admitted selling the stock, but claimed that Newsome had not kept up his margins.

Forrest is 30 years of age and married. Bail was fixed at $2,000.

Petition For His Release.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 15.—A petition has been sent to the Government asking for the release on parole of William Dobson, former cashier of the Canadian Express Co. here, who is serving four years for stealing $14,000, in a hold-up, from the company last November.

Canada's Future.

Montreal, Oct. 15.—Principal Peterson of Toronto University spoke last evening at the 40th annual convention of teachers on "Progress." He said Canada would not become a great nation for many ages to come.

SHOULDERS THE BLAME

Henry C. A. Maisonville Declares That He Sent the Fallon Interview to a Friend, and Through Him It Got Into the Hands of the French Press—Maisonville's Explanation of His Indiscretion.

Toronto, Oct. 15. Responsibility for the publication of the letter of Hon Mr. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, to Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, detailing the conversation with Bishop Fallon on the bilingual school question in Western Ontario, was placed yesterday to the satisfaction of Premier Whitney. In an official statement, Sir James said:

"I believe Hon. Mr. Hanna was invited by Rev. Father Kennedy to meet Bishop Fallon, and thought it well to send an account of the interview to the Minister of Education. Afterwards he (Mr. Hanna) gave me a copy of the letter to Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works. The latter placed the letter on his private file, from which it, or a copy of it, was taken surreptitiously by his secretary, H. C. A. Maisonville, and given out by him to a friend in Walkerville. Mr. Maisonville confessed his guilt to two members of the Cabinet and his services have been dispensed with."

Mr. Maisonville has been private secretary to Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public works. He voluntarily made his explanations to Messrs. Hanna and Reaume of his part in the affair, and at the same time proffered his resignation. It would seem that a simple act of indiscretion on the part of Mr. Maisonville resulted in the copy of the letter inadvertently reaching the possession of some one who turned it over to the French-Canadian press, with results already known.

In an interview Mr. Maisonville said last night:

"I alone am responsible for having taken certain steps which led to the publication of the memorandum prepared by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, and forwarded to Hon Mr. Pyne, Minister of Education. My one great regret is that any act of mine could have brought Hon. Mr Hanna into a controversy with His Lordship Right Rev. M. F. Fallon, Bishop of London.

"In taking the steps which indirectly led to the publication of the letter I was acting on my own responsibility alone and not in any official capacity. As a French-Canadian of the County of Essex, the teaching of the French language in those schools is dear to my heart.

"The memorandum in fact contributes nothing whatever to the controversy and does not in the least degree affect the happenings in Essex. There is actually no ill-feeling and there has never been any ill-feeling between the Irish Catholics and the French Catholics in Essex County that I know of."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

Cuba has been swept by a damaging wind and rainstorm.

Crown Prince George of Servia is ill with typhoid fever.

Robert Cughan, ex-manager of the Farmers Bank at Athens, will stand trial on charges of falsifying books and returns.

Bourassa, through Le Devoir, appeals to his readers to contribute to the Montreal fund for a monument to King Edward.

France, which barred American potatoes in 1875, because of fear of infecting native potatoes with disease, will now admit them, the French crop being poor.

Graham White, the English aviator, yesterday made a flight into Washington, alighting near the navy department building, where Admiral Dewey welcomed him.

J. Lovell Murray, educational secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement, is in the city, and will address several college gatherings during the next few days.

According to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel at London, Eng., £34,500 were received in response to the appeal on behalf of church work in Western Canada.

A Presbyterian deputation, consisting of Rev. Dr. R. P. MacKay, Rev. F. W. Anderson and Rev. G. M. Ross of Honan, China, will leave on Wednesday of next week for the west in connection with the conventions to be held in the four western provinces.

Randall Morgan of Philadelphia confirms the report from London of the engagement of his daughter, Jane Morgan, and the Hon. Cecil Fisher, son of Lord Fisher, of the British navy. Miss Morgan is one of the five women in the world who hold licenses as master mariners.

New Copyright Law.

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—The copyright legislation which Hon. Sydney Fisher will introduce at the coming session of Parliament, is a complete emancipation for Canada from the restrictions which have hitherto been imposed upon her by British legislation, and is a distinct personal triumph for the Minister of Agriculture, who has for years been fighting for such a result. The Canadian legislation will be preceded by legislation at Westminster which will repeal the denial of Canada's right to legislate on the matter of foreign copyright.

Other self-governing portions of the Empire will benefit.

The Canadian legislation will make the law here conform to the Berlin convention. It will have the important effect of preventing United States publishers having the freedom of the Canadian market by virtue of a British copyright. Hereafter such copyrights will not run here, but the Canadian bill will recognize British copyright directly by copyright within the

The best sugar cane in the world grows in the East Indies. In making Neilson's chocolate centres, granulated sugar refined from this best East Indian cane is used exclusively. A special secret process is employed for boiling our sugars and in blending the flavorings which makes Neilson's Chocolates improve with age. You cannot buy a stale Neilson's Chocolate.

Everything is done with one idea—to have Neilson's Chocolates different—better. They are!

33 different kinds—33 different boxes—of these totally different, delicious Chocolates. Try one box.

If you are unable to obtain Neilson's Chocolates in your vicinity, send us 80c. and we will send you a special package of the most delicious assorted Chocolates you ever ate.

Severe Storms on English Coast.

London, Oct. 15.—The English coast is strewn with wreckage as a result of a storm that has continued for two days. The casualty list, as already reported, is a long one.

Yesterday morning the bodies of five seamen from the coasting steamer Cranford was picked up off Hartlepool. It is believed that the vessel which carried a crew of twenty, foundered and that the men were attempting to reach shore in a small boat when they were lost. Some of the wreckage coming ashore indicates that a sailing ship met a like fate.

Lifeboats from many points were out all Thursday night and in some instances effected rescues. In other cases they were unable to reach distressed craft.

Churches In West.

London, Oct. 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.—) Rev. E. R. Weeks of Winnipeg, addressing the Colonial Missionary Society, said the policy of the west was to foster churches likely to soon become self-supporting, and to undertake missionary work themselves. Referring to the exceedingly small cost of erecting church on the lands of Saskatchewan, he said: "It would be a good thing for such an institute to be put up in every town on the Transcontinental Railway."

Accuses Ottawa Official.

Port Arthur, Ont., Oct. 15.—Over his own signature, in a local paper yesterday J. J. Carrick, M.P.P., charges that C. H. Hunter of the Public Works Department, Ottawa, insulted and threatened sheriff's eviction proceedings for Mrs. D. D. McGillivray, when Mrs. McGillivray, in the absence of her husband, declined to give an option on their property, which Hunter chose as a portion of the site for the armory.

Nearly Lost His Head.

London, Oct. 15.—A news despatch from Calcutta says that intense excitement exists in Tibet. The Chinese authorities at Lhassa arrested the Dalai Lamas' representative, an aged abbot, and sentenced him to be beheaded. The people were so angry that they spirited away the abbot.

Dies Far From Home.

Napanee, Oct. 15.—Wm. Hayes on Thursday received a telegram announcing the death of his son, Rev Adelbert Hayes, at Carlstadt, Sask. from scarlet fever.

THE EXAMINER ROAD RACES
Thanksgiving Day, Monday, Oct. 31st., 1910

SENIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing, and fulfil the required conditions in other ways and wish to be entered in the Examiner Senior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Name_____

Address_____

JUNIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing and am under eighteen years of age. I wish to be entered in the Examiner Junior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Name_____

Address_____

Contestants are required to fill out the blanks in connection with whichever race they desire to enter and send in this coupon to the sporting editor of the Peterboro Examiner as soon as possible.

An Outside Entry For Examiner Junior Race

The first outside entry for the junior Examiner road race arrived this morning when the name of Frank Leahy, of Lakefield, was sent in. Leahy made a good showing last year finishing ninth in a field of thirty starters and he should do better in thi syear's race. Incidetnally his entry brings the junior total up to a round dozen already.

It would not cause much surprise if there are a couple of Indian starters in the senior race. Billy Smoke, of Alderville, is a certainty and it is practically sure that the Chemong sports will not allow the senior cup to go by default after the way Albert Smoke cleaned up last year. There are a couple of good runners in the north getting quietly into shape and there may be a surprise for the public.

TWO SUCCESSFUL EVENTS AT THE BROCK ST. RINK

The fancy dress carnival held at the Brock street rink on Thursday night, was largely attended and a great variety of costumes were to be seen.

Miss Gibbs, the well known skater, won the prize for the best fancy dressed lady.

Mr. Albert White won the prize for the best fancy dressed gentleman.

Mrs. Lucas won the prize for the best comic dressed lady.

Mr. Alfred Spencely won the prize for the best comic dressed gentleman.

Miss Howard was the best dressed girl and Mr. Grover Halpin was the best dressed boy.

Last night the lady's contest was held and the occasion was greeted with a large crowd.

Prize winners and prizes as follows.

Miss Olive Yelland, 2nd prize, a fancy hat pin.

Miss Guy won the 3rd prize; $1.00 worth of skating tickets.

A very enthusiastic crowd witnessed the presentation and loud applause was given to the prize winners.

M'MARTIN FOR SENIOR

Will Start in Ten Mile Event on Thanksgiving Day.

"Jimmy" McMartin, who was second in the Examiner's junior road-race in 1907 and third in 1908, to-day sent in his entry for the Examiner senior race. "Jimmy" is in good shape and the long route should suit him thoroughly. His entry is the third and all three are starting in the ten-mile event for the first time.

Kemptville—There were 2370 boxes of cheese boarded at to-night's meeting of the cheese board and sold for 11c.

Love's So Blind.

Windsor, Oct. 15.—A Chicago despatch says: Louis Gruff, 24 years old, a carpenter of Windsor, Ont., was awakened from his day dreams yesterday with the disappearance of his promised bride, Miss Irene Allen of Detroit, and $1,700, savings of a lifetime. Gruff said he met the young woman two years ago in Detroit, and last Tuesday, when he visited her there, they agreed to go to Kansas City and get married. They came to Chicago, and, while waiting between trains, Gruff was advised to go out and get shaved, and Miss Allen asked him to leave his money with her. Now she's vanished.

Commission For Detroit.

Detroit, Oct. 15.—A plan is on foot to substitute the commission form of government for the present mayor, city council and boards.

As proposed, it will be a combination of the Des Moines and Boston plans, including the election of a mayor and nine aldermen at large. These ten men would perform the duties of the estimators and other boards, devoting all their time to the work and would receive large salaries. If the movement crystalizes, it will be submitted to the voters in 1912.

Kaiser's Advice to Students.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—In the course of a state banquet, concluding the celebration of the centenary of the University of Berlin, the Kaiser gave orders that a number of students, who had dine at a special table in the gallery, be presented to him. He engaged them in conversation, urging less drinking of alcoholic liquors, and adding that the students must devote more attention to outdoor sports.

Manifesto From Manuel.

Gibraltar, Oct. 15.—King Manuel is engaged in the preparation of a manifesto for distribution to the press of Europe, setting forth the truth concerning the revolution.

Lisbon, Oct. 15.—King Manuel, in a letter to a personal friend here, declares that he was forced to leave his country because the Ministers absolutely abandoned him.

Will Get Lower Rate.

Winnipeg, Oct. 15.—The Western Board of Fire Underwriters has made an effort to meet the views of the city with reference to a reduced rate for insurance on the municipal buildings, as a result of an agitation in favor of the city carrying its own insurance.

Italian Railwaymen to Strike.

Rome, Oct 15.—The Italian Government is following the strike situation in France with the keenest interest as the employes of the Italian post telegraph, telephone and railroad systems are organizing for a general strike next December.

Forty-Three Injured.

Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 15.—Forty three persons were injured, thirteen seriously, when a St. Louis and San Francisco train went through a [illegible] west of Georgia, Oklahoma

Railway Strike Broken.

Paris Oct. 15.—The backbone of the railway strike appears to have been broken, but rioting occurred yesterday and the Government fearing further disorders last night, brought additional troops into Paris.

Striking masons who went out in sympathy with the railroad employes wrecked a freight dray in Montmarte in the northern section of the city, and forming in two columns attempted to parade. The police and republican guards charged and dispersed them. During the encounter several guards and policemen were injured.

The tie-up is still practically complete on the western road, but service on all other lines is being resumed on a normal basis.

Takes Issue With "Tay Pay."

Winnipeg, Oct. 15.—Sir Henry Berkley, formerly attorney-general of Hong Kong, took decided issue with T. P. O'Connor, M.P., in an address before the Canadian Club yesterday. He declared that "Tay Pay" had misrepresented the attitude of the House of Lords on public questions, and had also deliberately misrepresented the aims and policy of the Irish party, which wanted more powers than Canadians had, in the matter of self-government. He said the solidity of the Empire would be endangered if such were granted. The Upper House in Great Britain was not antagonistic to the wishes of the country at large.

Must Pay Its Taxes.

Fort William, Oct. 15.—Charging that the G.T.P. elevator here, one of the largest in the world, does not belong to the G.T.P., and is not operated by them, but by a distinct firm, the city of Fort William will refuse to exempt the plant from taxation.

Under the original agreement with the city the G.T.P.'s terminal was to be exempt for twenty years. The city finds, according to the assessor, that the elevator is G.T.P. property in name only. As the rate is twenty-three mills, the new ruling will mean, $29,000 a year in taxes to the owner of the elevator.

Five Years For Brute.

Chatham, Oct. 15.—Five years in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence yesterday morning handed out by Magistrate Houston to James O. Coulter of Camden Township, who pleaded guilty to offences under the Charlton Act. Coulter's victim was his stepdaughter. The offences have continued since the girl was nine years old.

Freight Car Hits Automobile.

Sebring, Ohio, Oct. 15.—Charles Albright, aged 40, manager of the Sebring Bros.' Potteries here, and three employes of the firm were all instantly killed yesterday when a freight car hit their automobile. The others killed were: Joseph Smedecker, George Frederick and John Derby. Albright, driver of the auto, was deaf.

Snow Slide Disaster Suit.

Winnipeg, Oct. 15.—The first action in the Manitoba, courts for damages on account of the loss of life in the great snowslide disaster at Field, in March last, has been entered. Relatives of Andre Klem, laborer, who was killed when the train was swept into Rogers' Pass, claim $5,000 from the C.P.R.

America's Highest Mountain.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 15.—Thomas H Riggs, a Government engineer, reports the discovery far north of the Arctic circle of what he believes to be the highest mountain on the continent, exceeding Mount McKinley by nearly two thousand feet. The mountain is east of the 141st meridian.

Conference Will Succeed.

London, Oct. 15 —(C.A.P. Cable.)—At Manchester last night Rufus Isaacs spoke in optimistic terms regarding the result of the conference on the Lords' veto, and has effectively brushed away the rumors prevalent at the beginning of the week that the negotiations have proved a failure.

The predominant feeling in well-informed circles now is that the conference will succeed, but it is held, as already cabled, that greater issues than the Lords' veto have been raised.

Wassga Runs Aground.

Kingston, Oct. 15.—The steamer Wasaga, Fort William to Kingston, with 50,000 bushels of wheat for the Montreal Transportation Co.'s elevator went ashore opposite Swift's Wharf at 10 o'clock Thursday evening, when within 400 yards of the elevator.

New Aviation Record.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 15.—Alfred Le Blanc, in a Bleriot, made a mile over a measured course at Kinloch aviation field yesterday afternoon in 56 seconds, a new world's record.

Can Women Vote Town Dry.

Port Elgin, Oct. 15.—An important decision was handed out by Judge Barrett yesterday at the revision of the voters' list. This place is to have a vote on local option in January next. There were 25 names in all considered. When it came to a number of women who were down as tenants, Judge Barrett decided that women could not vote on tenant qualification, and that those who were already on the list as tenants could be sworn. The decision was received with general surprise, as it has been the rule to allow women to vote who were on the municipal list as tenants.

New York Broker Assigns.

New York, Oct. 15.—Thomas G Gaylord, who carried on business at No. 43 Exchange place, as Latham, Alexander & Co., cotton, and stock brokers, filed an assignment in the county clerk's office yesterday afternoon for the benefit of their creditors.

A Good Actor.

"I see you have an actor employed on the farm."

"Yes, I put him on. He's a darn good actor too. I thought he was working the first week he was here."—Kansas City Times.

The Little Things.

It is not the straining for great things that is most effective; it is the doing the little things, the common duties, a little better and better—the constant improving—that tells.

Retained the Receipts.

Moosejaw, Sask., Oct. 15.—C. W Connors, ex-dining car conductor, on C.P.R., running between Portal and Spokane, was committed for trial yesterday morning charged with the theft of $330, being six days' receipts on his car in June last. Connors left the employ of the company in August. He was arrested at San Francisco two weeks ago.

Forest Fires Raging.

Fort William, Oct. 15.—While it is not thought that any settlements are endangered the shores of the western half of Lake Superior are covered with smoke from forest fires.

Lake captains arriving yesterday say that the pall of smoke hanging over the lake is more menacing to shipping than an ordinary fog. Horns on both the north and south shores have steadily sounded warnings for the past twenty-four hours.

Wreck on Lake Nepigon.

Port Arthur, Oct. 15.—One of the two steamers operated by Revillon Bros. on Lake Nepigon ran on the rocks of Shakespere Island and is likely a total loss, with cargo consisting of six hundred bags of cement, 30 tons of hay and several tons of camp supplies. The loss will seriously interfere with taking supplies into railway construction camps for the winter.

Six Hurt Near London.

London, Ont., Oct. 15.—As the result of his auto turning turtle on the governor's road last night, ex-Ald. Robert Parsons is in Victoria Hospital badly injured.

Five others who were with him were badly shaken up.

Mr. Parsons' back is injured and he was unconscious for an hour. The car was badly smashed up.

Canada Metal Company In West.

JONATHAN'S EMANCIPATION.

His Sister-in-law Helped, and the Widow Helped Too.

By HELEN T. QUIGG.

Jerusha Amanda Dibbs was his brother's wife and had asserted and maintained her authority over both his brother and himself ever since she had become a member of the family. All morning he had been wondering uneasily for whom the storm was brewing, and, as her husband had got out of the house unscathed, he feared that he was in for it. He was standing by the window now, looking out aimlessly, wishing that it were over and yet not daring to avoid it, and when she entered the room in which he stood, clearing her throat emphatically, he turned toward her with a shiver of apprehension. He was a stout man, with an air of mild indecision about him; about his soft, sandy hair; about his broad, rounded shoulders; about even his easy, grayish lace sack coat.

"It's pretty capers you're been cutting around that Jennet widow," she said.

Jonathan looked, it must be confessed, not only surprised, but worried. "I hope I have not made any trouble for her," he said doubtfully.

"It's absurd, positively absurd," continued Mrs. Dibbs, flopping into a chair. "The idea of marrying that silly little fool, without a cent to her name, and at your age too."

Her brother-in-law had not really had an intention of any sort in regard to the widow. Indeed, he had never had a decided intention in regard to anything since Mrs. Dibbs had taken possession. Nevertheless he felt mildly indignant enough to make a faint retort. "I am sure, Amanda, you were not much younger when you married Lucien," said he in his quiet way.

The curling pins in which Mrs Dibbs' front locks were confined bristled with anger.

"I should like to know," she began in a deep, ominous voice, "what business that is of yours. And you know well enough, Jonathan Dibbs, that when I married your brother I was not nearly as old as you are. But anyhow"—her tone had become loud and resonant—"anyhow I never was such a childish simpleton as you are and always will be to the end of your days—to be fooled and taken in by a designing, no account little creature that's been fishing for a husband ever since that poor invalid man of hers died, worried to death by her flightiness, I'll warrant! That's a pretty thing to happen to a man like you, isn't it?" Here Mrs. Dibbs choked, and Jonathan took advantage of the momentary check in her assault to inquire, "Who told you I was going to marry her, Amanda?"

"Who told me?" she burst out. "Who told me? Why, hasn't the little fool herself been telling it all around the town that you wanted to marry her and," in a high, simpering falsetto, "that she didn't know whether she ought to think of it or not, but that Mr. Dibbs was such a nice man and such a friend of her poor, dear Arthur and she would hate to disappoint him? Oh, the idiot!"

Jonathan Dibbs looked thoughtful. Suddenly the figure of the widow in question appeared before his mind's eye. It was a neat, retiring little figure, with soft brown hair and a small face, slightly sunburned, but sweet and tender, and with an individuality of its own that only a patient, conscientious life could have given it. He compared it with the large, obtrusive face and figure of his sister-in-law, and gradually he began to smile. A sudden sense of relief came to him in the contemplation of the little widow and a strange, unusual sense of pleasure, the joy of the awakening of a desire and a will in him which he had never before suspected.

"I guess the little woman really did think I wanted to marry her," he remarked pleasantly.

"Of course she did," replied Mrs. Dibbs smartly in her loud, scornful voice, not noting the change in her victim's attitude toward her. "Of course she did, the conceited little piece."

"I wouldn't be absurd if I were you, Amanda," said Jonathan Dibbs. "It doesn't suit your size." He had spoken very slowly and smoothly, but he gasped a little now that he had achieved this crude but radical assertion of his freedom. He had reason to gasp.

"What! You dare! You dare!" She stood before him glaring, and his unaccountable inclination to laugh at her frightened him more than her passion did. "You dare!" she shouted. "You—you brute! I knew that little fool had you in her clutches. I knew it. Did she tell you to say that? I might have known she would bring you to forget all honor and truth and duty. Don't you dare bring her to this house, you brute! Sha, indeed! She isn't the size of a fence rail. That's your idea of beauty, I suppose. Just you dare to marry her!"

Jonathan Dibbs, though his heart quaked within him, walked boldly past her to the door. There he turned. "I may send you an invitation to the wedding if she cares to have you come. Anyhow I'll send you an announcement. Say goodby to Lucien for me, will you? Poor Lucien!" He grinned happily into her blazing eyes and, strutting the door with a bang as he went through the house, strode out into the street.

Mrs. Dibbs sank into a chair and after repeating several times the speeches with which she had benefited her brother-in-law indulged in a fit of hysterics, to the vast amusement of the pill carter and the kitchen maid.

Jonathan, however, though he was experiencing a faint, rather contemptuous pity for his brother, strode along gayly, as he had never done before.

"What a fool—what a fool I used to be!" he thought. "What a fool a man is anyhow to let a woman ride over him at her own sweet will! And to think that I stood it for twelve years and never thought of breaking away! It must have been the widow, bless her heart!" Here he smiled to himself sentimentally and wondered how she would take it, the "it" in question being the plan he was going to propose to her.

He flung the gate of the little yard wide open and walked quickly along the path by the side of the house. The widow was on the porch ironing out some lace when he approached, and she looked up with face aglow when she perceived who it was. He lost no time in announcing the object of his visit. He took her hands in his and looked into her wide eyes. "Lillian," he said, "there is a train that leaves here for the city in forty minutes. I want you to get ready and go with me on that train if you can do it in so short a time."

The widow flushed and paled.

"What for?" she asked.

"Why, to get married, of course," he said, surprised that she did not know. There was a silence, and when his arm stole around her, "Hurry up!" in a low voice and a tone whose anxiety did not refer to catching the train.

"I didn't know," she began slowly—"I didn't know we meant to get married. But if you wish it very much—oh, dear!" She hid her face suddenly in his coat.

"Now go," he said after a little, "because we want to catch that train. And wear that blue thing you have with the white spots—you know."

She smiled treinuously. No one had ever noticed her clothes before, and she had always half worshiped him anyhow, and now she was very much confused and very happy.

They managed to catch the train by means of a little running for it, and they rode gayly and breathlessly away from home toward the city. She stole a look at his beaming face and after awhile gathered courage to speak.

"Jonathan," she said softly, "how did I—what did I do to make you think of this? I never hoped"—

He laughed. "Call me Jack," he said with a blush. They used to call him Jack when he was a big, slow, good natured schoolboy. "And what you did was to make a man of me, that is all," he continued. Then after awhile he laughed again. "We have my sister-in-law to thank for some of this," he remarked slowly, "but," he turned to her and spoke with sudden emphasis—"but you must not let it grieve you if we never have a chance to express our gratitude."

A "Sure Thing" Post.

Poets as a rule are not good business men, but an exception is one of a little group of young writers and artists who dine every evening together and talk shop. The poet very often reads the verses he has composed, and sometimes the comments are not exactly flattering. "That's rotten!" exclaimed an artist on hearing one of these effusions recently.

"I'll bet you $5 I can sell it to a magazine," replied the poet.

The wager was made, and the artist lost. Since that the poet has made several similar bets with his scoffing friends and has won them all. He was chuckling over it to an outsider the other day. "You must have wonderful confidence in the merit of your work," said the rank outsider.

"Confidence nothing," laughed the poet. "I couldn't lose. I never read a poem to those fellows until I have first sold it."—New York Sun.

Caring For Eyeglasses.

Most people seem to think that glasses will stand any sort of treatment, and yank and pull at them until they go to the repair shop with alarming frequency. Glasses should never be taken off with one hand; an optician advises that they be carefully grasped by the rims of the lenses on both sides and removed by pushing upward. Pulling at one side of spectacles bends the frame; with noseglasses it loosens the screw, and the lens shakes continually. Sometimes this happens in spite of care, and then it is well to purchase one of the tiny screwdrivers used by opticians and tighten them whenever necessary. Clean your glasses with some soft material—a common piece of tissue paper is better than any medium yet invented—and occasionally give them a bath in warm water into which a little ammonia has been dropped.

Misunderstood.

"Throw up your hands!" "What's this—some new system of physical culture?"

In the Surrogate Court of the County of Peterborough.

IN THE ESTATE of David Doig late of the Township of North Monaghan, in the County of Peterborough, Junk Dealer, deceased:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN pursuant to R. S. O. 1897, Chapter 129, Section 38, and amending Acts, that all persons having claims against the estate of the said David Doig, who died on or about the sixth day of September, A.D., 1910, are required to send by post prepaid or to deliver to the undersigned, the executor of the last will and testament of the said David Doig, deceased, on or before the seventh day of November, A.D., 1910, their names, addresses and description, and full statement of the particulars of their claims and the nature of the security, if any, held by them, duly certified, and that after the said date the said Executor will proceed to distribute the assets of the deceased among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which they shall then have notice.

Plain Styles Prevail

The day for "rah-rah!" clothes is done. Young fellows for the past two years demanded fancy cuffs and flaps and all the "flub-dubs" and "hinky-dinks" that the tailor could put on their clothes. The re-action has set in as we all knew it would. To-day plain styles prevail—no frills and no millinery effects of any kind on them.

But don't forget that correct styles for young men are still very different from those for elderly men. If your tailor doesn't know the difference come to us and we'll be glad to show you how the 20th Century Brand tailors distinguish between smart clothes for young men and genteel styles for older men.

CULVERWELL MAKES GOOD

As Engineer and Financier—Sells Trent River Proposition for $230,000.00—Says He Will Now Develop Burleigh Falls and Buckhorn

The following is the resolution passed by the general meeting of the shareholders of the Northumberland-Durham Power Co., Ltd., held at Cobourg, and endorsed by speeches of Wm. J. Crossen, car manufacturer, and Reeve Wm. J. Maher, of Cobourg; Mayor Robert A. Mulholland of Port Hope; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Belleville; R. S. Hudson, General Manager Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation, Toronto; Edward T. Adams, M.D., Toronto; R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., Toronto; Jos. Knox and James Mark, of Havelock; Col. H. A. Ward, K.C., Port Hope; H. T. Bush, President Standard Ideal Company, Port Hope.

"Resolved that the shareholders of the Northumberland-Durham Power Company, Limited, in general meeting assembled, desire to place on record their high appreciation of the services of John Alexander Culverwell, Managing-Director and Advisory Engineer of the Company, in connection with its business from the beginning down to the present time. We recognize that his untiring energy, ability and perseverance amidst great difficulties and in the face of apparently insurmountable obstacles have been of the highest value and service to the Company and have brought the business of the Company to a very satisfactory issue. When all this is remembered we feel strongly that no words can adequately express our confidence in his integrity and our indebtedness to Mr. Culverwell for his untiring zeal and unflagging energy in our behalf."

Carried unanimously by a standing vote.

There were present at this meeting also a number of members of two other syndicates owning water power properties on the Trent River who were partners with the Northumberland-Durham Power Co., namely the Culverwell-Campbellford District Power Syndicate, and the Culverwell Trenton District Syndicate, who also heartily endorsed the resolution.

It was explained that although a deal had been financed with leading Montreal capitalists to the extent of two million dollars capital and a firm contract made, yet on account of the properties of these three concerns being in many cases connected with other properties of an opposing Power Company, it was thought the most satisfactory thing was an amalgamation, but this other opposing Power Company being stubborn—it was finally decided by the Culverwell interests to sell out for cash, which was done for $230,000.

The properties interested in this deal are simply those properties located south of Rice Lake on the Trent River, and this deal in no way has any connection with another Power Company, namely—The Central Ontario Power Company, Limited, which owns Burleigh Falls and Buckhorn Falls powers located north of Peterborough.

These properties will be developed at once under the managing direction of Mr. Culverwell and already contracts have been secured from the leading manufacturers of Cobourg and Port Hope, the local directors of the Company Messrs. Wm. J. Crossen of Cobourg, car manufacturer; Col. H. A. Ward, K.C., and H. T. Bush, President Standard Ideal Co., Port Hope, besides other Toronto directors. There are already a large number of local district people interested as shareholders.

COMMISSIONERS MET

P. C. Naugher to have his salary increased.

A meeting of the Police Commissioners was held last night. Judge Hayeke was in the chair, and the following commissioners were present: Magistrate Dumble, Mayor Morrow, City Clerk Armstrong, Secretary.

It was decided to raise P. C. Naugher's salary fifty dollars. Chief Thompson was also authorized to purchase the officers' winter suits.

TO-DAY'S MARKET

A large number of farmers gathered to dispose of their produce at this morning's market, and waggonloads of potatoes and apples lined the square. Besides these, cabbages, carrots, turnips, and other roots and vegetables contributed to the variety.

Prices were as follows:—
Potatoes—90c and $1.00 per bag.
Apples—75c per bag.
Cabbage—30c per doz. heads.
Carrots—10c per peck.
Grapes—30c per basket.
Onions—$1.00 per bag.
Hay—$11 per ton.
Baled Hay—$14 per ton.

The inside market also was well stocked with butter and eggs, chicken, geese, and other fowl. Chickens especially were in piles. Eggs were also in abundance. Prices as follows:—
Butter—20c per lb.
Eggs—75c and 80c per pair.
Ducks—70c each.
Geese—$1.15.

Hay was very scarce on the market to-day and a farmer stated that in some parts of the country it will sell at a premium this winter. To-day the price was set at $11 per load and baled hay $14 per load.

The farmers say that potatoes also will be very scarce. The crop has been very good, but the dry rot has destroyed bushels of them. They are rotting after being put in the cellars also. If this report proves true, the price will go up at once. The price of live hogs will be $8.10 per cwt. for the coming week, no dressed hogs being bought. Farmer's hides are 7 1-2 to 8 cents and butcher's hides 8 cents, no change having taken place in the price since last Saturday.

PICTURES OF BRITISH SOVEREIGNS PRESENTED TO RURAL PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Hon. Mr. Stratton, with a commendable practical interest in the welfare of the County of Peterborough and its educational needs, has presented and forwarded to every rural school in the county, the total number being 28 or 30, pictures of the late King and Queen of Great Britain and also of the reigning sovereigns. These pictures, well executed portraits in colours, are three quarters life size. Each of the four pictures is 18 x 24 inches in area, elegantly framed.

They will be hung upon the walls of the school rooms and will have a double educative value. They will make the growing generation of school children familiar with the faces of our late king and queen, as well as of our present monarchs. They will also be useful in helping to impress the historical lessons of our constitutional and original relations to the great centre and cradle of civil and religious liberty as represented by the most beneficently great form of responsible government, is the history of human affairs, and the four, among the best of British kings and queens. A picture like those mentioned, in directness of appeal and understanding, bears the same relation to dry facts that a map does to a long and dull description.

Thirty Motormen Discharged.

Winnipeg, Oct. 15.—As a result of recent complaints the Winnipeg Electric Street Railway put a local detective agency to work, and the first fruits were the discharge Thursday night of over thirty motormen and conductors for drinking while in uniform, neglecting to lift four passengers and other infractions of the rules.

May Be New Cardinals.

Rome, Oct. 15.—According to yesterday's Tribune, Archbishop W. L. O'Connell of Boston, and Mgr. Falconio, the apostolic delegate to the United States, will be raised to the cardinalate at the next meeting of the consistory. The Vatican refuses to confirm or deny The Tribune's statement.

Bomb Near U. S. Embassy.

Paris, Oct. 15.—A powerful bomb was discovered by the police yesterday at the foot of a tree in the Avenue Kleber, near the American embassy. The officers attribute the attempted outrage to anarchists, who sought to put new ginger into the apparently dying railroad strike.

Shot While Killing Porcupine.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 15.—Hugh S. Wooley, printer, was killed at Spanish River, forty miles up coast, by the explosion of a gun. He had attempted to kill a porcupine by swinging the butt of the gun on the animal, but the weapon broke and both barrels exploded.

Charlton To Be Tried.

New York, Oct. 15.—Porter Charlton, the confessed murderer of his wife, Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Charlton, was yesterday ordered turned over to the federal authorities in proceedings which have been instituted for his extradition to Italy.

An Imperial P. O. Trade Mark.

London, Oct. 15.—The question of establishing a British Empire P. O. trademark will be discussed at the conference on Oct 26.

Postal rates on letters from Australia to Great Britain will probably be a penny in 1911.

SIX OR SEVEN MILES SHOULD BE THE LIMIT

The Ontario Statute of 1906 fixed the limit of speed in cities, towns and villages at ten miles an hour and upon any public highway outside the city or town limits at fifteen miles per hour, but the Act provided that any person who drives a motor vehicle on a public highway recklessly or negligently or at a speed or in a manner which is dangerous to the public, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, condition and use of the highway, and to the amount of traffic which actually is at the time, or which might reasonably be expected to be on the highway shall be guilty of an offence under the Act. The penalty under the Act is not to exceed $50 for a first offence, for a second offence $100 and for a third or subsequent offence imprisonment not exceeding one month.

The Police Commissioners at their last sitting considered this matter, and it was considered that on George street, between McDonnell street and the C. P. R. station and on Charlotte street between George street and the G. T. R. station, six or seven miles an hour should be the limit.

The owner of the automobile is responsible under the Act for all violations of the law, and boys and girls should not be allowed to drive autos.

The Commissioners instructed the Chief of Police to prosecute all offenders and to put a stop to the evil habit of delivery boys riding and racing their little waggons on the sidewalks.

PHILADELPHIA WINS OPENING GAME IN THE WORLD'S BASEBALL SERIES

Record Crowd Saw To-day's Battle at Philadelphia—Orvie Overall Opened for Chicago With Chief Bender on the Slab for the Athletics.

SEATS AS HIGH AS $200

Special Wire to the Examiner.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 17.—Ten thousand baseball fans are here and a thousand slept all night in the neighbourhood of the ball grounds, some without shelter. In order to be in right at the commencement of the world's series ball game this afternoon, between Philadelphia, American Athletics and the Chicago National Cubs. It was beautiful baseball weather. It was officially stated at noon that the batteries will be Bender and Thomas, for Philadelphia, and Overall and Kling, for Chicago. Despite the efforts of the controlling committee to prevent ticket scalping, seats were sold this morning as high as two hundred dollars each to some millionaires, who did not care how much they paid.

30,000 There.

PHILADELPHIA, OCT. 17.—Before more than thirty thousand cheering, yelling, baseball fans, the Athletics and Cubs commenced play this afternoon to decide the World's Championship for 1910. It was the noisiest crowd this sober old city ever witnessed.

The Play.

PHILADELPHIA, OCT. 17.—Promptly at 2.15, Umpire Connolly announced the batteries and the great game was on, with Sheckard at the bat. Sheckard fanned. Schulte singled to left after two strikes. Schulte out stealing, Thomas to Collins. It was a very feeble attempt on Schulte's part. Hofman out, Collins to Davis. No runs.

The crowd greeted the retirement of the Cubs with a tremendous cheer, and another cheer was turned loose when Johnnie Kling lined a few throws down to second. Overall immediately began with terrific speed. Strunke bunted toward third and thought he had a clean single, but was out. Collins was thrown out when he finally made the break by a perfect throw from Kling to Tinker. The retirement of the Athletics did not meet with any cheers.

2nd Innings.

For the Cubs—After fouling off the first ball and then hitting at a wide one, Chance hit to short and was thrown out by Barrie. Zimmerman out on foul. Steinfeldt was next up and hit to Baker and was an easy out at first. No runs.

The Athletics—Kling tried to catch Baker napping at second, but Baker divined his intentions in time and slid safely under Tinker. Davis sacrificed, Chance to Zimmerman, Baker going to third. Hard hitting Danny Murphy was next up. He singled to left and Baker scored. Steinfeldt made a gallant try for the ball, but it shot under his glove. Overall appeared nervous, as it seemed that the Athletics had no trouble whatever in making acquaintance with his offerings. Thomas walked on four straight balls after Overall had two strikes on him. Bender hit to Zimmerman who fumbled the ball, allowing Murphy to score, and the Indian got first. Thomas taking second on the play. Strunk flew out to Sheckard. Two runs.

3rd Innings.

Cubs—Joe Tinker was first up for the Cubs and grounded to Collins and was thrown out at first. Kling, with two strikes and three balls on him put up a high one that Bender caught right in front of the plate, the kind that the catcher usually takes. Overall hit to Barrie and was thrown out at first. No runs.

Athletics—Bender did not seem to be extending himself to his limit, and when he came in from the box the crowd gave him a big hand. Lord singled, Collins sacrificed, Chance to Zimmerman, the play being one of the neatest of the game. Lord took third. The Chicago infield gathered in for a play at the plate. Baker again singled to left, scoring Lord. Chance again talked to his big pitcher and then called Kling and Steinfeldt to the box to map out a campaign. The Cubs were manifestly up in the air. Davis fanned. Baker was an easy out when he tried to steal. Kling to Tinker—One run.

4th Innings.

Cubs—This time Sheckard hit to Barrie and was thrown out at first. Schulte and his yellow hat, which has made the only hit off ender up to this time, next appeared. He drew a base on balls. Hofman struck out. Schulte out stealing, Thomas to Collins. No runs.

Athletics—McIntyre pitching for Overall, bent the first one over the plate for a strike, one on Murphy. Murphy hit to Tinker and was thrown out at first. Berry went out, Steinfeldt to Chance. Thomas struck out. No runs.

5th Innings.

Cubs—Chance shot a hard one at Collins, but was nailed at first by a quick throw. Zimmerman fanned, swinging hard at the last two strikes. Steinfeldt went the same route.—No runs.

Athletics—At this stage the Cubs had made but one single off the big Indian, ender. Strunk drew a base on balls, the first man to reach first off McIntyre. He was out stealing, Kling to Tinker, being caught a mile. Lord struck out.—No runs.

6th Innings.

Cubs—Tinker flies out to Strunk after trying to wait Bender out for a base on balls. Kling out, flew out to Murphy who moved back quickly and gathered it in. McIntyre fanned. No runs.

Athletics—Collins hit to Zimmerman and was out at first. With two hits to his credit, Baker came up the third time. He hit through the box, but Tinker made a good sprint and tossed him out. Davis was out Zimmerman to Chance. No runs.

Seventh Innings.

Cubs—Sheckard out, Barrie to Davis, to short; Schulte struck out, Hofman hit to third, and was caught out by Baker.—No runs.

Athletics—Murphy flew out to Sheckard, the latter making a great running catch. Barry out to Chance. Bender got a great ovation when he went to bat. He hit to Chance and was out.—No run.

8th Innings.

Cubs—Chance out, Collins to Davis, Zimmerman fanned; Steinfeldt flew to Baker. No runs.

Athletics—Strunk out, Lord flew out; Collins worked McIntyre for a base on balls and scored on Bauer's two base hit. This was the only hit made off McIntyre, but it scored a run.

9th Innings.

Cubs—Tinker singled to centre; he took second on Strunk's fumble. The single came after Thomas had muffed a fast catch, giving the catcher an error. Kling sacrificed to centre, scoring Tinker; Beaumont went in to bat for McIntyre, Kane is running for Kling. Beaumont out, Collins to Davis, Kane taking second. Sheckard fanned. Schulte walked. Hofman hit to Barry, forcing Kane at third. One run.

Philadelphia didn't play the last innings.

By innings—

| | R | H | E. |
| Chicago | 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1 | 1 | 3 | 1 |

TWO MURDER CHARGES WILL BE DEALT WITH AND SEVERAL CIVIL ACTIONS AT FALL ASSIZES

Widow of Late Isadore Vinnette Suing Otonabee Power Co. For $5,000 and Costs---Action Also Being Brought by Michael J. Sullivan Against Bishop Construction Co.

On Tuesday next at one o'clock, the Fall Assizes of the High Court will open before Chancellor Sir John Boyd. There are two criminal cases and five civil actions to be heard. Most everyone is acquainted with the nature of the criminal cases, that of James Gorham, charged with the shooting and killing his mother in May last and that of Hugh Deline, who will face a charge of wife murder. Mr. E. D. Meredith, K.C., of Toronto, will be the Crown Prosecutor and Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon will defend the prisoners.

THE CIVIL ACTIONS

In the first civil case before a jury, Mary Ann Vinette, wife of the late Isadore Vinette is suing the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, to recover $5,000 and costs. On or about the 9th day of July, 1910, the defendants and their foreman, entrusted to him work, well knowing that the pole, wires and attachments on which he had to work was in a highly dangerous condition, and that Isadore Vinette was an inexperienced man. The plaintiff claims that the death of Isadore Vinette was caused by negligence of persons engaged by defendants, and by such negligence, the plaintiff and her children have been deprived of support and protection. O'Connell and Gordon for the plaintiff. Hall, Medd and Davidson for defendants.

WARNE VS C.P.R.

The plaintiff, W. B. Warne, of this city, is suing the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for $1,000 and costs. On or about the 1st day of September, 1910, in the evening after dark, the plaintiff's automobile at a slow rate of speed was travelling in an easterly direction along the main travelled part of the road on Rink st., and approaching the line of railway and the tracks of the defendant company where the same passes over the said Rink street. At the time the plaintiff was approaching the said line of railway there were several box cars of the defendants standing. A train was approaching backwards but owing to negligence in blowing the whistle or giving some warning, the plaintiff claims the train collided with the automobile, doing considerable damage. O'Connell and Gordon for plaintiff, Angus MacMurchy, K.C., Toronto for defendants.

SULLIVAN VS. BISHOP CONSTRUCTION COMPANY

In this case Michael J. Sullivan claims $2,000 and costs from the Bishop Construction Co. While in the latter's employ at the new dam, the plaintiff fell from a scaffold, sustaining serious and permanent injuries. The plaintiff claims the injury was the result of the scaffolding being defective. O'Connell and Gordon for the plaintiff. Robinette, Godfrey, Phelan and Henderson for the defendants.

Mrs Maud Innes, wife of Alex. Innes of Havelock, is suing the Corporation of Havelock for $5,000 for injuries received as a result, it is alleged, of a defective sidewalk. Denton, Peck and Kerr are appearing for the plaintiff.

STARTLING RUMOURS TOWN CLERK RESIGNS

Special to The Examiner.

LINDSAY, OCT. 17. For some time past there have been rumours current here in regard to alleged irregularities in the town clerk's office, which have culminated in the resignation of Town Clerk Fred Knowlson. The Council has appointed Mr. Williamson, of Toronto, to make a special audit of the books and his arrival today added to the sensation caused by this official's resignation which it is understood was on the advice of his solicitor, Mr. Hopkins. Startling rumours are afloat as to the amount of the shortage, etc., but nothing definite is known.

ALWAYS CONSULT A
A SPECIALIST

Never select glasses for yourself, and never purchase glasses from a peddling spectacle seller. The stock of such spectacle sellers is as defective as their knowledge of optics. The lenses are carefully ground and the lens in one eye is frequently different from the lens in the other eye.

BEWARE of SPECTACLE PEDDLERS

Wearing them will soon result in pain in the eyes and injury to the sight. Then there is frequently the condition of unequal vision—that is, your eyes may differ in focus and each may require a different, specially prescribed lens. In such cases similar lenses, such as you would select for yourself or a peddler would give you, must of necessity prove injurious to one or other of the eyes. We, on the other hand, have the knowledge and appliances necessary to detect the unequal vision or any other defect and grind the lenses to suit. Bring your prescription or the case of glasses you are wearing and have glasses prepared specially for you.

THE SESSION OF 1910-11.

The Parliament of the Dominion of Canada is called to meet on November 17th "for the despatch of business." It is inevitable that in a developing country like Canada there should be many important questions to engage attention. We shall have the usual trifles — trifling in everything except expense—introduced and talked out by dilettanti legislators, but we shall have other questions that loom largely. Of course the most important subjects will revolve around transportation promotion. Situated as we are, geographically, this must for some time assume first rank. We must have access to unopened regions to insure their development and bring the resulting products of forest, field and mine to market. The construction of the Hudson Bay railway as a policy, is an accomplished fact, though that will not prevent a great deal of discursive oratory on the subject. Whatever opposition from Conservative sources will be made, will be much weakened by the fact that Sir James Whitney's government is considering a race with the Dominion government to reach Hudson Bay by rail, a practical affirmation that this region is worth exploiting. The real controversy in regard to the Dominion Hudson Bay railway will circle around the mode of operating when constructed. Transportation interests will be further promoted by the project of deepening the St. Lawrence channel in order to maintain the supremacy of the this route. Reciprocity will develop a great deal of bogus loyalty as well as sensible discussion. The Barking act will come under revision and the copyright law will be dealt with. In connection with this it will be noticed that Great Britain has removed every feature of restraint from Canada in dealing with this matter. Other subjects of more importance will be submitted by the government, and the opposition and private members will help supply a programme that will keep the House busy till well on in the spring. It is to be noted that the Liberal party will sit in Parliament united in the matters of leadership personnel and policy, while, on the contrary, what answers from the Conservatives will come back in a state of more minute division than last year. The differences of last session will be emphasized by the complete revolt of what were then only mildly recalcitrant elements. The party is at serious cross purposes on the question of the tariff. The old school is ready for a fight royal with the new element in leadership. It is not to be supposed that Mr. Foster will tamely submit to being pushed from his seat by Mr. Doherty. The front row will also miss Mr. George Taylor, and surely John Haggart will still be on hand to couch a lance against the new knights that have been brought into the lists. Though the entrance into the first party caucus will be through Perley gates, the new whip will not find it by any means a heaven of harmony. If the simmering elements of the party cannot keep their differences down in open parliament, what kind of a bear garden may a caucus not become?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The present parliamentary recess is, so far, remarkable that it has been marked by no deaths of members of Parliament. The only break is caused by the elevation of Mr. Louis Lavergne, the Liberal whip for Quebec, to the Senate.

Liberals seem to think themselves justified in regarding the opening of Drummond and Athabaska, Quebec, to a bye-election as a practical answer to Mr. Bourassa's challenge to the government to give the people of any riding a chance to speak on the naval policy. On the other hand the hopless opponents of the government regard the opening of this riding by advancing Mr. Lavergne, liberal whip for Quebec to the Senate, as a tactical mistake. Of course the Conservatives can give pointers on tactics.

The rifts in the Conservative party lute are not only widening, but opening in new places. The Galt Reporter, the Conservative organ for that district, is to have a Conservative rival. Mr. J. P. Jaffray, who has been editor of the Reporter for fourteen years, says he has been forced out of the office by his brother, and has not had a fair deal. He will establish a new Conservative daily, the "Galt Evening Post," with an entirely new plant. The Examiner extends its best wishes for the success of the Post as a new member of the journalistic guild.

A TRIAL OF STRENGTH.

(Montreal Herald)

The appointment of Mr. Louis Lavergne to the Senate occasions a vacancy in the riding of Drummond, and Arthabaska. The election will come on at once. Nominations are to be held on October 27, and voting on November 4.

Here we have an explanation, hitherto missing of the trouble Sir Wilfrid went to in his speech of last Monday. Arthabaska is his own county. If an election is held here at a time when opposition to him personally is more than usually strong, he will naturally want to win it. To hold Arthabaska safe against all opponents is worth a trip to Montreal, and the labour of a two hours' speech.

In this election we shall see what we shall see. It will test the feeling of Quebec towards Sir Wilfrid. It will test the relations of Conservative and Nationalist to each other. It will show whether the Laurier doctrine of the safe and orderly evolution of Canadian nationality fits in with the calm and thoughtful disposition of the French-Canadian farmer, or whether he has suddenly and unexpectedly become enamored of sharp words and fine distinctions. It will show whether the Conservative party as such has any continued existence, show how such candidate as the Opposition may have will shoose as between Mr. Borden and Mr. Monk. If, as is probable, the choice goes Mr. Monk's way, the question at once arises what Mr. Borden's supporters are going to do about it. That question was bound to come up later; it adds to the interest if it come up now.

In the prospect of this election, also, may perhaps be found the explanation of the otherwise inexplicable remarks Sir Wilfrid made about the possibility of his own retirement. He says he took to put aside all suggestions that he might go to the Bench, to the House of Lords, or to the High Commissioner's office; the reference to his retiring from office at the wish of the people or on his own motion; the statement that his career was near its close. Nothing in his manner indicated any such eventuality. For all his sixty-nine years he looked almost young. But it may very well be that he considers it of vital importance, if he is to go on in the great role he has played, that the Province of Quebec should continue to manifest its confidence in his judgment and its satisfaction with his statesmanship.

It will be even interesting to see whether, with the Laurier speech in the hands of all the electors of Drummond and Arthabaska, as it doubtless soon will be, the Nationalists will venture to name a candidate at all. It may well be believed that the Conservative party will not. As a party it seems hardly to have an existence in Quebec nowadays.

ON OLD RUNS

G. T. R. Trainmen Have Been Restored to Their Former Positions

Nearly all the local G.T.R. trainmen are now back on their old runs. Conductor John Buller went out on the 11.45 to-day. Conductor Ringland took the Belleville-Lindsay way freight this morning. Baggageman Mr. J. McLean went to Toronto on the morning train to take his regular trip on the Peterborough flyer. Mr. F. Haskill was in Lindsay this morning and had a conference with P. J. Lynch, Superintendent, but returned on the 11.46. It is not known yet whether he will get his old run back or not. It was rumoured that he would be put on a Lindsay train, but nothing is definitely known as yet. Conductor C. Adams took his old run on the Belleville train to-day. General conditions are favourable, and the G.T.R. officials are so far fulfilling their agreement to restore the men to their former position within ninety days of the strike settlement.

NO MONEY THERE

Montreal, Oct. 17.—David Burnside, who has been manager for C. D. Sheldon since he started extensive operations in this city, stated Saturday that he really had nothing more to say, which would give the public any enlightenment as to the whereabouts of Sheldon, or as to the possibility of their getting back the money, which they entrusted to the frenzied financier.

"As I said before," he added, "I place no reliance upon the promises made in the letter I received. I thought Mr. Sheldon absolutely straight. If I hadn't I wouldn't have been with him. But now he runs away, leaving us in this predicament. As you know, I have sworn out a warrant against him."

At this point Mr. Burnside said a word to the press: "All I ask," he stated, "is a square deal, and I'm not getting it. Many of the accounts make it appear I was hand in glove with Sheldon. Friday a paper comes out with a headline: 'Sheldon writes to his pals,' and that after I have taken the responsibility of doing exactly what the papers have advised, swearing out a warrant for the arrest of the man. I tell you it isn't fair."

If there is anything laughable in the Sheldon affair, certainly it is the sight of David Burnside, the Sheldon manager, going down to Mr. Chandler to get the $683,000 Sheldon said he had deposited there.

When Mr. Chandler heard the request for $683,000, his eyes nearly popped out of his head.

"How much?" he said in a dazed way.

Mr. Burnside said it was $683,000.

Mr. Chandler recovered after a while, but the shock was great. After he recovered he smiled.

And this was the way Sheldon flimflammed his clerks and managers. They believed Sheldon had $683,000 on deposit in one office in Montreal. Here is the evidence to convict C. D. Sheldon of fraud. It is a fac-simile of a broker's daily balance sheet, and was supposedly made out in the office of Broker Chandler. Mr. Chandler says it is a forgery, and that it was not made out in his office.

Hague Delegate Found.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—A cable to the Department of Marine and Fisheries from Hutchinson, superintendent of the exhibition branch, announces that Robert Venning, superintendent of fisheries, who has been missing for six weeks, has been located in Brussels. Mr. Venning was found in a hotel at Brussels, Belgium, suffering from amnesia, or loss of memory. He has been taken charge of by Mr. Hutchinson and it is expected that he will be able to leave for Ottawa shortly, accompanied by one of the members of the staff of the Canadian exhibit at Brussels.

Mr. Venning was one of the members of the Canadian delegation to The Hague, in connection with the fisheries arbitration. He is one of the best postal men in the Canadian public service on international law, especially in its application to fisheries questions, and his advice was continually sought by counsel on the Canadian side.

Fatal Trolley Wreck.

Boston, Oct. 17.—Three persons were killed outright, one was fatally injured and died at a hospital, and 25 others were hurt, when a Boston-bound electric car from Watertown "split a switch" at the Boston end of the new West Boston bridge over the Charles River Saturday night, turning completely around and toppling over on its side.

Operating by 'Phone.

Montreal, Oct. 17.—The C.P.R. has authorized the installation of two more telephone circuits for train despatching, via Toronto to London, 118 miles, and London to St. Thomas Port Burwell and St. Mary's, 114 miles. When this work is completed there will be 2,131 miles of the C.P.R operated entirely by telephone.

Candidates for Navy.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—Sixty young Canadians, the majority from the Maritime Provinces, have signified their intention of writing in the competitive exams. for cadetship in the Canadian naval service. The list closed on Tuesday. Thirty cadets will be accepted the first year and fifteen in each subsequent year.

Privy Councillor Dead.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 17.—George Seymour, former Minister of Finance member of the Privy Council, and one of the most prominent citizens of Jamaica, B.W.I., died yesterday from pneumonia, at the residence of his son, Frederick Seymour, whom he was visiting in this city. He was 86 years old.

Sentence Day at Toronto.

Toronto, Oct. 17.—Judge Denton on Saturday passed sentence on nearly half a hundred unfortunates, who had come before him in the Sessions' Court.

Several cases had to do with crimes against girls and women. James Murphy, was sentenced to 18 months for having, with another man, "by guile and trickery," lured two girls to a stable and attempted an assault. His ill-health saved him from the lash. John Jackson got six months for offending against a little girl whom he took to a picture show, and Carmone Montone, for an offence against his sister, 18 months. Wm. Menary, for attempting an assault, had sentence deferred pending a stated case.

Both Legs Cut Off.

Brantford, Oct. 17.—Louis Martin, night yardmaster at the Grand Trunk depot, yesterday morning had both legs cut off below the knees. Fifteen minutes before he was due to be relieved he turned a switch on the main line track, and stepped over on another track in front of the yard engine, the approach of which he did not notice. His condition is critical.

New Industry for Hamilton.

Hamilton, Oct. 17.—Hamilton secured a new industry on Saturday, the Acme Motor Carriage & Machinery Co., capitalized at $1,000,000. It is a combination of a leading Detroit automobile firm and the American Rode Machine Co., of Goderich. The new company has taken the Baynes Carriage Co.'s business and plant.

Left Money to Universities.

Sherbrooke, Oct. 17.—The late Dr. Reid of Inverness, Megantic County, left a large estate, and Laval and McGill Universities, Montreal, will receive a share of the same. His mineral properties in Wolfe and Megantic counties are valued at over two million dollars. His other property is placed at $800,000.

His first will, written by himself, left all to his nieces and nephews, and the local church, but shortly before his death he made a notarial will which left most of his property to the universities mentioned.

Granted Concessions.

Paris, Oct. 17.—The directors of the railroad companies involved in the strike agreed Saturday to grant a minimum wage of $1 a day to the employes of all lines running out of Paris. The new scale will go into effect Jan. 1, and constitutes the chief concession demanded by the men.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to dynamite the tracks of the Northern Railroad near Dreuil before the passage of the London express from Boulogne for Paris. The train was brought to a standstill, but later proceeded.

Decrease in Labor Vote.

London, Oct. 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A Sydney despatch says the New South Wales elections indicate a great decrease in the Labor vote.

Hon. James A. Hague, Minister of Education and Labor; Hon. C. W. Oakes, Minister without portfolio, and Hon. S. W. Moore, Secretary for Lands, were defeated.

The Liberals captured 44 seats and the Labor party 46 seats.

Presentation to Brockville Club.

Brockville, Oct. 17.—A. E. Donovan, M.P.P., of Toronto, has presented to the Brockville Club a fine oil painting entitled "The First Parting," representing a scene in the Tyrolese Alps. It is a beautiful specimen of art, rich in coloring and admirable in technique.

Held Up Three Trains.

Dies From His Injuries.

London, Oct. 17.—Ex-Alderman Robert Parsons, who was injured in an auto accident on Friday night at Crumlin, died from his injuries at Victoria Hospital yesterday. He was injured internally, but it was not thought at the time that he would die. Paralysis, however, set in. He is survived by his wife and one daughter. He was a well-known East London business man, and was in the city council for several years.

The members of the royal commission on technical education arrived here on Saturday, and will hear evidence and visit London factories today and to-morrow.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 17.—Rev. A. E. Quinn, pastor of the Main street Baptist Church, in a sermon to the Welland County Orange Lodge yesterday afternoon, severely criticized the action of the Government officials in welcoming Cardinal Vannutelli, the papal legate, to Canada recently. He was greeted with round after round of hand-clapping.

Montreal a Second Sodom.

Montreal, Oct. 17.—Secretary Roberts of the Dominion Alliance stated in the First Baptist Church that the red light district was as flourishing as ever here, and that he knew of 500 unlicensed liquor sellers. Men and women of so degraded a character visit these places that Montreal is fast becoming a second Sodom and Gomorrah.

Disappointed in Love, Suicided.

Fort Frances, Oct. 17.—Annie McGinnes committed suicide by throwing himself into the canal here Friday evening. She was employed at the home of John Tight, and left a note for Mrs. Tight, saying: "May God forgive me, good-bye." The cause of the rash act was disappointment in love.

Will Go Over the Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 17.—Robert Leach will attempt to go over the Falls in a patented lifeboat, the invention of James Mitchell of Arrow Lake, Manitoba. The inventor wrote Leach, offering the use of the boat, and Leach last night wired his acceptance. The trip will be made as soon as the craft arrives here.

His inventior is 80 years old and wrote Leach that he would make the trip himself if he were not so old.

Strike Quarrel Ends in Shooting.

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 17.—Following a quarrel over a strike situation among employes of the companies by which they were employed, Edward Maye of Troy was shot and killed at Green Island Saturday by Frank Sheldon of Watervliet. Sheldon, who is about forty years of age, was placed under arrest. He claims he fired the shot in self-defence.

Sothern Divorced.

"THE BETRAYAL"

(By E. Phillips Oppenheim.)

It was several minutes before he returned. I began to wonder whether he had changed his mind, and returned to Rowchester with Lady Angela. Then the door handle suddenly turned, and he stepped in. His hair was tossed with the wind, his shoes were wet and covered with mud, and he was breathing rather fast, as though he had been running. I looked at him inquiringly. He offered no explanation. But on his way to the chair, which he presently drew up to the fire, he paused for a full minute by the window, and shading the carriage lamp which he still carried, with his hand, he looked steadily out into the darkness. A thought struck me.

"You have seen him!" I exclaimed.

He set down the lamp upon the table, and deliberately seated himself.

"Seen whom?" he asked, producing a pipe and tobacco.

"The man who looked in—whose face I saw at the window."

He struck a match and lit his pipe.

"I have seen no one," he answered quietly. "The face was probably a fancy of yours. I should recommend you to forget it."

I looked down at his marsh-stained shoes. One foot was wet to the ankle and a thin strip of green seaweed had wound itself around his trousers. To any other man I should have had more to say. Yet even in those first few hours of our acquaintance I had become, like all the others, to some extent the servant of his will, spoken or unspoken. So I held my peace and looked away into the fire. I felt he had something to say to me, and I waited.

He moved his head slowly towards the bookcase.

"These books," he asked, "are yours?"

"Yes," I answered.

"Your name then is Guy Ducaine?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever know your father?"

It was a singular question. I looked at him quickly. His face was sphinxlike.

"No. Why do you ask? Did you?"

He ignored me absolutely for several moments. His whole attention seemed fixed upon the curling wreath of blue smoke which hung between us.

"He died, I suppose," he continued, "when you were about twelve years old."

I nodded.

"My uncle," I said, "gave me a holiday and a sovereign to spend. He told me that a great piece of good fortune had happened to me."

Colonel Ray smiled grimly.

"That was like old Stephen Ducaine," he remarked. "He died himself a few years afterwards."

"Three years."

"He left you ten thousand pounds. What have you done with it?"

"Mr. Heathcote, of Heathcote, Sons and Vyse, was my solicitor."

"Well?"

I remembered that he had been away from England for several years.

"The firm failed," I told him, "for a quarter of a million. Mr. Heathcote shot himself. I am told that there is a probable dividend of six-pence-half-penny in the pound to come some day."

Colonel Ray smoked on in silence. This was evidently news to him.

"Awkward for you," he remarked at last.

I laughed a little bitterly. I knew quite well that he was expecting me to continue and I did so.

"I sold my things at Macladen and paid my debts. I was promised two pupils if I would take a house somewhere on this coast. I took one and got ready for them with my last few pounds. Their father died suddenly and they did not come. I got rid of the house, at a sacrifice, and came to this cottage."

"You took your degree?"

"With honours."

He blew out more smoke.

"You are young," he said, "a gentleman by birth, and I should imagine a moderate athlete. Yet have an exceptional degree, and I presume a fair knowledge of the world. Yet you appear to be deliberately settling down here to starve."

"I can assure you," I answered, "that the deliberation is lacking. I have no fear of anything of the sort. I expect to get some pupils in the neighbourhood and I am a little hard up, and I thought perhaps that I might make a few shillings by a lecture."

"Of the proceeds of which," he remarked, with a dry little smile, "I appear to have robbed you."

I shrugged my shoulders.

"I hoped for little but a meal or two from it," I answered. "The only loss is to my self-respect. I owe to charity what I might have earned."

He took his pipe from his mouth and looked at me with a thin derisive smile.

"You talk," he said, "like a very young man. If you had knocked about in all corners of the world as I have you would have learnt a greater lesson from a greater book. When a man meets brother man in the wilds, who talks of charity? They divide goods and pass on. Even the savages do this."

"These," I ventured to remark, "are not the wilds."

He sighed and replaced his pipe in his mouth.

"You are young, very young," he remarked, thoughtfully. "You have that beastly hothouse education, big ideas on thin stalks, orchids instead of roses, the stove instead of the sun. The wilds are everywhere—on the Thames Embankment, even in this God-forsaken corner of the world. The wilds are everywhere men meets men."

I was silent. Who was I to argue with Ray, whose fame was in every one's mouth—soldier, traveller, and diplomatist? For many years he had been living hand and glove with life and death. There were many who spoke well of him, and many ill—many to whom he was a hero, many to whom his very name was like poison. But he was emphatically not a man to contradict. In my little cottage he seemed like a giant, six-foot-two, broad, and swart with the burning fire of tropical suns. He seemed to fill the place, to dominate me and my paltry surroundings, even as in later years I saw him, the master spirit in a great assembly, eagle-eyed, strenuous, omnipotent. There was something about him which made other men seem like pygmies. There was force in the stern self-repression of his speech, in the curve of his lips, the clear lightning of his eyes.

My silence did not seem altogether to satisfy him. I felt his eyes challenge mine, and I was forced to meet his darkly questioning gaze.

"Come," he said, "I trust that I have said enough. You have buried the thought of that hateful word."

"You have stricken it mortally," I answered "but I can scarcely promise so speedy a funeral. However, what more I feel," I added, "I will keep to myself."

"It would be better," he answered curtly.

"You have asked me" I said "many questions. I am emboldened to ask you one. You have spoken of my father."

The look he threw upon me was little short of terrible.

"Ay," he answered, "I have spoken of him. Let me tell you this, young man. If I believed that you were a creature of his breed, if I believed that a drop of his black blood ran in your veins, I would take you by the neck now and throw you into the nearest creek where the water was deep enough to drown."

I rose to my feet, trembling.

"If those are your feelings, sir," I declared, "I have no wish to claim your kindness."

"Sit down, boy," he answered coldly. "I have no fear of you. Nature does not pay us so evil a trick as to send us two such as he in successive generations."

He rose and looked out of the window. The storm had abated but little. The roar of the sea and wind was still like thunder in the air. Black clouds were driven furiously across the sky, torrents of rain and spray beat every now and then upon the window. He turned back and examined the carriage lamp.

"It is an awful night," I said. "I cannot offer you a bed unless you will take mine, but I can bring rugs and a pillow to the fire if you will lie there."

Then for the only time in my life I saw him hesitate. He looked out of my uncurtained window into the night. Very often have I wondered what thought it was that passed then through his brain.

"I thank you," he said; "the walk is nothing, and they will expect me at Rowchester. You have pencil and paper. Write down what I tell you. —Colonel Mostyn Ray, No. 17, Sussex Square. You have that? Good! It is my address. Presently I think you will get tired of your life here. Come then to me. I may be able to show you the way—"

"Out of the conservatory," I interrupted, smiling.

He nodded, and took up the lantern. To my surprise, he did not offer to shake hands. Without another word he passed out into the darkness.

In my dreams that night I fancied that a strange cry came ringing to my ears from the marshes—a long-drawn-out cry of terror, ending in a sob. I was weary, and I turned on my side again and slept.

Sore, Chafed Aching Feet

Made Well and Comfortable by the Soothing Effects of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

What misery many endure from sore, chafed and aching feet.

Tightly imprisoned in the modern shoe the feet perspire and the skin is chafed and irritated until it is in anything but a healthful condition. Possibly you never thought of Dr. Chase's Ointment in this connection, but it brings wonderful relief and comfort almost instantly.

Powders are often worse than useless, because they clog the pores of the skin and prevent healthful action.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is so healing and soothing that it takes out the itching, burning, stinging sensations, and makes walking a pleasure.

It keeps the skin soft and pliable and prevents the formation of corns and bunions.

The better you become acquainted with Dr. Chase's Ointment the more you will marvel at the scores of ways in which it can be used wherever there is itching of the skin or a sore or wound that refuses to heal.

For chafing, skin irritation, ivy poison, stings of insects, barbers' itch, chilblains, eczema, and itching piles, Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard cure.

Try it when occasion arises and you will wonder how you ever got along without this great skin treatment. It brings relief quickly and is almost magical, as a healer of raw, inflamed skin.

Do not be satisfied with a substitute. If your dealer does not keep Dr. Chase's Ointment, write for a free sample box to Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Preference share dividends will accrue from November 1st next, payments to be made, first, for a two-months' period on the first day of January next, and thereafter quarterly.

Preference Shares carry the right to the holder of exchange at any time, share for share, for Common Stock, and are preferential both as to assets and cumulative dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum.

It is expected that the Common Stock will bear half-yearly dividends at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum from January 1st next.

The company has no bonds, and there is no mortgage upon its real estate.

Application will be made in due course to have both the preference and common stock listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

WE OFFER FOR SALE AT PAR 6,500 FULLY PAID SHARES OF $100 PAR VALUE EACH OF THE ABOVE-MENTIONED 7% CUMULATIVE CONVERTIBLE PREFERENCE STOCK, CARRYING A BONUS OF 25% OF THE AMOUNT OF THE PREFERENCE SHARES IN COMMON STOCK

Payments are as follows:

10. per share with subscription, and
90. per share on or before November 1st next.

Subscription books are now open at our offices, and will close not later than 4 o'clock on Tuesday, the 25th inst. The right is reserved to allot only such subscriptions and for such amounts as may be approved, and to close the subscription books without notice. Subscription forms are available on request.

We recommend purchases of these shares, the Preference Stock dividends being well assured and prospects being good for satisfactory dividends on the Common Shares.

Memoranda are appended, signed respectively by the President, Auditors and Solicitors of the Company, relating to its history and prospects and to the character of its shares.

PACIFIC-BURT CO., Limited

The Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, is acquiring the whole of the business of San Francisco, as of March 31st, 1910, subject to a 6 per cent. dividend from that date until September 26th, 1910, upon the capital stock of the latter company; also, the exclusive rights under all patents owned and to be owned by F. N. Burt Company, Limited, for the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Wyoming and Colorado.

The Pacific Burt Co., Limited, is also acquiring the factory site and buildings of the Champion Investment Co., at Emeryville, Cal., a growing manufacturing suburb of San Francisco, where the factory of the Pacific Manifolding Co., has been operating, and where it is proposed to instal the special machinery for manufacture of small paper boxes, and to conduct such a business as is now operated by the F. N. Burt Co., Limited, in their Buffalo factories.

The Pacific Manifolding Book Co., holds exclusive licenses under present and future patents of the Carter-Crume Co., Limited, for practically the same territory as mentioned above in relation to the Burt patents, viz., the territory west of Denver, Colorado, to and including the State of California. Settlement has been made by which no royalties are payable under these licenses in future. The terms on which all the above assets and rights are being secured by the Pacific-Burt Company are set out in detail in an agreement with me as vendor, dated 11th October, 1910, and filed in the office of the Provincial Secretary.

The business has prospered for many years, the year ending March 31 last having been the most prosperous of any theretofore, though net profits for the year now current will appreciably exceed that record. The business has consisted chiefly of the manufacture of merchants' counter-check books and cash sales books for stores, together with kindred lines necessary for use in connection with the highly systematized business of department stores. It is excellently organized and strongly entrenched, being largely protected from excessive competition by heavy freight charges from the east, caused by distance and the Rocky Mountains. The sales for the year ending March 31st last showed an increase over those of the previous year of 25 per cent., and this rate of increase has been maintained for the months of the current year over the same months of the year preceding. The expectation is that both business and profits will continue to show steady and satisfactory increases.

The principal employees of the Pacific Manifolding Book Co., have become employees of the Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, including the General Manager, Mr. Horace P. Brown, to whom much of the success of the business in recent years is to be credited. He has agreed, at the option of the company, to remain for a term of five years, and not to engage in competition for a period of ten years thereafter.

The opportunity for establishing a large and profitable business in the specialties manufactured by F. N. Burt Co., Limited, is unusually attractive, a growing demand is assured, and the special machinery and methods used by the company, which will always be at the command of the Pacific Burt Co., insure a satisfactory and profitable business in the Pacific coast territry.

F. N. Burt Co., limited, have found it necessary, by reason of the large amount of business being offered them in the eastern States, to enlarge extensively two of their principal factories in Buffalo. In view of this, and of the prospects of their Canadian branch, the Directors of that company have concluded, in establishing a business on the Pacific coast, to avail themselves of the opportunity furnished by the exceptionally good organization and management of the Pacific Manifolding Book Company. An agreement has, therefore, been entered into by which all present and future patents, inventions and improvements of F. N. Burt Co., Limited, become the property of the Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, for the Pacific coast territory, subject to payment of certain percentages upon the gross income of that department.

Ample provision is made in the capital of the company for steady expansion of the present business, and for the installation of the plant for manufacture of the Burt lines, as well as for working capital.

The business now in operation, being so well established and prosperous, insures from the beginning net profits considerably more than sufficient to pay Preferred Stock dividends. It will, of course, require a number of months to instal the plant and organize the business of the Burt Department, but I believe that the current rate of earnings on the present business will warrant the declaration of dividends upon the Common Stock at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum from January 1st next, while increases in Common Stock dividends may reasonably be expected from time to time after the Burt Department has come into full operation.

S. J. MOORE, President.

Toronto, October 12, 1910.

ACCOUNTANTS' STATEMENT

Regarding the operations for the five years ending March 31st last of the Pacific Manifold Book Company, of Emeryville, California, after adjusting the net profits as to rent and royalty with the basis which has come into operation through the formation of the Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, and after deducting ample charges for interest, bad debts, depreciation and maintenance and repairs of the property, we hereby certify that the net profits for the period named were as follows:—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Year ending March 31st, | 1906 | ..... | $30,070 |
| " " " " | 1907 | ..... | 58,379 |
| " " " " | 1908 | ..... | 45,212 |
| " " " " | 1909 | ..... | 35,880 |
| " " " " | 1910 | ..... | 60,428 |

Profits of the two years ending in 1908 and 1909 were injuriously affected (to an unequal extent, however) by the results of the financial panic in the United States in the latter part of 1907. The lessened profits during these two years were out of the ordinary, and do not indicate the Company's normal earning power.

We are advised that it is the intention of the Directors to close the Company's fiscal year at the end of the present calendar year. From the evidence now in our possession the net profits of Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, for the last nine months of this year should not be less than $50,000 or at the rate of $66,666 per annum.

We have not considered the question of future profits from the Burt portion of the business.

CLARKSON & CROSS.

Toronto, October 12th, 1910.

SOLICITORS' OPINION

We have had charge of the formation, under the laws of the Province of Ontario, of the Pacific-Burt Company, Limited, and certify that both the Preference and Common shares have been validly issued as full paid shares, the Preference shares being preferred as to both assets and cumulative dividend of 7 per cent. per annum, and carrying the right to the holder to exchange the same at any time, share for share, for Common Stock.

THOMPSON, TILLEY & JOHNSTON.

Toronto, October 14th, 1910.

INTEREST INCREASING

In the Chimes Fund—Near the $5,000 Mark

Further public contributions have been made to the Chimes Fund, which evidence an increasing and widening interest. The letter-carriers of the city post office sent $2.80, and a second handsome donation of $13.25 from the Quaker Oats Company was made through Mr. F. L. Peat, and extra sums per Mr. John Murphy and the girls' department were also made. The C. G. E. lamp department of seventy girls made a contribution of $12 through Miss L. Wallis. W. G. Cocks, of Toronto, also sends a donation. The fund to-day stood at $4941.72.

Plain Styles Prevail

The day for "rah-rah!" clothes is done. Young fellows for the past two years demanded fancy cuffs and flaps and all the "flub-dubs" and "hinky-dinks" that the tailor could put on their clothes. The re-action has set in as we all knew it would. To-day plain styles prevail—no frills and no millinery effects of any kind on them.

But don't forget that correct styles for young men are still very different from those for elderly men. If your tailor doesn't know the difference come to us and we'll be glad to show you how the 20th Century Brand tailors distinguish between smart clothes for young men and genteel styles for older men.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"WILL you please tell me how I can keep some hold upon a red-hot poker and not be burned?"

That, in spirit, is the question a young girl has just written to ask me.

No, not in just these words, of course. This, paraphrased, is her story.

She is a girl of twenty, a stenographer in a large office. A handsome married man of about forty years of age continually pays her attention, writes to her, confides in her, and so forth.

At first she persistently discouraged his attentions, but lately has accepted some of them.

This little story, which doubtless has its prototype in every large business office in the country, she concludes with:—

"I have learned to care for him more than I should for a married man. What can I do to keep him from pursuing me so constantly, and to avoid the danger of scandal, but still retain his friendship?"

In other words, "How can I keep some hold upon a red hot poker, and still not be burned?"

Dear lady, don't you realize that you are asking me the world-old question of weak humanity?—Isn't there some way that I can do wrong and not suffer the consequences?"

As far as I can see, you can do one of two things—

You can save yourself from being burned by letting go of that poker right off quick.

Or you can keep hold and prepare to be burned.

But you CAN'T do both.

Maybe things have come to that pass where you think you can't do the first.

I hope not.

But in the fear that you have, and for the sake of any other of my girl readers who may fancy themselves in a similar predicament, I am going to take the liberty of quoting a very remarkable letter that came to Cynthia Grey, a newspaper contemporary of mine.

Miss Grey appealed to her readers for help in advising a young girl who had fallen in love with a married man and wanted to know how she could cure herself.

A "woman who knew" wrote this remarkable heart document—

Your call for help to answer your correspondent who is "In Love with a Married Man" appealed to me, for I am a woman who has fought this battle. This is an aggressive fight against one's self, and to delay is sure to mean defeat, and defeat means perdition for you both. Drive this man from your mind, for this is his stronghold, nor cast a lingering look behind.

This is difficult, but it can be done. Do not allow yourself any letters or keepsakes. Banish any thought of him the moment it presents itself. Close your mental eyes instantly to any thought of him. In a word, the word of the wise and tender Jesus, "Pluck it out and cast it from thee," and you will experience a relief whose joy will far outdistance any guilty pleasure you may have found in an unholy love.

You will be rewarded for every effort you make to put this man from you by seeing yourself more able each day to withstand this temptation, till finally, not feeding the fire you are trying to put out, some day you will coolly sweep up its ashes and wonder it had ever been. Then, most likely a wholesome fire may burn in your heart, and a happy family gather around your hearthstone. Try it.

GUILD OF GOOD FELLOWSHIP HAS SUCCESSFUL MEETING

Rev. Mr. Carpenter Gave a Splendid Address Upon the Subject of "The Enquiry Office" at Princess Theatre.

A PRAISEWORTHY PROJECT

A large number attended St. John's League of Goodfellowship" meeting in the Princess theatre yesterday afternoon. The Rev. C. Carpenter took for his subject "The Inquiry Office."

He opened his subject by remarking that there had come to everyone at some time a parting of the ways, when directions had been wanted to the course of right living. The "inquiry office" appealed to a man's own conscience. Conscience has the power of answering questions with limitations, and the first action of an awakened conscience is to show the vast possibilities of life, and the necessity of the light of the spirit of God. In other words conscience is the finger-post of God, and although conscience cannot exist without intellect, as without intellect there is no manhood, yet intellect is not the source of conscience. Neither is morality the source. Morality and religion are not synonymous service. Religion is the union of man with God, and conscience is an entirely spiritual attitude. He instanced Adam and Eve as two persons, intellectual and moral, and so long as they remained perfectly innocent, no such thing as conscience was essential as a guide but immediately sin took possession of them, conscience awakened, and they sought to hide themselves from God. It is God-given finger-post which brings a man back to the influence of his Maker, and stands in its relation to Him, as a man stands in relation to sin.

He went on to say that the word conscience was derived from come together and knowledge, and is a potentiality residing within a man, but unable to act without his will. It was purely personal to a living individual, and was guided and governed by the powers within a man. Only as a man realizes that he is a responsible being, can he grasp the importance of keeping his conscience intact. If a man's conscience is pure his ideals will be high. Individuality, conscience and duty cannot be separated.

He appealed to his hearers to cultivate this God-given gift and urged the importance of individual conscience to work upon the national conscience, that this "spark of divinity" may result in a straight, clean moral life for the individual, and thus raise the conscience of the nation to take a higher moral tone.

RETREAT FOR MEN WAS CONCLUDED AT ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL YESTERDAY

Members of St. Peter's T. A. S. Took Holy Communion in a Body—Meeting of the Society Was Held in the Afternoon.

50 NEW MEMBERS

A magnificent spectacle was witnessed at 8 o'clock mass on Sunday at St. Peter's Cathedral, it being the wind-up of a retreat for men which had been in progress the past week. It was the regular communion Sunday for the members of St. Peter's T.A.S., and as they assembled at St. Peter's school house, and marched to the church, headed by the junior members, they presented a fine appearance and many wives and mothers thanked God on Sunday for the existence of such a Society as the T.A.S. Mass was said by Rev. Father McCoII, spiritual director of the society.

After mass Father Gillies ascended the pulpit and after the reading of the Epistle and Gospel of the day, congratulated the men on turning out in such large numbers, and urged them to keep the resolutions made during the retreat. He asked them to be more attentive to their religious duties thereby being strengthened to persevere. He then asked them to kneel down and after prayers he imparted the Papal benediction. The retreat has been a decided success. Father McCoII may well feel proud of his men, who turned out in such large numbers and the good effect will be long felt in Peterborough.

In the afternoon a special meeting of St. Peter's T.A.S. was held in their room at which fifty new members were initiated, after a very spirited address by the Rev. Dr. O'Brien, in which he congratulated the members on their fine showing, and wished them continued success. Rev. Father Gillies addressed the members at some length.

He first congratulated them on their fine turn out, and urged them to be faithful to the society, a society in which every one should take a pride, known as it is from one end of the country to the other. The speaker told them that when leaving New York he happened to be in conversation with the Rev. Father Elliott, and mentioned the fact that he was coming to Peterborough. "Let me tell you something about Peterborough," said Father Elliott: "They have one of the finest temperance societies in America in that town." "So you see, men," said Father Gillies, "you have a reputation to uphold."

He paid a tribute to the man who has been a victim of drink and reforms. "No one," he said "but one who has gone through it, knows the fight a man has to put up." "All honour," he said, "to the man who conquers the habit."

He felt grateful to God if he had, in any way, contributed to the future success of the society. He urged the men to organize. "Ask the Catholic Church," said Father Gillies, "what was the secret of her great success. She would answer organization."

To show what organization could do he instanced the prohibition fight in the southern states. The prohibition party were up against one of the most gigantic trusts in existence, who spared neither time nor money to defeat the act, but in spite of all organization won, as it will every time. "If you wish to put the bar rooms out of business, organize. If you wish to make countless homes happy, organize. If you wish to correct any great evil in your midst, organize. Father Mathew was a great organizer and in three days gave the pledge to 154,000 people. The revenue from drink in Ireland in five years, after organization by him, fell off 600,000 pounds, which, he said, was in the pockets of the people, where it rightly belonged, instead of in the pockets of whiskey dealers helping to send souls down to hell.

He congratulated Father McColl on having such able lieutenants at his call, and wished the society continued success and hoped God would bless their efforts.

Father McColl then addressed the meeting and in a few words, thanked the men and asked them to get in line for the annual house to house canvas, which starts next week. Short speeches were made by Joseph Bigley, D. Cushing and others.

A vote of thanks from the members to Rev. Father Gillies was proposed by Mr. Geo. Giroux and seconded by Mr. John O'Brien. Both mover and seconder spoke of the good work done during the retreat. The vote, which was a standing one, was most unanimous. Father Gillies thanked the members in a few words, after which the meeting adjourned.

On Friday next Father F. O'Sullivan, founder of the society, will lecture under the auspices of the Ladies' Literary branch of the Society.

REGULATES KIDNEYS AND ENDS BACKACHE

A Few Doses Make Kidneys Act Fine and Cure Urinary Trouble

Don't wait until it settles into Dropsy, Gravel, Diabetes or Bright's Disease — the time to cure kidney trouble is while it is only a trouble.

The moment you suspect any kidney, bladder or urinary disorder, or feel a constant or dull aching in the back, sides or loins or the urine is thick, cloudy, offensive or full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding you should begin taking Pape's Diuretic as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, at any price made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure.

Pape's Diuretic acts directly upon the kidneys, bladder and urinary system; cleanses, vitalizes and regulates these ducts, organs and glands, ending at once such miserable symptoms as lame back headache, dizziness, weakness, Prostatic trouble, nervousness, rheumatism and darting pains, inflamed or puffy eyelids, irritability, bilious stomach, worn-out feeling, sleeplessness or suppressed, painful or frequent urination (especially at night) and other distress.

Don't be miserable another moment with a lame back or clogged, inactive kidneys or bladder misery, for after taking Pape's Diuretic a few days you will be relieved and know all danger is passed.

Your pharmacist, physician, banker or any mercantile agency will vouch for the responsibility of Pape, Thompson & Pape of Cincinnati, Ohio, who prepare Pape's Diuretic — 50 cent treatment—sold by every druggist in the world.

CHILDREN'S DAY

Was Observed in All of the Anglican Churches Yesterday

Children's Day was observed in all of the Anglican churches yesterday. A special children's service was held in St. John's church at 3 p.m., the children singing well and listening to a good address by the rector, who exhorted all to take the utmost advantage of two gifts of God, the Bible and the church.

At the morning service the Rector urged the congregation to see that the work on Sunday school was their special duty and in the evening the Rev. Chas. Carpenter pleaded for more sympathy in all our dealings with children. At both services excellent solos were sung by Mr. W. T. P. Way, of Toronto, who possesses a bass voice of fine calibre. The choir, numbering about forty-five voices, sang the services most impressively, a feature of the singing at night being Barnby's tune to "Now the day is over." The hymn "Eternal Father" was sung also, several relatives of members of St. John's being on the sea this week.

A special offering was taken up for All Saints' building fund.

PACIFIC-BURT SHARES

Opinions of A. E. Ames & Co., Limited, as Expressed in Letter to Clients

With reference to their offering of securities of the Pacific-Burt Company, Limited, Messrs. A. E. Ames & Co., Limited, have sent a letter, with folder prospectus, to their clients. The main part of the letter reads as follows:

"The business of the Pacific Manifolding Book Company has been quite successful, and is showing a large increase in earnings over the same period last year. When earnings from that source are supplemented by an established "Burt business," the volume of net profits will, it is expected, permit of increases from time to time in the dividend rate upon the common stock.

Mr. S. J. Moore, President of the F. N. Burt Company, is also president of the Pacific Burt Company, for which position he is exceptionally well qualified.

It may be mentioned that, taking the combined values of the preference stock of F. N. Burt Company, Limited, and the proportionate common stock bonus, which we offered for subscriptions last September, those securities were selling 17 points above the issue price with in a year from the date of offering.

It is not meant to suggest that the Pacific-Burt Company securities will sell 18 points higher than the issue price within a year, but we believe a purchase of them will provide a thoroughly good investment, likely to give satisfactory evidence of increased value as time goes by."

"THE WINNING MISS"

Big Musical Comedy Company Here for Their Engagement To-night.

The "Winning Miss" company, which appears at the Grand Opera House this evening, arrived in town at noon from Toronto, where they filled a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House, to capacity business all week. This splendid musical comedy, with its score of song hits, funny situations, real comedians and pretty girls, will undoubtedly attract a big crowd tonight as it is one of the brightest attractions that is billed for this season.

MEETS WITH SUCCESS

Mr. Talmage Graham is Principal of a Stratford Public School

Mr. Talmage Graham, a former Peterborough county teacher, who graduated form the Peterborough Normal School, last Easter is now principal of the Falstaff Public School in Stratford, and seems to be meeting with marked success in his new field of labour. The Stratford Beacon, in a report of the last meeting of the School Board, states he has been added to the Normal School staff, and his salary has been increased accordingly.

HE WAS PARALYZED

Mr. William Brennan, Western Hill, St. Catharines, Ont., tells what it feels like to paralyzed. He lost power of speech, face was drawn out of shape, lost flesh, could not sleep. Five doctors failed to help him Electricity proved ineffective. He used Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, until his former good health was restored. Face was restored to shape, power of speech returned, and he gained in weight Says he would not return to former condition for all the gold in the country

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WM. HAMILTON COMPANY

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the William Hamilton Company, Limited, was held at the office of the company on Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. The statement of profit and loss showed that the earnings of the Company for the past year were sufficient to pay an eight per cent. dividend on their preference stock, and to carry forward a substantial balance to the credit of profit and loss.

The adoption of the annual report was seconded by Mr. T. F. Matthews, who congratulated the directors on the favourable showing.

All of the directors were re-elected, as follows: A. McFarlane, Geo. G. Gladman, D. Spence, W. H. Collier, L. A. Potvin, C. R. Cameron, J. C. Smith.

The company has now 155 employees, and a very large amount of orders on hand.

Handsome Presentation To Young Man Leaving The City

Mr. Gillespie Stewart, who is severing his connection with the A. W. Cressman store to assume a lucrative position with the firm of Madill & Anderson, of St. Catharines, was last evening given a handsome suit case and set of military brushes by his associates at the store. The gifts were sent to his residence with the following address:

Mr. Gillespie Stewart,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Gillespie:

We, your friends and fellow employees of the Cressman store, having learned of your decision to sever your connection with the firm, wish to take this opportunity of expressing to you in some small way the esteem in which you are held.

It would be impossible in this limited space to mention in detail the many remembrances we shall have of your connection with us. Suffice it to say that your honourable and cheerful disposition has established a friendship that can long withstand the tide of time.

In your new field of labour we sincerely hope you will be successful. When we consider that you have yet by far the greater part of life's arch to span we feel assured that a great future awaits you, and in consideration: "In the bright lexicon of youth which fate reserves for a bright manhood there is no such word as failure." Any tears we have for your destiny are there set at nought.

As a token of remembrance of the many warm friends you leave behind, we ask you to accept this suit case, hoping that whenever it is brought into requisition it will also bring an associated thought: "The Cressman Staff

Signed on behalf of your Cressman friends

Peterborough, Oct. 14th, 1910.

Mr. Stewart was greatly surprised at the kind thoughtfulness of those with whom he has been associated for the past three years and takes this means of expressing his deep appreciation and thanks.

The Superior Quality of These $22.50 Suits Makes a Strong Appeal

They Are Worth $28.00 and $30.00

Women who are judges of quality will revel in extreme fineness of the materials used in these beautiful garments. Only textures which have successfully passed the most stringent tests are represented.

The same care as to quality has been applied to trimmings, linings and workmanship. Only the best and finest has been good enough for these truly superior suits.

Paris and other great fashion centres have furnished the models which sound the ultra fashionable note in feminine dress.

Through and through, they are good garments—the kind that will give the maximum of service.

We have always featured the premier showing of $17.50 and $18.50 suits, in this vicinity. The garments we are now showing at $22.50 are so far superior to those offered at the former prices that women will be glad to pay the difference, realizing that they will get more service and satisfaction from them.

High Class Moderate Priced Papers

The decorating of the home is made more pleasant if you are able to select your wall papers, draperies, carpets or rugs, window shades, etc., all in the same store and especially in the same department. This is one of the many advantages derived by dealing at Cressman's. Our entire third floor is devoted to all Home Furnishings and Decorations. Our stocks are large and well chosen, high class and modest in price.

"Windowphanie" for that window facing an unsightly view.

This is a film-like material which, when placed in water, becomes adhesive and can be easily applied to any window glass, giving a very pretty stained or leaded glass effect. Bring the size of your window and select your pattern now. Apply "Windowphanie" now before the frost comes.

WAS HEAVILY FINED ON AN ASSAULT CHARGE

Young Man Pays $8.35 for Assaulting John C. Richardson ---Other Youths in East City Will Suffer If They Don't Behave Themselves.

The Richardson assault case which was heard in the police court last Thursday morning, where a local young man wa scharged with assaulting Richardson on the street, was proceeded with at this mornings sessions. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the complainant. Nearly all the evidence was heard on the first occasion, but two more witnesses gave evidence this morning. The evidence by the different witnesses corresponded pretty well, but it all pointed to the conviction of the accused.

After considering the evidence given on both sides, His Worship found the accused guilty of disorderly conduct on the street and fined him $5.00 and costs, amounting to $8.35. Magistrate Dumble also said that he found the prisoner guilty of using grossly insulting language on the street and could fine him on that charge seperately if he wished. He however, refrained from doing so believing that the above fine would be a lesson for him.

Mr. John Richardson, the plaintiff is fairly well known in East City. He came from Fraserville some time ago, and while there, was a respected resident. The police officers are keeping a close watch on the different sections of East City, and if any further trouble is caused some person will have reason to be sorry. An officer stated to an Examiner representative this morning, that the conduct of several young men in East City, especially near Mr Richardson's, is simply scandalous. He was placed on watch near Mr. Richardson's home one night and a number of young men congregated in the surrounding hiding places and threw bowers of large stones at the house, breaking window panes and rendering the public way an unsafe place to walk, but he was unable to get their names or they would have suffered for the fun. If any more of them appear on the above charge they will be delat with more severely.

Said Good-bye To Departing Member Who Left For Moosejaw

On Saturday evening the members of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Luke's church met at the home of Mrs. L. Turner at the court house, to say good-bye to one of their members, in the person of Mrs. George Armstrong, who left yesterday afternoon for Moosejaw, where she will reside with her daughter, Mrs. Kidd. During the course of the evening, a presentation of a handsome gold ring was made to Mrs. Armstrong, by Mrs. S. Gaskins, president of the society, and on behalf of the auxiliary. Mrs. Wm. Hickey read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Armstrong: — Having learned of your intention to remove from Peterborough to Moosejaw, it occurs to us that we would like to show you some mark of our esteem and appreciation, in which you are held by the Women's Auxiliary of St. Luke's church. It seems to us that we are constantly losing some of our members, which, in our selfishness of regret we possibly looked forward to having you with us all your life. Still we must have a wider vision, and be thankful for the many years that we have been associated together, and feel that you are being called to another field where you will carry on the good work and distribute your kindness and thoughtfulness, which has done so much among us to cement us together. You are assured of our earnest good wishes for your health and happiness in your new home. May you always remember that "the love of Christ constraineth us to all things to His glory and to take up His work in all parts of His vineyard.

On behalf of St. Luke's Auxiliary we ask you to accept this slight token, not for its intrinsic value, but for the associations which have bound us together for many years.

Yours affectionately,
E. GASKINS, President.
I. HICKEY, Secretary.

Mrs. Kidd, who was present, on behalf of her mother, expressed the latter's deep appreciation and thanks.

The Evangelistic Campaign At Park Street Church

The meetings at Park street Baptist church, will long be remembered, by all those who were privileged to attend. In the morning a large attendance greeted the doctor, and listened with reverential attention as he spoke upon "Home."

Tears flowed unbidden down the cheeks of his listeners, as the inner fountains of their souls were touched by the tender and pathetic appeal to home and mother. The doctor took his hearers back to the old homestead of sacred and sweet memories, and all present felt the hallowed influence of "Home Sweet Home," and all saw what an unmeaning thing is a home without a mother. These earthly houses and homes will some day pass away. What then shall we do? Where then shall we go?

Our text, II Corinthians, 5: 1, tells us what we can do, where we can go. It says, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Yes, there is a place in the heavenly home for all."

The afternoon meeting for men, saw the auditorium of the church, fairly well filled with an earnest crowd of men, who listened attentively to the doctor, as he addressed them on the subject of "The man you can't down." It was a very impressive service, and many remained behind to shake the doctor's hand, with a promise of trying to do better. The male quartette of the George street Methodist church, rendered two selections, which were much appreciated by all present. The church was packed to its utmost capacity in the evening, and a most eloquent address, upon "The Crucifixion of Christ," was given. In thees days, when the papers are reporting so many murders, and crimes, such as the Crippen case and others, we are apt to forget, the preacher said, the greatest crime of all history, the Crucifixion of Christ. An absolutely innocent man nailed to a cross, for what? Not for of his life, and tell how graces rescued every human heart who will trust in His blood from the burden of sin.

A number of young men decided for Christ last night and several were baptized. During the service, Miss Ethel Hill and her two brothers, Harry and Percy, sang in a very feeling manner, "Christ will hold you fast." To-night will be the last of the evangelistic services.

On Tuesday evening, Dr. Sam Luttrell will give the interesting account him from a drunkard's grave. The him from a drunkard's grace. The public are cordially invited to come and hear this modern miracle of grace tell of the power that can remake a man and destroy the appetite for strong drink and drugs.

A free-will offering will be taken up to detray his expenses of the mission, and a liberal response is requested fro mall who have in any way benefitted by the services.

At the close of the mission Dr. Sam Luttrell will attend the convention in Toronto before taking up other work.

Meeting to-night at 8 p.m.

UNNATURAL THINNESS EASILY CORRECTED

By Clever Prescription Which Can Be Filled at Any Drug Store.

No Need to Be Thin Now as Reports Show This Method Effective.

People who are very thin and scrawny ought not to be so. Undoubtedly they are more subject to disease and contagions than the normally fleshy. Thinness is usually accompanied by weakness, and weakness subjects any one to colds, coughs, consumption, pneumonia, etc. It has been discovered, almost by accident, that tincture cadomene, when combined in a prescription with proper accelerative medicines, becomes one of the most valuable, effective and reliable nutritive or flesh making medicines known to science. It is especially beneficial to men and women between the ages of sixteen and fifty-five, who from lack of proper nerve force and digestion, remain undeveloped in body, limbs, arms and bust. A well rounded symmetrical figure in man or woman indicates health, magnetism, stamina and happiness.

The reader who wishes to add from ten to forty pounds should not fail to begin with this valuable prescription:

First, obtain of any well stocked druggist, three ounces of essence of pepsin and three ounces of syrup of rhubarb in an 8 oz. bottle. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol. Shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardomom). Shake well and take one teaspoonful before each meal, one after each meal. Drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Keep up this treatment regularly and of a certainty from one to three pounds will be added to the weight each week, and the general health will also improve.

STRUCK ON THE HEAD BY RAPIDLY REVOLVING WEEEL

Mr. Walter H. Bailey, of East City, was severely injured at the Higgins Hardware store, Hunter street, this morning. He was lowering a stove, when the guide rope slipped off the big wheel, the result being that the weight of the stove made the big wheel spin around. Mr. Bailey stepped under the wheel while it was going and two of the steel prongs which hold the rope on struck him on the side of the head, cutting him in three or four places. Dr. Brown was called and attended to his injuries, after which he was taken to his home. Although the injuries are rather severe and painful, no serious results are likely to ensue.

FINGERS AMPUTATED

C. G. E. Employee Had His Fingers Caught in Punch Press

Mr. Joseph Laundry, of 170 Perry street, was the victim of a very painful accident at the C.G.E. works this morning. He got the first and second fingers on the right hand amputated by a punch press, which he was running. Dr. Young was called and attended to his injuries, after which he was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital by Comtsock's ambulance.

Besides getting the fingers amputated, his hand was also lacerated. However, Doctor Young assures him that his mind anticipated no serious results.

It Grows Hair

Here Are Facts We Want You to Prove at Our Risk

Mavellous as it may seem, Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has grown hair on heads that were once bald. Of course, in none of these cases were the hair roots dead, nor had the scalp taken on a glazed, shiny appearance.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic acts scientifically, destroying the germs which are usually responsible for baldness. It penetrates to the roots of the hair, stimulating and nourishing them. It is a most pleasant toilet necessity, is delicately perfumed, and will not gum or permanently stain the hair.

We want you to get a bottle of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic and use it as directed. If it does not relieve scalp irritation, remove dandruff, prevent the hair from falling out and promote an increased growth of hair, and in every way give entire satisfaction, simply come back and tell us, and without question or formality we will hand back to you every penny you paid us for it. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store, The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charotte street.

FELL FROM A LOFT

A very serious accident occurred in Otonabee on Saturday last, when Mr. William Elliott, who resides near the Stewart settlement, fell from the hay loft of his barn. He struck on the side of his head and shoulder, fracturing the collar bone. Comstock's ambulance was called and removed him to the Nicholls Hospital, where Dr. McClelland is attending him. Today he was doing nicely and no anxiety need be felt by his relatives, as to his recovery.

THREE HOURS OF LAUGHTER

Plenty of Fun Promised For Those Who See Henry E. Dixey

"You will laugh for three hours," said one of the Montreal critics in speaking of Henry E. Dixey's appearance in "The Naked Truth," the attraction announced for the Grand next Wednesday, Oct. 19. Mr. Dixey and his famous "all-star cast" will appear here for the first time in this newest of London comedy successes.

The older theatre-goers will recall Mr. Dixey's work when he was the principal comedian in the Gilbert and Sullivan comic operas, and later with the Augustin Daly company. His first great part was "Adonis" which he played more than 3,000 times. Mr. Dixey and the late Richard Golden used to play the humorous Heifer in Edward E. Rice's production of "Evangeline." Then "The Man on the Box," "The Devil," "Mary Jane's Pa" and other plays, with Mr. Dixey continuing in favour wherever he appeared.

The popular American fun-maker will be seen here in George Paston's and W. B. Maxwell's three-act farcical comedy, "The Naked Truth" at present the laughter rage of London, where Charles Hawtrey has been appearing as "Bunny" Darrell for over seven months, beginning at Wyndham's Theatre and at present at the Prince of Wales'. The comedy concerns the predicament in which Bernard Darrell (Mr. Dixey) finds himself, when, under the influence of a peculiar ring he is compelled to tell the truth under any and all circumstances, greatly to the displeasure of his best friends. His truthfulness nearly costs him the hand of his fiancee and the friendship of his business associates.

Mr. Wm. Brady, under whose direction Mr. Dixey is starring this season, has surrounded the comedian with one of the most representative comedy companies ever sent from New York City. The complete cast includes Miss Marie Nordstrom, Miss Ruth Shepley, Miss Isabel West, Miss Dorothy Davies, Miss Lillian Dix, Miss Blanche Bryant, Miss Marie Pert, and the Messrs. Herbert Standing, Spottiswoode Aitken, Kenneth Davenport, Frederick Roberts, George Ives and Thomas W. Slater.

SPECIAL COLLECTION FOR ALL SAINTS' FUND

It was All Saints' Day at St. John's church yesterday, when a special collection was taken for the All Saints' Building Fund. Special envelopes had been distributed throughout the congregation. Rev. Canon Davidson, the rector, expressed fellowship with All Saints people and expressed the desire that the congregation of St. John's should contribute generally to the Building Fund. The two wardens of All Saints', Messrs. Howden and Edgar, were present during the day and assisted the wardens of St. John's in taking the offering, an act that was appropriate and was appreciated. In the evening the late offering as well as the envelope offertory was devoted to the All Saints' Fund.

The handsome candelabra in the chancel of St. John's has been presented to and accepted by the officials of All Saints' church.

IS GOOD FOR FIFTY DAYS

Great Airship Is Stocked With Fuel and Food For Nearly Two Months, and Barring Accident the Aeronaut and His People Hope to Land on the British Isles—Progress Is Slow So Far.

Siasconsett, Mass., Oct. 17. Somewhere east of Nantucket Island, off the coast of Massachusetts, and approximately 300 miles from Atlantic City, the starting point, Walter Wellman's airship America, signalled a wireless, "All's well and good-bye" at 12.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and swung on up the coast through the fog. This message, the last of the day's wireless conversations, was received here by A. B. Ginman, the Marconi operator, who had been on the alert since dawn.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning, Siasconsett first came in touch with the giant dirigible. Then, although the wireless range of the craft is comparatively short, owing to necessarily limited power and antennae, the station was surprised to hear its call "M S C" clear and strong, followed by "W S," the code signal for airship. Judging from the strength of the signals, it was assumed that the America was in close proximity to Nantucket, and immediately all the life-saving stations and lighthouses on the island were notified by telephone to keep a sharp lookout.

But the fog, which had enshrouded the America since her departure on Saturday morning, still hung over the ocean, shutting off the view. The Marconi station, however, began a rapid fire of interrogation and learned from Jack Irwin, the America's operator, that the ship's motors had been stopped, and that the dirigible was heading east-northeast, and making twenty-five miles an hour with the wind. At Nantucket excitement was acute, but with motors idle, the airship sailed along as silently as a phantom in the sky, where ordinarily the engine's exhaust would have reverberated along the coast.

However, the electric voice of the Marconi station filled in at times what the eye and ear were denied, and intermittently the operators here exchanged greetings with their late associate, who, it will be recalled, received at this station the dramatic "C Q D" from the ill-fated steamship Republic. At 10.30 a.m. signals from the dirigible became suddenly stronger, and it was momentarily expected that the America would come in sight of the station. Irwin, in fact, flashed that he thought that he could hear the sounds of the breakers, but the fog effectually shut the craft from view, although she was probably passing over the shoals surrounding the island.

From that time on signals from the airship grew steadily weaker, until finally, at 12.45, a message flashed from here asking if everything aboard was O.K. Faintly came the reply "yes," then fainter still the two letters "GB," goodbye.

Unable to take observations in the fog, the America's exact position remained unknown throughout the day, as has been the case since she set sail. Her course, however, has been along the steamship lines, and, as no word to the contrary has been received, the assumption is that Mr. Wellman, with 50 days' fuel and 50 days' provisions aboard, is adhering to his plan of crossing the Atlantic and landing on the British Isles.

It is likely that no further word from the airship will be received here, but a dozen of the Atlantic liners fitted with wireless, were in her zone last night.

When last heard from at 12.45 p.m. the America had been in the air just 18 minutes less than 29 hours, and, having covered approximately 300 miles, must have averaged in forward progress between ten and eleven miles an hour. At this rate the craft would not pass Sable Isle, 400 miles distant from Nantucket, until 9 a.m. Tuesday, and Cape Race, 650 miles further, 7 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Brisk westerly winds aided the passage yesterday, and, the engines being idle while off Nantucket, the wireless must have been operated by storage battery. This probably accounts for the briefness of Irwin's message, for he was doubtless husbanding his limited supply of energy for an emergency. With the motors in operation a dynamo can be pressed into service, but the sparking interferes with the receiving, and better results are obtained when they are silent.

Fathers Sue Officials.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 17.—The Town of Springhill is now threatened with more litigation, issuing out of the recent school children's strike. To restore peace at that time D. Matteson, chairman of the police commission, and other town officials, used their persuasive powers to prevent the children of strike-breakers from attending schools. Now two of these children are entering action in the name of their fathers, as next friends, for damages for being prevented from attending the schools. Mellish and McInnes of Halifax have issued writs against Matteson and two officials.

CHARGES ATTACKS

Bishop of London In Statement Says Dr. Reaume Did Not Take Proper Steps to Stop His Secretary Sending Libellous Articles to Papers About Him—Reasons For Opposing the Bilingual Schools.

Goderich, Oct. 17. M. F. Fallon, Bishop of London, issued a statement yesterday, of which a summary follows. He conducted a confirmation service at 10 a.m., and preached at vespers at 7 p.m.

"On Sept. 22 last, because of certain articles in the daily press, representing me as hostile to the French language and to the interests of the French-Canadian people, and particularly because of the definite false charge that I had forbidden the teaching of the French language in the schools of Belle River and Walkerville, I issued a statement, from which I now quote the following paragraphs:

"'I have never been, by word or deed by intent or resign, unfriendly to the interests of the French-Canadian people, and I never shall be unfriendly to them at any time or place, no matter what the provocation. A number of them live within the limits of my own diocese, and I am as solicitous for their welfare, whether spiritual or temporal, as I am for that of any other portion of the flock confided to my care.

"'I have not, and I never had, any objection to the teaching of French, or of any other language, in accordance with the laws of the Province of Ontario, and the regulations of the Provincial Department of Education.'

"Within recent days a memorandum from the Hon. Mr. Hanna to the Hon. Dr. Pyne, purporting to contain the account of a conversation I had with the former in Sarnia, has been made public, with the evident design of discrediting my previous declaration.

"Let me state at once that I desire to fully and entirely exonerate Mr. Hanna from even the suspicions of dishonorable conduct. I am convinced that he had nothing to do with the publication of his memorandum, and, as published, it is as unjust to him as it is to me. Where I suspect the responsibility rested, I shall at once make clear.

"The dismissal of the private secretary of the Minister of Public Works by no means reaches the root of the matter. I owe nothing to any man in public life, except decent treatment and fair play. I expect nothing else from him. Now, the dismissal of Mr. Maisonville has been by far too long delayed. I informed the Hon. Mr. Reaume privately over four months ago, and shortly after the stealing of the Hanna memorandum, that his private secretary had sent a lying and libelous attack on me to The Detroit Free Press.

"I refrained at the time through a desire to be more than fair to Dr. Reaume, from laying the matter before the Prime Minister. I knew that Sir James Whitney would not tolerate for an instant that any man should draw a salary from the province, and at the same time receive pay from newspapers for fomenting racial and national strife. Dr. Reaume assumed an attitude of almost apoplexy for his secretary, and though he promised to 'investigate,' I heard nothing of the results of his investigation.

"What I should now like to know is how the Hon. Dr. Reaume failed in four months to discover what it took Sir James Whitney less than 48 hours to unearth and promptly deal with. I have no hesitation in affirming as my opinion that Mr. Maisonville lost no sleep through any dread of punishment from his official chief, because of his mischievous misdeeds.

"On the main issue, Mr. Hanna stated my views with absolute exactitude, and I desire now to reaffirm them. The alleged bilingual system of education, as it prevails in certain parts of the Province of Ontario, is absolutely futile as concerning the teaching of either English or French, and utterly hostile to the best interests of the children, both English and French. Let me cite a few facts, culled from a multitude that I have collected on my tour through the diocese of London.

"The French-Canadian parishes of Belle River, Big Point, French settlement, McGregor, Ruscombe, Staples, Stoney Point, Paincourt and Tilbury with eighteen separate schools and upwards of 2,000 children on the rolls, passed a total of ten pupils at their recent entrance examinations. It is from some of these parishes that the loudest noise comes regarding my insistence that these conditions are a disgrace.

"If the separate schools in these districts are bad, the public schools, also under the alleged bilingual system, are worse. For in the above mentioned districts the public schools succeeded in getting only seven children through the entrance examination, of which Tilbury furnished four, McGregor, Big Point and Paincourt one each, and the others none. And I could cite many other instances of equal inefficiency. All these facts have been supplied to me over their own signatures by the pastors of the parishes I have named.

"Is it any wonder that I should raise my voice on behalf of all the children who live in what might be called the bilingual belt of my diocese? And is it not monstrous that for so doing I should be charged with hostility to the French language, and to the interests of the French-Canadian people? In the schools that are inflicted on the children, neither English nor French is properly taught or decently spoken. The regulations of the Education Department are in many instances utterly disregarded. Because of the conditions that prevail, children are either not sent to school at all or are withdrawn in the face of the difficulties.

"During my present confirmation tour the French-Canadian pastor of a French-Canadian parish in Essex County, said to me in the presence of witnesses: 'Half the boys whom you confirmed this morning (they ranged from 11 to 15 years of age) can neither read nor write. Every year since I came here I have offered a gold medal to the child that would pass the entrance examination. No one has ever passed.'

"Essex stands lowest educationally amongst the nine counties that constitute the Diocese of London. Everything flourishes there except education. The land is heavy with rich harvests, choice fruits and a generation of uneducated children. One could almost be inclined to believe in the existence of a well contrived conspiracy among the enemies of the French-Canadian people to keep them in a position of self-perpetuating intellectual inferiority.

"In conclusion, I desire to again affirm that I am not, and will not be, unfriendly to any interest of the French-Canadian people, as distinguished from other people.

"This whole question is not a contest between English-speaking and French-speaking Catholics. It is a matter of great public moment. On the one side of the discussion are a certain number of French-Canadians led by noisy agitators; on the other side are also French-Canadians in no small numbers, together with the rest of the population of the Province of Ontario, without distinction of creed or nationality. And let me hazard the prophecy that, when this second division awakes to the gravity of the situation, it will make short work of an alleged bilingual school system, which teaches neither English nor French, encourages incompetency, gives a prize to hypocrisy, and breeds ignorance.

(Signed) M. Fallon,
Bishop of London."

BOLD THIEF CAUGHT

Hamilton, Oct. 17.—There was a sensational robbery at Ancaster Saturday night, in connection with James Klock of Brantford was arrested. He is accused of having entered Gurnett Bros.' store about 10.30 as one of the brothers was counting the day's receipts, preparing to close up. He asked for some candy, and when Gurnett turned is alleged to have seized $100 and made off. Gurnett chased the man and the latter turned on him and fire several shots from a revolver. Later County Constable Morrison formed a posse and arrested Klock a short distance from the village on the Brantford and Hamilton road. He was taken to Dundas.

SENT CABLE TO POPE

Montreal, Oct. 17.—Some twenty-five thousand people gathered on the Champ de Mars last evening, presided over by Archbishop Bruchesi, who, with Henri Bourassa, M.P.P.; Hon. J. Decarie, Dr. S. Lachapelle and Mayor Guerin, delivered addresses denouncing Mayor Nathan of Rome, and expressing sympathy with the Pope. Bishops Emard of Valleyfield, Bernard of St. Hyacinthe, Laroque of Sherbrooke, and Archambault of Joliette also sent in their adhesion, and Mgr. Bruchesi said that the gathering represented a million and a half of the faithful. His lordship of Joliette hoped for the day when the city of the righteousness would triumph over the city of evil, and the church of Christ over Freemasonry, which, he added, propagated impiety and revolution throughout the world. His grace introduced Dr. Guerin as the Catholic mayor of Montreal against Mayor Nathan of Rome.

Sinking Spells Every Few Days

"At the time I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I was having sinking spells every few days. My hands and feet would get cold; I could scarcely breathe, and could feel myself gradually sinking away until I would be unconscious. Those about me could not tell there was life in me. After these spells I would be very weak and nervous, sleepless and without appetite; had neuralgia in my head and heart. After taking the remedy a short time all this disappeared and in a few weeks all the heart trouble was gone."

CANNIFF AND PHELAN WIN THE CITY CHAMPIONSHIP

Annual Competitions for the Howden and Eastwood Trophies Were Held at Riverside Park on Saturday Afternoon.

A SPLENDID PROGRAMME

Stanley Canniff of the Y.M.C.A., and Nagle Phelan of the T.A.S. Athletic Club, were the winners, respectively, of the annual competitions for the Howden and Eastwood trophies, held under the direction of Physical Director J. J. Thompson of the Y.M.C.A. at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon. Canniff won the trophy donated by Mr. J. J. Howden for the senior championship, and Phelan captured the cup given by Mr. Vincent Eastwood, as emblematic of the junior championship of the city.

The events were witnessed by quite a large gathering of spectators, and proved highly interesting. They were run off in good order, and there was keen competition in many of the events. The percentage system of scoring such as was used in the world's all-round championship contest, was employed for the first time on Saturday. Under this method of counting a man gets credit for everything that he does, the points being based on the time made in the runs, the distance in the broad jumps and the shot put and the height in the high jump. This method not only ensures better contests for the spectators as each man has to do his best, but it also gives a really good all-round man a better chance than under the old system of giving points for position.

There were five contestants in the Howden event, which Canniff won, with a total score of 3143; H. Wood, the winner last year was second, with a score of 2744. The other contestants were Wm. Willis of the Y.M.C.A., Smith, formerly of the Y. M. C. A., Toronto, and Jimmy McMartin, of the Otonabee A. C.

Canniff was third in the 100 yards dash, his time being 11 4-5 seconds; first in the high jump, with 5 ft. 3 in.; first in the shot put with 36 ft. 1 1-2 in.; second in the running broad third in the 120 yards hurdles; third in the half-mile walk, and fourth in the mile run. Wood cleaned up the 100 yards with 11 1-5, the hurdles with 20 4-5 seconds and the running broad jump.

Willis won the mile run in clever fashion. From the start he shot to the front, cutting out a rapid pace that carried him away from the field "Jimmy" McMartin hooked on to him and stayed for a lap, but the effort was too much for him, and he dropped out altogether. Smith was the only contender that was any way dangerous, and he could not catch up; Willis easily held his lead and finished with a strong sprint 75 yards in front of Smith, who also came home with the bit in his teeth. Willis' time was 4.58—a good performance in view of the fact that he had no opposition.

A feature of the afternoon was the clever work of Canniff, in the high jump, which he won with a jump of 5 ft. 3 in., quite outclassing his field in this event, as he did also in the shot-put.

The half-mile walk was more amusing than meritorious. The competitors did not show class in the pedestrian game, and the different styles introduced were startling. Smith was the first to finish, but was disqualified for running, and the event was awarded to "Jimmy" McMartin.

Following is the list of events and the score for the Howden Trophy competition:

100 Yards

| | Points |
|---|---|
| Woods, 11 1-5 secs. | 708 |
| Smith, 11 3-5 secs. | 622 |

The Eastwood Competition.

There were only two entries in the Eastwood competition, the result of which was somewhat of a surprise. Nagle Phelan of the T.A.S.A.C., and Walter Flowers, of the Y.M.C.A., were the only competitors, and when Flowers cleaned up the first four events it looked to be all over. He, however, dropped out of the half-mile walk, getting no points at all in this event, while Phelan was credited with 592. The T. A. S. boy followed this by winning the half-mile run, and the Eastwood trophy was his. They are two clever, game boys, and the performance classed up very favourably with the work of the Seniors. The best junior event of the day was the half-ile race, which Phelan won. He took the lead at the start, and although Flowers chased him hard, he never could get quite up, as Phelan stalled off his sprint.

The score is as follows:

100 Yards.

| | Points |
|---|---|
| Flowers, 11 1-5 secs. | 706 |
| Phelan, 11 2-5 secs. | 664 |

High Jump.

TY COBB GETS THE BATTING CHAMPIONSHIP

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Tyrus Cobb, by official verdict of President Johnson to-day, was the leading batsman of the American league during the last season, with a winning per centage over Larry Lajoie of Cleveland of .000800. As the National Leaguers dropped out of the batting contest some time ago President Johnson's announcement means that Cobb is the champion hitter of the country. The automobile, over which trophy there has been so much excitement and not a little criticism, goes to the Detroiter, but the Cleveland captain, by permission of Mr. Johnson, will be allowed to accept a duplicate.

The battery records of Lajoie and Cobb, as turned in by the official scorers, and approved and promulgated by Mr. Johnson, are as follows:

| | A.B. | H. | P.C. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cobb | 509 | 190 | .384944 |
| Lajoie | 591 | 227 | .384084 |

Third-baseman Corridon of St. Louis is vindicated in the statement, and Umpire Evans is quoted as saying that not only were Lajoie's eight hits all legitimate, but that he really should have been credited with nine hits.

Mr Johnson stated that he has requested President Hedges of the St. Louis Club to probe further the charge that someone connected with his club attempted to influence the official scorer.

Big Bunch Of Entries For The Examiner Races
Classy Fields Sure

Some notable additions to the list of entries in the Examiner's Senior Thanksgiving Day races came along on Saturday, and from present indications the best field in the history of the event will line up before the starter in Lakefield two weeks from to-day. In addition to "Jimmy" McMartin, whose entry was announced in Saturday's Examiner, three more runners gave in their names during the day. Two of these are new starters —the other may be called a veteran of the race. The reference is to Geo. Robinson of the Otonabee Athletic Club, who was third last year. The plucky little Otonabee man, as game a "plugger" as ever faced a starter, has been a contender for the past three years and has improved his standing each time out. He is in good shape and may surprise the talent on Thanksgiving Day. A longer distance might suit him better, but he will have to be counted on.

Another dangerous entrant is Wm. Willis of the Y. M. C. A., who won the three-mile race at Norwood the other day and cleaned up the mile at the Howden trophy games at Riverside Park on Saturday. Willis is an Old Country man, with a splendid record on the other side of the Atlantic, and a considerable string of victories to his credit since coming to Peterborough, among them a five-mile race at Belleville. He has an easy, springy style that carries him along without any apparent exertion, and will be a contender every step of the way.

Another new comer was among Saturday's entries in the person of J. E. Lean, whose home is at Camborne, Northumberland Co., but who is at present attending the Normal School.

The sporting public will be glad to learn that Charlie Thorpe will, in all probability, be a starter again this year. Although he has not yet entered he has announced his intention of doing so and will likely make a fourth attempt to carry off the Examiner trophy. He was second to Albert Smoke last year, and to J. H. Adams the year before.

The entries, so far, are as follows:

Senior.

Ernest Coons, Young's Point.
Chas. Brimble, 163 Westcott St.
Jimmy McMartin, Otonabee A. C.
J. E. Lean, Cambourne, Northumberland Co.
Geo. Robinson, Otonabee A. C.
Wm. Willis, Y.M.C.A.

Junior

Willie Downer, 496 Parnell St
Cecil Armstrong, 480 Sherbrooke St.
John Downer, 496 Parnell St.
Alf. Williams, 339 Burnham St.
Leroy Chambers, 264 Reid St.
Tom Ball, 413 Sheridan St.
Bert Lipsett, Hunter St., East.
Norman Graham, 122 Dublin St
Cyril Flowers, 57 Aylmer St.
Nagle Phelan, T.A.S. Athletic Club.
Henry Drummond, Barnardo Ave.
Frank Leahy, Lakefield.

Third Collegiate Team Had Exciting Game With The T. C. S. Thirds

The third team of the local Collegiate Institute journeyed to Port Hope on Saturday and played an exciting game with the third team of the Trinity College School, losing, after a desperate battle, by 1 point to 0. A kick over the dead line by the T. C. S. team was the only point scored during the match, so that it can be seen that the youngsters were about as evenly matched a proposition as could be imagined. Such a small score is decidedly a novelty in Rugby, and could be only possible between two teams that are practically equal. The Collegiate youngsters have had comparatively no practice, and are to be congratulated upon their splendid showing against the T. C. S. bunch, who have a daily workout. They had a very enjoyable trip and a great game, and hope to beat the Port Hope aggregation when they come here for the return game on Saturday, Oct. 29. The stars of Saturday's game were Richardson and Laing for the Collegiates, and Lessie and Stratton for T.C.S.. The latter, by the way, is a Peterborough boy. The Collegiate team lined up as follows:

STANLEY KETCHELL SHOT AND KILLED

Sprinfield, Mo., Oct. 16.—Stanley Ketchel, champion middleweight pugilist of the world, died here last night as the result of being earlyin the day shot by Walter A. Hurtz, a ranch hand. The shooting took place while Ketchel was at breakfast. Hurtz and Ketchel had had words the previous night and Hurtz retired in an ugly mood, but little was thought of the matter. In the morning, as Ketchel was seated alone at the breakfast table, Hurtz entered the ranch house, and pointing his rifle at the fighter, shouted "Throw up your hands!"

Ketchel was taken by surprise, but instead of complying arose. His back was half turned toward his assailant when Hurtz, but a few feet away, fired. The bullet hit Ketchel below the right shoulder, ranged upwards, and entered the right lung. Ketchel fell to the floor. A moment later, when Charles Bailey, Superintendent of the ranch, rushed in from another part of the building, Hurtz was just disappearing through the doorway.

"He shot me," said the prostrate fighter, as he feebly pointed in the direction taken by Hurtz. After relating the brief details Ketchel became unconscious.

Out in the wooded hills, east of here, Hurtz, Ketchel's slayer, heavily armed is fleeing before a pack of bloodhounds and a posse of officers and citizens. Dickerson, the owner of the ranch, has placed a price of $5,000 on the capture of Hurtz, dead or alive. The posse is armed with repeating rifles. Hurtz is believed to be a desperate man, and one intends to take any chances on asking him to surrender. He will be fired upon on sight.

Hurtz will battle for his life, if he shoots at all, with the revolver of his victim. After shooting Ketchel, Hurtz rushed from the house into the yard. He then faltered a moment, turned and went back into the room where Ketchel lay upon the floor. Reaching into Ketchel's pocket he removed the pugilist's 38-calibre revolver and struck him on the head with it. Then he ran from the house.

Friends of the dead fighter say he was robbed either before or after he was shot. When he went to the Dickerson ranch he carried about $500 in cash with him. There was no money in his pockets when assistance first reached him after he had been shot.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Mr. Harris Ardiel, of Toronto, was in Peterborough over Sunday.

Mr. Walter Perks, of the Royal Trust Co., Montreal is home on a two weeks' vacation.

Miss Allan and Miss O'Neil are attending the winter millinery openings in Toronto to-day.

Miss Ethel Judge, of Oshawa has taken Miss M. Harley's place at the G.N.W. as operator.

Mrs. C. H. Narley of Welland is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Phillips, Mark street, Ashburnham.

Miss Lelah Beath, 177 Charlotte street, has returned home after a two months' visit with friends in Hamilton.

Misses Bennie and Gillespie of H. Fair & Co's store are in Toronto to-day attending the mid-summer millinery openings.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Turner have returned from Montreal and have taken up their residence on Marg street, Ashburnham.

Ald. and Mrs. Turner and daughter Margaret, left this morning on an extended trip to the Canadian North West and the Pacific Coast.

Miss Bessie Henderson, left this morning on the 8:30 Grand Junction Express for Belleville, where she goes to fill a responsible position in the Belleville office of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. Miss Henderson will be much missed in her circle of association in the city in which bright and cheerful amiability made her a great favourite.

The numerous friends of Mr. Jas. Stevenson will regret to learn that he is confined to his room and that his condition is becoming worse. Mr. Stevenson has always enjoyed the best of health, but for the past ten days he has been unable to leave his bed, and is gradually sinking. His physicians hold out little hope for his recovery at his advanced age.

OBITUARY

WM. LOGAN.

There passed away at his residence, Brock street, on Sunday afternoon, one of Peterborough's oldest residents in the person of Mr. Wm. Logan, at the advanced age of seventy-three years. Mr. Logan was born in the township of Smith and commenced his apprenticeship with Messrs. McWilliams and Waddell, carriage builders, fifty-four years ago and subsequently was a member of the firm of Douglas and Logan, carrying on business for many years until Mr. Douglas left for the west, Mr. Logan continuing the business on his own account.

The deceased was twice married, his present wife being Miss Margaret Sheehan, of the township of Emily. Mr. Logan leaves to mourn his loss, his widow, five daughters and one son, namely, Mrs. Eric Jones and Misses Minnie, Veenie, Norma and Ray, and Mr. William Logan, all of this city. Mr. Logan was in the early history of Peterborough connected with the fire brigade and was also a sergeant of the Veterans of '66. He was a good citizen who devoted himself to his business and his family. He was highly respected by all who knew him and always had a pleasant word for everyone. For over fifty-four years he had been continuously in business at Aylmer and Brock streets, where he was engaged until three weeks ago, when he was stricken with paralysis. He had, however, been ailing for the past three or four years. He was a member of St. Andrew's church. The late Mr. Logan was a great lover of flowers and his garden was always attractive.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, interment taking place at Little Lake cemetery. The bereaved family will have the sympathy of a host of friends and the community in general.

SISTER MARY ADRIAN.

The death occurred at St. Joseph's hospital this morning after a short illness of Rev. Sister Mary Adrian, a member of the teaching staff of St. Peter's school.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, from Mount St. Joseph to St. Peter's cemetery.

DAVID WILLIAMSON.

The death occurred at New Liskeard hospital on Saturday last of David Williamson, of typhoid fever. Mr. Williamson was formerly of Peterborough, and his brother, Mr. R. Williamson, formerly of this city, arrived this morning from the north with the remains, which will be buried from Mr. D. Belleghem's undertaking establishment to-morrow at two o'clock. A wife and one child are left to mourn the loss, besides two sisters and one brother.

WEDDING BELLS

FELTON—GIBSON.

A quiet wedding was solemnized in this city this morning, when Miss Pearl Marie Isabella Gibson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gibson of Dunkirk, N.Y., and niece of Mrs. Charles Wilkinson, of 208 Dalhousie street, this city, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. John Anson Felton, also of Dunkirk, N.Y. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Couch, pastor of the George Street Methodist church. They were unattended. The bride wore her travelling suit of London smoke serge, with touchings of gold, the coat opening over a blouse of white French embroidered lace, over silk, with hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Felton left on the 5.35 train for Lindsay, Collingwood, Toronto, and other points, through Western Ontario, after which they will return to Dunkirk, N.Y., where they will make their future home.

NO MORE TITLES IN PORTUGAL

Examiner Special.

LISBON, PORTUGAL, OCT. 17.—By another government decree this morning all orders of knighthood are abolished. Every person claiming Royal blood is to be banished forever, and nobody entitled to a greater title than plain senor within the new Republic. The church and state are further separated. Yesterday a great demonstration at the funerals of Rear Admiral Reis Skiede and Professor Bombardo, shot by Royalists was held. These were the only two men of prominence who lost their lives in the recent revolution. Word comes from Gibraltar that Dowager Maria Pia has gone insane and was placed on an alien warship returning to the Queen of Italy, who is her sister. Manuel and his mother have sailed for England.

REAUME'S ANSWER

Ottawa Paper Thinks Doctor's Resignation Is Now In Order—Latter Says He Replied to Fallon's Complaint and Sent Mr. Maisonville's Denial of Authorship of The Detroit Free Press Article.

Toronto Oct 18 Hon J O Reaume, Minister of Public Works, in reply to Bishop Fallon's statement, in which the Bishop said that four months ago he had drawn the Minister's attention to the journalistic activities of his recent secretary, and had received no acknowledgment, yesterday issued the following statement

"I had no knowledge or suspicion of the person guilty of giving out Mr. Hanna's letter until the morning of the 15th instant, when my secretary confessed first to me and then repeated his confession to one of my colleagues and myself that he was the guilty person.

"I am sure Bishop Fallon would not intentionally do me an injustice, but he seems to have forgotten that I did investigate the authorship of the article in The Detroit Free Press, and that I sent him the letter of my secretary denying it, together with a letter of H E Willmot of The World who declared he was the writer of it and that he had written and forwarded the article for publication without reference to Maisonville.

"I feel that those who know me will accept my statement."

The Premier, Sir James Whitney having reference to a display story in

HON. DR. REAUME.

last night's Star headed "Is Hanna Deeper In It Than Bishop Declares? Fallon's Belief In Him Does Not Quiet All Comment on Provincial Secretary's Conduct Knew Maisonville Leaked and Conferred With Him Didn't Impugn His Honor," issued the following statement

"My attention has just been drawn to an article on the first page of The Toronto Star of to-day. The Provincial Government and the people of Ontario have had several opportunities within the past year or two of judging as to the standard of ethics which governs the action of The Star newspaper. Neither fair play, truthfulness, nor manliness have any part in those motives, as may easily be shown.

"Forty-eight hours have hardly elapsed since a reporter of this newspaper boasted to an acquaintance on a railway train that 'of course we know perfectly well who gave out the letter but we are going to show that his object is to assist Bourassa and Monk in the Province of Quebec.' This is only a fragment of the bloviamontade indulged in by this reporter, who evidently has received his instructions in morality from the editorial sanctum.

"I may possibly have more to say on the subject later on, and perhaps The Star reporter will let the public into the secret of how he prospered in his mission."

Hon W J Hanna would not be interviewed. He was in conference with Sir James Whitney several times during the day as was also Dr. Reaume, and as no statement was forthcoming it is assumed that the Premier was satisfied with the Provincial Secretary's explanation of his connection with the whole affair.

Comment of French Press.

Montreal, Oct 18 Mr Bourassa's paper contains a very truthful translation of Bishop Fallon's statement, but the reply is deferred till to-day.

La Patrie says that before the there might have been some doubt as to the bishop's position on French teaching but now there is no possible doubt as to his lordship's hostility, and he takes his place amongst the most inveterate enemies of the French tongue and the right of our compatriots in the sister province.

La Presse says that Bishop Fallon is proud of the hostility of certain newspapers in the Province of Quebec, but it is he just as proud to have The Orange Sentinel on his side?

Calls For Resignation.

Ottawa, Oct 18 The Free Press Globe in the course of an editorial on the Fallon statement says

Dr Reaume must have had knowledge for a year past that his private secretary was giving to the public all kinds of confidential information, more or less dangerous, and yet he did absolutely nothing to stop such a disreputable practice. Is it going too far to assume under the circumstances, that Maisonville acted with the full knowledge and approval of his chief?

"Our French-Canadian friends should be heartily sick and tired of Dr Reaume. Last winter he dodged the French-Canadian congress that was held in Ottawa, and sent down his colleagues, Hon Adam Beck and Hon Frank Cochrane, in his place. There were then deep mutterings of disgust at his conduct, and these must now break out into a universal demand for his resignation. From any and every point of view it is evident that Sir James Whitney must extend his authority to Minister of Public Works Reaume, and insist on his resignation."

WELLMAN IS SILENT

The America Is Estimated to Be Somewhere Between the Great Lanes of Traffic and Unable to Communicate With the Liners—Kronprinz Wilhelm Makes No Mention of the Airship In Messages.

New York, Oct 18 The appliances of modern science, which did so much to make the airship journey of Walter Wellman and Melvin Vaniman and their associates in the America possible, failed all day yesterday to bring the vessel into touch with wireless telegraph stations anywhere along the North Atlantic coast line. The absence of definite information, while it caused great anxiety among the thousands of well-wishers of the expedition, was not unexpected by Mr Wellman, who stated just before leaving Atlantic City that he would be between the northern and southern steamship lanes on Monday and Tuesday, and would probably be too far from either to communicate with ships, and too far from land to reach the coastwise stations.

When next he is heard from, according to his expectations on starting his perilous journey, the message will be relayed ashore from steamships along the northern lane, which he expected to reach between latitude 45 and 50 and about longitude 40.

Careful estimates made by Weather Bureau officials in Washington, and by associates of Mr Wellman who remained in Atlantic City, placed the probable position at midnight about 800 miles east from Atlantic City blown eastward on westerly winds or about the latitude of Sable Island but too far out at sea to be in touch with the Sable Island station.

Every trans-atlantic liner both eastward and westward bound tried to reach Walter Wellman's dirigible balloon, the America, by wireless yesterday but without success so far as the various steamship agents and the Marconi Company were able to ascertain. The North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm, from Bremen was 523 miles east of Sandy Hook at noon at the end of a day's run of 517 miles, and it was pointed out at the North German Lloyd office yesterday that the liner must have passed the airship America some time Sunday night or early yesterday morning. It was stated that Capt. Nierich knows that the Wellman airship is on the way to Europe, and is on the lookout for it, but, although the New York office received several wireless messages from him, Capt Nierich did not mention the airship

Married the Girl.

Kingston, Oct 18. On his promise of marriage, the charge of seduction against William Bird, aged 24, Kingston, preferred by Cora Hayes, aged 17, Ardendale, was withdrawn in the Police Court. After a ring and licence had been secured the knot was tied in Mayor Cooper's office at the City Hall, by Rev T W Savory, before Chief of Police Bailey, Mayor Cooper, City Clerk Dr Sands and Constable Arnel.

The girl gave birth to a child two weeks ago.

Boarding-House Amenities.

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 18. Two boarders at the home of Mrs Brady, North street, had an altercation in which one threw a lighted lamp at the other and set fire to the house. The blaze was put out before serious damage was done. The boarder struck at pulled a revolver, but it was knocked out of his hand.

James Ryan, Raglan road, knocked over a lamp in reaching for his overcoat, and his home had a narrow escape from destruction.

A Roast for Montreal.

London, Oct 18. Henry Vivian who has been addressing town planning meetings in Canada, writing on the need of action in Montreal, says that the population of the town grows at the rate of 30,000 to 40,000 per year who dump themselves down practically as they like. The result is a hideous jumble.

Mr Vivian does not think anything quite so bad exists in England as the worst districts of Montreal.

Thrown on Barb Wire Fence.

Brantford, Oct 18. Beatrice and Mabel Jennings, daughters of a prominent Burford road farmer, were seriously hurt by being thrown from their conveyance when their horse took fright at an auto. Both girls were thrown on a barb wire fence and dragged for some distance. They sustained terrible cuts to face, arms, neck and limbs.

Britain May Purchase Airship.

London, Oct. 18.—The airship Clement Bayard is to-day safely stowed away in a garage, erected at a cost of $25,000. The War Office experiments are to be made with the dirigible. The first of these will take place Wednesday or Thursday. If the trials prove successful the vessel may be purchased for the British nation and kept in England.

Take Refuge in Spain.

Madrid, Oct. 18.—It is estimated that 5,000 members of the Portuguese religious orders, expelled from their own country, have taken refuge in Spain, where they are now being distributed among the convents and monasteries in the various parts of the country.

CUBA SWEPT BY STORM

Plantations Are Devastated and Thousands of Natives Rendered Homeless by Storm That Has Been In Progress Almost Without Cessation Since Thursday — Another Cyclone Said to Be Forming.

Havana, Oct 18 The Island of Cuba has probably sustained the greatest material disaster in all her history in the practically continuous cyclone, which began with light rains on Thursday morning, turning into torrential floods and devastating hurricanes and continuing until last evening. The western half of the island suffered more severely than the eastern.

The first cyclone, of which there was some warning, had hardly abated on Sunday night, when suddenly the wind, which up to then had been southeast, changed to southwest, and with renewed fury the cyclone blast swept over Pinar del Rio, Matanzas and Havana provinces, completing the destruction wrought by the first storm.

Even now there are some fears of another cyclone on account of rumors of the approach of a third storm, reported to be forming south of Jamaica. At 9 o'clock last night the rain was still falling in frequent heavy gusts, but the wind had abated considerably and the sea was falling.

It is impossible to estimate, even roughly, the amount of the damage done, which doubtless will aggregate many millions of dollars. Besides, the great destruction to sugar and tobacco plantations, many thousands of peasants in the three western provinces have been rendered homeless and destitute by the loss of their homes and the food crops, especially plantations and corn.

It now seems probable that the republic may be compelled to request international aid for the relief of these sufferers whose condition is most deplorable.

Few fatalities up to the present, have been reported. Three men were drowned in the harbor, but no deaths from the storm occurred in the city. It is probable however, that the casualty list in the interior will be large.

Roy Leaves Penitentiary.

Montreal, Oct 18.—Ex-President Roy of the defunct St. John's Bank left the penitentiary yesterday, after serving two years. His health is completely broken down

A SPECIALIST

Never select glasses for yourself, and never purchase glasses from a peddling spectacle seller. The stock of such spectacle sellers is as defective as their knowledge of optics. The lenses are carefully ground and the lens in one eye is frequently different from the lens in the other eye.
BEWARE of SPECTACLE PEDDLERS
Wearing them will soon result in pain in the eyes and injury to the sight. Then there is frequently the condition of unequal vision that is your eyes may differ in focus and each may require a different, specially prescribed lens. In such cases similar lenses, such as you would select for yourself or a peddler would give you, must of necessity prove injurious to one or other of the eyes. We, on the other hand, have the knowledge and appliances necessary to detect the unequal vision or any other defect and grind the lenses to suit. Nineteenths of the cases of defective vision require glasses ground especially for the patient.

HAVE you seen the Perfect Spring Door on the warming closet? It is the newest Pandora feature.

The ordinary door, when opened, is inside the warming closet and takes up valuable space.

But the Perfect Spring Door, when opened, is entirely outside of the warming closet. By being outside it adds two inches to the height of the space inside the closet. That extra space provides room for fourteen more dinner or dessert plates. The door cannot drop down and smash the dishes because the spring holds the door up out of the way until you desire to close it.

The Perfect Spring Door is a convenience worth having. There are more than a score of other conveniences on the Pandora. Our Pandora booklet tells about them. Send for a copy.

AN APPEAL TO REASON

TWELVE months ago, after prolonged investigation and experiment, we pinned our faith to the Knight motor as the greatest improvement of the decade in automobile construction.

Many believed us, bought cars and are to-day congratulating themselves on their judgment.

There were croakers then, perhaps there are to-day, but we hear less of them.

THEY SAID—The engine was an experiment, forgetting that it had stood the greatest engine test on record before the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland.

THEY SAID It will not stand up on Canadian roads, although they knew a challenge of $1,250 was open to anyone who wished to measure his motor against the Knight for reliability.

THEY SAID That it would not be taken up in Europe, and that the Daimler Company were about to discard it. We knew at the time and anyone can verify it now that the leading concerns of six of the countries of Europe have adopted the Knight motor.

THEY SAID—No one in the United States would take it up. We know that over twenty of the largest concerns in the United States have from time to time applied for consideration in the American rights. And we know to-day that leading United states firms will announce 1912 models with Knight motors in another twelve months despite the fact that the agents of some of these concerns profess great skepticism about the Knight motor to-day.

We seldom refer to or bother about the suggestions of interested opponents. We want, however, to repeat our conviction, formed a year ago, and confirmed by twelve months of experience in the factory, on the road, and in the users' hands—

That the Knight motor far surpasses the old valve type, and that it is only a question of time before it entirely supersedes it in all high-grade cars. Get a car that will be up-to-date the longest.

Our 1911 model is out, but our 1910 users can smile, for their car is up-to-date still. 1911 is only a refinement in details on 1910.

The same motor. The same body lines, with high front doors, now pretty universally copied.

Is not this the type of car to buy?

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

THE SEAS IN THE HOLLOW OF GOD'S HAND

"Who hath measured the seas in the hollow of his hand" (Isaiah xl, 12).

On the Ocean, October 16—Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle is enjoying his usual health, en route for London. He expects to be back in Brooklyn the first Sunday in December. His Sundays in Great Britain will be given to London, filling appointments with as many as possible of the smaller cities week days. His discourse for to-day from the foregoing text follows:

The wonderful force, and immensity of the thought of our text, cannot be appreciated by those who have never been upon the great Ocean. As we travel through the water at railroad speed and keep watch in every direction, yet seldom see a vessel, large or small, day after day, we begin to get a little conception of the world in which we live. It is so much larger than previously we were able to comprehend. Yet by the aid of the telescope and the mathematical calculations we perceive that our earth and its seas are small, in comparison to many other worlds. We perceive that our solar system (our sun and his planetary satellites) constitutes but a small fraction of God's great creation. Astronomers tell us that by the aid of sensitive photographic plates they are able to count about one hundred and twenty-five millions of suns, around which planets are revolving, as our earth revolves around our sun. And they estimate that probably only a portion of these suns is visible to our naked eye—so far distant are they. Astronomers estimate that there are millions of other suns so far distant that their light cannot even be discerned by photography.

We stand appalled at the immensity of space and the law and order which everywhere reign. We heartily assent to the words of the Prophet David, "Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge; there is no place where their voice is not heard." The person who can look upon this wonderful display of superhuman power and who can believe that these worlds created themselves, shows to the majority of us that, if he has brains, they are sadly disordered, unbalanced. The person who, after intelligent thought, concludes that there is no God, that everything came to be what it is by chance or by the operation of some blind force, that person is described in the Scriptures in the following words, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God" (Psalm xiv, 1).

On first reading our text some of us might have been inclined to say, Ah, a beautiful poetic extravagance! But not so, dear friends! As scientific instruments demonstrate to us the immensity of the universe we perceive that the Prophet used very moderate language indeed in his description of the majestic power and greatness of the Creator, representing him as weighing the mountains in his balances and holding the seas in the hollow of his hand and that, from his standpoint, a thousand years are but as a watch in the night. How significantly small we all feel in the presence of our God! No wonder some great men have been inclined to say that humanity is too insignificant from the Divine standpoint to be worthy of the least consideration [illegible] to be objects of Divine care and providence! The Scriptures encourage us to reason from the known to the unknown. They tell us that although God is so great, so wise, so powerful, he is also just and loving. And the more we consider the matter, the more reasonable this Bible description of the Almighty appears. His power we see demonstrated. The wisdom of One so great cannot be doubted. Then we come to consider, Could One so wise and so powerful be unjust or ungenerous? Our hearts answer, No! No one is really great who is devoid of justice and love. So surely as our God is Jehovah he must possess these qualities.

When we come in contact with the Bible—and particularly after we learned something of its teachings and got rid of the misrepresentations which gathered about it during the dark ages—then we began to recognize it as the message of Jehovah to his creatures. It informed us that the great Creator of the universe is not only Almighty and All-wise, but loving and kind, with Justice as the very foundation of his Empire. From the Bible we learned, too, that our Creator had been pleased to make us in his own image, in his own moral likeness, to the intent that we might enjoy him and the fruits of his righteousness to all eternity. From this standpoint we began to realize that the loftiest sentiments of the human mind and heart are merely the reflections of this Creator.

Thus coming into sympathetic accord with our Maker we can comprehend the principles of his character—what justice signifies, and mercy and kindness—what is wisdom as contrasted with foolishness. From this standpoint we were enabled to see the glorious perfection of our Maker's character and attributes, which justify the name which he has taken to himself when he declares through his ambassador, "God is Love." As we come to realize this more and more, we are grasping the Infinites; we are getting near to the heart of the great Eternal One, who weighs the mountains as in a balance and measures the seas in the hollow of his hand.

Godlikeness is love-likeness, and as the Scriptures declare, "Love is the fulfilling of the (Divine) Law" (Romans xiii, 10). Our great Creator, the only living and true God, is thus seen in contrast with all the gods of the heathen, who are pitiless, merciless, vengeful, devilish. From the Bible we learn that Jehovah, the True God, takes delight in doing good in the exercise of his Almighty power and wisdom in the creating of beings in whose everlasting life and enjoyment forever he takes pleasure. With such glorious intentions his creative work began with the celestial beings, who are still enjoying his favor. With similar benevolence he created man a little lower than the angels, crowning him with glory and honor as the king of all creatures, on the animal, the human, plane, the likeness of his Maker, who is a spirit. Hearkening to the explanations of the Divine purposes by the Apostles and Prophets, we have received assurances that nothing has befallen humanity in all the dire experiences of the past six thousand years that the great Creator did not foresee. Further, we have the assurances that Divine Wisdom purposes eventually that the tears and sorrows, cryings and dyings, the penalty for Original Sin, under which man has suffered all these centuries, the great Creator purposes shall work no real disadvantages to his creatures. Instead, the end of the Divine Program will attest the various elements of the Divine character as nothing else could have done. The holy angels, who have known no sin, will in mankind read to eternity a valuable lesson of the exceeding sinfulness of sin and the wisdom and [illegible]ness of righteousness.

And every mankind, although at present suffering seriously under the weight of Divine displeasure and condemnation to death, will ultimately be so blessed and the weight of blessing so outweigh the sorrows of the curse, that every creature shall bow the knee and every tongue confess to Divine Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power, in connection with the Divine dealings with humanity.

A night of weeping six thousand years long, involving suffering and sorrow to twenty-thousand millions, is an awful thought. But the proposition is yet a different one when we remember that the majority of Adam's children die in infancy and that to those who live their three score years and ten with labor and sorrow, there are pleasing and happifying experiences, as well as tears. And when we read that even the tears of a few years are a part of the disciplines, instructions and experiences which God designs shall be valuable lessons in preparation for a glorious and joyous eternity—then the whole matter begins to have a new aspect to our minds. If the light afflictions of this present time will work out blessings for eternity then we can rejoice in them for ourselves, our neighbors and all humanity. And this is the Divine proposition. Not that God has ever proposed eternal life for a single rebellious soul, but that he has prepared blessing for all of Adam's race who shall come into full harmony with himself. At present he is teaching great general lessons to humanity as a whole by the exceeding sinfulness of sin. It would be too bad if, as these lessons are learned, there should be no opportunity of profiting by them. But there will be an opportunity of profiting, and this is the great message which God has sent to mankind and which Scripturally, is styled The Gospel—the "good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people," through Christ.

And there shall be no more fear. That day will not end as do others. It will not be followed by a night, but lead on to a glorious eternity for all of God's creatures who appreciate Divine goodness and, using the Divinely provided opportunities, will return to full harmony with their Creator. Such he will in turn recognize as his sons and, at his right hand of favor, they will enjoy pleasures for evermore.

One of old truly said, "Thou art a God which hidest thyself" (Isaiah xlv, 15). How true! As a result the world by wisdom knows not God. He is near in his wisdom and love, yet he can be seen only by those whose eyes of understanding have been opened. But we are glad that the time is coming when all the blind eyes shall see clearly. "As I live, saith the Lord, the whole earth shall be filled with his glory. . . . The knowledge of the [illegible] of God shall fill the whole earth as the waters covers the great deep" (Habakkuk ii, 14). Then all shall see what God hath wrought and our temporary blindness will but accentuate the glorious brightness of his Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power:

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan his works in vain;
God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain!"

In the end it will be seen that the Divine permission of the reign of sin and death in the earth, instead of being a blot upon Divine character and a demonstration of Divine unwisdom and incompetency, will reveal the great Creator to his subjects, his children, as nothing else could have done. Besides, the experiences of mankind during the seven thousand years from Adam's creation to the end of Messiah's mediatorial Kingdom will demonstrate traits of the Divine character which could not otherwise be manifested to angels or to men.

For instance, without the permission of sin, the element of Divine Justice and the unalterable opposition of God to all sin would never have been known to his creatures. His sentence upon father Adam and his race and the permission of the reign of death and sin for all these centuries have demonstrated the fact that Divine Justice cannot be trifled with. And this reign of sin and the strength of the Divine opposition to sin, and the sentence upon sinners, in turn gave opportunity for the exhibit of Divine mercy, compassion, sympathy, love. Undoubtedly God's love was known to the angelic hosts before, but not to the same extent. His dealing with humanity will prove the depth of his sympathy to angels and to men. "God commended his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us" (Romans v, 8). Surely, as the poet declares, we have in this a manifestation of "Love Divine, all love excelling."

More than this: some of us at one time were, perhaps, inclined to criticize our Maker and to say that he had no right to redeem us at the cost of Calvary; that it was wrong to cancel the sins of one and require their payment of another. But we erred. It was not thus. Rightly understood, the dealings of the Father with the Son add still further to his glory—magnify still more his Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power. With all power and authority the Almighty would not command the death of his Son. For Jesus to become man's Redeemer meant his voluntary sacrifice of himself. And how shall we understand this—the Redeemer's willingness to be man's ransom-price? The Scriptures, replying, tell us that it was because of his great love for the Father, his great confidence in him and his willingness to submit to the Divine will and purposes and arrangement in everything. Yet, notwithstanding the willingness of the Redeemer, the Father would not permit him to engage in this great undertaking which would cost himself so much, unless he would give him the corresponding reward. Thus we read of Jesus, that "for the joy that

WESTERN CANADA FLOUR MILLS COMPANY — Purity — MANITOBA HARD WHEAT

Until you have actually tried PURITY FLOUR you may demur at the trifle more it costs you than lower grade flours cost—but your first sack will show you why that seemingly higher price is a real economy for you

PURITY FLOUR

That trial sack (which you ought to order this very day) will teach you what Purity Flour is worth to you, as contrasted with an ordinary flour.

PURITY FLOUR is milled from only the kernels of the choicest Manitoba hard wheat—the world's wheat standard.

From the 84 grain elevators which we own and operate, we select the finest wheat of the year's crop. This, at our mills, is so treated that only the most richly-nourishing part of the wheat berry gets into a PURITY sack or a PURITY barrel.

The result is a flour so strong that it produces more bread for the quantity used than ordinary flour.

But bulk of product is not all you are to expect of PURITY FLOUR. You are to expect lighter, snowier bread; bread that has the nutlike, sweet, wholesome taste every housewife tries to put into the bread she bakes.

PURITY FLOUR, moreover, is not merely a bread flour. It is an every-purpose flour. It makes the kind of pastry you can be proud of—cake that invites praise—biscuits that suggest an encore.

Not only is PURITY the flour for economy's sake, you see, but the flour for quality baking. Thus, the few extra cents which it may cost you actually insures you against baking disappointments. PURITY FLOUR is the flour you will never be without, once you fully test its unusual merits.

Begin with a small trial sack, if you are dubious. Your grocer can supply you.

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth in the uterus. The doctors said it was a tumor, and could not be removed, as it would cause instant death. They found that other organs were affected and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in. After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 264 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills.

As the enamelled metal bed is to the wooden bedstead, so the "Ideal" Guaranteed Metal Bed is to ordinary metal beds. If it were not above the average in every detail, the "Ideal" Guarantee would not be on the footrail.

For while any metal bed is sanitary, sensible, practical, the "Ideal" Metal Bed is all these and more besides. The Guarantee label means satisfaction to the buyer.

Because "Ideal" Metal Beds retain the snowiness of their enamel—no chance of its turning yellow or dingy. Take it down or set it up without risk of breaking it, and with no need for a mallet and much muscle—the parts fit snugly. Forty inspections make us so sure of that that we can afford to guarantee it to you.

Maybe you will be asked a little more for "Ideal" quality—perhaps forty cents more. CHAPTER III.

THE CRY IN THE NIGHT.

"You'd be having company last night, sir?" Mrs. Hollings remarked inquisitively.

Mrs. Hollings was an elderly widow who devoted two hours of her morning to cleaning my rooms and preparing my breakfast.

"Some friends did call," I answered, pouring out the coffee.

"Friends! Good Samaritans I should call 'em," Mrs. Hollings declared, "if so be as they left all the things I found here this morning. Why, there's a whole chicken, to say nothing of tongue and biscuits, and butter, and relishes, and savouries, the names of which isn't often heard in this part of the world. There's wine too, with gold paper round the top, champagne wine, I do believe."

"Is the tide up this morning?" I asked.

"None to speak of," Mrs. Hollings answered, "though the road's been washed dry, and the creeks are brimming. I've scarcely set foot in the village this morning, but they're all a-talking about the soldier gentleman the Duke brought down to the village hall last night. Might you have seen him, sir?"

"Yes, I saw him," I answered.

"A sad shame as it was the night of your lecture, sir," the woman babbled on, "for they were all crazy to hear him. My! the hall was packed."

"Would you mind seeing me to my room, now, Mrs. Hollings?" I asked. "I am going out early this morning."

Mrs. Hollings ascended my frail little staircase. I finished my breakfast in haste and catching up my hat escaped out of doors.

I shall never forget the glory of that morning. The sky was blue and cloudless, the sun was hot as though this were indeed a midsummer morning. The whole land, saturated still with the last night's rain, seemed to steam and glitter with a thing irridescence. Great pools in unexpected places shone like burnished steel, the wet sands were sparkling, and I laughed, the creeks had become a network full of huge masses of uncurled seaweed, running far up into the marshland and spreading themselves out over the meadows beyond. There was salt in the very atmosphere. I felt it on my tongue, and my cheeks were rough with it. Overhead the seagulls in great flocks were returning from shelter, screaming as though with joy as they circled down to the sea. It was a wonderful morning.

About two hundred yards past my cottage the road, which from the village ran perfectly straight, took a sharp turn inland, leaving the coast abruptly on account of the greater stretch of marshland beyond. It was towards this bend that I walked, and curiously enough, with every step I took some inexplicable sense of nervous excitement grew stronger and stronger within me. The fresh morning air and the sunlight seemed powerless to dissipate for a moment the haunting terror of last night. It was a real face which I had seen pressed against the window, and where had Ray been when he returned with sand clogged boots and the tell-tale seaweed upon his trousers? And later on, had I dreamed it, or had there really been a cry? It was a real cry, the cry of a man in terror for his life. I stopped short in the road and wiped my damp forehead. What a fool I was. The night was over. Here in the garish day there was surely nothing to fear. Nevertheless, I, who had started out thirsting only to breathe the fresh salt air, now walked along with stealthy nervous footsteps, looking all the time from left to right, starting at the sight of a dark log on the sands, terrified at a broken buoy which had floated up one of the creeks. Some fear had come over me which I could not shake off. I was afraid of what I might see.

So I walked to the bend of the road. Here, in case the turn might be too sharp for some to see at night a dozen yards or so of white posts and railings bordered the marshes. I leaned there for a moment, telling myself that I paused only to admire the strange colours drawn by the sunlight from the sea-soaked wilderness, the deep brown, the strange purple, the faint pink of the distant sands. But it was none of these which my eyes sought with such fierce eagerness. It was none of the artist's fervour which turned my limbs into dead weights, which drew the colour even from my lips, and set my heart beating with fierce quick throbs. Half in the creek and half out, not a dozen yards from the road was the figure of a man. His head and shoulders were beneath the water, his body and legs and outstretched arms were upon the marsh. And although never before had I looked upon death, I knew very well that I was face to face with it now.

How long it was before I moved I cannot tell. At last, however, I climbed the palings, jumped at its narrowest point a smaller creek, and with slow footsteps approached the dead man. Even when I stood by his side I dared not touch him, I dared not turn him round to see his face. I saw that he was of middle size, fairly well dressed, and as some blown sand had drifted over his boots and ankles I knew that he had been there for some hours. There was blood upon his collar, and the fingers of his right hand were tightly clenched. I told myself that I was a coward, and I set my teeth. I must lift his head from the water and cover him up with my own coat while I fetched help. But when I stooped down a deadly faintness came over me. My fingers were palsied with horror. I had a sudden irresistible conviction I could not touch him. It was a sheer impossibility. There was something between us more potent than the dread of a dead man, something inimical between us two, the dead and the living. I staggered away and ran reeling to the road, plunging blindly through the creek.

About two hundred yards further down the road was a small lodge at one of the entrances of Rowdester. It was towards this I turned and ran. The door was closed and I beat upon it fiercely with clenched fists. The woman who answered it stared at me strangely. I suppose I was a terrible sight.

"A man is murdered down there," I panted.

I pointed with a trembling finger. She stood on the doorstep and looked—looked with her mouth open. At Pleasure was 27

"Well, I never!" she muttered. "But I—I'm busy just now. I've been cleaning myself up for church. I suppose I could get my husband to go down and I could then go to the police after the service is over. A very decent Sabbath it is, we're sick of 'em, constable, too, who've been yachting. Eh, but it's a queer thing to be sure."

"Where is your husband?" I asked.

"Up chopping wood in Farmer Spinney," she answered. "I'll just send one of the children to him. He'll have a cart with him. Will you step inside, sir?"

I shook my head and answered her vaguely. She sent a boy with a message and brought me out a chair, dusting it carefully with her apron.

"You'd best sit down, sir. You look all struck of a heap, so to speak. Maybe you came upon it sudden."

I was glad enough to sit down, but I answered her at random. She reported the matter and continued some household duties. I sat quite still, with my eyes steadily fixed upon a dark object a little to the left of those white palings. Above my head a starling in a wicker cage was making an insane cracking on the iron perch in front a couple of tame rabbits sat and watched me, pink-eyed, imperturbable. Inside I could hear the slow ticking of an eight-day clock. The woman was humming to herself as she worked. All these things, which my senses took quick note of and retained, seemed to me to belong to another world. I myself was under some sort of spell. My brain was numb with terror, the fire of life left my veins, so that I sat there in the warm sunshine and shivered until my teeth chattered. Inside the woman was singing over her work.

And then the spell developed. A nameless but loathsome fascination drew me from my seat, drew me with uneven and reluctant footsteps out of the gate and down the narrow straight road. There was still not a soul in sight. I drew nearer and nearer to the spot. Once more I essayed to move him. It was utterly in vain. Such nerve as I possessed had left me wholly and altogether. A sense of repulsion, nauseating, invincible, made a child of me. I stood up and looked around wildly. It was then for the first time I saw what my right foot had trodden into the sand.

I picked it up, and a little cry, unheard save by the seabirds which circled about my head, broke from my lips. It was a man's signet ring, thin and worn smooth with age. It was quaintly shaped, and in the centre was set a small jet-black stone. The device was a bird, and underneath the motto "Vigeo."

My hand closed suddenly upon it, and again I looked searchingly around. There was not a soul in sight. I slipped the ring into my waistcoat pocket and moved back to the white railings. I leaned against them, and took out a pipe and tobacco from my pocket, began to smoke.

Strangely enough, I had now recovered my nerve. I was able to think and reason calmly. The woman at the lodge had taken it for granted that this man's body had been thrown up by the sea. Was that a possible conclusion? There was a line all down the sands where the tide had reached, a straggling uneven line, marked with huge masses of wet seaweed, fragments of timber, the boatsman and jetsam of the sea. The creek where the man's body was lying was forty yards above this. Yet on such a night who could say where those great breakers, driven on by the wind to well up to their own mighty force, might not have cast their prey. Within a few yards of him was a jagged mass of timber. The cause of those wounds would be obvious enough. I felt the time in my waistcoat pocket. It was there, safely enough hidden, and I looked forward to the lodge. As yet there were no signs of John on the road.

But behind me, coming from the village, I heard the sound of light and rapid footsteps. I turned my head. It was Blanche Mayat, short, clothed, a stick in her hand, a healthy tuck through her Tam-o'-Shanter.

"Good-morning," she cried out heartily. "I've been to call at your cottage."

"Very kind of you," I answered, hesitatingly.

Miss Mayat was good-hearted, but a little over-powering, and in certain moods she reminded me of her father.

"Oh, I had an errand," she exclaimed, laughing. "Father said if I saw you I was to say that he has to call on the Duke this afternoon, and, if you liked, he would explain about your lecture last night, and try and get the village hall for you for nothing. The Duke is very good-natured, and I believe knows that he spoilt your evening, father thinks he might let you have it for nothing."

"It is very kind of your father," I answered. "I do not think that I shall ever give that lecture again."

"Why not?" she protested. "I am sure I thought it a beautiful lecture, and I'm not keen on churches and ruins myself," she added, with a laugh which somehow grated upon me. "What are you doing here?"

"Watching the dead," I answered grimly.

She looked at me for an explanation. I pointed to the dark object by the side of the creek. She gave a violent start. Then she screamed and caught hold of my arm.

"Mr. Ducaine!" she cried. "What is it?"

"A dead man!" I answered.

Her face was a strange study. There was fear mingled with unwholesome curiosity, the heritage of her natural lack of refinement. She leaned over the palings.

"Oh, how horrible!" she exclaimed. "I don't know whether I want to look or not. I've never seen any one dead."

"I should advise you," I said, "to go away."

This will Stop Your Cough in a Hurry

Save $2 by Making This Cough Syrup at Home.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

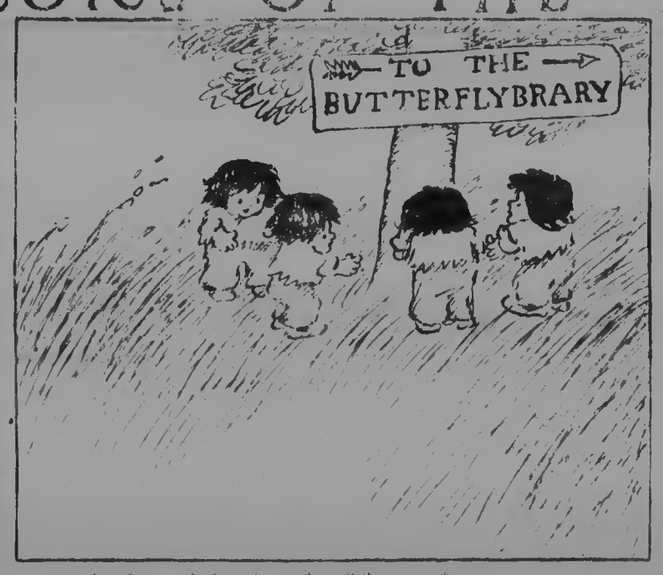
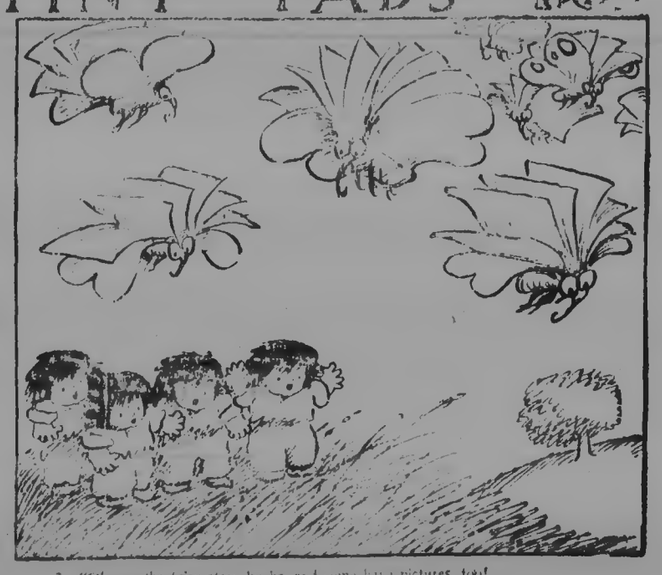
1—The Tiny Tads are wishing that they had something to read.
"Let's try to find a book," says one. The others cry "Agreed!"

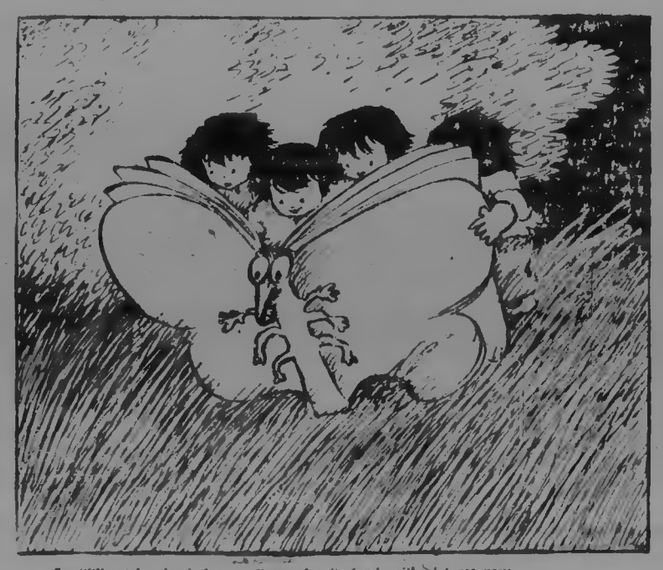


2—And so they search about the woods until they see a sign.
"The Butterflybrary," they read. "Oh, my, won't that be fine?

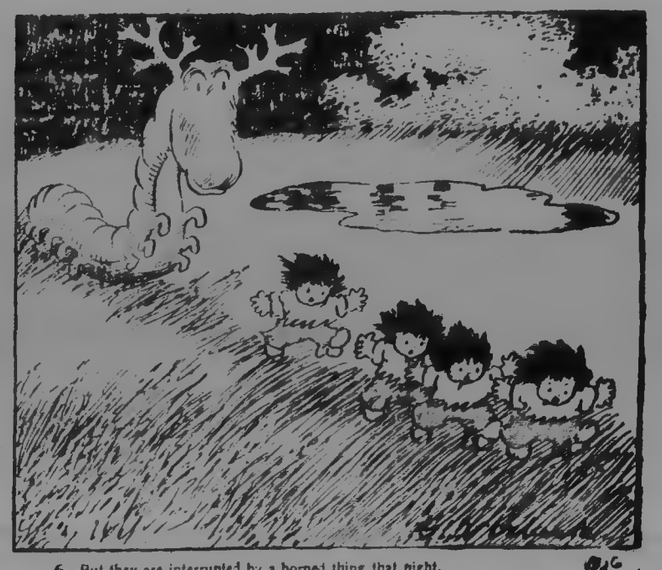


3—"Oh, see the fairy story books, and some have pictures, too!
Oh, see the yellow covered books, and some are red and blue!"

4—"How do you get them?" asks a Tad. And as he looks around
He sees a nice Librarianatt, who flutters toward the ground



5—"I'll catch a book for you," says he, "a book with pictures gay;
And when you're through with reading him just let him fly away."



6—But they are interrupted by a horned thing that night.
"It is a Caribookworm," cry the Tiny Tads in fright.

ANCIENT WAR RELICS.

Toronto Military Institute Has a Collection of Fighting Implements.

In front of the Military Institute in Toronto is a cast iron box, painted black and labeled in white, "Hot Shot Box." With its oblong shaped tunnel it might be taken by the uninitiated for an early form of the peanut roaster, while others, quick to jump at conclusions and misguided by the name, might say it was the machine in which Col. George T. Denison prepared his speeches on questions of Empire politics. Both guesses would be wide of the mark. In its day that box produced something much hotter than roasted peanuts and something equally disastrous to digestion. In its day it served the Empire, but in a way more strenuous even than Col. Denison's heavily loaded verbal shells. To-day its only use is to mark the progress in the noble science of destruction, and to point the origin of a bit of slang so common that it seems no longer slang.

The box was used in olden days before the modern shell, with its load of explosives was invented. The old iron cannon balls were put into it, heated red hot, and then fired from a cannon with the express purpose of setting on fire anything they might touch. Of course, the shell has done away with the box, but it is kept by the Military Institute because the members of that organization do not confine themselves to drinking lemon soda, or playing billiards, but also make a serious study of war, past, present, and future. Up in the Institute's museum they have also all the implements which were used in handling the red hot shot.

The museum is in the same room as the library. At one end are many shelves filled with books upon the history and theory of war. In the other end are many curios illustrating different sides of the soldier's life in active service, but chiefly the implements of war used in the past and present. An interesting contrast to the hot shot box is formed by an exhibit of shells, including the various styles used by armies of all the principal war-going nations. Several cases of buttons and badges worn by regiments which have served in Canada illustrate the display and glamor of military pursuits, while the fragments of a shell thrown into Ladysmith by the Boers illustrate in their own quiet way some of the real things that a soldier sometimes has to face.

When the members of the Institute tire of poring over maps and discussing how imaginary battalions should be directed through imaginary difficulties, they give themselves a thrill of the more gruesome side of war by looking at a peculiarly-shaped knife in one of the cases. The knife, which is half way between a scimitar and a large-sized common, ordinary domestic carving knife, and has a beautifully carved wooden handle, was presented to the Institute by a United States army officer, and is a souvenir of the war in the Philippines. With that knife, a native sneaking up in the night killed a guard, an officer, and three men. On it are still the marks of these soldiers' blood.

Graham Minus His Ticket.

Hon. George P. Graham, Canada's Minister of Railways, is known all over the Dominion as a man who loves a joke, and there was a little jest at his own expense the other day that nobody enjoyed more than the Minister himself.

Mr. Graham was traveling from Ottawa to Toronto, and was chatting in the smoker with several men, when the conductor came along.

Tickets were collected all round, and the conductor came to the Minister of Railways. Of course he was quite unaware of that gentleman's identity, but it didn't make any difference, even when he was enlightened.

Mr. Graham felt in his pockets for his railway pass. It wasn't there. Again he made the search of his pockets, while the conductor stood impatiently before him. In vain. No pass.

Then the Minister of Railways informed the conductor that he was the Minister of Railways, also of Canals.

No use. "It makes no difference to me who you are," said the official. "You must give me a ticket or show me a pass."

The other men in the smoker endeavored to convince the conductor that he was making a mistake to thus hold up the Minister of Railways. But the ticket taker was firm as a rock.

"But this man is entitled to ride in his private car on your railway," protested Mr. Curry.

"Makes no difference," was the imperturable official's reply. "I'm entitled to see a pass or get a ticket."

Finally they gave up the argument, and at the next stop Mr. Graham got off and wired to Montreal for instructions to the conductor to carry him to Toronto.

And nobody laughed over it more than himself.

May Have Nine Millions.

The Census and Statistics Branch estimates that on March 31, when the fiscal year closed, Canada had a population of 7,489,781, it being estimated that there was a growth of 305,000 over the year previous. In detail the department estimates the population as follows:

Maritime Provinces, 1,060,678; Quebec, 2,124,834; Ontario, 2,637,361; Manitoba, 496,111; Saskatchewan, 377,590; Alberta, 321,862; British Columbia, 321,733; unorganized territories, 59,050. Immigration not shown by provinces, 10,862.

These calculations indicate that the 1911 census will show Canada to have a population of between eight and nine millions.

A. E. AMES & CO., Limited - Toronto

PACIFIC-BURT CO., Limited

The Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, is acquiring the whole of the business of San Francisco, as of March 31st, 1910, subject to a 6 per cent. dividend from that date until September 26th, 1910, upon the capital stock of the latter company; also, the exclusive rights under all patents owned and to be owned by F. N. Burt Company, Limited, for the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, Nob Mexico, Wyoming and Colorado.

The Pacific Burt Co., Limited, is also acquiring the factory site and buildings of the Champion Investment Co., at Emeryville, Cal., a growing manufacturing suburb of San Francisco, where the factory of the Pacific Manifolding Co., has been operating, and where it is proposed to instal the special machinery for manufacture of small paper boxes, and to conduct such a business as is now operated by the F. N. Burt Co., Limited, in their Buffalo factories.

The Pacific Manifolding Book Co., holds exclusive licenses under present and future patents of the Carter-Crume Co., Limited, for practically the same territory as mentioned above in relation to the Burt patents, viz., the territory west of Denver, Colorado, to and including the State of California. Settlement has been made by which no royalties are payable under these licenses in future. The terms on which all the above assets and rights are being secured by the Pacific-Burt Company are set out in detail in an agreement with me as vendor, dated 11th October, 1910, and filed in the office of the Provincial Secretary.

The business has prospered for many years, the year ending March 31 last having been the most prosperous of any theretofore, though net profits for the year now current will appreciably exceed that record. The business has consisted chiefly of the manufacture of merchants' counter-check books and cash sales books for stores, together with kindred lines necessary for use in connection with the highly systematized business of department stores. It is excellently organized and strongly entrenched, being largely protected from excessive competition by heavy freight charges from the east, caused by distance and the Rocky Mountains. The sales for the year ending March 31st last showed an increase over those of the previous year of 25 per cent., and this rate of increase has been maintained for the months of the current year over the same months of the year preceding. The expectation is that both business and profits will continue to show steady and satisfactory increases.

The principal employees of the Pacific Manifolding Book Co., have become employees of the Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, including the General Manager, Mr. Horace P. Brown, to whom much of the success of the business in recent years is to be credited. He has agreed, at the option of the company, to remain for a term of five years, and not to engage in competition for a period of ten years thereafter.

The opportunity for establishing a large and profitable business in the specialties manufactured by F. N. Burt Co., Limited, is unusually attractive, a growing demand is assured, and the special machinery and methods used by the company, which will always be at the command of the Pacific Burt Co., insure a satisfactory and profitable business in the Pacific coast territry.

F. N. Burt Co., Limited, have found it necessary, by reason of the large amount of business being offered them in the eastern States, to enlarge extensively two of their principal factories in Buffalo. In view of this, and of the prospects of their Canadian branch, the Directors of that company have concluded, in establishing a business on the Pacific coast, to avail themselves of the opportunity furnished by the exceptionally good organization and management of the Pacific Manifolding Book Company. An agreement has, therefore, been entered into by which all present and future patents, inventions and improvements of F. N. Burt Co., Limited, become the property of the Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, for the Pacific coast territory, subject to payment of certain percentages upon the gross income of that department.

Ample provision is made in the capital of the company for steady expansion of the present business, and for the installation of the plant for manufacture of the Burt lines, as well as for working capital.

The business now in operation, being so well established and prosperous, insures from the beginning net profits considerably more than sufficient to pay Preferred Stock dividends. It will, of course, require a number of months to instal the plant and organize the business of the Burt Department, but I believe that the current rate of earnings on the present business will warrant the declaration of dividends upon the Common Stock at the rate of 2 per cent per annum from January 1st next, while increases in Common Stock dividends may reasonably be expected from time to time after the Burt Department has come into full operation.

S. J. MOORE, President.

Toronto, October 12, 1910.

ACCOUNTANTS' STATEMENT

Regarding the operations for the five years ending March 31st last of the Pacific Manifold Book Company, of Emeryville, California, after adjusting the net profits as to rent and royalty with the basis which has come into operation through the formation of the Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, and after deducting ample charges for interest, bad debts, depreciation and maintenance and repairs of the property, we hereby certify that the net profits for the period named were as follows:—

| | |
|---|---|
| Year ending March 31st, 1906 | $39,029 |
| " " " " 1907 | 53,379 |
| " " " " 1908 | 15,212 |
| " " " " 1909 | 35,939 |
| " " " " 1910 | 60,428 |

Profits of the two years ending in 1908 and 1909 were injuriously affected (to an unequal extent, however) by the results of the financial panic in the United States in the latter part of 1907. The lessened profits during these two years were out of the ordinary, and do not indicate the Company's normal earning power.

We are advised that it is the intention of the Directors to close the Company's fiscal year at the end of the present calendar year. From the evidence now in our possession the net profits of Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, for the last nine months of this year should not be less than $50,000 or at the rate of $66,666 per annum.

We have not considered the question of future profits from the Burt portion of the business.

Toronto, October 12th, 1910. CLARKSON & CROSS.

SOLICITORS' OPINION

We have had charge of the formation, under the laws of the Province of Ontario, of the Pacific-Burt Company, Limited, and certify that both the Preference and Common shares have been validly issued as full paid shares, the Preference shares being preferred as to both assets and cumulative dividend of 7 per cent. per annum, and carrying the right to the holder to exchange the same at any time, share for share, for Common Stock.

THE C.M.A.'S CHIEFTAIN.

W. H. Rowley Handles Big Things In a Big Way.

W. H. Rowley of the E. B. Eddy Co., at Ottawa, and Hull, the new president of the C.M.A., is one of the most forceful men in Canadian industrial life.

Born in Nova Scotia, the son of an Anglican clergyman, Mr. Rowley got the benefit of perfect home training in a highly intellectual Canadian environment, with the best private and public schooling, developing in him a determination and positiveness of character that has carried him to a high point of success. His lofty sense of business honor, his sturdy loyalty to British traditions, his exuberant love of country, his buoyant joy in outdoor recreations, his fine hospitality, may all be traced to the lessons learnt in the house of his father and the example set by that sterling Christian gentleman.

Mr. Rowley has been prominent in the large industrial life of Canada for a generation, yet is still in his prime. His career began in a bank. He was manager of the Ottawa branch of the Bank of Montreal for years. In this capacity he came in touch with E. B. Eddy, of the E. B. Eddy Paper Co., Hull, Que. Mr. Eddy, a keen, down east Yankee, knew a good man when he saw him. He buckled Mr. Rowley to him and to his business. From that time till Mr. Eddy's death a few years ago, Mr. Rowley was his right hand man, working with him shoulder to shoulder in laying the foundations of what is to-day the largest industry of its kind in the British Empire.

When the fire took place ten years ago, wiping out the E. B. Eddy plant at Hull, Mr. Eddy found in Mr. Rowley a man of boundless optimism and superlative capacity for reconstruction. Out of the ashes arose a magnificent plant that stands to-day as a monument to the genius of E. B. Eddy and the proven business acumen of W. H. Rowley and his persevering associates.

Mr. Rowley, since Mr. Eddy's death has been president of the company. For twenty years, like a full-powered dynamo he has worked for the success of that company. He has seen it grow to five times its former size.

Mr. Rowley is a man of large affairs. He has vision and vigor. He has all his life been in the habit of dealing with matters of great importance in the business world; he knows big things and handles them in a big way.

His knowledge of business conditions in Canada is second to no one's. The years he spent with the Bank of Montreal put him in touch with the fundamentals of industry. His close association with the late Mr. Eddy and his large undertakings, schooled him to grapple with any industrial problem, no matter how great. Hence in his career he has been brought into personal intimacy with the master minds of finance and industry of Canada, and he is of their kin. Perhaps no nation-sized man of industry is more widely or better known than he. He has the happy human faculty of keeping his friendships green.

Mr. Rowley is an ardent club man, as to the manor born. He is a keen horseman. In religion he is a devoted adherent of the Anglican Church occupying no mean position among laymen in the diocese of Ottawa.

A Boxer Who Came Back.

Since the institutional church became popular in Toronto, there has been a great growth in the number of teams and athletic organizations bearing the names of saints, and in almost every part of the city gymnasiums may be found, especially connected with the Anglican and Roman Catholic Churches. A story is told by a member of the latter church who has been accustomed to add to his physical fitness by boxing for a few hours each evening.

One night he grew tired of the exercise and called a halt. His sparring partner was waiting anxiously to renew hostilities, but he was not anxious to do so, and while they waited a priest offered to see how much he remembered of the manly art of self-defence, which he had known in his youth. Now, it happened that the sparring partner was an excellent boxer, but he did not know how often it would be respectful to land on his reverend opponent. He started in to protect himself, and did not assume the aggressive. It did not take the other man long to discover that he could be reckless, and he went after the sparring partner in great style. He hit home so often that he managed to ruffle the other man's temper, and at last the sparring partner paused. He took one good look at his opponent and said, "Look out, father, I'm coming."

A minute later the father understood what the announcement meant. He made one ineffectual effort to protect himself, and then to the amusement of the gathered athletes he measured his full length on his back.

Value of a Journey to Canada.

"A journey across Canada would cost the parents of a young person of the upper classes less than a London season, less than a term at Christ Church," writes Cecil Bottine in The Nineteenth Century. "It is fashionable to 'adore sport,' even when that sport takes the virile form of chasing a small ball across a Surrey Common. Canada offers unrivalled opportunities for real sport. Why should it not be made the fashion for our young people to shoot, fish, and hunt there, to join in the winter sports of the Canadian cities, become acquainted with the leading men and women of the baby Empire which we aspire to keep within the circle of the Imperial domain when it has attained its maturity and felt its strength?

"Such a custom would benefit Canada and the Canadians, it would make for genuine unity by personal acquaintance and social fellowship, and it would be of immense value in training the youth of Britain, by combating snobbery and pettishness, by opening a great vista to the knowledge and imagination of how heroic lives are led in far-away corners of the earth, with no gallery to play to and with the stern forces of nature in perpetual competition."

A Counter Proposal.

"Sir, I came to ask you for your daughter's hand."

"How about supporting her, young man?' If she gives her hand, can you foot the bills?"—Baltimore American.

A Godsend to Sickly Children

Mr. N. L. Duffey, of Helena, Ala., the thankful father of a little baby girl who was made healthy and fat after she was not expected to live, writes: "Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the finest of medicines. I have a girl baby, now 5 months old, who until she was 2 months old we hardly saw any chance of raising her. At that time I procured a bottle of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and gave her a few drops at a time. Now she is acknowledged to be the finest looking baby in town. Baby is still growing as fat as a pig."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

can be safely given to children, no matter what age, in small doses. It is just the right thing for them when they have coughs, colds or any throat or stomach troubles that are so prevalent with the children. It is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic. It is invaluable for overworked men and delicate women.

All druggists, grocers and liquor merchants or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Refuse substitutes and imitations; they are impure and dangerous.

Fresh Air in Winter

In winter, it is hard to get fresh air in certain rooms. Some rooms in a house are usually colder than others, and if you open the windows it is hard again to heat the room properly.

If you keep the windows closed you don't get fresh air; if you keep them open you cannot quickly reheat the room. The solves the difficulty. You can leave the windows in a room open all day in winter, and when you close them apply a match to a Perfection Oil Heater and heat the room to any temperature you desire in a few minutes.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in Japan or nickel. It burns for nine hours. It has a cool handle and a damper top. It has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be quickly cleaned. An indicator always shows amount of oil in the font.

The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down. It is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection Oil Heater is strong, durable, well made, built for service, yet light and ornamental.

"CUBS" LOSE FIRST.

Bender Is Too Much For Them In World Series Game.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 18.—Chief Bender's wonderful pitching and the offensive work of Frank Baker won for the Athletics over the Chicago Cubs in the opening game of the world series of 1910. It was a phenomenal game and when it is considered that the Chicago players passed first base for eight innings, it can be recorded as one of the greatest games in a big series ever played. This goes to show what bang-up ball the Athletics played. Orvis Overall did not seem to have his usual break on his curve ball, or else the Mack men were in a hitting mood.

I cannot forget the work of Baker. He led the attack in the second inning with a two-base hit into the left field crowd. Davis cleverly sacrificed, putting Baker on third, with one man down. With the strong hitting, Murphy up, to decide whether the Athletics should forge to the front, he responded with a stinging single to left between third and short, and there was a roar from the stand. This did not satisfy the Mackmen. Murphy stole on the much-touted Kling and Barry's out advanced him to third. Thomas cleverly worked the pitcher for a pass after having two strikes called.

The Cubs, having in mind a pitcher's weakness at bat, thought Bender would be easy, but the chief is always a good sticker, unlike most other twirlers, and he contributed a beautiful single, too hot for Zimmerman to handle. It came to Heine on a high, hard bound, and caromed off his hands into centre field, giving the Athletics a two-run lead.

Bender then continued his airtight pitching, using his wonderful curves and his "smoke ball," which is a high fast one along the shoulders, making the Cubs look helpless.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Six persons were killed in election riots in Guadeloupe.

G. H. Gibson was killed and two other men hurt in an automobile accident near Ashcroft, B.C.

George Bowsher, Pere Marquette brakeman, was found by the track at Victoria with his head severed from his body.

J. L. Marier's automobile garage, Guy street, Montreal, was burned last evening, six machines being destroyed, entailing a loss of $30,000.

John McLellan was sentenced at Galt to four years' imprisonment, and his father was arrested on a charge of perjury in connection with the case.

The great French railroad strike was formally called off last night. This was decided at a meeting of the strike committee of the National Railroaders' Union.

Pending an investigation of his accounts by a special auditor, Fred Knowlson, town clerk and treasurer of Lindsay, has, on the advise of G. H. Hopkins, K.C., tendered his resignation.

The British freight steamer Port Marnock is reported ashore off Cape Frio, South America. Twelve of the crew were drowned. The Port Marnock said from San Lorenzo, Argentine, on Oct. 5, for Leith, Scotland.

After more than 36 hours' deliberation a jury at Greensburg, Pa., returned a verdict finding eighteen deputy sheriffs guilty of voluntary manslaughter. They are accused of killing Paul Reno, a miner, in a strike riot last May.

Married Thrice.

Toronto, Oct 18.—Acquitted on one charge of bigamy yesterday, Dr. Herbert Sheppard, an elderly man, laid the way open for a second charge by admitting a third marriage.

He testified that in 1869 he married Margaret Saunders in Barrie. In 1863 while living in Michigan, on his return from a trip to Quebec, he found a note from his wife saying that she had left him, he didn't know why, taking the six children. In 1867 he secured a divorce. In 1891 he settled in Eden Mills, Ont., and married Miss Edith Tisdale.

"This is, indeed, news to the crown," said Crown Attorney Baird. "She lived with me until I lost all my property, and when I returned home after being in Toronto on a business trip I found that she had left with a strange man," went on Sheppard.

Then he married Mrs. Lucy Moore. Owing to the first divorce, Judge Denton dismissed the original charge.

A Case of Witchcraft.

Berlin, Ont., Oct. 18.—In an action brought by Christine Metzger of St. Jacobs against Abram Brubasher of Heidelberg, the former claims damages for alleged false and malicious charges that the plaintiff had put certain drugs in food to be eaten by Mrs. Daniel Brubasher, in order to obtain evil influence over her; also charging the defendant with having used words in the German language insinuating that the plaintiff had been practicing the crime of witchcraft upon the said Lizzie Brubasher, ascribing the latter's illness to this cause.

Damages of $500 and costs are claimed for anguish of mind caused by being shunned by former associates and having her reputation injured.

FAMOUS WOMAN DEAD.

Julia Ward Howe Dies of Pneumonia Aged 91 Years.

Newport, R.I., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, authoress of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," died yesterday from pneumonia, aged 91.

Mrs. Howe's name will live as that of one of the most generous and brilliant women the world has ever known. Before the civil war she and her husband worked for emancipation. After seeing her efforts crowned with success she became interested in woman's suffrage, prison reform and the cause of peace. She was born in New York on May 27, 1819, and was christened Julia Ward. In 1843 she married Dr. Samuel G. Howe, the eminent philanthropist.

In Boston Mrs. Howe was affectionately known as the "Queen of Clubs," because so many clubs owed their existence to her active efforts.

The battle hymn was composed one night in Washington in 1862, after seeing the camp fires of the Union army. The first and last verses read:

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword;
His truth is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me;
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

In 1908 she became leader of the woman suffrage movement, and in 1904 was awarded the degree of LL.D by Taft's College.

Three-Cent Fares for Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Oct. 18.—The failure of the Street Railway Co. to lay down tracks in Elmwood, in the north-eastern section of the city, requested by the municipal authorities a year ago, may lead to the establishment of a municipal service within a couple of years.

It is suggested that new lines be operated by the city, in opposition to the company lines, on the basis of three-cent fares. This will be made possible by the introduction of electrical energy from the city's hydro plant at Point Du Bois, now under course of construction.

The city is entitled, by its agreement with the company, to give permission to competing concerns to construct and operate lines where the present company declines to do so. In this case it could give permission to itself.

A Careless Sportsman.

St. Catharines, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Geoffrey Pepen, a young French-Canadian woman residing on West Chester avenue, is in the General Marine Hospital as the result of being shot in the shoulder by a stray bullet from the revolver of George Williams, a young man 20 years of age, who was practicing shooting while walking along the tracks of the Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Railway. Mrs. Pepen was sweeping off her front verandah when she was struck.

The woman's condition, while serious, is not expected to prove fatal if blood-poisoning can be prevented. Chief Greene, when notified of the shooting, soon learned that it had been done by Williams, who was entirely unaware of the result of his act.

Burglars Got $1,500.

Morrisburg, Oct. 18.—Vene Robinson, a successful drover of Chesterville, was robbed of $1,500 on Sunday night. Robinson is in the habit of buying hogs at Morrisburg and, in order to get an early start Monday morning, drew $1,500 from the bank on Saturday and placed the money between the mattress and his bed. During Sunday night he was disturbed by a noise, but woke up too late. his money was missing and the robbers had escaped. The thieves were well prepared to defend themselves, as a large piece of tubing was left behind, evidently to be used should Robinson wake up during the search for the money.

Avoid the Workshop.

London, Ont., Oct. 18.—The royal commission on technical education held sessions here yesterday, and, in addition to visiting local factories, heard evidence from employes, superintendents and employers.

On all hands it was pointed out that more should be done to encourage young men to learn trades. As it is now, their education is with the idea of avoiding the workshop.

The establishment of a technical school in this city was mentioned by several of the witnesses, and the fine building erected by the Ontario Government as a hygienic institute, but never used, was mentioned as a suitable place.

To Bridge the Ottawa.

Port Arthur, Oct. 18.—Stewart & Hewitson, this city, have been awarded the contract for the construction for a steel and concrete bridge over the Ottawa River at Mattawa. The bridge will be 2,700 feet long, and some piers 50 feet high. The total cost will probably run over $500,000.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Trading Slow on British Markets—New York and Buffalo Steady.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 17.—John Rogers & Co. cable to-day that the demand was small in the Birkenhead market, and as a result trade was slow, but owing to supplies being short, prices were well maintained, and Saturday's quotations were unaltered. States steers sold from 13½c to 14c, Canadians, 12¾c to 13½c, and ranchers, 11½c to 12¾c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 117 carloads, consisting of 2388 cattle, 85 hogs, 713 sheep and lambs, 210 calves and 17 horses.

Exporters.

E. L. Woodward bought for Swift & Co. 150 cattle for London market, 142 steers, averaging 1323 lbs., at $6.10, average price, or a range in prices of $5.90 to $6.25; 1 bull, 1790 lbs., at $5.10; also 175 steers for Liverpool, 1250 lbs. average, at $5.90, or a range of $5.75 to $6.25.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots, $5.90 to $6.15; loads of good, $5.50 to $5.75; medium, $5.15 to $5.40; common, $4.40 to $5; cows, $3 to $5; canners, $2 to $2.50; bulls, $3.50 to $4.

Feeders.

Good loads of heavy shorthorn feeders sold at $5.50 to $5.70; steers, 900 to 1050 lbs. each, at $5 to $5.50; stockers, $4 to $4.50; distillery bulls, $3.50 to $4, and in some instances $4.25 was paid.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply sold readily at $50 to $85 each.

Veal Calves.

A liberal supply of veal calves, some of which were almost too heavy to be classed as veals, sold at $5 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

There was an active market for sheep and lambs at strong prices. Sheep, ewes, sold from $4.75 to $5 per cwt.; lambs, at $6 to $6.30.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reports prices lower at $6.75 for selects, fed and watered, at the market, and $6.50 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b. cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 17 were 260 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 2,900 hogs and 250 calves. The supply on the market this morning consisted of 1000 cattle, 1650 sheep and lambs, 1350 hogs and 150 calves.

Sellers failed to establish any advance in prices. Holders of a few strictly choice Ontario steers asked as high as 6¼c per pound for them in the early part of the day, for which they were bid 6c, and this figure was accepted for them later, but the bulk of the trading was done at the following prices: Choice steers, 5¾c to 5¾c; good, 5c to 5¼c; fairly good, 4¾c to 4¾c; fair, 4c to 4¼c, and common, 3½c to 3¾c per pound.

The undertone to the market for lambs was stronger, and prices, as compared with Friday's sales, were 25c per cwt. higher. Sales of Upper Canada lambs were made at 6c to 6¼c, and Quebec stock at 5¾c to 5¾c per lb. The market for sheep was steady, under a fair demand, and sales were made at 3½c to 4c per lb. Calves are becoming very scarce, and prices higher. Sales of milk-fed stock were made at 5½c to 6c per lb.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs this morning, and prices declined 15c to 25c per cwt., as compared with those realized last Wednesday. Sales of selected lots were made at $8.50 to $8.65 per cwt., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 2100 head; slow and 25c to 75c lower; quality common to fair, prime steers, $7 to $7.25, shipping, $6.85 to $6.90; butchers, $6.50 to $6.75; heifers, $4.25 to $5.40; cows, $3.75 to $5; bulls, $3.50 to $5; stockers and feeders, $4 to $5.65; stock heifers, $3.50 to $4. Fresh cows and springers, steady to 25c lower; calves, $8 to $8.25; common, $3 to $6.

Veals—Receipts, 1500 head; active and steady, $5.50 to $10.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,00 head; active and steady; heavy, mixed workers and pigs, $6.75 to $6.85; roughs, $6.00 to $6.20; stags, $4 to $5; dairies, $6 to $6.10.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 19,000 head; lambs slow, 10c to 15c lower; lambs, $5.75 to $6.10; yearlings, $5.25 to $5.50; wethers, $4.50 to $4.75; ewes, $4 to $4.25; sheep, mixed, $4 to $4.10.

MURDERER OF STANLEY KETCHEL WAS TRAPPED IN A FARM HOUSE

Confessed to His Host That He Shot Pugilist Thinking His Own Life Was in Danger, as His Victim Carried a Revolver.

STORY OF THE CAPTURE

SPRINGFIELD Oct. 18 Walter A. Hurtz, alias Walter Dipley who shot and killed Stanley Ketchel at the ranch of R. P. Dickerson, seven miles from Conway, Webster County, Mo., was arrested near Niangua, Webster County, seventeen miles from the scene of the crime, this morning, by three farmers.

Dipley went to the home of Thomas Haggard, one mile north of Niangua last night and asked to be permitted to remain over night, which he was allowed to do. He arrived at the house about 8 o'clock. Haggard, later hearing of the Ketchel murder, guarded the room occupied by the man until this morning about 4 o'clock, when he went to the home of his brother, Joseph Haggard, and a neighbor, Zip Murphy, telling them of the visitor. Then he called up a newspaper office here for a description of Ketchel's murderer, and on receiving it, said that he had the man at his home.

MADE HIM ROLL UP SLEEVES

The three men at once left for Haggard's home. Going into the room occupied by Dipley and informing him of their discovery, they asked him to roll up his sleeves to see if the tattoo marks were on his arms.

Dipley acquiesced and immediately confessed that he had shot Ketchel.

The prisoner then told of the alleged remarks made to Geddie Smith by Ketchel on the day before the murder, saying that he killed Ketchel because he feared that he would lose his own life, as the fighter had a revolver in a holster at his wrist.

When arrested by Haggard Dipley did not have the revolver taken from the body of Ketchel after he had been shot. When asked where the revolver was he said it was in Haggard's barn. He was then taken to a farm house and told Mrs Haggard over the telephone where to find the weapon. She recovered it.

Dipley was then taken to Marshfield and placed in the custody of Sheriff C. R. Shields, and is now in jail there. He only answers questions that suit him.

DESERTER FROM THE NAVY

He admitted to-day that his real name is Walter Dipley, instead of Walter A. Hurtz, and that he had served four years in the United States Navy, from which he deserted, and that his home is in Webb City, Mo., where he has resided for the last ten years with the exception of the time spent in the navy.

While in Webb City Dipley worked in zinc mines. His reputation there is not bad, according to police records, but he was known to be a little rough, and played cards considerably for money. After leaving the navy he worked as a barber throughout the country while hiding as a deserter.

About a month ago he met the woman, Goldie Smith, in Bluff, Christian County, Mo., at the home of her stepfather, when they decided to live as man and wife. Dipley first met her ten years ago in Christian County while she was unmarried, but after leaving there he did not see her until they met a month ago. In the meantime she married a man named Knight, who divorced her. She had been conducting a rooming house at Cherryvale, Kan., since her separation from her husband and it is claimed she had a bad reputation. She admits that she and Dipley were never married.

Dipley on his arrest professed the woman was his wife, but the officers have not appraised him of the confession made by her.

Coroner Nichols said to-day the inquest will be held here to-morrow if possible to allow the body to be taken to Michigan as soon as the legal formalities will permit.

Funeral services were held over the body at the Elks' Club here this afternoon, by Dr. J. T. Bacon, of the Presbyterian Church, who took as his text, "Be ye also ready."

The services were attended by about 2,000 persons.

The body of Ketchel lay at an undertaking establishment here this afternoon and was viewed by thousands. It will be accompanied to Grand Rapids, Mich., by R. P. Dickerson and Gen. Emmett Newton.

Everywhere that pugilists and prizering patrons congregate in New York there was subdued talk yesterday of the tragic ending of the career of Stanley Ketchel. His Broadway friends find it hard to believe that he is dead.

It was still more difficult to understand that he had been the victim of any sort of quarrel, the target for a malevolent rifle bullet.

Ketchel was undeniably one of the most popular fighters that ever came to the front in this country. He was big-hearted and sympathetic to the point of unconstrained emotion. He was a great big boy, only 24 years old, and the last person in the world to provoke the anger of a reasonable creature.

Ketchel had not had a fight outside the ring in the last eight years. With his prizefighting was a mere matter of business, a means of livelihood, without the slightest grudge behind it. He was always a home-loving sort and provided his father and mother

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder.

He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS.

They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.

BILINGUAL KNOWLEDGE.

Not only the schools where French speaking population predominates, but all the schools of the province, should be more or less bilingual schools. We insist upon the importance of technical education as a necessary equipment for success, in industrial and agricultural operations. From a commercial point of view in a country like Canada, where one of the provinces is peopled by French speaking people, who will long adhere to the language of their origin, knowledge of French on the part of the English speaking provinces would be very important in not only facilitating trade intercourse, but the personal and social intercourse that will tend to national homogeneity. Besides these advantages, knowledge of French is a graceful accomplishment and an aid to the deeper culture proceeding from a study of the English language. A very important part of English is based upon French as the principal medium through which Latin has been embodied in the English language. Life at its best is not found in exclusive devotion to material pursuits which are not, and should not be, an end in themselves, but the way to the culture and refinement, whose possession differentiates the highest and noblest civilization for that based on rigid utilitarianism and materialism.

FOR PURE FOOD.

The maple leaf is our national emblem, and it must be kept pure. The life blood of the maple that pushes the leaves in the spring is the source of one of the most ambrosial of products, maple syrup and maple sugar. We owe to the excellent work of the testing laboratory of the department of Inland Revenue a knowledge of the tricks of trade that enter into the exploitation of maple sugar and syrup. In March, 1906, the department tested 97 samples of syrup gathered from various localities, and the tests showed that only 18 per cent. of the samples was genuine. In May, of the same year 75 samples analysed showed 59 per cent. genuine. The analyses went on from year to year with varying results—in 1907, there was 65 per cent. of purity. In 1905, it was 87 per cent. In 1910 the per centage was 85 per cent. for March tests, while the examination of 138 samples in May showed 117 to be genuine, 4 doubtful and 17 adulterated. It will be seen that the results of the watchfulness of the department has been a general improvement in purity, and that to this extent the interests of the people are being protected. The principal value of these tests is to show that the department is taking an active and effective interest in promoting the purity of our food supply, and that makers and dealers mean much risk in practising adulteration.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The members of the Ontario Cabinet are in a pretty mess over the dubious ethics of some of its members. The question is was Mr Hanna's letter purporting to be a summary of his now notorious interview with Bishop Fallon in regard to bilingual schools, was written with a view of its becoming public through the Public Works Department.

Ward Five Conservatives in Toronto have adopted the principle always advocated by the Examiner that party politics should be eliminated as factors in municipal elections. Municipalities require good men for the discharge of public duties, without reference to their political opinions. Ward Five Conservatives have come to a wise conclusion. Public opinion, as well as public interests, demands the exclusion of party politics from municipal matters.

The Toronto News asks—"Reciprocity with the United States. Who wants it?" That is what is to be found out, and that cannot be done till we see upon which terms a treaty can be negotiated. If a treaty that will give Canada decided advantage in trade intercourse with our neighbours cannot be obtained, then Canada doesn't want reciprocity. But freedom of trade is of so much value that some examination of an authoritative character into the matter seems to be justified.

The bilingual schools controversy now raging seems to be surrounded with no little obscurity on the part of some of the principal parties concerned—the Whitney cabinet and especially Mr. Hanna and Dr. Pyne. But there is no obscurity not doubt on one point, and that is that under the management of Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, the bilingual schools of Essex deserve the condemnation of them by Bishop Fallon, as a reproach to the department, and as worse than useless as educative media. Dr Pyne's inefficiency as minister of the most important department of the government did not need this latest tribute to furnish evidence of his impossibility as an administrator.

Mr. BRODEUR'S WARNING.

(Ottawa Free Press)

The importance of the speech made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Montreal on Monday last has been responsible for the failure on the part of the press of English Canada to recognize the great value of the speech delivered by Hon. Mr Brodeur in the hour after midnight. That speech was not only a clean-cut and well-defined defence of the naval policy of the Government as a process of our national growth but it was also a warning to those who would put a ring fence around Quebec and isolate it from the rest of the Dominion. There was one striking passage in that speech which ought to be read by and to every Canadian, no matter what his language or his religion. It was this:

"For my part I absolutely—disapprove of these demagogic appeals (referring to the Bourassa campaign) and declare that those who in our country districts, in our cities, or in our educational institutions, attempt to create an anti-English sentiment are the worst enemies of the French race in this country. They are laying the basis of dissensions, which may lead our people to an abyss which will engulf all the liberties which we value so highly."

It was well that this warning should have been given. Canadians are getting along satisfactorily in their relations, one with the other, and the man who seeks to sow the seeds of dissension among them is an enemy to Canada at large, whether he be a Bourassa, a Monk, or a Sproule.

PUNISHING THE INNOCENT.

(Christian Herald)

One of the most important topics, from a humanitarian point of view, discussed at the meeting of the International Congress in Washington to consider the suppression of crime and the treatment of the criminal, is the responsibility of the authorities for the families of prisoners whose breadwinners have been taken from them for a more or less extended period. As things now stand the prisoner is well housed, fairly well fed and put at some healthful occupation which gives him some exercise and keeps his mind from giving way under the fearful monotony of his existence. His family meanwhile is thrown on its own resources and compelled to find shelter and food as best it may. It has often been the boast of our legal lights that our laws were intended to correct and punish with the least likelihood of inflicting pain upon the innocent, but in this they have lamentably failed. One proposition made recently by a student of conditions in our penal institutions seems as if it might work well in practice to relieve, in part, the misery of the prisoner's family. In all of our institutions the prisoners are put at work; in some cases are taught trades, which would bring in good wages to a man working at them under the conditions of free labour. It is proposed that the man earn his own board and lodging pay by labour, in other words what it costs the State to keep him in confinement. This having been calculated, all that he earns above this amount to be paid him, that is, if he has a family, the extra amount he earns is to be used over to them toward their support. If this were done there would be less chance of the family "going on the town" to use a familiar expression.

The prisoner's wife and children have a claim to consideration, a claim which has been hitherto ignored in a way which ought to spur our sociologists and philanthropists to devising some practical way for their relief in future.

As an enlightened nation proud of our philanthropies, we cannot escape the conviction that we have punished more than the guilty in many cases, and that so far as it can be remedied in a physical sense, it should be done.

British Navy Battle Practice This Year's Channel Manoeuvres

LONDON, OCT. 14. The ships of the fleet have completed their annual battle practice. The first division of the home fleet, including the ten Dreadnought battleships and cruisers, has completed its firing, which took place this year in the channel. Portland being used as the base. The second division of Sir William May's command had its battle practice in the Moray Firth, while the third division, which is composed of the nucleus crew vessels, was at Lamlash for the same purpose. This year it has been possible to know more exactly the time and place of the battle practice in the various units of the fleet by the movements of the cruiser set apart for the use of the Inspector of target practice and his staff. The innovation of placing an armoured ship under the orders of this officer during the battle practice season is a very natural one, and has occasioned little comment.

The Sutlej was first selected, but when the unfortunate boiler mishap occurred on board that ship, her sister, the Hogue was brought forward instead. Ten officers of lieutenant's rank have been appointed to act temporarily to assist the inspector in superintending the battle practice of the ships.

Practice Conditions Severe.

The first to finish the test this year were the Atlantic fleet vessels and although complete results are not available, it is anticipated that the final returns will not be so good as in recent years. The regulations of the practice for 1910, to quote the words of the first lord in his memorandum of March last, were "modified so as still further to assimilate the conditions of this practice to those which may be expected to obtain in action" and much greater efforts are therefore necessary in order to reach the same results as those as were obtained in 1908 and 1909.

It is significant that, with one exception, each annual memorandum issued by the first lord of the admiralty since the introduction of the new gunnery training system for the navy in 1905, has contained an announcement similar to that just quoted. The exception was in 1909, in which no revision of the rules took place, this being the year following the introduction of towed targets in place of stationary ones but in each of the other years the battle practice conditions have undergone modification and rendered them more stringent and severe.

The result of this consistent development is that battle practice in the British navy has reached a high state of perfection. Except that the ships' fire is not returned, it may be said that the conditions approximate as closely to the "real thing" as is possible in peace time. The target is not only a moving one, but the gunnery officer controlling the firing has to judge the range, the direction and the speed at which it is being towed, while all the time his own ship, at a high rate of speed follows an unknown course, which has been laid down by the flag officer acting as chief umpire.

Act at Moment's Notice.

A sketch of the course he is to steer during the firing is handed in a sealed envelope to the navigating officer, who only becomes acquainted with it just before practice actually begins, while as no other officer or man has seen this document, it is not known up to the last minute either which broadside will be brought into action or how and to what extent the range will change. The battle practice exercise is, therefore, the supreme test of the whole fighting organism of the ship and the most important item in the year's programme of fleet training, but it does not attract so much attention outside the service as the "manoeuvres" test which is held in the early part of the year, or the grand manoeuvres of the summer. The comparative results are compiled at the Admiralty by a secret system of "marks" and the reports which appear in the papers of records being made on this or that ship in target practice refer not to the annual battle practice, but to its preliminary exercise, which is known as the "run-layers' test. In addition to these two practices squadron flag is now carried out periodically, and night firing has come into greater prominence during the last two or three years.

Await Result of Practice.

It remains to be seen whether when all the ships have completed their battle practices, the percentage of points will compare favourably with that obtained last year, even though the conditions have been altered. If rumor is to be believed, the Dreadnoughts in the home fleet have done no better than those ships in the Atlantic fleet, which have been referred to. The King Edward class have not all completed battle practice, these vessels comprising the second division of the home fleet, whose practice only began after the arrival of the Hogue with the inspector of target practice at Invergordon on Sept. 1.

Admiral Percy will afterward proceed to the Mediterranean to superintend the battle practice of the ships in the middle sea, an arrangement which insures uniformity and accuracy in the marking of the firing. It has not been possible to bring the system in force into the system, and, therefore, separate committees are formed for the firing of the vessels of the China, East Indies and Australian squadrons.

FAVOURABLE CONDITIONS IN CEMENT BUSINESS

In dealing with the changes effected in the cement industry by reason of the merger formed in August of last year, "Construction" has some interesting comments. "It is gratifying," it points out, "to note that the merger has made good its promises and kept faith with both consumer and independent manufacturer alike. The conditions under which cement is sold in Canada to-day, may be termed most favourable. Because of the stability of prices, the architect and engineer are safe in making their estimates, the contractor is given a standard product at a reasonably fair cost, plus a minimum freight rate, made possible through following the natural laws of commerce. The general public is being served through the undoubted future increase in the adoption of cement as a structural element in the place of inflammable and unstable materials, promoted through the systematic campaigns of instruction now being carried on by both sections of the industry.

"Constructional development and improvement is and will continue to be in Canada for some years to come, one of the greatest factors in our growth. Cement has become as indispensable in structural work of every character and type as are the hands of the labourer who does the work, and an ambitious country will not tolerate a monopoly in a material so universally used in both public work and private enterprise."

THE STORY OF HIS LIFE

The closing service of the successful evangelistic campaign, which has been conducted by Dr. Sam Luttrell, will take place to-night, when Dr. Luttrell will tell the story of his life, and rescue from a drunkard's grave.

To the man who is down and out by drink, to the man who is discouraged in life's battle, to the man who has honestly tried and miserably failed to overcome the drink habit and dope; the doctor's story will come as an evangel of hope. A free-will offering will be taken. Everybody will find a welcome. Come, brother, come.

ATHLETICS COP SECOND GAME IN EASY FASHION

Chance's Men Scored One in the First Through Coombs' Wildness and Strunk's Error---Athletics Came Back With a Brace of Counters in Third on Daring Base Running and Collins' Two Bagger---Brown Pitching Against Coombs---Cubs Had Three on Bases in the Fifth, but a Great Throw to the Plate Saved a Score.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 17. [illegible] Chief Bender to the [illegible] and [illegible] he will not be in the box [illegible] the game this afternoon and the Chicago Cubs are entitled to [illegible] victory. Manager Chance had his [illegible] added at them before today, [illegible] a little batting rally and [illegible] consolation, advising them to [illegible] they were trying to [illegible] cleared out in the [illegible] the box [illegible] to-day. The [illegible] will be [illegible] and Lapp for the Athletics, and Brown and Kling for the Cubs. The betting this morning was [illegible] to 10 in favor of the Athletics, the same odds as yesterday, but the odds [illegible] round Joe Kelley, J. J. McCaffery, Ed Barrow and other Connie Mack's who saw the game to-day, [illegible] think the Athletics may win [illegible] to-day.

Presentation to Cobb.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 17. The feature of the opening ceremonies to-day was the presentation of an automobile to Ty. Cobb, as the champion batsman of America.

There was also a machine for Larry Lajoie, as runner up, but he was not on hand to receive it as he [illegible].

The crowd was not quite as large as on the opening day. As was anticipated the opposing pitchers were Mordecai Brown, for the Cubs, and Jack Coombs for the Athletics.

Midsummer weather again prevailed.

First Innings.

Chicago—Coombs was as wild as a hawk in the first innings. He had tremendous speed, but had difficulty in controlling it. A base on balls to Schulte blossomed into a run, as it was followed by another chivalry. Strunk made a wooden-headed play when he threw the ball home, instead of to third, and there were runners on second and third, when Coombs pulled himself together and fanned Steinfeldt.—One run.

Athletics—Brown got off to a better start. He fanned Strunk, who struck at a wild pitch on the third strike, but Kling recovered the ball in time to get him at first. Baker, the hero in batting on the opening day, had a chance to score a run, but his best was a grounder to the pitcher.

Second Innings.

A muffed throw by Davis gave Tinker a life in the second, but on an attempted hit and run play Kling drove a sharp low liner to Collins, who scooped Tinker without an effort. Collins' play made a beautiful [illegible] on Brown's [illegible] grounder.

The Cubs also pulled off a double play in the [illegible] after Murphy had walked. Tinker rapping Barry's [illegible] and completing a double to Chance, after touching second himself.

Third Innings.

Cubs—A [illegible] hand stab by Thomas of a wild pitch, prevented the Cubs from scoring in the third. There were two on [illegible] the time by [illegible] of a charity and another muff by Davis of Coombs' throw of a hunted ball. Hoffman popped to Davis, [illegible] attempting to hunt, and with Chance at bat, Coombs pitched outside and low. Thomas made a dive for the ball and picked it out of the dirt with his bare hand. Coombs then fanned Chance, and Lord took Zimmerman's low fly to left. No runs.

Athletics—The Athletics scored two runs in the third, the second being due to daring base running by Lord, who scored from first on Collins' two-bagger, down the left field line, though Sheckard's throw was bounding to Steinfeldt when Lord turned third. Steinfeldt never thought that Lord would attempt to go home, so he played ball leisurely and was the most astonished man on the field when Lord scored. An error by Brown on a bunted ball gave the Athletics a chance to get in a scoring position and Collins had three and two on him, when he smashed the ball that scored the two runs.

4th Innings.

Cubs—In the fourth Tinker singled for Chicago, but Thomas caught him stealing with a perfect throw. The crowd was put into perfect good humour when Coombs fanned Kling for third out.

A spectacular stop and throw by Tinker cut Davis out of a hit in the Athletics half. Barry hit one almost in the same spot a moment later but the ball took a bad bound and got away from Tinker. Thomas followed with a clear drive to right, advancing Barry to third, but Brown tightened up and fanned Coombs for the second time. No runs.

Fifth Innings.

Cubs—The wildest enthusiasm prevailed in the fifth, when a great throw to the plate by Murphy, the Athletics' right fielder, completed a double play and prevented the Cubs from scoring. Cubs had three on bases and one out at the time, due to faulty work by Coombs, who failed to field bunt of Brown and Sheckard, and then passed Hoffman. Chance, the Chicago manager, drove a high fly to right and Murphy bagged and threw with perfect aim, getting Brown sliding into the plate. It was a great finish to the innings, but hard luck for the Cubs—No runs.

Athletics—The crowd nearly went wild in the Athletics half, when Collins stole second on Kling, beating the Chicago catcher's accurate throw by a beautiful slide under Tinker. Baker then walked and there was another hilarious spasm of joy when Davis came through with a single to left, scoring Collins, who had no authority leaving Sheckard's throw to the plate. One run.

Sixth Innings.

Cubs—Peppery Collins again loomed up large in the limelight in the sixth inning. After Zimmerman had walked, Steinfeldt made an apparently safe hit towards second, Collins made a catch while off his balance, but with a wonderful throw doubled Zimmerman up to Davis. The value of this play was enhanced when Tinker, the next batter, drove the ball into the left field crowd for two bases, which accordingly went to Austin. No runs.

Athletics—The Athletics had runners on first and third in their half of the sixth on a walk to Thomas, and safety by Coombs, whose grounder bounded over the head of Zimmerman, who was all set for the ball. They didn't score, however. Kling saving a wild pitch with a great [illegible] stop and Brown fanned. Strunk for the third time, after which Lord fouled to Chance. No runs.

Seventh Innings.

Cubs—The Cubs scored their second run in the seventh on Tinker's double to the crowd in right, a walk to Hoffman and Chance's safety to centre. Collins squelched any further run getting by nabbing Zimmerman's hard hit ball and forcing Chance out at second. One run.

Athletics—Athletics came back in their half and clinched the game by a splendid exhibition of heavy hitting. Collins, the impossible started all trouble by working Brown for a pass. He then [illegible] up and down on the base line and Brown tried in vain to catch an [illegible]. Baker finally sent him to first with a lucky single to right, and Davis scored him with a double into the [illegible] crowd. Baker and Davis [illegible] on Murphy's grounder to the same spot Barry sacrificed and then Thomas made his third hit, scoring Murphy. Coombs was the next victim but Strunk, who had fanned three times before, tore off a double down the first base line, scoring Thomas. The rout of the Cubs was complete when Sheckard [illegible] on by muffed Lord's fly to left. Strunk scoring. Kling ended the inning by getting Lord as he attempted to steal. Six runs.

8th Innings.

The Cubs got three men on bases in the eighth, but could not score. Steinfeldt doubled to left as a starter. Kling walked and Beaumont, who batted for Brown, struck out. Sheckard drew a base on balls and when Schulte popped high one in the centre of the diamond, Collins was the man to make the put-out.

Collins was first man up for the Athletics to face Ritchie, who succeeded Brown, and promptly made good again with a double into the crowd, in right, but failed to score as the next three batters failed to hit out of the infield.

Ninth Innings.

Cubs—Cubs scored run in the ninth on Hoffman's single, an infield out and Zimmerman's double to left. Unquestionably the feature of the game was the brilliant offensive and defensive work of Eddie Collins, a young second baseman of the Athletics. His all round laying was a revelation to the thousands of visitors. The Athletics batted Brown off the rubber, hitting his delivery steadily. From the third innings, Coombs was not much better, but the luck broke for him and his team mates not only gave him admirable support, but also bit opportunely.

By innings—

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chicago | 1 | 0 | 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 | 3 | 7 | 2 |

Batteries—Brown, Richie, and King, Coombs and Thomas.

Umpires—Rigler and Sheridan. Time, 2.24.

The official attendance and receipts of to-day's game were announced as follows by the National commission: Attendance 24,597. Total receipts, $35,137. Players' share $18,973.08. Cubs' share, $12,649.30. National commission's share $3,513.70.

A WARM ROAST FOR CHAMPION TY COBB

"The Town in Review" man in the New York Telegraph says of the batting championship:—

President Ban Johnson declares that Ty Cobb is batting champion of his league and that Lajoie comes second. He says Cobb wins by this remarkable fraction, .0009. Inasmuch as batting averages are always in three figures I should say, according to the Johnson figures, that the men were a tie at .384. According to the unofficial figures all over the country Lajoie is ahead of Cobb, and unofficial figures are as good as official ones any day. I suppose Johnson's say-so will go with Detroit and members of the American League, but it does not go with me and it does not go in this city. We believe that Lajoie won the batting championship by three points, and have the figures to prove it.

Baseball fans touted for Lajoie all over the circuit. Cobb is not regarded as the sportsman that the Cleveland second baseman is. The batting contest was bet a valuable automobile and about a month before the season closed Cobb found himself with a clear lead of several points. Having ascertained the fact, Mr. Cobb developed a mysterious eye trouble and quit playing. Mr. Lajoie buckled down to his batting work and passed Cobb. Then Tyrus' eyes healed up with marvellous quickness and it was announced that nothing had been the matter anyways. He had had a cinder in his eye. Then he passed Lajoie again and promptly quit playing. Lajoie, according to the belief of the fans, passed Cobb during the last week of the race. The Cleveland man has made himself popular all over by sticking to his job, average or no average, but you cannot make any one believe that Cobb did not quit because he was afraid he would fall back.

Cobb made, according to Johnson's figures, 196 hits, and Lajoie made 227. Lajoie stood up like a man and played in about twenty more games than Cobb did. I think Johnson better look over those figures again and give us some in which we can take more stock.

APPRECIATION OF O.O.R.

London Dispatch Writer Liked the Canadian Boys.

Part of this week my lot has fallen in pleasant places, says a writer in The London Weekly Dispatch. I have been living with the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada. They are a very fine body of men. They might, in fact, be our Queen's Westminsters with an American accent. The accent is all they have got which associates them with the United States. I have never imagined that it was possible to hate a Yankee as much as these fellow-subjects of ours do. To suggest annexation to the States is to run the chance of "bayonet, get it in your innards," as Drummer Low said to the Afghan. The regiment is one with traditions dating back over fifty years. As it is a rifle regiment, it carries no flag, otherwise it would have at least four honors upon the colors.

Colonel Sir Henry Pellatt is a fine man, who is devoted to his regiment, where he served for years in the ranks. He told me that he does not wish people to think he is an overwhelmingly rich man. He is spending $100,000 out of his store because he loves his men, his colony, and Great Britain. He is the head of a big firm of brokers in Toronto.

The men are keen to learn and have much to pick up. The notion of one man being as good as another which is sheer nonsense which has arisen through close neighborhood with the United States leads them to be less disciplined than is a British territorial regiment of the same class. They obey their officers smartly enough, but no battalion is good until it heeds even the whispered behests of its non-commissioned officers. I dislike intensely to hear a sergeant casually say to a private, "Ain't you going to fall in on this parade?" and the private respond, "Why certainly." The men will, when once they are away fighting check by jowl on manoeuvres with the Buffs or the Faugh-a-Ballagha (which latter means "Clear the way") and see the Regular sergeants at work begin to realize how vital it is to jump to the commands of their N.C.O.'s.

They have a strong element of the Scot in them. One of the most interesting men I've met for a long time is old Sergeant Ellingsworth, who is spending the week-end amid the scenes of his youth at Edinburgh and Glasgow, when he was a gay young soldier of the famous 93rd. He has been out of the army for forty-seven years, but ever since emigrating to Canada he has been with the Queen's Own, and they are proud to have the sturdy, self-reliant old man with them. He still has fire, and takes pride in Canada and Great Britain, and above all in his soldiering. We gossipped a day or two ago in his tent, a few of us, on his career. He had not only soldiered in the Crimea and in India, but he is one of the few men who remain who have journeyed from Paris to Marseilles by road in a carriage in the days when there was no other way of doing it. He was traveling with one of his officers.

Now he made one of the famous "thin red line" which on a certain occasion did the impossible in the Crimea. He has the bar on his medal for Sebastopol. He went to India, and his medal bears "Relief of Lucknow" and "Lucknow." Yet of actual fighting it is difficult to get him to talk. He will insist that the 93rd were the first at the relief of Lucknow, but as for feelings, fancies, mental attitudes in general you will learn nothing. A young Canadian ventured the question: "Sergeant, were you ever aware that you killed a man?" "Weel, laddie," said the old warrior, "I was never conscious that I killed anybody in the Crimea, but I wish I had a pound for every one I stickit in India. We didna' care. We just drave the bayonet in them. I dinna think you can understan' what Cawnpore meant to us. That was a terrible time." It is not often that one can get so much from a man who has engaged in the dread arbitrament of battle.

The Poet MacLachlan.

Alexander MacLachlan was a Canadian poet, whose writings were attracting much admiration fifty years ago. He was born in Scotland in 1820, and though without any advantages of rank and fortune, and apprenticed to a tailor, he was a voracious reader, and soon familiarized himself with the works of the principal British authors. Several of his poems appeared in volumes published by him in 1858 and following years. He contributed very materially to the establishment of a national literature in Canada. His chief aim as a poet was to be considered the exponent of the views of the working classes of the country. In this effort, it has been claimed that he stands shoulder to shoulder with such men as Burns and Miller, while a proof of the excellence and popularity of his verse is to be found in the fact that he was the winner of the prize offered by The Glasgow Workman for a national song for the Scot.

Butterflies Which Migrate.

Everybody knows the great orange red butterflies with bold black bands and white dots that come sailing along by the thousands in the autumn. But it is not everyone who knows that they migrate like the birds in the fall, flying all the way from Canada to Cuba and taking other long flights so that they get into the sunny south for the winter. They have extraordinary power on the wing and have been seen flying at sea 500 miles from land.

Vast flocks of hundreds of thousands on their way southward settle on trees and bushes like a swarm of bees, and as they are pretty much the color of certain autumn foliage you might easily pass their roosting place without noticing them. They rest for the night and are off in the morning as soon as their wings are dry.

Strictly speaking, there is nothing that is imporous. Glass has a very small degree of porosity.

An Accommodating Chemist.

Chemist (to poor woman)—You must take this medicine three times a day after meals.

Patient—But, sir, I seldom get meals these 'ard times.

NO DYSPEPSIA OR UNDIGESTED FOOD

Heartburn, Gas, Headache and all Stomach Distress Vanishes

There would not be a case of indigestion here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort and relieve the sourest, acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, Nauseous odours from the breath.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on each 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily understand why this promptly cures Indigestion and removes such symptoms as Heartburn, a feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, Belching of Gas and Eructations of undigested food, water brash, Nausea, Headache, Biliousness and many other bad symptoms; and, besides, keep your stomach liver and intestines, you will not need laxatives to times clean and fresh.

If your Stomach is sour and full of Gas, or your food doesn't digest, and your meals don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case from your druggist and make life worth living? Absolute relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and, besides, one case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Diapepsin which will always, either at daytime or during night, relieve your stomach misery and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of little Earle Irwin who departed this life on Sept 6th, 1910:

Oh, sad and lonely is our home,
The long, long weary days,
Life seems but just a heavy load
Since Earle went away.

In early youth God called him home,
We know His ways are best,
That up in heaven our darling's safe
Forever with the blest.

But, oh, the empty, aching void
That's left within our home
Since death's cold hand was laid upon
Our Earle for the tomb.

We loved him, yes we loved him,
But Jesus loved him more,
And so he sweetly called him
To yonder shining shore.

The pearly gates were opened,
A gentle voice said come,
And with farewells unspoken
He calmly entered home.

There was an angel band in heaven
That was not quite complete,
So God took your little Earle
To fill the vacant seat.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

LOOK, I've made the biggest hole," announced a shrill childish voice.

"You haven't either. Just stick your head in mine and see if it don't go in much further," responded a softer one.

Pause, while the shrill voice experimented.

Then "Yes, but I bet I can make a deeper one still."

Thereat the shrill voice dug a determined heel into the soft concrete, and from the appearance of the tremendous gouge that she produced, I should say she amply made good her bet.

That was a little scene that I witnessed some six months ago.

To-day, when I passed down the same street and saw the gouges of those competing heels still there and always to be there as long as the concrete lasts, I smiled and then sighed.

Destructiveness is a natural instinct of childhood, of course, but it seems to me it ought to be possible for parents to curb it somewhat more than they do.

Of course, the mothers of those children were not present to forbid at the time their daughters marred the new sidewalk, but if those girls had had a good training in respecting the property rights of others I think they would have done their own forbidding.

Near where I once lived was a beautiful observatory which a philanthropic gentleman had built and thrown open to the public. Despite many signs and notices especially requesting his guests not to mar the structure, it has been so covered with scrawls by that class of people who like to see their names as well as their faces oft appear in public places you doubtless know what class that is—that the structure is very much defaced. I was told recently that the philanthropic gentleman was so mehenant ata this metatitude that he is thinking of closing the observatory, and I certainly don't blame him one bit.

Imagine the home training or rather the lack of it the children who thus disregarded the gentleman's request must have had.

"The necessity of teaching children the importance of abstaining from using their head pencils of various colours on every building and fence to and from school" is another matter I have been asked to speak about.

All these things are manifestations of one fault an improper appreciation of the rights and privileges of others and a habit of regarding successful and unpunished infringement upon such rights as a clever joke.

In that attitude it seems to me lies the root of all the trouble.

If you thoroughly impress upon your child, by object lessons at the expense of his own property if necessary that there is nothing either funny or clever about damaging anyone's property, you will have given him a habit of thought that will probably keep him from all forms of our American vice-vandalism.

Ruth Cameron

"Labour's" Liberal Views Upon Value Of Technical Education

To the Editor of The Examiner:

The commission appointed to hold sittings in the various towns upon the above subject, certainly brought out in evidence at their sitting here a question or two in which there is open a great field for expression of opinion as regards our educational system.

I would like, with your permission, Mr. Editor, to express my views upon the subject, and in doing so will be as brief as possible, not wishing to take up too much space in your paper. In the first place is our present system of education producing such results as it was intended it should do? I say it is not, not perhaps that the whole of the education act is in fault, but rather that it is not carried out as it should be.

I hold that our system should be so thorough that a boy or girl on leaving our public schools should be so thoroughly equipped that he or she would be able to hold his or her own in the great battle of life, against all comers, for according to statistics, 75 p.c. of our children finish their education in the public school, not entering our High schools or Collegiate Institutes, not perhaps through any fault of their own, but simply because, as it present, our age at which a child may leave school is fixed at fourteen, and in many instances the parents are not in a position to keep him at school till he passed in our high school.

Now, I ask, how is this state of thing to be remedied? One way is that advocated by several of the gentlemen that gave evidence at that commission. That is, the making of the leaving age sixteen years or fifteen years instead of as at present, fourteen, and seeing that they are kept at school till they are that age.

The present tendency is as soon as the boy or girl reaches the age of fourteen many of the parents are not, as I said before, earning sufficient to keep them at school, but they have at that age to get out and earn something, in many instances to help keep the home and family together, never thinking that in so doing they are not acting in the best interest of the boy for, depend upon it, as the age for competition goes on, that boy when he grows into manhood, will be in just as bad a position, or perhaps worse, than his parents. They say send them to night schools, but I say anybody working around a factory for ten hours a day, is not in a fit state to take on subjects of education. He wants education; refuse him that, and you are going to attempt to put an old head upon young shoulders, and instead of in after life looking upon work as a pleasant duty, he will develop into nothing short of a white slave.

One gentleman in giving his evidence, said in a certain line it was impossible to get skilled mechanics in Canada. The German workman was more thorough. It must be understood that in Germany every boy learns a trade of some kind by the apprenticeship system, which is dying out in this country.

To-day the inventive genius of one man's brain brings into effect some piece of machinery that does the work that some years ago took the skilled mechanic to perform. To-day that machine may be, and is in many instances, worked by unskilled labour. I mean by men that have not learned a trade, but simply come into our factories and close out the mechanic, simply because he in many cases works cheaper. It must be remembered that to-day we are living in an age of the keenest competition, an age when labour is bought at the lowest price possible and its products sold at the highest market, all of which is doing away with the learning of a trade.

Another reason for the apprentice system lying out is the same as mentioned as regards the keeping of children at school. The average boy when he starts out looks only at the present, not for the future. He sees men earning as much digging our sewers as some are good workers at a trade, and he naturally seeks for the easiest dollar, let the future take care of itself.

Now, I will not say I am heartily in favor of free technical education, but how and where to get it be the difficulty. In any scheme the question must be considered. To go back to the school age and keep our boys at school till they have reached the age of sixteen, but at the age of fourteen when his mind is in a fit state for developing, give him the rudimentary lessons in technical education and naturally, it he has a tendency that way, he will push forward and will be eager to add to his knowledge so that he will look forward to being something more than a mere hewer of wood or drawer of water, and if he has that inclination, and it would be easily seen, then foster the idea and there is nothing that will stop him from pressing forward to obtain the highest knowledge that is going.

The effects of this class or kind of education may not be seen at once, but depend upon it, I have faith enough in the youth of this Dominion, that the time will come when we shall have just as good workmen in this country, skilled or unskilled, as any other country.

One more remark and I am through. That is this. Drum into our children that life is worth living; look forward and upward and that as the great American poet has said "to aim at not being as dumb driven cattle, but to aspire and look forward to one day being able to say, I can take my place among the best of men and I can command my wage."

Yours respectfully,
LABOUR.

KETCHEL'S MURDERER TRAPPED IN FARM HOUSE

with all the luxuries he could earn with the courage that was bred in his home and muscle.

TELEGRAMS FROM HOME

Ketchel's parents live at Belmont, Mich., on a farm. On the eve of every ring contest in which he has played an important part, the fighter had always received a telegram from his mother, and he had often said he could never put any real strength of purpose in his work until he had read that message from home. Just before he stepped into the ring in most of his big fights Ketchel's thoughts of his home folk have often brought tears to his eyes. To the amazement of friends who were unfamiliar with the pardonable weakness. His engagement with Mike (Twin) Sullivan was postponed for half an hour until he could quiet down from the parcels sentimental attack upon his nerves. The same thing happened in his fight with Johnson.

Ketchel told the writer afterward that no one could understand his mental suffering before the end of the first round. After that he was calm, and able to fight all night long.

Ketchel's mother was the author of as pretty a piece of sentiment as was ever known in a rough occupation. She always wanted her sons fights to be declared a draw, because there was another mother on the telephone waiting to hear from another boy.

Contrary to the popular notion Ketchel was extremely fond of the country life. He could have lived on his ranch all the time if he had not been anxious to provide for the comfort of his home folk. He invested all his money in farm lands and at the time of his death owned 80 acres at Belmont, Mich., besides his ranch and timber lands in Missouri. The farm at Belmont is equipped with the most modern machinery for tilling the soil and for turning the products of the dairy into the quickest financial account. The best cattle in the State roam the Ketchel pastures.

CALUMNISE OF THE CRAFT

Ketchel was not habitually a drinking man. Newspapers all over the country have published lurid stories of his career of dissipation, when as a matter of fact he was hundreds of miles away from the place of his supposed debauch.

There was never a gamer boy to step into the roped arena. Few spectators of prizefights will venture to dispute this statement.

Ketchel was well known for his generosity in money and in business. He made $18,000 from the time he fought Klaus in Pittsburg eight months ago up to the Jim Smith fight, and out of that sum he sent $7,000 home.

BROKE WHEN HE LEFT HERE

Ketchel left New York on August 25. He was practically broke. His hotel bill at the Bachelor was $500 for three weeks, and $300 on that amount was cash advanced to him and given away in response to hard luck stories.

He received on an average of two letters a day the year round from persons who wanted to borrow money. If he knew them he would immediately remit, unless the correspondent was a notorious beggar.

Ketchel was never known to vilify any one he ever fought. On the contrary, he was always ready to attribute to any antagonist some good trait of character or physique. He was not the kind to say, "I'll take his number in three rounds," etc.

Over a year ago Ketchel accidentally shot "Pete the Goat," one of his rubbers, in the leg. It happened in training quarters, and Pete has been a pensioner ever since. Ketchel paid the expenses of his entire crew to the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno, the trip costing him $3,300 and the loss of his middleweight championship belt, which was stolen in San Francisco the night before he left there for the scene of the big fight.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Mr. Wm. Franklin Dilly, the business manager of "The Alaskan", the big musical comedy which appears at the Grand a week from to-day, was in the city to-day in the interests of that production. "The Alaskan" will be one of the biggest musical plays to be seen here this season and should do capacity business if its reception at His Majesty's theatre, Montreal, can be taken as a criterion.

"A WINNING MISS"

"A winning Miss" proved to the entire satisfaction of a fairly large audience at the Grand last night that the title is not a misnomer. With a capable cast of principals, a pretty, beautifully gowned and well-trained chorus, elaborate scenic and electrical effects, an abundance of catchy if somewhat reminiscent music and constant stream of bright lines, the musical comedy proved a winner indeed. There is not a dull moment in the production, everything new and novel and last night's audience was most agreeably surprised. There was nothing startlingly original in the plot but then who cares anything about the plot of a musical show. It was enough to introduce a half dozen funny characters and to interpolate some clever specialties and that is all that could be expected.

Max Bloom, the comedian, made his first appearance here last night and after this we are for Max. He is a hard worker, gets everything over in splendid style and his very speech is a laugh. Miss Lorraine Lester in the title role was about as winsome and dainty a little bit of femininity as has ever sparkled behind the Grand footlights and sang and danced herself into popular favour without any trouble. The supporting cast was clever and capable. J. E. Coglan was very funny as "Capt. McGinty", formerly of the good ship "Nancy Lee", and introduced a clever dance on roller skates that made a big hit. Miss Hattie De Von as Anastasia, a Danville young lady with ambitions to shine in the "legit" kept any one from dropping to sleep. Her song "What I Want is Dreamy Music" with a burlesque of Anna Held and Eva Tanguay was a "scream". Some of the musical numbers were catchy. Mr. Backus was prominent among the vocalists, his work in "The Land of To-morrow" and "Eve" being well received. The latter song drew half a dozen encores. Other tuneful numbers were "Keep on Smiling", "That Would Look Nice in My Bungalow", and "Mean Thing". The chorus numbers, "Hello, Yankee Land", and "Glow-worm and Fire-fly" are entitled to a tribute as well.

"A Winning Miss", is a bright, clean, amusing little show and would be welcomed back again.

Next attractions at the Grand: Henry E. Dixey in the most successful English farce comedy, "The Naked Truth", Wednesday, Oct. 19th. Richard F. Carroll in the big musical comedy "The Alaskan", on Thursday, Oct. 25th.

WEDDING BELLS

MATCHETT—SPEARS.

One of the prettiest of mid-October weddings was solemnized this afternoon at half past one at the home of Mr. John Spears, 173 Hunter street east, when his youngest sister, Miss Mary Spears, was united in the holy bonds of marriage to Mr. Stanley Matchett, also of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Coon, pastor of Mark street Methodist church in the presence of about thirty invited guests. To the strains of the wedding march played by the bride's niece, Miss Reta Gaskins, the bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her brother, who gave her away, and took her place beneath a wedding bell suspended from the ceiling. The room was attractively decorated with pretty tinted autumn leaves and vines, with here and there clusters of red berries. The bride looked charming in a dress of white silk crepe de chene with applique trimmings. She wore the customary veil caught up with lilies of the valley and carried a shower of white mums. The only attendant was the bride's little niece, Miss Wilhelmine Gaskins, who carried the ring in a basket of flowers, and looked very pretty in a gown of white point d'esprit. After the ceremony and hearty congratulations had been bestowed on the young couple, the guests sat down to a sumptuous repast. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents, among them several from the congregation of Mark street church, where she had been actively engaged in the work of the church. Among the were a handsome chair from the Women's Missionary Society and Ladies Aid and a silver chafing dish from the choir and the Epworth League, and also some handsome silver from her Sunday school class. The bride also received several cheques among them being one for fifty dollars from Mr. Geo. Webber and Sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Matchett left on the 1.38 train for Toronto and Hamilton, where they will spend their honeymoon with friends and on their return they will take up their residence at 181 Mark street. The bride travelled in a tailored suit of blue serge with tan trimmings and hat to match.

CAMPBELL—JOHNSTON.

A very quiet but pretty home wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mrs. James Campbell, Chandos, on Sept. 28th, when her eldest son, James W. was united in marriage to Miss Violet Johnson, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Johnson, also of Chandos. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Mr. Lord, of Apsley. To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Olga Littledale, the bridal party entered the parlour, where the immediate relatives and friends of the bride and groom were assembled to witness the ceremony. The young bride was gowned in pure white of soft clinging texture with trimmings of white satin and lace, and looked very sweet. The charming young bridesmaid, Miss Martha Campbell, daughter of Mr. D. S. Campbell, ex-reeve of Chandos, was attired in soft pale blue silk with lace trimmings.

The groom was attended by Mr. Willard Johnson, brother of the bride. After congratulations the bridal party led the way to the dining room, where the wedding banquet was spread. The feast of good things was enjoyed, the bride was toasted, her health drunk, and "she's a jolly good fellow" rendered very heartily, after which Mr. D. S. Campbell proposed the health of the groom.

In the evening a reception was held, when the happy couple were the recipients of the congratulations and good wishes of a large circle of friends. The presents to the bride were very many, very pretty and useful.

DETCHER-LEESON

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, 215 Reid Street at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when Mr. G. A. Detcher, third son of the late Jos. Detcher, 689 Harvey Street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Annie V. Leeson, youngest daughter of Mrs. Wm. Leeson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. Couch, pastor of George Street church, before an embankment of palms. The young couple were unattended. The bride was attired in a beautiful travelling suit of navy blue broadcloth. After the ceremony a sumptuous repast was served after which Mr. and Mrs. Detcher left on the 1.38 C.P.R. train for Toronto and London.

The wedding was of a private nature, only a few intimate friends being present. The young couple receive the heartiest congratulations and best wishes of a large circle of friends.

WAS UP AGAINST A HARD COMBINATION

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Vanquished Them All

Sundridge Man Suffering From Gravel, Diabetes and Dropsy Finds an Easy and Complete Cure.

Sundridge, Ont., Oct. 17.—(Special.)—Gravel, Diabetes and Dropsy are a terrible combination for one man to have. It means that his life is in the gravest danger, unless like George Vanhooser, a well-known resident of this place he finds the simple and natural cure. Here is the story Mr. Vanhooser tells, and all his neighbours know every word of it is true:

"I had pains in my back and across the loins. My stomach would swell. I was constipated and I had sharp cutting pains in my bladder, which made me sure that I was suffering from the terrible Gravel. The doctor attended me, but I kept getting worse every day.

"Others had told me of the great good Dodd's Kidney Pills had done them and I determined to try them. Six boxes made a new man of me."

Gravel, Dropsy and Diabetes are all other Kidney Diseases or are caused by diseased Kidneys. The easy and natural way to cure them is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They never fail to cure any form of Kidney Disease.

IS LEAVING CITY

Another of Peterborough's young men is stepping to the front, in the person of Mr. Josh Gamble, who has been employed with the Higgins Hardware Company, and has resigned his position to accept a position in Brockville with A. G. Dobbie & Co. Mr. Gamble will commence his duties at once. He will be missed in local circles as he was associated with church work, being librarian in Mark street Sunday school. We wish Mr. Gamble great success in his new field of labour.

WELL KNOWN MINISTER

Restored to Health by Vinol

Rev. D. Schneider, who is a well-known minister in Rice Lake, Wis., writes:

"I had a very severe stomach trouble last year from which I was kept in bed three months. I had engaged the services of a doctor but to no avail. I then read of Vinol and determined to try a bottle. Before it was used up I was out of bed, and four bottles made me a well man. Vinol is a splendid medicine and I can gladly recommend it."

Prominent men from all over the country do not hesitate to indorse this wonderful tonic.

For twelve years Vinol has been sold on the "money back" plan and every year strengthens its popularity and proves by continued tests that it will do what we claim for it. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

NARROW ESCAPE

John Heffernan, who is employed on the work of the new Smith street bridge, had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday, quickness of action on the part of Mr. Michael Conroy averting a possible fatality. Mr. Heffernan caught his toe on a nail and fell into the river. Mr. Conroy, however, went to his assistance and the victim of the accident was gotten out on to a raft.

PALE, ANAEMIC GIRLS

The languid, semi-invalid girl is no longer popular. Firm flesh, rounded form and a healthy glow to the complexion are the results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Mrs. Goodson, 104 Sebastopol Street, Montreal, Que., writes: "My daughter's appetite was bad and she was pale and bloodless. Since using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food there is a marked change in her condition. She is stronger and healthier in every way."

ROD AND GUN

Big game hunting is to the fore in the October issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., and sportsmen intending to try their fortunes in the woods this season will find the number particularly attractive. Moose, deer, grizzlies, mountain lions and wolves are all told about and both stories and illustrations are bound to find responsive echoes with all hunters. In each case the experiences related are personal and therefore far more interesting than any imaginary tales. In addition to big game stories there are numerous attractive papers dealing with other phases of outdoor life and both the east and west of Canada receive attention in this way. A finely illustrated account of the Dominion trapshooting meet at Montreal is included. Canadian sportsmen may take up this issue, confident of finding within its pages something to interest them whatever may be their particular inclination in matters of sport. The variety of ground covered is remarkable and probably accounts for the continued and wide interest aroused by the Magazine in the sporting advantages and possibilities of Canada.

FOLLOWS WOMEN

Tall Man With Black Moustache Will Get Into Trouble

Somewhere in Peterborough there is a tall man with a black moustache who is laying himself open for a considerable amount of trouble. Last night he frightened a lady residing on Willis street, by closely following her from Bethune street to her home and then loitering around in the neighbourhood. Other complaints have been made in regard to this individual, who had better be careful in the future.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Mrs. L. Russell of Buffalo, N.Y., is staying at the National.

Mrs. Walter Paterson and daughter Mary, of Milwaukee, Wis., are visiting at the home of the former's sister, Miss Jean Menzies, 270 Sherbrooke street.

Miss Gertrude Primeau of Toronto, who has been confined to her home of Driscoll Terrace, through illness, her many friends will be pleased to know, has fully recovered.

Mr. P. J. Lynch, General Manager of the Grand Trunk, in company with Mr. Bibby, General Roadmaster, was in the city today in his private car. They both left this afternoon.

Mr. F. Haskill this morning took charge of the Lindsay-Belleville passenger train. Every other day Mr. Haskill will take the passenger train running from Lindsay to Port Hope via the old road.

Dr. P. MacNaughton, who has been assistant physician at the hospital for Insane, Monteo, is being transferred to the Hospital for Insane at Brockville, November 1st, as Assistant Superintendent. This is a well earned promotion and his friends in and around Peterborough will be pleased to know this.

This morning Miss Lavina Halliban, upstairs, went to Toronto to enter exclusively upon vocal study. It is probable that she will remain in Toronto for the present season, to undertake concert work and also solo work in some church choir in connection with her musical studies, and probably in the spring she will go to New York to study under Lamberch a noted vocal teacher. Miss Halliban's hundreds of friends in Peterborough and elsewhere will follow her future with interest and warmest wishes for success. Such success cannot be doubtful if Miss Halliban is fortunate in securing instructors that will contribute to giving artistic expression to the splendid natural qualities of her voice and develop in the right direction her warm musical temperament and interpretative instinct.

Cont. Coombes Denies Resignation.

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Press despatches from Yesterday saw Commissioner Coombes, head of the Salvation Army in Canada, relative to a C. P. R. despatch concerning him. He stated that the statement that he had resigned is incorrect.

As an evidence of this he is now engaged in arranging a tour to the coast with Col. Lamb of international headquarters, England, who has just arrived in this country on his annual visit in the interests of immigration and colonization. His going is said the more necessary by the recent resignation of Col. Howell to take up a position with the C. N. R.

It is, however, true that the commissioner has suffered a breakdown in health, and will not be able to conduct public meetings for some time to come, although it is hoped by all his friends that he will soon be himself again.

Baptist Convention.

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Over 500 delegates are expected in the city to-day to attend the twenty-second annual convention of the Baptist churches of Ontario and Quebec, which will be held in the Bloor street Baptist Church, commencing this evening at 7.45 and continuing until Monday evening next.

The convention represents over 450 churches and has over 50,000 members on its list. It is expected that all the reports submitted will be of a very optimistic portent of the successful year just drawn to a close. This evening the retiring president, Rev. A. A. Cameron, D.D., will deliver an address, and the report of the nominating committee with the officers for the ensuing year will be voted upon.

Rockefeller's Gift.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 18.—Announcement was made Sunday of a conditional gift of $250,000 by J. D. Rockefeller to the medical department of Western Reserve University. The gift is made conditional on the raising of $750,000 more by the university. H. L. Hanna, well-known as a trotting horse owner and enthusiast, has pledged $250,000 of the remainder of the proposed million dollar fund.

Italian Under Arrest.

Hagersville, Oct. 18.—Sam Ponessa, an Italian quarryman of this place, was placed under arrest here Sunday, and removed to the county jail at Cayuga, pending an investigation into the death of his eight-month-old child early on Saturday morning.

It is alleged that during Friday night the baby disturbed Ponessa's sleep by its crying and it is said he whipped it so severely that death resulted shortly after.

Coroner Dr. McDonald has empanelled a jury, which yesterday met and viewed the body of the child, then opened the inquest, until Wednesday.

Elizabeth's Reform.

Queen Elizabeth in the last year of her reign was much concerned as to the expenses of the royal household. According to a document in the public record office, she ordered a comparison to be made between the expenditure incurred in the third and the forty-third years of her reign, when "yt was found that in bread, beare, wyne, wood, coles, wax lights, torches, tallow lights and meetes and other allowances of incidents, necessaries, carriages and wages £12,000 ($60,000) per annum at least more was spent and no sufficient warrant for the increase. The queene's majestie being informed of this difference said: 'I will not suffer this dishonorable spoile and increase that no prince ever before me did. But my speedie order for reformacion shall satisfy my loving subjects, for I will end as I begaune with my subjects' love.'"

Bow, wow, wow!

When they begin the season's log—
Bow, wow, wow!—
They first look out to get the dog.
Bow, wow, wow!
They think in first production mugs,
In all the hue and cry and fuss,
Each tryout's good enough for us.
Bow, wow, wow!

But if we are provincial curs—
Bow, wow, wow!—
We know good things from bad ones, sirs.
Bow, wow, wow!
So if you want to count our bark
As scoring record of high mark
You must real merit with us start.
Bow, wow, wow!

All Sorts of Bravery.

To his teacher's request that he give the class ideas on the subject of "Bravery," little Johnny delivered himself of the following:

"Some boys is brave because they always plays with little boys, and some boys is brave because their legs is too short to run away, but most boys is brave because somebody's lookin'."—Brooklyn Life.

A Skeptic.

"I love you more than life," he said.
"Without you I should wish to die.
The sun would cease to shine o'erhead,
The stars cease blazing in the sky."

"And what about the winds?" asked she.
"Would they knock off and cease to blow?
The streams that murmur to the sea—
Would they back up and cease to flow?"

He left her in the dewy eve
And thought, what time he stretched his head,
"I cannot more than half believe
She thought I meant the things I said."
—S. E. Kiser.

The Money Was Scarce.

Constantinople, Oct. 18.—The Turkish Government is facing a financial crisis. Three members of the Cabinet resigned yesterday, because of considerations over the army budget.

Sam The Wheeler.

Col. Sam Hughes was in command of the militia camp at Kingston last summer. He gave both officers and men a regular back-breaking course of training, but so long as they showed strict respect he was not economical of praise.

One major, though, got on the colonel's nerves, and Brigadier Hughes called him down good and plenty. Finally the major commanding officers' mess got for him on the brigadier. "Nearly pretty near time, Sir," he said. "Yet he's a decent fellow."

"Decent?" cried Sam. "He may be decent. What I want to see is: Did your son bow his head up that wheel movement to-day?"

"Eh? was pretty bad, I'll acknowledge."

"Bah!" howled Col. Sam. "Bah! that fellow has not got enough sense to know how to wheel around in a swivel chair."

Tooth Brush Plant.

One of the most curious plants in the world is what is called the tooth brush plant of Jamaica. It is a species of cowpea, and has nothing striking about its appearance. By cutting pieces of it to a suitable length and fraying the ends the natives convert it into a toothbrush, and a tooth powder to accompany the use of the brush is also prepared by pulverizing the dried stems.

Wisdom.

The wise man moves next door to a family whose income is less than his.

East Wind—Well, they have us harnessed. West Wind—Yes, but they can't drive us tandem.

Practical Girl.

Pearl—So Belle is engaged? Did she try and test his love when he placed the ring on her finger?

Ruby—No; she ran right off and tested the ring.—Chicago News.

Sociability Threatened.

If the telephone people could fix

What would we do for politics
To help out conversation?

Will Supply Pasteurized Milk.

New York, Oct. 19.—Beginning next summer, pasteurized milk will be supplied to the public by the city government as one of the duties of the municipality. Pasteurization stations will be established throughout the city, and physicians and nurses will be kept in constant attendance to instruct mothers in the proper care of their children.

May Oppose Mackenzie King.

Berlin, Oct. 19.—North Waterloo Conservatives are always on the alert looking for a likely man to oust Mackenzie King from this riding, and the latest story is that George H. Perley, M.P., the new whip, who is a son-in-law of Ward H. Bowlby, K.C., of this town, is to be invited to be the man

AIRSHIP IS ABANDONED

Aeronauts on Board Dirigible Balloon America Run Out of Gasoline and Are Forced to Leave Craft When Eight Hundred Miles Out—Liner Picks Them Up All Well, Including the Tabby Cat.

New York, Oct. 19.—Man's first attempt to cross any ocean in an airship has failed, but Walter Wellman, five companion, and a kitten, who essayed the voyage, are safe.

The airship, the giant America, is a battered aerial derelict, abandoned at sea, perhaps still in the air, perhaps sunk beneath the waves, with her costly equipment.

Picked up by the steamship Trent early yesterday morning off the North Carolina coast, Wellman and his fellow air navigators are due in New York at noon to-day. They left their craft only because she was in distress and blown so far from the lane of transatlantic steamship travel that a continuation of the voyage with the British Isles as the objective was hopeless.

So, summoning aid by wireless, the difficult and dramatic transfer to the Trent was accomplished. Having been spoken by wireless, presumably in the vicinity of Nantucket at 12.45 p.m. on Sunday, it was a surprise then when the news came that the America had encountered the Trent homeward bound from Bermuda, in a longitude and latitude nearly 400 miles southward and only 250 miles northwest of Bermuda.

Thrilling indeed must have been the experience of the America's commander and crew as they were thus swept out of their course.

Capt. Down of the Trent flashed first news of the rescue in a message to The New York Times, which, with The Chicago Record-Herald and The London Daily Telegraph, contributed $35,000 for the purpose of the expedition.

The first story of the rescue sent by wireless from the steamer Trent to the Associated Press, reads:

"At 4.30 a.m. to-day the steamship Trent sighted the airship America, and wireless communication was immediately established. Irwin, the operator on the airship, informed Ginsburg, the operator on the Trent, that the airship America's crew wished to abandon the balloon. Wireless communication was kept up from this time on between the airship and the steamer.

"Daylight was rapidly approaching, and the Trent was requested to follow the America, which was then drifting at the rate of 12 knots an hour.

"After a council held on the airship, it was decided that the best means of rescue was to launch the lifeboat. But this was such a hazardous undertaking that much time elapsed before the manoeuvre was executed, as the tail of the airship, consisting of tanks of gasoline and wooden blocks, threatened to capsize the lifeboat as it was dropped from the balloon into the water.

"The danger was at last overcome, and the operation was carried out with success. In the operation the trailer struck Wireless Operator Irwin and Louis Loud, the engineer, and also knocked a small hole in the side of the lifeboat. The airship, immediately on being released of its weight of the crew and boat, shot skyward as the boat shot downward.

"A moderate sea was running at the time, and after some slight difficulty the crew were taken on board, together with the lifeboat, at 7.30 a.m. All the members of the crew are well after a thrilling experience.

"Wireless telegraph has distinguished itself by showing great assistance in accomplishing the work of rescue. The Morse lamp signaling also took a great part in the communication between Jack Irwin and officers of the steamer Trent, giving the signals which led to the rescue.

"The crew was picked up in latitude 36.40 north, longitude 62.18 west, where the America was abandoned. Wellman said that the airship had been blown far out of her course, and that it was inadvisable to proceed."

Britishers Wire Good Wishes.

London, Oct. 19.—On all sides here the warmest wishes are expressed that the Wellman transatlantic expedition will be crowned with success, and the Lord Mayor of London, Sir John Knill, has voiced the sentiments of all citizens of the metropolis in the following message despatched by wireless telegraphy soon after midday Monday:

"Mansion House, London. To the Wellman Airship America: Lord Mayor of London sends you greeting, and heartily wishes you success in your plucky enterprise."

Almost immediately afterward Lord Burnham of The Daily Telegraph sent the following:

"Wellman, Airship America. Greetings. All earnestly hope your pluck and patience will pull you through."

In the course of the day several other wireless messages were despatched, among others from the Senior Admiral of the Fleet, Lord John Hay, Admiral Sir Edmund Fremantle, and Sir Clements Markham, expresident of the Royal Geographic Society.

Dr. Cannifi Dead.

Belleville, Oct. 19.—Dr. William Cannifi, M.R.C.S., the well-known medical man and Canadian writer, died in this city yesterday afternoon. Deceased was 80 years of age. Dr. Cannifi served in the Royal Artillery during the Crimean war, and was also for a time with the American army on the Potomac. As a writer he contributed to medical and other journals to the daily presses. He was a U. E. Loyalist, being the originator of the U. E. centennial celebration, held in Toronto in 1884.

JURY SAYS HE IS GUILTY

Jury Adds Rider In Behalf of Hotelman Charged With Inflicting Fatal Injuries While Ejecting Man From Bar at New Liskeard—Lawyers Robinette and Blackstock Concur In Plea for Leniency.

North Bay, Oct. 19.—William R. Montgomery, charged with manslaughter, came before Judge Teetzel yesterday, he being defended by T. C. Robinette, K.C., of Toronto, and A. N. Morgan of New Liskeard. Montgomery is proprietor of the Windsor Hotel at New Liskeard, and the charge arose out of the death of Elmer Kline, shanty cook, which is alleged to have resulted from the effect of kicks administered by Montgomery in ejecting Kline from the hotel, July 1, 1909. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. Blackstock.

M. L. Fitzpatrick of New Liskeard swore to witnessing Montgomery forcibly eject Kline from the hotel, and kicking him several times. Kline appeared to be under the influence of liquor. Richard Peeler also swore to the assault, but thought Kline was sober.

Medical evidence showed that Kline had died from rupture of the uretha, probably caused by injury.

Montgomery swore that Kline was put out of his hotel, June 30, and that he did not see him on July 1, and did not kick anyone. Kline had been a nuisance about the bar, and he had forbidden the bartender to serve him liquor. He had visited Kline at the hospital, because he had been a guest at the hotel.

Anothy Palmer, manager of the Windsor Hotel, swore to visiting Kline at the hospital in consequence of stories circulated that he had been injured at the hotel, and the sick man though very weak, had nodded his head in acquiescence to a question as to his being hurt at the fair grounds. He did not see Kline in the hotel July 1, and no one was kicked out that day.

James Doonan swore that Kline was injured July 1 by jumping on a sharp-pointed post, being unable to speak for twenty minutes, and Dr. Stallwood and Evans swore that Kline's condition could have resulted from injury received that way. Dr. Evans did not think that the injury could have been inflicted by a kick, unless the foot was long and narrow and curved upward to a point.

The jury, after being out for two hours, returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, with a strong recommendation to mercy. Mr. Robinette moved for suspended sentence, on the ground of no intent to injure, and the good character of the accused. Mr. Blackstock concurred in the appeal for leniency, and Judge Teetzel promised to consider the plea on Thursday, when evidences of character will be produced.

Gets Twenty Years.

Parry Sound, Oct. 19.—The sitting of the sessions yesterday was taken up with a case under the Charlton Act. The prisoner, James Lavalgine, alias John Roy, was found guilty, and forthwith sentenced by Justice Clute to twenty years' imprisonment, with two administrations of the lash, of ten each.

Owing to the absence of a material witness for the crown in the Young murder case, the court was adjourned until to-day. In the event of the missing witness not being secured by that time, the trial will be laid over, probably to a special sitting of the court.

School Had Right to Money.

Lindsay, Oct. 19.—Judge Harding has given judgment in an interesting case, viz., in the action of the school trustees of the Township of Stanhope against the Township of Stanhope. The usual school grant had been retained by the township authorities because the township claimed that the school had not been kept open long enough in the school section (the teacher having been sick) to warrant the municipality in giving them their grant. His honor held that the money had been raised for the school section and was their money, and the township had no right whatever in withholding the money.

$1,200,000 Damage Suit.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—The big case for $1,200,000 damages between David Russell and James N. Greenshields, regarding a deal in Saskatchewan lands, may not be tried at Ottawa after all. The writ was issued here on the ground that, while both parties live in Montreal, the deals with the Government, Mackenzie & Mann, etc., were put through here, so that Ottawa is the proper place to try the big case. A motion has now been made by McCarthy, Osler, Hoskin & Harcourt of Toronto, to set aside this writ as being taken in the wrong province.

Exile For Royal House.

Lisbon, Oct. 19.—The Government of Portugal yesterday issued a decree prescribing the Braganza family to the position of an exiled house.

Concerning the property in Portugal, owned personally by King Manuel and others of the royal family, the decree states that the matter would be settled as soon as possible. The Government promises that the legitimate rights of the exiled royal family will be respected.

All Goes Into Paper.

Washington, Oct. 19.—More than four million cords of wood were used in the manufacture of pulp for paper-making in the United States in 1909, as shown by the annual report on the industry issued yesterday by the census bureau. The cost of the transformation of the wood of which there was [illegible] cords, was $[illegible],

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

The annual speech day was held at Trinity College School, Port Hope.

Daniel Barrett was killed by shock at Hamilton while trimming an arc light.

The tropical hurricane, passing northward, has done great damage in Florida.

Republican leaders in New York admit that the political situation is puzzling.

Six balloons which started in a race from St. Louis on Monday are crossing Lake Huron toward Ontario.

United Motors, Limited, yesterday announced that it would manufacture monoplanes at its Welland factory.

Another bomb was found on the Quai Des Celestins yesterday in Paris beside the barracks of the Republican Guard.

Application of the telegraph companies for approval of their forms was before the Railway Commission yesterday, but went over until November.

While engaged in removing the roof of a silo at his father's barn, John A. McDonald, living near Wyoming, Ont., fell into the silo and received such injuries as caused his death.

An explosion in the Siegfried potash mine at Sarstedt, Prussia, yesterday, caused a fire that imprisoned 15 miners, all of whom are thought to have perished. Three bodies have been recovered.

Criticized Rural Schools.

London, Oct. 19.—Before the Technical Education Commission yesterday Vice-Principal John Dearness of the London Normal School, strongly criticized the rural schools of Ontario, declaring that, not teaching boys from 14 to 18 to be able to work did not turn out the proper quality of men. School Inspector Edwards favored gradually increasing the compulsory school age from 14 to 16.

E. Leonard, of Leonard & Sons, boiler manufacturers, pointed out the educational value of moving pictures. The commission spent most of the day visiting educational institutions.

To Improve Quebec Harbor.

Ottawa, Oct. 19. Mayor Drouin of Quebec, George Parent, M.P., and a number of engineering experts, waited upon the Minister of Public Works yesterday and asked that the St. Charles River be deepened in order to improve the Harbor of Quebec.

Mr. Pugsley, S. N. Parent, chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Commission, and Charles M. Hays of the G.T.R., with several engineers, went to Quebec yesterday afternoon to look into the matter of the N.T.R. terminals there, and Mr. Pugsley will consider, also, the request of the delegation.

Local Option In the West.

Regina, Oct. 19. The following cities and towns in Saskatchewan have filed petitions in regard to local option, and will vote on the bylaw on December 12:

Cities—Regina, Moosejaw, Saskatoon, and Prince Albert.

Towns—Oxbow, Estevan, Alameda, Weyburn, Caron, Martlach, Maple Creek, Carlyle, Arcola, Balgonie, Quappelle, Indian Head, Yorkton, Dawson, North Battleford, Battleford.

Armenians Acquitted.

Brantford, Oct. 19.—Kopain & Magarian, the two Armenians held here pending the investigation into the death of Frank Simon, were acquitted in court yesterday. The coroner's jury Monday night brought in a verdict that the Armenians set upon Simon and companions, and they were merely defendings themselves. Simon's skull was fractured on the sidewalk, when struck down.

Rebel Gets Twenty Years.

Manila, Oct. 19.—Simeon Mandeo, former governor of Ilicos Norte, who recently headed an uprising in that Province of Nueva Vizcaya, was yesterday sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment. He pleaded guilty.

ALWAYS CONSULT A
A SPECIALIST

Never select glasses for yourself, and never purchase glasses from a peddling spectacle seller. The stock of such spectacle sellers is as defective as their knowledge of optics. The lenses are carefully ground and the lens in one eye is frequently different from the lens in the other eye.

BEWARE of SPECTACLE PEDDLERS

Wearing them will soon result in pain in the eyes and injury to the sight. Then there is frequently the condition of the eyes—that is, your eyes may differ in focus and each may require a different, specially prescribed lens. In such cases similar lenses, such as you would select for yourself or a peddler would give you, must of necessity prove injurious to one or other of the eyes. We, on the other hand, have the knowledge and appliances necessary to detect the unequal vision or any other defect and grind the lenses to suit. Nineteenths of the cases of defective vision require glasses ground especially for the patient.

HOW MANY REALIZE THE MARVELLOUS VALUE OF FRUIT

IN CURING MANY DISEASES?

Wonderful Success of "Fruit-a-tives"

—The Famous Fruit Medicine

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet matter, and only 1% of an intensely bitter substance. Careful experiments show that it is this bitter principle, which is the active or medicinal material of fruit juice.

Under certain conditions, the bitter principle can be made to replace or transform some of the sweet atoms in the juice, thus making a new compound which is much more active medicinally than the ordinary juice.

Many fruits were analyzed and it was found that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes gave the best results. These fruit juices, having been made more active by the secret process of changing the sweet principle into the bitter, are combined with tonics and antiseptics and made into tablets. These tablets are the famous fruit medicine—"Fruit-a-tives"—known in every part of Canada for their wonderful curative qualities in diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c.

"THE BETRAYAL"

(By E. Phillips Oppenheim.)

It was apparently the last thing she desired to do. Of the various emotions which had possessed her, curiosity was the one which survived.

"You are sure he is dead?" she asked.

"Quite," I answered.

"Was he drowned, then?"

"I think," I replied, "that he has been washed up by the tide. There has probably been a shipwreck."

"Gracious!" she exclaimed. "It is just a sailor, then?"

"I have not looked at his face," I answered, "and I should not advise you to. He has been tossed about and injured. His clothes, though, are not a seaman's."

She passed through a gap in the palings.

"I must look just a little closer," she exclaimed. "Do come with me, Mr. Ducaine. I'm horribly afraid."

"Then don't go near him," I advised. "A dead man is surely not a pleasant spectacle for you. Come away, Miss Moyat."

But she advanced to within a couple of yards of him. Then she stopped short, and a little exclamation escaped from her lips.

"Why, Mr. Ducaine," she cried out, "this is the very man who stopped me last night outside our house, and asked me the way to your cottage."

CHAPTER IV.

MISS MOYAT'S PROMISE.

We stood looking at one another on the edge of the marsh. In the clear morning sunlight I had no chance of escape or subterfuge. There was terror in my face and she could see it.

"You—you cannot be sure," I exclaimed. "It may not be the same man."

"It is the same man," she answered confidently. "He stopped me and asked if I could direct him to your house. It was about half an hour after you had gone. He spoke very softly and almost like a foreigner. I told him exactly where your cottage was. Didn't he come to you?"

"No," I answered. "I have never seen him before in my life."

"Why do you look so terrified?" she asked. "You are as pale as a ghost."

I clutched hold of the railings. She came over to my side. Up the road I heard in the distance the crunching of heavy wheels. A waggon was passing through the lodge gates. John, the woodman, was walking with unaccustomed briskness by the horses' heads, cracking his whip as he came. I looked into the girl's face by my side.

"Miss Moyat," I said hoarsely, "can't you forget that you saw this man?"

"Why?" she asked bewilderedly.

"I don't want to be dragged into it," I answered, glancing nervously over my shoulder along the road. "Don't you see that if he is just found here with his head and shoulders in the creek, they will take it that he has been washed up by the sea in the storm last night? But if it is known that he came from the land, that he was seen in the village asking for me—then there will be many things said."

"I don't see as it matters," she answered, puzzled. "He didn't come and you don't know anything about him. But, of course, if you want me to say nothing——"

She paused. I clutched her arm.

"Miss Moyat," I said, "I have strong reasons for not wishing to be brought into this."

"All right," she said, dropping her voice. "I will do—as you ask."

There was an absurd meaning in her little side-glance, which, at another time would have put me on my guard. But just then I was engrossed with my own vague fears. I forgot even to remove my hand from her arm. So we were standing when a moment later the silence was broken by the sound of a galloping horse coming fast across the marshes. We started aside. Lady Angela reined in a great bay mare a few yards away from us. Her habit was all bespattered with mud. She had evidently ridden across country from one of the private entrances to the Park.

"What is this terrible story, Mr. Ducaine?" she exclaimed. "Is there really a shipwreck? I can see no sign of it."

"No shipwreck that I know of, Lady Angela," I answered. "There is a dead man here—one only. I have heard of nothing else."

Her eyes followed my outstretched hand, and she saw the body half on on the sands, half on the marsh. She shivered a little.

"Poor fellow!" she exclaimed. "Is it any one from the village, Mr. Ducaine?"

"It is a stranger, Lady Angela," I answered. "We think that his body must have been washed in from the sea."

She measured the distance from high-water mark with a glance, and shook her head.

"Too far away," she declared.

"There was a wild sea last night" I answered, "and such a tide as I have never seen here before."

"What are you doing with it?" she asked, pointing with her whip.

"John Hefford is bringing a waggon," I answered. "I suppose he had better take it to the police station."

She wheeled her horse round.

"I am glad that it is no worse," she said. "There are reports going about of a terrible shipwreck. I trust that you are feeling better, Mr. Ducaine?"

"I am quite recovered—thanks to your kindness and Colonel Ray's," I answered.

She nodded.

"You will hear from my father during the day," she said. "He is quite anxious to come to your lecture. Good-morning."

"Good-morning, Lady Angela."

She galloped away. Miss Moyat turned towards me eagerly.

"Why, Mr. Ducaine," she exclaimed, "I had no idea that you knew Lady Angela."

"Nor do I," I answered shortly. "Our acquaintance is of the slightest."

"What did she mean about the lecture?"

I affected not to hear. John the waggoner had pulled up his team by the side of the palings, and was touching his hat respectfully.

"Another job for the dead 'ouse, sir, my missis tells me."

"There is the body of a dead man here, John," I answered, "washed up by the tide, I suppose. It isn't an uncommon occurrence here, is it?"

"Lor bless you, no, sir," the man answered, stepping over the palings. "I had three of them here in one month last year. If you'll just give me a hand, sir, we'll take him down to the police station."

I set my teeth and advanced towards the dead man. John Hefford proved at once that he was superior to all such trifles as nerves. He lifted the body up and laid it for the first time that upon the sands.

"My! he's had a nasty smash on the head," John remarked, looking down at him with simple curiosity. "Quite the gent, too, I should say. Will you give me a hand, sir, and we'll have him in the waggon."

So I was forced to touch him after all. Nevertheless I kept my eyes as far as possible from the ghastly face with the long, hideous wound across it. I saw now, however, in one swift unwilling glance, what manner of man this was. He had thin features a high forehead, deep-set eyes too close together, a thin, iron-grey moustache. Whatever his station in life may have been, he was not of the labouring classes, for his hands were soft and his nails well cared for. We laid him in the bottom of the waggon and covered him over with a couple of sacks. John cracked the whip and strode along by the side of the horses. Blanche Moyat and I followed behind.

She was unusually silent and once or twice I caught her glancing curiously at me, as though she had something which it was in her mind to say, but needed encouragement. As we neared the cottage she asked me a question.

"Why didn't you want me to say that I saw this man in the village last night, and that he asked for you Mr. Ducaine? I can't understand what difference it makes. He may have spoken to others besides me, and then it is bound to be known. What harm can it do you?"

"I cannot explain how I feel about it," I answered. "I am not sure that I know myself. Only you must see that if it were known that he set out from the village last night to call upon me, people might say unpleasant things."

She lowered her voice.

"You mean—that they might suspect you of killing him?"

"Why not? Nobody knows much about me here, and it would seem suspicious. It was I who found him, and only a few hundred yards from my cottage. If it were known that he had left the village last night to see me, don't you think that it would occur to any one to wonder if we had met — and quarrelled? There could be no proof, of course, but the mere suggestion is unpleasant enough."

We were in the middle of the open road, and the waggon was several yards in front. Nevertheless she drew a little closer to me, and almost whispered in my ear—

"Do you know who he is, what he wanted to see you about?"

"I have no idea," I answered. "I am quite sure that I never saw him before in my life."

"Did you see him last night?" she asked.

"Not to speak to," I answered. "I did catch just a glimpse of him, I believe, in rather a strange way. But that was all."

"What do you mean?"

"I saw him looking in through my window, but he came no nearer. Lady Angela and Colonel Ray were in the room."

"In your room?"

"Yes. Colonel Ray called to say that he was sorry to have spoilt my lecture."

"And Lady Angela?"

"Yes."

"She came in, too?"

The girl's open-mouthed curiosity irritated me.

"I happened to be ill when Colonel Ray came. They were both very kind to me."

"This man, then," she continued, "he looked in and went away?"

"I suppose so," I answered. "I saw no more of him."

She turned towards me breathlessly.

"I don't see how a fall could have killed him, or how he could have wandered off into the marshes just there. The creek isn't nearly deep enough to have drowned him unless he had walked deliberately in and lain down. He was quite sober, too, when he spoke to me. Mr. Ducaine, how did he die? What killed him?"

I shook my head.

"If I could answer you these questions," I said, "I should feel much easier in my own mind. But I can not. I know no more about it than you do."

We were both silent for a time, but I was that there was a new look in her face. It was a welcome relief when a groom from Rowchester overtook us and pulled up his horse by our side.

"Are you Mr. Ducaine, sir?" he asked, touching his hat.

"Yes," I answered.

"I have a note for you from his Grace, sir," he said. "I was to take back an answer if I found you at home."

He handed it to me, and I tore it open. It contained only a few lines in a large sprawling hand-writing.

"Rowchester, Wednesday Morning

"The Duke of Rowchester presents his compliments to Mr. Ducaine, and would be much obliged if he could make it convenient to call upon him at Rowchester, between three and four o'clock this afternoon."

I folded the note up and turned to the groom.

"Will you tell his Grace," I said, "that you found me on the road, and I was unable, therefore, to write my answer, but I will call at the time he mentions?"

The man touched his hat and rode away. Blanche Moyat, who had been standing a few yards off, rejoined me.

"Has the Duke sent for you to go there?" she asked, with obvious curiosity.

"Yes. He has offered to lend me the village hall." I told her. "I expect that is what he wants to see me about."

She tossed her head.

"You didn't tell me so just now when I told you that father had offered to speak about it," she remarked.

"I am afraid," I said, gravely, "my mind was full of more serious matters."

She said no more until we reached the front of the Moyat's house. Then she did not offer me her hand, but she stood quite close to me, and spoke in an unnatural low tone.

"You wish me, then," she said, "not to mention about that man's asking the way to your cottage?"

"It seems quite unnecessary," I answered, "and it would only mean that I should be bothered with questions which I could not answer."

"Very well," she said, "Good-bye."

I shuddered to myself as I followed the waggon down the narrow street towards the police station. A strange reserve had crept into her manner during the latter portion of our walk. There was something in her mind which she shrank from putting into words. Did she believe that I was responsible for this grim tragedy, which had so suddenly thrown its shadow over my humdrum little life?

CHAPTER V.

THE GRACIOUSNESS OF THE DUKE.

At a quarter past three that afternoon I was ushered into the presence of the Duke of Rowchester. I had never seen him before, and his personality at once interested me. He was a small man, grey-haired, keen-eyed, clean shaven. He received me in a somewhat bare apartment, which he alluded to as his workroom, and I found him seated before a desk strewn with papers. He rose immediately at my entrance, and I could feel that he was taking more than usual note of my appearance.

"You are Mr. Ducaine," he said, holding out his hand. "I am very glad to see you."

He motioned me to a chair facing the window, a great uncurtained affair, through which the north light came flooding in, whilst he himself sat in the shadows.

"I trust," he said, "that you have quite recovered from your last night's indisposition. My daughter has been telling me about it."

"Quite, thank you," I answered. "Lady Angela and Colonel Ray were very kind to me."

AFTER TREATMENT

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been infected for twelve years. I had consulted dozens of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish. W. ### UNEXPECTED POINT OF VIEW

Curate: "Do you know where little boys who fish on Sunday go to?"

Small Boy: "Yes, but I ain't goin' to tell yer. Go and get a place for yerself!"

CATCH FISH WITH BIRDS

On the banks of the River Ya we saw many Chinese cormorant fishers with their birds, which are very fine and intelligent. When fishing, a piece of grass is first tied around their throats, to prevent them from swallowing the fish, and they are afterwards turned into the water. The small fish they can easily manage to bring back to the boat, but when they find a large specimen it sometimes needs the co-operation of two or three of the birds to land it safely on their master's boat. In this river the fishermen often catch the great salamander, a huge newt or water lizard, which sometimes reaches a length of ten or twelve feet, and whose flesh is much appreciated by the Chinese.—Wide World Magazine.

THE INDIAN POLICEMAN.

An Ex-inspector Chats on the Perils of the Oriental Pecler.

The European officers of the Indian police are the hardest-worked body of officials in the world, and their duties, more particularly in the country and jungle districts, are of an exceedingly varied and difficult nature.

From the earliest morning until far into the night they are on the alert, now quelling brawls in the bazaars, or religious riots, now in pursuit of dacoits and cattle thieves, or probing apparently unfathomable mysteries of daring robberies and murder outrages. Then, after having passed the day in the arduous task of protecting the law-abiding citizens against the vast army of criminals, and trying to bring the latter to book, they are often called out to secure absconding elephants, running riot and causing devastation in the plantations, or to free an outlying village from the attentions of a man-eating tiger.

And, in order to cope with all such eventualities, an inspector of a district, comprising perhaps forty or more villages, each separated from the other by miles of impenetrable jungle, is given only one or two white constables and a posse of native policemen. The latter are mostly Pathans, a physically well-developed and strong people, but, unfortunately, quite unreliable and often treacherous.

Moreover, to increase further the difficulties of the position, the people in towns and villages show an open antipathy, not to say hostility, to the police force. Instead of assisting, they place difficulties in the way, and mislead the officers, even though they might be in possession of clues as to the identity or whereabouts of the wanted criminals.

If, further, we take into consideration the fact that the criminal gangs are invariably closely organised secret societies, such as societies of burglars, cattle thieves, housebreakers, dacoits, etc., the reader will be able to gauge the enormity of the problems with which the Indian police have to cope in the course of their daily routine. Perhaps routine is hardly the word to describe conditions offering so much variety and excitement.

Thus, a couple of years ago, I was in charge of an extensive jungle district in the Punjab, some eighty miles to the south of Khan. At the time we were pestered with a particularly audacious gang of robbers, whose deeds and tactics proved them to be at the very height of their profession, and well acquainted with local conditions. They operated indiscriminately in the European and native settlements, and had even forced their entrance into the police and military posts, with a view to stealing weapons, and all kinds of valuables on which they could lay their hands.

A peculiar feature of their mode of procedure was that they invariably administered some insidious drug to their intended victims, and whilst the latter were under its effect quietly raided the place and disappeared before the alarm could be given. This fact satisfied us that the native servants were party to the conspiracy; but whether they had been terrorized into silence, or whether they shared in the proceeds, the most stringent examinations and inquiries proved abortive. Promises of reward and threats alike failed to loosen their tongues, and in the absence of incriminating evidence we could not even arrest them.

Demasking the Great Seal.

When a fresh Great Seal is made, either at the accession of a new Sovereign to the throne, or during the reign, it is brought into use and the old one discarded with quite an interesting ceremony. A meeting of the Privy Council is called, and attended by the King in person. The two Seals, the new and the old, are laid on the table. Then the King, in the presence of his councillors places his hand on the new Seal, thereby constituting it the Great Seal of England, and acknowledging that any document to which an impression of it is attached is his act and deed, after which His Majesty commits it to the keeping of the Lord Chancellor. The old Seal next undergoes a process known as "demasking." At one time it was the practice to cut it into four quarters and deposit the pieces in the Tower; but for many years it has been defaced simply by the Sovereign making a few small punctures over its two sides with a pointed hammer. These marks are regarded as sufficiently indicating that the Seal can never again be used as a state instrument.

Unless you treat your ailments in the right way, you can't expect to cure them. We'll buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine (pronounced Si-keen) from your druggist and give it to you free to show you how effective is the right way.

It's not so long ago that the doctors bled a man to cure Pneumonia.

"Stuff a cold and starve a fever" is only found out to-day—amongst the list of curative sciences, yet our fathers had it preached to them time and again.

You may not know it, but to-day there are just as effective methods of cure being practised and practised.

All because most people do not know the real cause of disease.

There are two kinds of corpuscles in the blood—red and white.

The red corpuscles contain nutrition, the white destroy disease germs.

If for any cause the white corpuscles become depleted and are no longer ready to destroy the germs of disease, then disease controls the body.

That's the cause of disease.

Years ago certain herbs were found to cure disease.

They didn't know how or why in those days, they do to-day.

And it's because these herbs build up the white corpuscles.

These herbs are combined in Psychine. Once they were prescribed for the great results obtained from Psychine a third of a century ago.

They're responsible for the hundreds of thousands that Psychine has cured since that time.

It's because of these herbs that we have received hundreds of thousands of testimonials relating to wonderful cures that Psychine has made.

And it's because of these very same herbs that we will buy within the next twelve months hundreds of thousands of 50-cent bottles of Psychine and give them away free to whoever sends us the coupon in this announcement.

Now if you wish to relieve or prevent any of the disorders in this list send in that coupon:

She—How?

He—Don't die till you're 140.

HAZEL AND THE CAT

Hazel, aged seven, while feeding the cat at dinner-table, was reproved by her mother, who told her that the cat must wait until later. Whereupon the small girl wept and said:

"I think it's a shame just because she is a poor dumb animal, to treat her like a blind cat."

FALLING BODIES.

Their Velocity Varies According to the Force of Gravity.

A man falling from a three story building in New Orleans will not fall as fast as he would if he were in New York city. In fact, in hardly any two places will he fall with the same speed. This is because as we go toward the equator the force of gravity gets less and less, and consequently the acceleration of a falling body becomes less, and the force of impact is therefore less.

While it does not make very much difference in the injury to a person falling from a height, it does make a difference in other things. Take a rifle and fire it exactly horizontally, and if the gun is sixteen feet above the ground, say, at New York the bullet fired from such a rifle will strike the ground in exactly one second after it leaves the rifle. If the bullet has a horizontal velocity of 1,000 feet per second it will strike the earth exactly 1,000 feet away. Let us take the same rifle to a place where the force of gravity is not the same as at New York, but a good deal smaller, say two-thirds smaller. We find that if the gun is placed sixteen feet above the ground, as before, and absolutely horizontal the bullet will not fall the sixteen feet in one second, but will take over one and a half seconds to fall, thus enabling the bullet to be in the air during that length of time. Therefore it will strike the ground about 1,600 feet away. Thus it is seen that the range of a rifle is increased as it is taken toward the equator.

Of course there is no place on the earth where the force of gravity is two-thirds smaller than at New York, but there are many places where the difference is considerable enough to affect slightly the range of rifles.—Harper's Weekly.

X-Rays For Consumption.

The use of X-rays in the cure of consumption is the direction of important observations recently made by the radiographers at several of the principal London hospitals. Over 1,000 consumptive patients have been studied, and as a result the radiographer in charge of the X-ray department at Guy's Hospital has stated his opinion that the X-rays are an indispensable aid to the treatment of consumption. He says that by their aid he can locate the exact part of the body where the disease is most active.

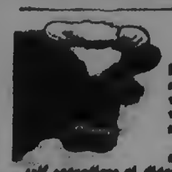
The Tenderfoot Farmer



It was one of those experimental farmers, who put great spectacles on his cow and fed her dirt-dishes. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and assimilation had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer finds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is the life-telling remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the privilege cause "Golden Medical Discovery" is a proprietary medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no substitute for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

CHILDREN SAVE $1,500,000 IN PENNIES

Fifty Thousand Depositors in the Penny Bank of the University Settlement, Where the Careful Little Ones of the Poor Are Taught from the Primer of Thrift.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

NEW YORK, Saturday.

"HOW much you got?"

In a sentence is expressed the rivalry of Bessie Stanger and Ernestine Hall, in line waiting to deposit their pennies in the Penny Bank at the University Settlement. The sense of thrift is stimulated by the sense of rivalry, for these two girls are only two of 50,000 depositors who since its establishment have deposited pennies to the sum of more than one and one-half millions of dollars in the three hundred penny banking stations in settlements, schools and department stores.

The Penny Bank, or, as it is officially known, the Penny Provident Fund, is the primer of thrift and the kindergarten of economic principles as taught to the children of the poor—and not inaccessible to the offspring of the wealthy.

Observe its popularity at the Settlement in Rivington street as presented last deposit day. Five hundred Bessie Stangers and Ernestine Joneses are in line. These tousled heads bob together, p'y each other with questions and wait proudly, their bank books in their tiny hands, until their pennies are exchanged for stamps—one cent, two cents, five cents or ten cents—in accordance with their prowess for self-denial. The University Settlement is the largest of the deposit stations and close to $100,000 in pennies has been deposited there.

Twenty years ago Otto T. Bannard and Robert W. de Forest, president of the Organized Charities, founded the Penny Provident Fund on the plan of the English penny banks. From the United Charities Building it has spread all over the Eastern part of the United States. Deposit day at the University Settlement is typical. It is interesting, too, for the spectacle of five hundred children saving their pennies for this, that or the other—whatever takes their fancy or need may suggest—is a lesson suggestive of a bright outlook.

They are gathered, these embryonic financiers, awaiting the signal, for they have been sent to seats pending the "opening of the bank."

"First rows, rise," orders the teacher-cashier.

Hastily the youngsters scramble to their feet, gathering up their school books or smoothing their pinafores.

"Column left," the order might be, for each turns and the line of march is formed.

"March!" and they advance toward the receiving table. In one hand are the pennies, tightly grasped, in the other, stamp deposit card, and that card is held with a grip of steel, for on it is written in black type:—"If this card is lost or destroyed no payment will be made thereon." There is another lesson—carefulness.

"Well, Tommy," greets the teacher-receiving teller, as she takes direct from his tight little fingers four pennies sweating there. Tommy is the first in line, and proud of it.

"So much?" encourages the teacher. "Good!" And Tommy opens his stamp book and gleams in satisfaction as the moistened stamps are pasted upon its not too full page.

The line crowds up. Then comes Mary.

The Stamps Put On.

Proudly she lays down a dollar, a quarter and a dime. While an olive, a red and a brown stamp are being added to her store there is an interruption in the person of a small girl with eyes like black cherries, who comes panting up to the head of the line. But the portion of the Foolish Virgin is hers, for the receiving teller shakes her head.

"No, Rose, if you aren't here on time some one else will have to lead the line. Go to the end." Evidently Receiving teller at the Penny Bank.

Passing in her stamp book to draw out account.

been earned carrying cakes to customers from his father's bakery. Sometimes it is "awful far," and he wants a wheel.

The receiving teller does not always find out the secrets of the child's thrift—the object of economy. It is to the paying teller, who cashes in the stamp books, that the little financiers tell their stories. They have had time to think it over, talk it over with mother or father, and they know when they draw out their pennies exactly for what the savings are to be spent. So the lesson in decision is learned.

Annie Cohen, curly haired and dark eyed, comes up to the paying teller. She withdraws her savings of two years, seventy-nine cents. What is it for? To buy a dress for a holiday. Miss Tucker is accompanied by Sarah Schneider, who interprets for her. She is drawing out $2.38 to buy a skirt. She likes to save in the bank—"comes more."

Sarah apologizes for the smallness of her account. "Since August I rode away to my aunt's. My mamma will put more to it to buy me a hat."

Molly and Ernestine keep the lines straight. Molly's black braids bob and she bubbles with information of her duties.

"Yes, I'm saving my money since a long time. I take care Mrs. Brown's baby. Once I took flowers by a lady in Fifteenth street for fifteen cents. Comes there she gives me another fifteen cents! 'Take it,' she says, 'cause you're so little to come so far.' When I had ninety cents my father put ten cents to it to make it for a dollar, and bought me some shoes on a pushcart, 'cause it's cheaper. Once I saved $2 and bought me and my sister dresses for ninety-eight cents. Sure, I belong to a club, the Kindergarten Alumnae."

Little financiers, deposit books in hand, waiting for the order to march.

Work After School.

Molly's sister Becky is as fair and silent as Molly is dark and loquacious. But Becky is industrious. She works for a hairdresser after school, "taking apart" false puffs, at the rate of a cent for two sets. She also translates "out of Jewish" for the proprietress. The lady who does up the puffs again gets $6 a week. But she is old. The owners of the puffs pay twenty to twenty-five cents for this renovating process, according to the size and number of their hirsute adornments. The work is done in a kitchen. "Comes a curtain." But it must be redolent of food where patient Becky and the $6 lady work amid a sea of puffs!

Celia, coming in with a full book, exhausts the paying teller's resources. He borrows openly from the patty pans, keeping track on the back of an envelope. But Celia herself restores confidence by refusing the money. She doesn't want to "draw out," only a new book. But under direction she takes the $15 and joins the lessening line of depositors, where in due course fifteen olive green stamps in a new book are delivered to her. She resists the receiving teller's plea to take it to a savings bank. The Settlement is an accustomed friend, but Celia's first visit to a strange bank will have to be personally conducted.

There is a sudden angry altercation, for Sarah Stelnberg, coming late, insists on going to the head of the line because she has to get home. But this is an old trick of Sarah's, and Ernestine is adamant. "Get on the end!" she commands. Sarah is not quelled, however, without the help of her friend, the paying teller. "I got a mad on you," she assures him when she reaches him in her proper turn.

He has some queer stories to tell about the things the children save their money for. One little girl saved $60 to buy a tombstone for her sister.

Another scraped together almost as much for a piano, her father helping her toward the end.

An older boy saved for his violin and pays for his lessons regularly through the bank. A glittering pair of skates illumines the sky and obscures the sun of Ralph Necker's universe. They lighten his toil of carrying packages from a store to an express office. They probably will not continue to be the incarnation of his happiness. They may land him on his head more than once, but it is doubtful if they knock out of it the lesson they have taught him of present deprivation in favor of future satisfaction.

The paying teller may not commend Fannie Solway's purpose of putting her entire savings of two years into a gold bracelet. He commends her neat book, however. But Fannie wants to attain her highest desire while it is within her grasp. Only Fannie knows how much more than $10 that bracelet will cost. She realizes that the value of a thing is to be measured in denial and desire and not in money.

Meantime the paying teller is confronted by Bessie Stanger, who brings in three books, her own and her brothers', because they are going to "move far." Bessie signs the names on the outside of all three books, but has to pay five cents apiece for the last two because they contain less than fifty cents. Each depositor is supposed to draw his own money and sign his own name. But in this particular station a sister is sometimes allowed to draw for a brother—never, alas for masculine probity! a brother for a sister.

Careful of Accounts.

While the paying teller is still looking up the names and addresses in his big ledger and verifying them by the numbers on the books a weeping little girl, with her head tied up in a towel, comes up to the desk. Her book is gone. "A street bum grabbed it right out of her hand." She ends with a wail that renders even Ernestine sympathetic, in spite of this breach of discipline. Minnie doesn't remember the number of her book, but she knows the date on which she got it and that places it.

If it is presented for redemption it can be confiscated and returned to her. Otherwise she will lose the money entirely. The man can soak off the stamps and sell them to other depositors. Though stamps that evidently have been transferred always are questioned, payment is seldom refused on them. Sometimes a stamp works loose from a book, and then it is supposed to be pressed back and pasted in by the aid of the mucilage bottle on the receiving teller's table. The loss of a book usually means the loss of the money. So the children are encouraged as soon as the accounts reach the dignity of dollars to deposit them in a regular savings bank, where they will be safe and will draw interest. Thus the child learns not only the satisfaction of saving, but the relative value of money.

And every time that Minnie and Mollie and Frank pass the hoky poky man and the nickelodeon with their money safe in their pockets they gain a strength that may help them to resist graver temptations when they are older. Industry, self-denial, thrift, independence are lessons attempted by the Penny Bank.

And how does it affect the youngsters?

What they themselves think is important and interesting. Alma, a Roumanian, will talk. She is eloquent over the satisfaction of being the proud possessor of a bank account. Tall for fourteen years, she is conspicuous among the Russian children, but her big blue eyes and heavy golden hair would attract attention anywhere. She is in the seventh grade, and next year she is going to stop. Why? She is going to the technical school to learn to trim hats. Would she like that? She would. Her eyes reflect the shimmer of the silks and velvets. They are not going to pass a girl like Alma by.

But how is she to get them? The Settlement stretches protecting arms around her. It gives her young friends to meet and gossip with, older ones to consult and trust, a place to spend her leisure time. It even understands her craving for pretty clothes and is showing her the only safe way to gratify it—through her bank book.

Already Alma has learned. Her blue linen dress with its white buttons is neat and becoming. Cost $1.98. She smoothes it complacently. Where did she get the money? Earned it packing postal cards and doing errands in a factory this summer for $4 a week. Hard work? Not very. But yes, it was pretty hard now that she thinks of it. But see, she has her money in the bank, enough for all winter. And her complacency reveals itself not so much in pride in her pretty dress as a realization of the dignity of labor and of her won independence.

A shield to her youth, her bank account will be a crutch to her age, for the habit of saving has fastened itself upon her. Out of two pennies she will always lay aside one. No almshouse ever will get her, and this is the object of the Penny Bank—an effort of philanthropy, "or the banks do not pay," to strengthen the arm that keeps the wolf from the door.

LAWYERS LOST.

The Parties to the Suit Won Out of Court.

By HARRISON WETMORE.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

When John Jones met a widow bearing the same name at a summer resort he was tired of widowerhood or rather of his peculiar brand of bachelorhood, for he had never seen his wife since the performance of the ceremony that had bound them together. He was now forty and desired a home The widow was attractive and, though nearly the same age as himself, had retained a fair proportion of comeliness. She, too, was desirous to wed. There was something about Jones that appealed to her, and she was inclined to marry him, but she had reached an age where a woman has an eye to business in making a match, and she desired to know something of Mr. Jones' affairs before accepting him. He told her that his first wife's parents had died and left her a handsome estate. He, as her husband, was entitled—there being no children—to all her property. He was about to lay claim to it.

Mrs. Jones listened to this statement of his affairs, took plenty of time to think the matter over and finally yielded to his persuasions and consented to marry him. He attempted to sound her as to what, if anything, she could contribute to their maintenance, but received no satisfaction. He had noticed that she was a very reticent woman, and as he had sufficient income to support her, irrespective of the claim he had spoken of, he did not press her for information.

Mr. Jones and the lady he was to marry lived in different cities. They were married quietly at the place where they met and went to live at the husband's home. They seemed to be admirably suited to each other and were very happy. Mrs. Jones did not give evidence of possessing any property, but one day in a burst of confidence that was unusual to her she told her husband that she, too, had a legal claim which she was prosecuting and had every reason to suppose that she would be rich. Jones tried to induce her to tell him all about it, but she declined, saying that should she do so it would bring up the matter of her former marriage, a subject she did not wish to discuss.

Jones had very good reason for not attempting to bring out any peculiar features connected with his wife's first marriage, for there were secrets concerning his own that it would be very unpleasant to speak of. But her excuse for withholding her confidence filled him with a dread lest there might have been something connected with his wife's love affair that it would pain him to know. And so he became a prey to some vague suspicion. Suppose for instance that a cloud vested on the legality of his wife's first marriage. Suppose she had been trapped into a mock ceremony. There was no reason for him to suspect these things. He simply conjured them up in his own fancy.

"YOU SEEM TO HAVE SOMETHING ON YOUR MIND."

People with guilty consciences are the quickest to torture themselves into a suspicion as to the record of one upon whom their happiness is dependent. Jones had married the second time without feeling perfectly sure that he was a widower. He had not been living with his first wife at the time he had heard of her death, and he had never been perfectly sure that the woman who had died was his wife. He should have informed the second Mrs. Jones of this uncertainty, but had feared that if he did so he would lose her. He preferred to take the very slight chance that existed of the first Mrs. Jones turning up to claim him and render his second marriage null and void.

One night while asleep, his wife being awake, Jones talked, conveying suspicions that there was something wrong about his first marriage. Since he had created for himself certain suspicions about the legality of his wife's first marriage each was now affected in the same manner toward the other This gradually began to produce an uncomfortable feeling between them. On one occasion Mrs. Jones said to her husband:

"What is the matter, dear? You seem to have something on your mind."

"I have remarked the same concerning yourself," he replied.

"I assure you I have nothing to trouble me."

"Nor I."

This was, to say the least, prevarication on Jones' part, for, in addition to his suspicions concerning his wife's former marriage, something had turned up to indicate that there was a possibility of his own former partner being alive.

One day Mr. Jones told his wife that he was obliged to go on a business trip. He kissed her goodby with more than usual feeling, so much so, indeed, that she clung to him, saying: "There is surely some trouble on your mind. Won't you tell me what it is?"

He made no reply for a few moments except to fold her tightly in his arms; then he said:

"When I return I will tell you all."

The morning of his return Mrs. Jones received a letter the envelope of which bore the stamp of Porter, Gibbs & Charleton, attorneys. Tearing it open, she read it hurriedly, then sank in an easy chair in a dead faint. A maid who was with her at the time restored her and supported her to her bedroom. The mistress as soon as she was alone took the letter she had received and locked it in a rosewood cabinet in which she kept her correspondence. Half an hour later she called a carriage and left the house.

When Jones returned, passing through the hall he caught sight of his face in a mirror. Struck with his pallor and his haggard appearance, he went into his library, where he made an attempt to nerve himself to meet his wife. The maid who had taken care of her entered soon after.

"Where is Mrs. Jones?" he asked.

"She told me to say to you that she had been called away till the day after tomorrow."

Jones didn't know whether to feel relieved or to consider himself plunged into a new complication.

"You needn't unpack that," he said to the maid, who took up his suit case. "I'm going away again tonight."

"What shall I say to Mrs. Jones when she returns?"

"What shall you say? Why, that I'll return in a few days."

The uncertainty Mr. Jones had felt as to his first wife's not being dead was converted into a strong probability. Nearly twenty years before he had wooed Alice Hinckley, but since he had but a few hundred dollars with which to support a wife her parents had objected to the match. The young couple resolved to be married and go to South America. The ceremony was performed clandestinely, and the bride returned from the church to her home. It had been agreed that they were to go on board a ship separately and in disguise, for they were suspected by the girl's parents, and to meet after the vessel had got well out to sea. Jones performed his part of the arrangement, but his wife was delayed and did not reach the dock until after the departure of the ship. She hid herself and took the next vessel, which sailed a few days later.

These two failed to meet. Jones not finding his bride aboard presumed that her courage had failed at the last moment. She, too proud to return to her father, supported herself by teaching in Rio de Janeiro. Jones wrote to her at her father's home, but received no reply. He drifted to London and thence to Australia. Nearly twenty years later he saw a notice of the death of Alice Hinckley at the city where he had married his wife. Returning to America, he learned that his wife's father and mother had died and left their property to their daughter, who had disappeared many years before and had never since been heard from. In case she did not claim the property within a given limit of time it would go to charity. Jones then put in a claim for it as Alice Hinckley's husband.

Now, what was troubling Jones was that a woman purporting to be Alice Hinckley had recently appeared and claimed the estate. If she were the real Alice Hinckley the second marriage was illegal.

Jones through the lawyers had made an appointment to meet the woman who claimed to be his wife, then he had gone home to await the date of the meeting two days hence. Returning for the interview, he repaired to the rendezvous and was ushered into a private office.

What was his astonishment to see there, pale and agitated, the second Mrs. Jones!

The two stared at each other for a few minutes as though they could not believe their eyes, then rushed into each other's arms.

There was an explanation involving events covering a period of twenty years. Both husband and wife claimed the same property, and each had heard that the other had turned up, but neither knew that the claimant was a former consort. The lawyers were as much astonished as the parties themselves, and the parties themselves were lost in wonder.

There was nothing for the couple to do but go home. Both regretted that there was no honeymoon for them, for they had never had one of the two to which they were entitled.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones did not enter upon a lawsuit for the estate; consequently they got it all instead of turning the most of it over to the lawyers. The pair have never ceased to believe that theirs was not a case of coincidence, but that Providence brought them together.

Disturbing No Slumbers.

Nero was fiddling while Rome burned. "I guess I'll fiddle to my heart's content on this occasion," he chuckled, beginning the "Roman Washerwoman's Jig." "The neighbors all appear to be too busy with other urgent matters to register any kicks about my fracturing the anti-noise ordinance."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

He Wondered.

It was a little lawyer man
Who softly blushed as he began
Her poor dead husband's will to scan.

He smiled while thinking of his fee,
Then said to her so tenderly,
"You have a nice fat legacy."

And when, next day, he lay in bed
With bandages upon his head
He wondered what on earth he'd said.

Jews For Australia?

The London Jewish Chronicle says that the Government of Western Australia is considering a business proposal for the purchase of an extensive area in that state on which to settle a million Russian Jews. This is a very astonishing statement, seeing that the total population of Western Australia at the last census in 1901 was only 184,124. If anything like a million Russian Jews were dumped down in Western Australia they would enormously outnumber the rest of the population, and the country would practically became a Russian colony with alien language and customs. It is difficult to believe that the English-speaking Western Australians can have contemplated so momentous a change. There are over 5,000,000 Jews in the Russian Empire.

ECZEMA AND WHAT IS DONE TO CURE IT

Desperate Efforts, Disheartening Failures and Final Success.

Eczema is a skin affliction to which men and women alike are subject, from the first to the last day of their existence. It may occur as a single tiny spot, appearing and disappearing with each change in general health or present only at certain seasons; at the other extreme, the whole body may be involved in a torturing eruption. The latter condition may gradually arise through the neglect or improper treatment of lesser troubles or an apparently healthy skin may, in a single day, become a mass of eczema.

But whatever the form of the affection, the distressing itching, burning, scaling and crusting, the serious disfigurement and the constant dread that the eczema will become chronic, make a speedy cure the aim of every sufferer. Unfortunately, such a cure is not always readily obtained. The most skilled physician is often at a loss and even hospitals are forced to discharge the patient as incurable. Then a wide variety of remedies are resorted to, many perfectly harmless and equally ineffective, others so offensive to every sense that, were it not for the relief they are supposed to afford, no person of refinement would tolerate them for an instant.

To such sufferers, discouraged by repeated failures of even these heroic methods, the instant relief afforded by the first bath with Cuticura Soap and gentle application of Cuticura Ointment is almost incredible. They stop the itching and burning at once, make sleep possible and, in most cases, point to a speedy cure. So pure and sweet are Cuticura Soap and Ointment and so free from every substance of a disagreeable or harmful nature that they can be used without hesitation on the youngest infant or tenderest skin. Besides, they are most economical, a single set being often sufficient for the treatment of even the severest cases.

In proof of the efficacy of the Cuticura Remedies it will be enough to quote here a single letter, from Mrs. Edward Nenning, 11 Lansing Block, Watertown, N.Y.: "Four years ago I suffered with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to feet and for six months confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor, I was advised to try Cuticura. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for three weeks. At the end of that time I was entirely cured and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies, as I know what they did for me."

Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent and Pills are sold by druggists everywhere. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole props., Boston, Mass. Mailed free, on request, latest 32-page Cuticura Book, a guide to the speedy and economical treatment of skin and scalp affections, from infancy to age.

The Famous Rayo

Gives the Best Light at Any Price

When you pay more than the Rayo price for a lamp, you are paying for extra decorations that cannot add to the quality of the light. You can't pay for a better light, because there is none. An oil light has the least effect on the human eye, and the Rayo Lamp is the best oil lamp made, though low in price. You can pay $5, $10, or $20 for some other lamp, and although you get a more costly lamp, you can't get a better light than the white, mellow, diffused, unflickering light of the low-priced Rayo.

Has a strong, durable shade-holder. This season's burner adds to the strength and appearance. Made of solid brass, nickeled, and easily polished.

Easily Tired Exhausted

DOES THIS DESCRIBE YOUR CASE? — THEN READ THIS LETTER ABOUT

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

The accompanying letter describes well the condition of a person whose nerves are weak and exhausted that little need be added.

The danger of such a state of health is sometimes overlooked by persons who do not realize that the next step is some form of paralysis which leaves one helpless in mind and body.

Mrs. Edward Schwartz, Ladysmith, Que., writes: "It is a pleasure to let you know how I was benefitted by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was run down and weak, unable to do any housework, was easily tired and exhausted, acked energy and ambition, was very nervous, easily irritated, could not concentrate the thoughts, hands and feet were cold, I could not sleep, had frequent headaches and dizzy spells and palpitation of the heart.

"Nervous prostration was my trouble, but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured it all and I cannot find words to express my thankfulness for this wonderful medicine."

The results achieved by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are often more wonderful than words can tell. In cases such as this patient persistent treatment is necessary, but you are encouraged by steady and natural improvement until the cure is thorough and complete.

There is a satisfaction in knowing that each and every dose is bound to be of at least some benefit in rebuilding the wasted nervous system.

Premier of N. S. to Resign?

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—A. K. MacLean, Attorney-General of Nova Scotia, who was formerly member of Parliament for Lunenburg, N.S., will very likely become Premier of Nova Scotia, in succession to Premier Murray, who, it is understood, will shortly resign to enter the Senate. The necessary vacancy has been created by the appointment of Senator MacGregor to the Lieutenant-Governorship of the province. Premier Murray had to have a leg amputated some time ago.

Mr. MacLean, while a member of the House of Commons, established a reputation as a fair and honorable Parliamentarian. He possesses much ability. When the Government had a hard task a few years ago to defend itself against the attacks of the Opposition regarding the notorious North Atlantic Trading Company transaction, Mr. MacLean was detailed to the defence. His speech on that occasion was infinitely superior to anything the members of the Government could utter on the subject.

Presentation to Hamar Greenwood.

London, Oct. 19.—The York Liberal Association has presented an illuminated address and dressing case to Hamar Greenwood, who, in expressing thanks referring to the Imperial conference, believed Botha, Ward, Laurier and Fisher would speak in support of the Liberals, not the Tories.

There was not a colonial representative of the self-governing colonies who could be a Tory here without forswearing his native legislation and being a traitor to his country.

Crippen's Banker Fails.

London, Eng., Oct. 19.—The Charing Cross Bank, with many branches in Great Britain, has suspended payment. Its advertised assets were over $8,000,000, and its deposits are estimated at $6,000,000.

Dr. Crippen, now awaiting trial for the murder of his wife, and the woman he is accused of killing, had a joint deposit of $3,000 in the bank.

A receiver for the bank has been appointed.

Fractured His Collar-Bone.

Elgin, Man., Oct. 19.—While on a scaffolding inspecting a new verandah, James Argue, provincial member for Avondale, fell six feet, owing to the tilting of a board. He suffered a fractured collar-bone.

SCHOOLS ALL RIGHT.

Parents Remove Children Too Early From School, Say Mr. Reaume.

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 19.—Hon. J. O. Reaume, Ontario's Minister of Public Works, who looms large in the public eye as the result of the Fallon controversy over bilingual schools in this county, arrived in Windsor from Toronto at a late hour Monday night, to attend the wedding of his niece, Miss Evelyn Bourke, which was solemnized yesterday morning. Dr. Reaume gave out a statement, in which he says:

"I had no knowledge or suspicion of how Mr. Hanna's letter was given out till the morning of the 15th. As to the children lacking education, it is not the fault of the schools; it is more the fault of the parents who take their children from school at an early age, making it impossible for them to get the opportunity of higher education.

"English is placed before anything else in the instruction of the French-speaking pupils, and there is now little French taught in the schools of the county. When we get an efficient French-English teacher we do so, otherwise we engage English teachers. That the trouble in the separate schools of the county has been lack of discipline due to frequent changes in the teaching staff is the opinion entertained in other quarters."

Seat for Maisonville.

Tilbury, Oct. 19.—At a meeting of the Tilbury North Township Council Monday, the members, all French-Canadian Liberals but one, pledged Dr. Reaume that they would give him a majority of three hundred at the next election, as a protest against Bishop Fallon's attack on him. The township is largely Liberal.

The French are greatly worked up and a safe French seat is promised to Maisonville, the dismissed secretary of Hon. Dr. Reaume.

Endorses Fallon.

Windsor, Oct. 19.—E. P. Gavin, principal of the Windsor Collegiate institute and a resident of Windsor for over twenty years, has signified his endorsement of the main charges made by Bishop Fallon against the schools of North Essex.

Will Be Extradited.

Winnipeg, Oct. 19.—Chief Justice Mathers yesterday afternoon granted an extradition warrant to representatives of the Czar, that Swava Federenko might be taken back to Russian territory, to stand his trial for murder. The defence claimed that Federenko was a political refuge, and that the Russian Government was anxious to get hold of him to answer for conspiracy against the Czar. The chief justice held that the mere fact that Federenko had shot down one soldier did not constitute him a revolutionist, and on these grounds ordered the extradition. H. F. Hagel, K.C. states that he will at once apply for habeas corpus, and failing this, will take the case to Privy Council in England, if necessary.

The case has attracted considerable interest amongst political refugees in this country, and lawyers and members of the Douma now residing in New York and Chicago attended the trial.

Due to Parasitic Disease.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—That the present cause of the alarming high price of turkeys is directly due to a parasite disease, which is carrying off large flocks of birds, in all parts of the country, is a statement made by Dr. Charles Higgins, Dominion biologist. If stringent precautions are not taken at once to combat the disease intelligently, the price of the fowl will soar still higher, as the inroads of the disease will spread and continue to deplete the supply in all the provinces.

Blackhead, as the disease is commonly known, has been found in all the provinces of the Dominion by Dr. Higgins, he having observed cases where whole flocks of turkeys have been carried off by the parasite. A simple remedy for the disease is to starve the bird for 48 hours, and then let it drink from a mixture composed of a teaspoonful of muriatic acid to a quart of water.

Grain Growers Not Representative.

London, Oct. 19.—Sir J. Laurence writes the press, enclosing a letter from Robert Meighen, who says the grain growers' association represents not over 25 per cent. of the farmers. There is no substantial demand for free trade in the northwest. He considers lowering the tariff would be bad for Canada, and says every nerve must be strained to keep trade under the flag.

A Monster Deputation.

Winnipeg, Oct. 19.—The grain growers of the west have practically completed arrangments for the monster deputation which will go to Ottawa to lay before the Government their claims for a lowering of the tariff, reciprocity in farm products, and a removal of the duty on farm implements. It will be the largest deputation which has ever left the west, and will go about Dec. 5.

Compete For Subsidy.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—Andrew Allan of the Allan Steamship Line, had a conference with Sir Richard Cartwright yesterday, regarding the Atlantic mail subsidy contract with the Government, expiring 18 months hence. Some time ago the Allan Line submitted a proposition for a 11-knot service, the subsidy asked being upwards of a million dollars.

The announcement that the Empresses of the Canadian Pacific are going to the Pacific is taken to mean that the company will place faster vessels on the Atlantic, and will be competitors. The White Star, Dominion, and Canadian Northern will also endeavor to secure the subsidy.

Football Player Killed.

Detroit, Oct. 19.—Claude H. Buell, a student at the Western High School, died of injuries received in a football game Saturday. He was kicked in the head and suffered from hemorrhage of the brain.

No Truth In It.

Montreal, Oct. 19.—"The newspapers must have been affected by the comet," was the reply yesterday by Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, who was reported as being in consultation at the Windsor with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with a view to the entry of Sir Hibbert into the Liberal party.

In the first place, Sir Wilfrid Laurier is attending the Liberal nomination in Drummond and Arthabaska, and secondly, he has never met Sir Hibbert Tupper since coming east, so the story of the meeting at the Windsor is made out of whole cloth. In conclusion, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper said that the day he and Sir Wilfrid are seen working together the end of the world may be looked for.

School Teacher Assaulted Girls.

Gretna, Oct. 19.—Saturday Abram Packan, a school teacher in the Mennonite Village of Grunthal, was convicted of indecently assaulting four school children under the age of fourteen, and fined $100 or six months in jail. Monday Peter H. Giesbrecht, a Mennonite school teacher, in a German school here, was arrested, charged with offences against seven girls, for a period extending over two years.

A Satisfactory Increase.

During his visit to Canada, Right Rev. Arthur Winnington-Ingram Bishop of London, has taken occasion to refute the story of the decadence of the Old Country. He said that the impression had been created by the typical Englishman's lack of boastfulness. "The Americans think that John Bull is serious when he deprecates himself," said the bishop, "but bless you he doesn't mean it. If you imagine over here that John Bull is played out, you're making the mistake of your life. Don't you be deceived by his habit of deprecating himself."

The bishop did not find many Canadians with the habit of deprecating themselves. Every one who met him wanted to know what he thought of the growth of Canada since he was last here. That was the query put to him during his short stay in Toronto, for he did not make the capital of Ontario one of his stopping places. Even in the little town of Aylmer, he found the citizens anxious to know if he had not been duly impressed with the fact that the Dominion is now enjoying its growing time. To the friends of his brother he gave a very characteristic answer. "The last time I was here," he said, "I had nine nephews and nieces; this time I find I have four more. At this rate Canada's population is increasing very satisfactorily."

Pat Again.

An Irishman and a Canadian judge were one day traveling together through Canada. They were discussing the relative merits of Canada and Ireland, till at last the judge, getting angry at Pat's obstinacy in maintaining the superiority of Ireland, asked:

"Now, in real earnest, wouldn't you be a long time in Ireland before you'd have the honor of traveling in a first-class carriage with a judge?"

"That would be so," agreed Pat. "And you'd be a long time in Ireland before they'd make a judge of you!"

WALTER MAHAFFEY GETS ONE MONTH IN THE GAOL

Young Man Who Pleaded Guilty to Getting Money Under False Pretences Goes Up on Hill---Pleaded With the Magistrate to be Given Another Chance---Has Quite a Record.

Walter Mahaffy appeared in the Police Court this morning to receive his sentence for the charge of false pretence, which he pleaded guilty to on the morning of Monday, October 10th.

"Give me a chance, your Worship" pleaded Mahaffy. "If you will let me go this time, I will turn over a new leaf; I will never take anything, or do anything wrong again."

"How many chances do you want?" said his Worship. "Do you want me to give you a chance to go on stealing and come on as bad as ever?"

"No, your Worship," answered the prisoner. "I promise not to do anything wrong; I will be good from this out."

Well, I cannot allow this to go on," concluded the Magistrate; "I will send you to gaol for one month, and you can be good when you get out. The first thing for you to do when you get out, is to pay Mr. Taylor, if you have to live on bread and water to do it. If you ever appear before me again I will send you to the Central Prison; I cannot be bothered with boys like you.

Mahaffy pleaded to have the ten days he has already spent in jail to run on the month, so he was given fourteen days on the hill.

West End Athletic Club Has Handsome New Quarters

The West End Athletic Club, comprising some of the leading young men of the city, has recently moved into new and commodious clubrooms on George street, over the Royal Theatre. The club, although not an old one by any means, has a representative membership and the object of its existence is along athletic and social lines. The new rooms, which have recently undergone considerable treatment at the hands of the paper hanger and decorator, present a very attractive appearance, and are easily among the best in the city. All new furniture has been purchased and everything for the convenience and comfort of the members has been provided. There is a large billiard room, with two tables, and to the front of this is a spacious sitting room, furnished with piano, easy chairs, plenty of magazines and reading matter. On the other side is a room extending the full length of the building. This will be utilized for entertaining purposes on such occasions as club dances.

Everything points to a most successful fall and winter season, and a good time is in store for the members and their friends.

E COMPANY ENTERTAINED AT ENJOYABLE BANQUET

Lieut. Comstock entertained the members of C Company of the 57th Regiment at a very enjoyable banquet in the recreation rooms of the armouries last night. The evening was very pleasantly spent in music and speeches, the members of the company contributing to the programme. Sergt. Adams gave a song, followed by one from Sergt. Steadman. Col.-Sergt. Soucie's contribution was an enjoyable recitation and Corporal Webb made a bright speech.

Lieut Comstock in a short speech referred to the benefits accruing to a young man from being a member of the 57th and pointed out the privileges that were enjoyed at the armouries.

With the addition of Col.-Sergt. Soucie, an effort will be made to make C Company the best in the regiment. Smokers will be given by the company during the coming winter. Two baseball teams and three bowling teams have been formed. The members are very enthusiastic about the prospect and there is a bright future before C Company.

T GIVE ADDRESS ON SOCIAL REFORM TO-NIGHT

Visits the Local Colony To-day---Has Had a Great Reception on His Canadian Tour and is Happy to Find His Countrymen So Prosperous.

PSALMIST OF FATHERLAND

Mr. Spiros Matsoukas, the famous Greek poet who is engaged in visiting the Greeks of Canada and the United States for the purpose of raising funds to build a battleship for the Greek navy, arrived in the city last night from Toronto, accompanied by his lieutenant, Mr. George Spiliotopoulos and Mr. Wm. Kerrys, one of the most prominent Greeks in Toronto. To-day he will address the small colony of Greeks for the purpose of interesting them in his patriotic and meritorious project. Mr. Matsoukas is the most famous living Greek poet, and has for fifteen years been engaged in the work of visiting the Greek colonies. For this he receives no salary; on the other hand he pays his own expenses. A graduate of the University of Athens and a lawyer of repute, he gave up a most promising career to chant and sing the cause of Greece in his wonderful verse. By a special decree of King George of Greece, 100,000 copies of his poems, entitled "Bugle Calls," have been distributed to the soldiers of the Greek army. Two presents that he prizes greatly are a solid silver cross give nhim by the "Virgins of Cyprus," and a beautiful silk Greek flag from the Normal School for Girls at Athens, with the inscription, "To the Psalmist of the Fatherland." From Prince George of Greece he has received a massive anchor pin.

Mr. Matsoukas has been meeting with great success on his present tour in Canada and the battleship fund project has been well received by his fellow countrymen living in the land of the Maple Leaf. He has visited Montreal, Ottawa, London, Hamilton, Berlin, Stratford, Toronto and other cities, and has been cordially welcomed by his compatriots wherever he went.

His lieutenant, Mr. Spiliotopoulos informed the Examiner to-day that one pleasing feature of the tour so far had been the fact that the Greeks in all the cities visited had been found to be peaceable, respectable, industrious, law-abiding citizens who were respected by their Canadian neighbours. Mr. Matzoukas never allows an opportunity to pass to urge upon his fellow countrymen to remember the glorious history of their country and to uphold its traditions.

BIG BALLOON PASSES OVER LITTLE CURRENT

One of the Air Craft Starting From St. Louis Has Sailed Over Lake Huron

SEEN LAST NIGHT

Special to The Examiner:

LITTLE CURRENT, ONT., OCT. 19. An enormous balloon, probably one of those in the international contest from St. Louis, passed over this place last night, about midnight. In the bright moonlight it was clearly visible and people on the vessels in the harbour heard voices talking. They had apparently sailed over Lake Huron and Manitoulin Island, and were going in a northeasterly direction towards the main line of the Canadian Pacific. With the aid of a megaphone, people on board asked their bearings, but did not say who they were.

The block contest at the Brock St. rink last night was one of the most successful events of the season. The rink was crowded and a very enthusiastic lot of onlookers greeted the prize winners with loud applause. A diamond ring was the lady's prize, won by Miss Vina Smyth. The gentlemen's prize, a fountain pen, was won by Mr. Elliott. Also last Saturday night, a very successful confetti carnival was held. A large crowd of skaters was in attendance, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The confetti was distributed at 8.30, and showers of it were flying in all directions. The six-hour grind has been called off. The next special night will be the weekly Rower night Friday night next.

A CHASE LIKELY

(Lindsay Post.)

Large game have not been seen around Lindsay for a great many years and only stories of by-gone narrow escapes where Kent street now is recall the "animals I have known or met." But last evening was an exception, for up at the west of the town on Angeline avenue a surprising sight was witnessed by a lady when she happened to look out upon the road at about nine o'clock. There, slowly crossing the road, from the field in the rear of Dr. Pogue's were two immense coal black bears. They shuffled up the bank on the other side and slid noiselessly into the woods, where no doubt they are waiting for another night to fall to enable them to stroll around the many nearby orchards unmolested.

The presence of these unusual prowlers will afford the hunting fraternity an opportunity to gain experience without having to go far for the furriest of game. Who is going to secure the pelts?

LAID TO REST

Funeral of Sister Adrian Was Held This Morning

The funeral of Sister Adrian, who died on Monday morning in St. Joseph's Hospital, as the result of an operation, took place this morning at 9 o'clock, from the chapel of the Sacred Heart, Mt. St. Joseph. The ceremony was very touching and impressive. Presiding in the Sanctuary were the Rev. Father McGuire, Downeyville; Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Sacred Heart; Rev. Father Kelly, Norwood; Rev. W. J. McColl, St. Peter's Cathedral; Rev. Father Toner, Rev. J. McAuley, Sacred Heart, and Rev. Father Casey, St. Peter's Cathedral. Solemn Requiem High Mass was offered up by Rev. Fr. McGuire, with Fathers McAuley and Kelly as deacon and subdeacon, and Rev. Dr. O'Brien, master of ceremonies. The chief mourners were Sister Agnitus, North Bay, sister, and Mr. Jas. Noonan, Mount Forest, brother. Dr. McNulty, Inspector O'Brien, Mr. W. O'Brien, Mr. Giroux, Mr. Letellier, and Mr. Picard acted as pall-bearers. The boys of St. Peter's School attended en masse. Rev. Dr. O'Brien officiated at the grave. In a long discourse after the absolution, Father McGuire touchingly referred to the deceased as one of the best friends he ever knew and extended his sympathy to the bereaved community.

LAST MINUTE DESPATCHES: REPRIEVE ASKED FOR CANDY

Wife of Montreal Man Sentenced to Hang on November 18th for Killing Two Constables, is Losing Her Reason ---Bigamist Gets Two Years---Another Matrimonial Repeater is Arrested.

Special to The Examiner.

SHERBROOKE, OCT. 19.—Joseph Pinault, convicted of bigamy, having one wife in western Ontario, was sentenced to two years this morning. May Doherty, charged with infanticide was convicted of the concealment of its birth and will be sentenced to-morrow. She is prominent in social centres and the case has caused much excitement.

To Save Candy.

MONTREAL, OCT. 19.—Stating that the prisoner's wife is losing her reason, Father Radcliffe has started a petition, already signed by four hundred people, praying for reprieve of the sentence of Timothy Candy, sentenced to hang November 18th for killing two constables.

Bigamist Arrested.

WINDSOR, OCT. 19. John Wesley McCoy, of Detroit, was arrested here, charged with bigamy by his first wife.

A German Balloon.

TORONTO, ONT., OCT. 19.—It is thought that the balloon which was seen in Swift Current, Ont., which is now sailing somewhere along north shore is the Germania, with Capt. Van Abercon as pilot.

French Canadians Meet.

OTTAWA, OCT. 19.—In a meeting of the French Canadians' Congress executive last night, vigorous resolutions were passed denouncing Bishop Fallon's campaign for abolishing bilingual schools and welcoming the appointment by the Ontario government of a Royal Commission for investigation of the system.

The Great Gathering Of Y. M. C. A. Men in Toronto Delegates To Be Chosen

Local Young Men's Christian Associations throughout Canada are busy selecting the delegates to represent them at the Great International Convention to be held in Toronto on Oct. 28-31. Some idea of the importance of the gathering is had from the fact that over two thousand delegates will be present.

The programme for the Convention is, in part, as follows:

Quiet hour session—Fletcher S. Brockman, national secretary, China.

Triennial report of International Committee—Dr. L. C. Warner, New York.

"A Decade of Association Progress."—Home Field; Foreign Field, W. D. Murray, New York.

"The Unifying Power of Christ and His Service."—Rev. J. L. Gordon, Winnipeg.

"The Timeliness of the Association to Meet the Needs of Canada."—J. A. Macdonald, Toronto.

Three devotional addresses by Dr. George L. Robinson, of Chicago.

"In view of (a) Large Modern Buildings, (b) Civic and Industrial Opportunities, (c) Growth of Brotherhoods and Kindred Organizations, what is the present-day association objective, and what changes, if any, are required in our Religious Work Methods?"—C. R. Joy, A. G. Studer, Chas. R. Townson, W. K. Cooper, L. W. Messer and others.

"The Association's Message to Young Men."—F. S. Brockman, China.

"The Latent Powers of the Men of North America."—N. W. Rowell, K.C., of Toronto, and Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, of Rochester.

"Our World-Wide Obligations."—John R. Mott, LL.D.

"What Can the Association do to Recruit for the Church, Leaders, Lay and Clerical?"—Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, Rochester.

"Safeguarding the Boys of a Continent." — Ernest Thompson Seton, New York, and D. B. Forbs, New York.

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK.

The Greeks are an illustration of the fact that a man can have two objects of loyalty without reciprocal impairment of his obligations in respect of either; that a man may be loyal to his mother land, and at the same time loyal to his adopted country. Spiros Matsoukas, the poet laureate of Greece, is becoming the Hellenic patriot abroad. He is in Canada at present, visiting the Canadians of Greek birth, or those of the same origin in the United States, with the object of procuring contributions towards meeting the expense of a battleship for Greece. His representative, his secretary, with a name that recalls one's school boy memories of polupholoisboio thalasse—George Spiliotopoulos—is in Peterborough to-day, addressing the Greeks of the city upon the object of Matsoukas' mission; upon which, so far, he has found that on this continent the Greeks all over both countries are industrious and prosperous citizens of their new country. In the addresses given by the poet and his secretary to their Greek compatriots, who have adopted this continent as their home, the latter are enjoined to be good citizens, to obey the laws of the country, and in all ways be worthy of the great traditions of the country from which they spring. At the same time their home loyalty is appealed to; they are urged to give of their means, as they have prospered in their new home, for the defence of the Argive land. And their response is liberal. The poet tells us that when Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war; but in this case, when Greek meets Greek then comes—prophetically—the tug of the battleship hawser.

EXTENDING THE SCHOOL AGE.

There seems to be considerable demand for the extending of the age limit of Public school attendance to 16 years. This may be unobjectionable, but it would it not be better to provide for better attendance of the children of lesser age. It is notorious that the rate of attendance at school of children of school age is very small. To-day and every day we see children idling about the streets in school hours, who should be at school. Might we not well make the best of what we have? Before we might make some reasonably successful attempt to enforce the regulations at present authorized by law. A great deal of the trouble of the world arises from multiplication of laws—perplexing details of action, regardless of an attempt to act on principle. A man who guides his life by rules instead of being moved by the spirit springing from respect for principle is a mere mechanical man, in one sense a body without soul. The Methodists after a hundred years and more of experience with the "foot note" in their book of discipline, decided at the last General Conference in British Columbia, to supersede it, by "making conference" principles the guide in the avoidance of questionable amusements," thus throwing the man back upon the resources of character the only true human source of strength. If we multiply transgressions by providing new laws and neglecting enforcement of what we have, we are not making much progress. If we cannot or at least, do not, enforce the law requiring attendance at school according to the present prescribed age limit of children whose services are of no particular value to their parents how can we expect to enforce an extension of the limit to an age which means bread earning and a very much stronger temptation to parents to transgress the law?

PILES Dr. Chase's Ointment is certain and guaranteed cure for each and every form of Itching, Blind, Bleeding and Protruding Piles. You are not asked to buy it unless you are satisfied that it is what we claim. Price 60 cents. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

FIT THE PUNISHMENT TO THE CRIME.

In the York County Court on Saturday fifty convicted criminals stood before the judges for sentence. In one case, that of a man convicted of indecent assault, the judge remarked that his obvious ill-health was all that prevented him (the judge) adding the lash to the sentence of imprisonment. Is not this carrying sentiment a little too far—too liberal an application of the saying, the merciful man is merciful to the beast. Did not the convicted wretch commit a crime by which in becoming a beast he forfeited all consideration due to a man? Did he in committing the outrageous offence, consider the state of health of his victim? Half a hundred lashes laid upon a thick-skinned animal—morally if not physically—would not compare for one moment with the physical, mental and moral suffering, shame and sense of abasement of his victim? The punishment should fit the crime and what fitter punishment than the scourge for the most odious and repulsive scourge of society? The Toronto judge erred in softness of heart and failure of judgment in not prescribing the lash. As the Globe suggests, this form of punishment might have been added contingent upon the criminal's restoration to full health. He should not have had a chance to escape. His crime is sui generis, and the pu*nishment should be in a class of its* own. There seems to be no other way of dealing with such criminals than physical pain, the only form of punishment that is known to have a deterrent effect. All the crimes that express the satyr in a man's nature—rape, incest, indecent assault, seduction might well come within the category of the lash, or deprivation of the power to repeat the crime, either within or without prison walls.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The circle of race, and creed fomenters is narrowing. It is reduced to the Mauland Empire and its allies, and to Henri Bourassa and his band of agitators in Quebec.

Galt is complaining of embarrassing prosperity. Houses are badly needed and new ones are building faster than city water services can be put in. As the Toronto Star would say, it takes a good deal of Galt to grumble under such circumstances.

Old country people are often spoken of as slow, yet, remarks the Victoria, B.C. Times, a London theatre exhibited moving pictures of the Queen's Own Rifles being reviewed by Lord Roberts on the same day the event happened. The review took place in the afternoon, and the pictures were shown in the evening. This seems rather fast for a slow people.

COST OF CROP PRODUCTION.

(Weekly Sun)

An excellent work has been done in the introduction of the system of keeping records of production in dairy herds of the Province. What has been done in this way has led to more intelligent feeding, to the culling out of unprofitable animals and has been followed by a very large increase in production on many dairy farms.

The Sun believes an even more beneficial work may be accomplished by the general introduction of a system of keeping records of the cost of producing different crops and the results obtained from same. Some information has already been obtained by the Sun, with the assistance of a number of practical farmers, in regard to this matter. Part of the information obtained is given in this issue; more will be given in later issues. It is not pretended that what is given is final or authoritative; but it is of some value in itself and should prove of much greater value if it leads to a general inquiry on the part of readers as to what it really costs to produce the several crops annually raised on the farm.

THE ART OF BULL-DRIVING.

(Toronto Globe.)

Sir James might elucidate the letter mystery were he to proceed after the manner of "the house that Jack built."

This is the letter that caused the row.

This is the traitor who published the letter that caused the row.

This is the statesman who prompted the traitor who published the letter that caused the row.

But will Sir James get as far as that before he is skillfully jerked off in some other direction? It is hardly likely. The astute person from Lambton, whose duty it is to see that the bull does not get into the china shop, may not always be able to control the noble animal when he is in a rage, and occasionally he himself is in as imminent peril as ever bull-driver was or could be in. But at the critical moment somehow he is able to direct the impetuous onslaught of his charge in the direction in which there is least danger either to the bull or his keeper.

Dr. Beaume and Dr. Pyne should get out into the open somewhere, especially as if they see the man from Lambton heading the bull in their direction.

THE DES MOINES PLAN.

(Brantford Expositor)

James R. Hanna, Mayor of Des Moines, Iowa, a city which recently adopted the plan of government by commission, has written an elaborate eulogy of the system and of the results achieved. He says:

The administration has been prompter, and the city has been cleaned up physically and morally far beyond the old order. Permanent improvements have been secured to an extent not even approached in the past. And all has been done upon a tax levy ranging from 8 mills to 42 mills less than during the preceding year. To be exact, the levy during the two years of the Des Moines plan has averaged 2.7 mills less than it averaged under the old plan during the eight years preceding.

To be sure, there has been a great civic awakening in Des Moines, and to this some observers may ascribe the improvements, upon the theory that "a new broom sweeps clean." But the fact is that one of the chief merits of the Des Moines plan is its effect in fixing popular attention upon public affairs, and thereby tending to arouse and sustain popular civic interest.

Under the new plan, the average citizen of Des Moines takes personal pride in his city government. Under the old plan, it was customary to criticize, or to speak apologetically, or to avoid the subject. This could not promote alertness. Ninety-five per cent. of the citizens of Des Moines are thoroughly satisfied that the change of two years ago was a good change. They would not go back to the old form under any consideration.

There is undoubtedly much to be said in favour of the commission plan of civic government. In theory it is certainly all right; in practice everything depends on obtaining men of the right type as commissioners; men who regard "public office as a public trust," and are above both self-seeking and partyism. The chances are that the plan would work well in some cities, while being a failure in others.

Relation Of Protection To Inter-Imperial Free Trade

(Montreal Witness)

Until the fiscal policy of the Colonies ceases to be dominated by the protectionist spirit it is hopeless to anticipate anything approaching to inter-imperial free trade. Our manufacturers are perfectly frank and definite in their declarations that they mean to enforce protection against the Mother Country, and any such measure of preference as Canada now gives her was not initiated with their good-will. On the other hand, the British tariff reform movement, at its present stage, is just as frankly protectionist. It is urged by the successors of Mr. Chamberlain that colonial products should be taxed, though at a lower rate than foreign products, so as to protect British industries from foreign competition, whether it come from within the Empire or without. Thus, as Mr. Harold Cox has pointed out, the tariff "reform" agitation in Great Britain, instead of working towards free trade within the Empire, is working for the creation of internal trade barriers where none now exist; while supposing that the colonies were willing to diminish their autonomy, something they have given no indication of doing, it is quite within the bounds of the probable that the action which would arise in attempting to establish a common tariff would act as a disruptive force, within the Empire rather than a unifying one. As for the argument that England is under a moral obligation to make a return in kind for the preferential tariff established by Canada, the answer is that England already gives Canada better terms than Canada gives her.

Great Britain buys twice as much from Canada as she sells to her, and practically the whole of the Canadian import into Great Britain is free of duty, while two-thirds of the British import into Canada is subject to duty. Is it not a sound and just position to take that until Canada treats Great Britain as well as Great Britain treats her, Great Britain is "under no moral obligation to alter her fiscal system in order to improve still further Canada's position in the British markets? It is a totally different matter for a free trade country to close its ports to the greater part of the world in order to give an additional favour to one particular state or group of states than for a country which already has a protectionist tariff to make a rebate off that tariff in favour of any particular country. Let those who seek to disturb the present status of Great Britain's trade consider a few potent facts and figures. Between 1902 and 1908 the British exports to the self-governing colonies declined by just over $20,000,000, while the foreign countries they have increased by $385,000,000. As we have often shown, and as Mr. Harold Cox reiterates:

The truth is that the self-governing colonies, all taken together, account for more than one-third of British trade. Not one of the Empire as a whole, including India and all our tropical Colonies, account for more than one-third of our total exports. During the past fifty years, in spite of the enormous extension of the British Empire, both in area and in population, not only one-third of our exports year in and year out have gone to British Possessions, while two-thirds have gone to foreign countries. If we confine our attention to those self-governing Colonies which are the seats of the white population of the country for preferential trade we find that foreign countries are now buying nearly five times as much from the United Kingdom as these Colonies buy.

There is old-fashioned advice, hitherto considered sound, that it is wise "to leave well enough alone," and there is no doubt as to what any successful merchant would reply to suggestions that he should quarrel with his best and largest customers. Tariff reformers and some "imperialists" should consult the apothegm of Mr. Andrew Mc-Phail: "That is something more important than thinking imperially, and that is to think sensibly even about imperialism."

For Constipation

A Medicine That Does Not Cost Anything Unless It Cures

The active medicinal ingredient of Rexall Orderlies, which are odourless, tasteless and colourless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other extremely valuable ingredients, it forms a perfect bowel regulator, intestinal invigorator and stomachic. Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy and are notable for their agreeableness to the palate and gentleness of action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience.

Unlike other preparations for like purpose, they do not create a habit but instead they overcome the cause of habit acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives, cathartics and harsh physic, and permanently remove the cause of constipation or irregular bowel action.

We will refund your money without argument if they do not do as we say they will. Two sizes, 25c. and 50c. Sold only at our store. The Rexall Store. McDonald and Bury, corner

SPORTING WRITERS GLUM BUT THE CHICAGO FANS STILL WANT TO BET

Believe Their Team Can Come Back and Are Offering Even Money---W. A. Hewitt Says Athletics Have Only One Pitcher and That is Chief Bender---Coombs Was a Disappointment.

CHICAGO, OCT. 19.—The sporting writers on the big papers here, writing about the world's series, are very glum to-day, following the second whacking of their pet Cubs by Philadelphia, at Philadelphia yesterday. Still they are offering even money, hoping that their team will come back. It is expected that the game to-morrow will be even more exciting and attended by larger crowds than at Philadelphia. The Chicagoans will be loyal to their baseball team till the finish of the series. W. A. Hewitt, the Canadian baseball expert, says it is quite possible the Cubs will win both home games and leave the championship to be decided on neutral grounds. It is quite evident, says Hewitt, that the Athletics have only one pitcher, Chief Bender, as their pitching yesterday was a disappointment. He attributes the Athletics' victory to the fact that they had more youth and ginger.

EXAMINER WILL HAVE REPORT OF TO-MORROW'S BALL GAME IN CHICAGO

There is no game in the world's series to-day as the teams are making the trip from Philadelphia to Chicago. To-morrow the first game in the Windy City will be played and a great deal hinges upon the result. Athletics with two games won have the edge on Chance's men, but a win for the Cubs to-morrow will close the gap up considerably. Naturally there is great interest being taken in to-morrow's game and local fans will be glad to know that the Examiner to-morrow will contain a complete account of the game, with the vivid story of the play by innings as seen by an expert baseball writer. Many favourable comments have been made upon the enterprise of the Examiner in giving such a speedy and up-to-date service and the fans are assured that the story of to-morrow's game will be even more complete than that of yesterday's battle at Philadelphia. If you are interested in to-morrow's game don't fail to see the Examiner.

HOTEL ELDRIGE.

It Was a Private House Mistaken For a Hotel.

By GERALD JENNINGS.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

Fordham drove his automobile into a cottage settlement by the sea and, slowing up beside a fisherman peddling the product of his nets, asked to be directed to the best house in the place. The fisherman, who was not overburdened with brains, failing to understand that the autoist was looking for a hotel, directed him to the finest summer cottage.

"What's the name?" asked the traveler.

"Eldrige."

"Thank you very much."

The automobile was started again, chug-chugged to an eminence where the house in question stood and stopped at the front porch. A man in a white flannel suit sat on a wicker chair fanning himself.

"Got a garage?" asked Fordham.

"Yes, one in the rear," replied the man, looking hard at the questioner.

"Well, send a man to take my machine in."

The man stared at Fordham with an expression bordering between surprise and amusement. Then he said:

"WHAT SORT OF HOTEL DO YOU CALL THIS?"

"Our auto man is out just now, sir. I would take it in for you, but I don't know anything about autos."

"All right; I'll do it myself."

Fordham steered his machine into the garage. When he returned the man whom he supposed to be the landlord had disappeared. Fordham stalked into the house.

"Toney," he remarked to himself. "Coziest hotel I've been in in a month of Sundays. Good enough for a private house."

The owner, Edward Eldrige, was upstairs, where the members of a house party he was entertaining were getting ready for dinner. He was passing the word that there was a man below who had mistaken the house for a hotel and proposed that they have some fun out of it. Most of them were dressed for dinner, and a consultation took place in the upper hall. Louise Vincent, who was always ready for mischief, insisted on dressing herself as a maid and waiting on the stranger at dinner.

Soon after this one by one the guests went downstairs, all in dinner dress. One of them, Ben Howland, was taken "flat aback" by finding in Fordham an acquaintance.

"Hello, Howland!" exclaimed the latter. "You here?"

"Glad to see you old man!" replied Howland, steadying himself after his surprise.

"Swell place this," rejoined Fordham. "I see every one is in dinner dress. Luckily I've got a suit in my traveling wardrobe. I'll get it out."

At that moment Eldrige entered the room.

"Landlord," said Howland, "this is my friend Mr. Fordham. Mr. Fordham is a bang up good fellow, and I wish you to treat him well. He has enough to pay for what he gets and wants the best."

The landlord bowed, washing his hands in imaginary water, and asked the new guest if there was any especial dish he would like for dinner. Fordham said he wished for plenty of shellfish while he remained and would like to be shown to his room at once.

When Fordham came down to dinner he was surprised to see the landlord sitting at the head of the table in evening dress. Being seated himself by Howland, he whispered:

"I see you have the landlord with you."

"That's the latest wrinkle in these small swell hotels."

"You don't mean it. I've never seen it before."

There was plenty of chat among the guests of the house, and Fordham was introduced to them all. Every one seemed to be on as good terms with the host as with the rest of the party, but he noticed that Eldrige, as the guests called him, might have passed anywhere for a gentleman. Fordham called to the waitress who seemed to have his wants in charge and, slipping a tip into her hand, asked her to bring him a wine card. The landlord, hearing the order, remarked:

"We don't have wine cards at the Eldrige House, Mr. Fordham. We can give you champagne, claret and sauterne."

"I would like a quart of champagne," replied Fordham.

In a few minutes the waitress brought the wine, and Mr. Fordham, being very much pleased with the company, told her to fill the glass of every guest and that of the landlord. When all were primed Eldrige raised his glass to his lips and, bowing to Fordham, said:

"Welcome to Hotel Eldrige. May you remain long. I'll see that you get the best of everything."

When the first bottle of wine had been emptied the maid brought another. Fordham hadn't ordered it, and when the landlord pledged him again, saying that he thought he would like it, Fordham fancied there had been some mistake. However, money being no object to him, he ordered still another bottle. What astonished him was that none of the other guests followed his example. Finally the host ordered a bottle, saying:

"Mr. Fordham, you're the only guest I have who knows how to spend his money like a gentleman. This is on the house."

Fordham, who expected to hear the thrust resented, was surprised at a burst of laughter. Eldrige scowled, and the others checked their mirth. Fordham, thinking that there was some joke of which he was ignorant connected with the wine, asked what it was. He was told that the Hotel Eldrige was a temperance house and that he had broken the rule in ordering the wine. This satisfied him.

After dinner a small motorboat was brought up to a pier, and the guests of the hotel invited Fordham to have a ride with them. The landlord came aboard, but after his presence at the dinner this did not surprise Fordham. When the maid who had waited on him got aboard he supposed she was to go to serve refreshments. But the landlord introduced him to her, saying, "You are expected, Mr. Fordham, to devote yourself to Miss Vincent for the evening."

The maid, unabashed, took a seat beside Fordham, who looked at every member of the party successively, especially the ladies, to know if there would be anything amiss in his entertaining a maid. But they were all chatting with Miss Vincent familiarly, some of them calling her "Lou," and since Fordham had had an eye on her during the dinner he was not slow in availing himself of the privilege that had been extended to him.

"For heaven's sake, Howland," said Fordham after the party had gone ashore and were separating for the night, "what sort of hotel do you call this anyway?

"I'll tell you. Eldrige is a man with a whim. He is above the station of a landlord. Indeed, he's very scholarly. He has a theory that one person is as good as another, that he doesn't demean himself by keeping a hotel and that his servants are entitled to hobnob with his guests so long as they behave themselves. You being the last arrival, the maid was assigned to you for the boat ride."

Fordham remained at the Hotel Eldrige several days, during which the conspirators kept him in ignorance of the fact that he was in a private house. Miss Vincent, who thought nothing of bringing two or three men to her feet during a season, made it her special object to snare him. The others were watching the process of his enthrallment, and one evening when the fruit was ripe for plucking she wept that she was only a poor servant girl while he was a fine gentleman. Fordham swore he would have her if she were a scullion.

Now, it happened the next morning that Fordham was summoned home. With regret he called for his bill, at the same time ordering his auto to be brought around to the front door. The landlord told him that he would bring his bill into the drawing room, where the other guests were waiting to bid him adieu. Fordham was saying goodbys when Eldrige brought in the bill. The former looked at the footing in astonishment. It was $10,000. Then he glanced at the items:

|---|---|
| To three bottles of champagne at $2,000 each | $6,000 |
| To kissing maid four times at $1,000 each | 4,000 |
| Total | $10,000 |

When the house party saw the expression on Fordham's face their pent-up mirth broke its bounds. Fordham looked at them with such a puzzled, woebegone expression that Mr. Eldrige stepped forward and explained that, taking advantage of his mistaking a private summer cottage for a hotel, they had perpetrated a joke upon him.

Fordham took out a pocket check book and wrote a check for the amount of the bill, saying at the same time that the landlord might apply it to charity if he did not wish to accept it. But Eldrige tore it up. Then Fordham declared that he would forgive them on one condition—that the entire party agree to visit him in his own cottage.

There was no want of alacrity in accepting the invitation. Fordham had fulfilled Howland's promise that he was a bang up good fellow and had stood the joke that had been perpetrated upon him good naturedly. So the next week the guests of Hotel Eldrige reassembled at Hotel Fordham.

Fordham says that the joke, after all, was on Eldrige, who wanted Miss Vincent. At the close of the second house party Fordham carried her off himself.

Standard Color Vocabulary.

The Wall Paper News puts in a timely plea for a standardized color vocabulary. Every season the French dyers and colorists issue a list of colors, shades and tints to serve as a style basis for the season, and to these are arbitrarily affixed names that bear in many instances no relation to the colors they designate. Following in the footsteps of the dyers, other handlers of color or the subject of color—lecturers, authors, manufacturers, designers, artists and artisans—have cultivated the habit of expressing color thought in terms intelligible only to themselves. This habit, it is asserted, has become so general that today we have a nomenclature of color that no man living can ever hope to master.

A Bell Puzzle.

Workmen who were putting in a new floor in a store at Rockland, Me., found underneath the old floor a large bell, which was afterward recognized and claimed by Alfred Murray. Years ago Mr. Murray kept a store in the neighborhood and had the bell mounted on the roof. Every time the sales amounted to $10 the bell would be rung and the person making the last purchase received a present of 50 cents. The bell was stolen a number of years ago on a Fourth of July night and so effectually hidden that it has only just now come to light. Now every one is wondering how the boys got the bell under the flooring of the establishing store.—Boston Globe.

Re Offering of Securities of

PACIFIC-BURT CO., LIMITED

TO SMALL INVESTORS.

Because of the attractiveness of this offering all signs point to a large oversubscription if the books remain open for the maximum time stated in the advertisements, viz, until Tuesday afternoon next at four o'clock.

With such oversubscriptions there is always dissatisfaction, through the cutting down of amounts applied for, and this should be avoided as far as practicable.

At the same time, the object of public flotations is the widest possible distribution amongst those who may be called permanent investors, and our experience is that an important percentage of the smaller subscriptions usually come in during the last two days for which the offering remains open.

This notice is to suggest that intending investors send in their subscriptions without delay, so that the books may be closed at a time involving the least friction consistent with allotment amongst the largest number.

EMOTIONAL PADEREWSKI.

His Sensitive Nerves and His Horror of Autograph Fiends.

M. Paderewski will receive a considerable amount from the insurance companies on account of the attack of neuritis in his right arm, which obliged him to cancel his London engagements. The great pianist's health is always so unreliable that he is heavily insured both for "life" and against loss of business. His hand alone has been "covered" for as much as £10,000.

A good deal of Paderewski's ill health is due to the state of his nerves, for he is an intensely emotional man. Some time ago he said that the secret of music is emotion. "Emotion," he declared, "is the principle of music, the foundation and finishing touch of art."

Apart from his chronic neuritis, Paderewski has been extremely unfortunate in the matter of ill health. Repeatedly for this reason he has had to cancel lengthy engagements worth scores of thousands of pounds. An attack of spotted fever five years ago caused him to lose a three months' tour in America at a fabulous salary. This was followed by a railway accident, necessitating two operations.

One of Paderewski's minor worries is the persistent autograph hunter, who gets terribly on his nerves. George Grossmith once came to his relief when he was being pestered by the signature seekers. Grossmith ruffled his hair to make it like the musician's picturesque mane and rushed wildly into the hall of the hotel, screaming, "I can sign no more; I will sign no more!"

Next day everybody was talking of the sad case of poor Paderewski, whose mind was becoming quite unhinged.—London M. A. P.

SOUND KIDNEYS AND NO BLADDER MISERY

Kidneys Act Fine and Backache Vanishes After a Few Doses

The time to cure kidney trouble is while it is only a trouble—Before it settles into Dropsy, Diabetes, Gravel or Bright's Disease.

The moment you suspect any kidney, bladder or urinary disorder, or feel a constant or dull aching in the back, sides or loins or the urine is thick, cloudy, offensive or full of sediment irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding you should begin taking Pape's Diuretic as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, at any price, made anywhere in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure.

Pape's Diuretic acts directly upon the kidneys, bladder and urinary system; cleanses, vitalizes and regulates these ducts, organs and glands, ending at once such miserable symptoms as lame back, Prostatic trouble, headache, dizziness, weakness, nervousness, rheumatism and darting pains, inflamed or puffy eyelids, irritability, bilious stomach, worn-out feeling, sleeplessness or uncontrollable urination (especially at night), and other distress.

Don't be miserable another moment with a lame back or clogged, inactive kidneys or bladder misery, for after taking Pape's Diuretic a few days you will be relieved and know all danger is passed.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I cannot refrain from replying to the sarcastic, unfair, unsigned letter in the Morning Times of this date, throwing dirt at the Water Commissioners, Medical Health Officer and the new public health laboratory.

I am not writing this because I am at all interested, or have any axe to grind, but because the letter was so biassed and unfair, as the public might think some of the arguments sound.

The writer says "the Commissioners sent a young man to Toronto for a two weks' tuition, which in their innocence, they thought would make him an accomplished analyst for the testing of water and milk.

The so-called ratepayer is not up-to-date enough to know that none but the younger men are fitted by training for handling this work, that the leading analysts of the country—Dr. Amyot of Toronto, for instance—are still young men, and when they started were younger still.

Moreover, the two weeks of extra training was only a polish to long years of the same kind of work, and to anyone properly trained beforehand, as our Medical Health Officer was, is quite enough. Doubtless the so-called ratepayer figured what a very little he wouldn't learn in two weeks.

Dr. McPherson's two weeks in the Toronto Laboratory compares to the work of a master mechanic, who, having spent five or more years at the ground work of his trade, spends a couple of weeks learning a few delicate points about a new process, and it is sufficient.

The so-called ratepayer is not the man who wrote the new slogan, "Peterborough for Progress" etc. Rather he would shout "Peterborough to the tall timbers". We have too many of this kind still left here in all walks of life. They belong to a sowerless, coal oil, ox-team period, and if they cannot push our progressive city ahead should at least shut up.

(Signed) E. V. FREDERICK.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Do you know of any unusual way in which a woman can earn, either all her bread and butter or just a little butter to go with the bread with which she may already be supplied?

If you do, please send the good word along, so that some little sister who has not yet found her niche in the world's work may profit by it.

That there is no need for the tremendous overcrowding of a few professions by women and the consequent lowering of wages, is a burning belief with me, and therefore I occasionally devote this column to items as to unusual occupations in which women have been successful.

Surely in all your acquaintance there is some woman who has found happiness and profit in some unusual occupation.

Then let me know about it.

Flower-growing is an occupation which is attracting more women year after year. Those who think that simply a love of flowers is sufficient stock in trade for that business, are finding "in school of tribulation the folly of their expectations." But many women who realize that a good business head and indefatigable energy are also necessary, are making great successes as florists. Three women in a small town in New York, who are making a very good living growing carnations chiefly and other flowers as a side issue, tell me of earning very much better money than their school teacher and stenographer friends.

"I once knew a lady who made a very nice sum of money by taking care of large private libraries," writes one of my correspondents. "Her work was placing books in their correct order and dusting them and their cases at regular intervals—say once a month. She also took care of bric-a-brac and fine articles that could not be left to servants."

That reminds me of a sign which I myself recently saw hanging in an employment bureau. I do not remember the exact wording but the sense was an announcement that the woman whose name was signed would clean jewelry and silverware at the owner's house. The names of several of the best known women in the city were given as references. It seems to me that such an undertaking should be a great success. I know many women who dislike to allow their diamonds to go out of their homes for cleaning at a regular jeweler's because of their fear of substitution.

"What is greatly needed," another correspondent writes, "is a companion for the many elderly ladies who for a variety of reasons, although well provided with money, are more or less alone in the world. A woman who would make a business of visiting and amusing these people, and at times accompanying them to places of amusement, ought to make a good living."

Personally, I never heard of anyone engaged in just such a business, but I present it as a suggestion which some reader who is of the cheerful and lively disposition requisite for such an occupation, might work out.

Breaking the News.

Marion, who had been taught to report her misdeeds promptly, came to the mother one day sobbing pathetically. "Mother—I—broke a brick in the fireplace."

"Well, that is not very hard to remedy. But how on earth did you do it, child?"

"I pounded it with father's cane."—Success Mag.

JOSH JASSAMINE'S INVENTION

Machine Threshed, Stacked, Baked Dough and Enticed Honey.

"These machines they're using in the west to cut and thrash wheat may be some pumpkins," began the man from the "show me" state, "but there isn't one of them that could stand deuce high to that old 'hired help' combination affair Josh Jassamine invented to use in his wheatfield on the back forty. "Josh started out with a miscellaneous outfit of machinery from binders, thrashers and flour mills to kitchen cabinets and cook stoves, and when he finished he had a contraption the like of which mortal never saw before. Hitched to a span of good mules and with plenty of wood in the firebox, that machine could do everything but think.

"Turned loose in a field, that affair cut the wheat, thrashed it and stacked the straw. And that wasn't a beginning. The wheat was run through a system of rollers and came out mighty fine flour. Then the mixing machine got busy, and the rest of the dope necessary for good biscuits was automatically stirred with the flour. By that time the mess was ready for the cook stove attachment, and before Josh had made one round of the field he would reach back of the seat and get a fresh hundred per cent proof bottled in bond biscuit, all ready for the eating.

"And just to show what fate will do to aid a deserving man a swarm of bees settled in the flour bin of that machine one night, and the next day, after he had worked a few minutes, Josh was surprised to find each biscuit was spread with honey as nice as if he had done it at the dinner table with a silver plated knife. You see—

Just Guessed It.

"They say she is able to trim her own hats so that even women are unable to discover that they have not been fixed up by the milliners."

"It is unfortunate that she is so homely."

"Who said she was homely?"

"Nobody. But a woman who could save expenses by trimming her own hats would never be permitted to remain single if she were not painfully plain."

"Alas, you have guessed it!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Might Be Worse.

Visitor (in Michigan fruit belt)—Uncle Zeke, how is your berry crop this season?

Uncle Zeke—I'm thankful to say it's purty fair. I've got enough to feed the insects, the birds and boarders and still leave a little profit for the fruit transportation companies. — Chicago Tribune.

Never Touched Him.

Redd—What was that man talking to you about today when you were in your automobile?

Greene—Oh, he was a book agent.

"Did his talk have any effect on you?"

"Oh, no. Didn't you notice I had the wind shield up?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Evidence of Revenge.

City Editor (confidentially)—What did Kubleigh ever do to you?

Exchange Editor (astonished)—Do to me? Why, nothing that I know of.

City Editor—Oh, come now; I just caught a whiff of a cigar he's smoking which he said you gave him.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

CATCHING A MEDIUM.

Sir Hiram Maxim's Device For Bogus Psychics.

Sir Hiram Maxim has given an explanation of how Mrs. Tomson, the materializing medium, was unmasked during a rigid test of her so-called powers at the inventor's laboratory. The woman's husband, in a letter to the press, had declared the test a complete victory for Mrs. Tomson.

Sir Hiram Maxim, in his statement of the affair, says:

"Mrs. Tomson was at the Alhambra Music Hall seventeen weeks, during which time she materialized out of the air on her own body about three hundred pounds of material, and still she had not lost one ounce of weight. Had she kept all the live stock thus produced she would have had a fair-sized menagerie.

"The success of the Tomson mystery depends altogether upon Mrs. Tomson not being really searched before she enters the cabinet. It is an easy matter to make a cabinet and be sure that it is empty. If Mrs. Tomson took 'the goods' into the cabinet on the outside of her clothing, it would be apparent; therefore, the goods must be concealed under her clothing.

"Seeing that anything like a thorough search was absolutely impossible, I determined on another course altogether.

"When the Tomsons arrived at my laboratory, I handed to Mrs. Tomson some black tights that had been specially made for her, and she was shown into a small room and the door was then closed. I had told her that she could take off as much or as little as she liked, so long as she put on the tights.

"When she passed from this room and entered a second dressing-room she was put into a specially made combination suit which enveloped her from head to foot, the headpiece being made of chiffon and sewn on the body of the combination suit. She was not examined at all when disrobing and preparing for the tests. Before entering the cabinet she was weighed on some accurate and sensitive scales. She remained no fewer than forty-five minutes in the cabinet, during which time she was laboring and struggling sufficiently to cause a good deal of commotion, which was plainly perceptible.

"Upon drawing back the curtain she was apparently in a state of collapse. The inside of the cabinet was strewn with small fragments of flowers; there was also a snake over three feet long in the cabinet. The chiffon headpiece had been ripped from the combination suit in front and numerous small bits of flowers were strewn about inside of the headpiece, where she had torn them to bits in extracting them from about her neck.

"Upon being weighed she was found to be two and three-quarters pounds lighter than when she went into the cabinet, and the snake and fragments of flowers weighed slightly over two pounds.

"Upon re-entering the dressing-room the ladies assisted her to remove the combination, and they found that she had only succeeded in extracting about two-thirds of the flowers; the rest were still secreted in her bosom and inside of the tights.

"She requested the ladies to put the flowers out of sight as quickly as possible, and they hid them under a mat.

"Mrs. Tomson admitted that she had been caught fairly, but she said it was the first time, and that the test was altogether too severe. She had done her best and failed. She said that she had the snake concealed under her arm, and that she thought it had paralyzed her arm.

"All the above is, however, unnecessary in testing materializing mediums. No search is necessary, it is only necessary to weigh them when they go into the cabinet, and again when they come out of the cabinet.

"So long as their assistants are kept away there is no chance of cheating the scales. They are without faith and always tell the truth. There is no patent on this system of testing mediums; anyone may use it."

An Inventive Family.

It is forty years since the Earl of Dundonald, Gold Stick-in-Waiting on the King during this month, joined the 2nd Life Guards, of which he is now colonel. He took part in the Nile expedition of 1884-85, and it will be remembered that Dundonald's cavalry relieved Ladysmith. A curious little story has been told of his lordship during the late Boer War, which shows two sides of his nature. He was with a Colt gun battery at the time and, seeing two Boers on a distant kopje, gave orders for firing to be opened upon them. Impatiently and keenly he watched whilst the range was found; then, on being told "We've knocked one over, sir," "Ah," he said turning away, "Poor fellow, poor fellow." Lord Dundonald comes of a family famous for inventive genius. The ninth earl discovered the coal tar method of extracting soda from sea salt, while the tenth peer invented tunnelling under water by compressed air and screw propellers. He also distinguished himself in destroying Napoleon's fleet in the Basque Roads in 1809. Most notable among the present earl's inventions is, of course the gun carriage for quick-firing guns which has been used with considerable success.

The Earlier Yachts.

Yachting was but little indulged in until about 100 years ago. Owing to the presence in British waters of the pirate cutters sailing small vessels out of sight of land was attended with considerable risk and most of the earlier yachts carried brass cannon. The yachts built in England at the beginning of the last century were either on the lines of revenue cutters or smugglers. The best of them were built by Charles White, who would, it is said, often lay down a couple of clippers together, one for the Government and the other as a smuggler. He would thus be able to obtain a premium from the Government for making the revenue cutter the faster vessel of the two.

Two Kinds of Fame.

"Yes," admitted the author of a successful book, "I woke up one morning and found myself famous."

"It was different with me," remarked the politician, who had made an ill advised speech. "One morning I found myself famous—then I woke up."—Chicago Record.

PREACHED SERMON AT APSLEY CHURCH

Examiner Special.

APSLEY, OCT. 18.—The members of the Ladies' Aid Society gave the inside of the Methodist Church a thorough cleaning and also did some decorating, which improved its appearance very much.

Rev. W. G. Henderson of Peterborough, delivered an impressive sermon here on Sunday, Oct. 2, on Mission Work in China and India. A collection was taken up for the purpose of aiding those who are trying to spread the Gospel in those heathen countries. Quite a large sum of money was freely given. Mr. Henderson was quite pleased with the turn-out and the generosity of the people, and promised to return again some time during the winter and give an address of a more entertaining nature.

Miss Edna McIlmoyle is in Peterborough this week as a delegate for the Epworth League.

The season for shooting the Ontario game birds opened on Saturday last, Oct. 15, and the report of the shot gun is prevalent.

Miss Annie Coons visited friends in Burleigh last week.

We are sorry to learn that Miss Grace Kilborn is suffering from infantile paralysis.

His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto, administered the holy rights of Confirmation to five candidates here on Sunday evening last. A Confirmation service was held here a short time ago and his Lordship's visit was to get a knowledge of this part of the diocese. He seemed well pleased with the good work that has been carried on, much of it being due to the enthusiasm of Rev. C. Lord. He said he was delighted to see what a beautiful church had been erected in Apsley and the hearty cooperation between pastor and people.

Getting Ready To Cover Your Floor With Linoleum?

Our New Designs and Colourings In Scotch Linoleums Now Being Shown

These Scotch Linoleums are so entirely different from the ordinary linoleums that only a personal examination can acquaint you with their thorough worthiness.

Our stocks of this excellent floor covering includes the most satisfactory widths—2, 3 and 4 yards wide.

The designs are to say the least, artistic—they show the Scotch mastery in the making of Linoleums. The finish of these Linoleums is another notable feature for it is thoroughly seasoned and remains permanent.

We suggest you visit the store at your earliest—surely before you purchase.

THE STORY OF A HARD FIGHT AND A GLORIOUS VICTORY

Dr. Sam Luttrell Tells His Audience of His Experiences With Drink and of His Ultimate Triumph Over the Habit.

A STIRRING ADDRESS

Rev. Dr. Samuel Luttrell gave the last of a series of addresses in this city, last night—night at the Park street Baptist church. The church was filled to it full seating capacity, with a very enthusiastic audience, and Dr. Luttrell's words were listened to with great attention. He told the story of his life in plain words, the object of which was to show an example, or to give his own two reasons, first, "That God may be honoured," second, "That some other poor fellow, while in the meshes of sin and drunkenness, may see the way out."

He commenced by saying, "I had Godly parents. I went to Sunday school in my boyhood days and I had all the chances to be good that a boy could have, but I never heard that Jesus Christ had the power to take sin out of the heart, take the man handicapped by strong drink and make him all right. All I heard was to join the church, and I now candidly say that some of the churches are not good. I am sorry to say that, but it is true. I can assure you it is not a pleasant thing for me to stand up before an audience and tell of my life's experience, of my sins and misdemeanours, but I feel it not, as I believe it is doing others good. It is testimony that does the work. Business men get testimonials from a man that wants to hire with them; then why should God not get testimonials? If you can give a testimonial, I say to-night, God may hold you guilty because you did not give it; the result of which would have meant the saving of a soul."

"I had a mother, good and true. She told me that in run in our family to have one drunkard. For generations back there was always one drunkard in my ancestors' family. This was kept secret from me, so that I was given no chance to become one. But from the time when I was a child, I felt that there was something I wanted. I would buy candies, eat one or two and give the rest away. I knew that wasn't what I craved after. When I was twelve years of age, I got my first drink of liquor. My father was superintendent of the railway, and I used to travel free, when the conductor knew me. I used to go to the city and get drunk."

"It is my belief that drunkenness is inherited, or can be inherited. I believe it was so in my case. A drunkard will beget a drunkard; fathers hand it down through generations. I remember well the first time I came home drunk. I came in and mother was terribly stricken with the thought that I should be in such a predicament. She called to my father, "Our boy is drunk." He came to me next morning and instead of giving me a sound thrashing, as I believed he would, he simply said, "I think my boy, your are getting into bad company, we will send you to a boarding school in Sackville N.B." So after making faithful promises to my mother never to touch liquor again, I went to the boarding school. The first night there I was with my room mate, a judge's son and when he was unpacking his clothes he pulled out a bottle of whiskey and asked me to have a drink. I could not refuse the temptation, and I broke all my promises." In a short while, it went from bad to worse and at last I was sent home in disgrace. Some people think that the drunkard likes liquor and does not care who knows it, but they are mistaken. The drunkard is ashamed, he is filled with remorse, but cannot help it. If he has any ambition at all he does not want to do these thing."

"During the early part of my career, I can safely say that I lost fifty-two positions by strong drink. I signed pledges and made resolutions, but broke them all. One day father came to me with a paper. He was apparently pleased with his discovery, and said, with smiling face, "We found something now which will cure you." It was the "Gold cure." I went away and took the gold cure, I returned, and when I was leaving I wrote a testimonial of the benefit I had received, and when I was getting on the train the other men waved me farewell and gave expression of well wishes, for one drunkard rejoices when the other fellow is making good. In three weeks I was drunker than ever. I went to St. Louis, and soon found myself without funds and in a strange city. People will say that a drunkard has a weak mind. They are mistaken. The worst drunkards are the most intelligent men, who are capable of taking positions. It's not lack of will power. However, I was only eighteen years of age when I found myself there in St Louis. I asked a newsboy for a paper and he gave me one, knowing that I was "dead broke." I saw apposition in a shoe store advertised and managed to secure the position. Strange to say, although I had no previous knowledge of shoe selling, I made good. My boss gave me enough money to get started. It only lasted a short while, when I was drunk again. I tried several cures, but all failed to cure me. There is no human cure for drunkenness. Nothing but the blood of Jesus Christ can effect a perfect cure. The Bible says that "Jesus is the way, the only way, and he that climbeth up by any other way, is a thief and a robber." A drunkard is never friendless; there is always a friend who loves the drunkard. My mother always met me with a kind, smiling face when I went home drunk and always looked after me. There are men in this city, men here to-night, who are breaking tender, loving hearts. Perhaps he does not know the way out, and that is my reason for giving my testimony for Christ here to-night. I loved my mother. Some people may say I didn't, or I would not have used her so, but they know not the mind of a drunkard. My father and mother were Christians and wanted to help me, but they did not know the way out. No person knows the way out, I did not know the way out until I heard an ex-drunkard tell his experience."

"At last mother died, and she made me promise to never touch liquor again. But I did not become a Christian. People must give their hearts to God before joining the church. Joining the church does not make people Christians. I raised my voice against Christianity. However, after mother's death I soon broke my promise. I was worse than ever, until one day I said that something would have to be done. I went to father and asked him for $100. I told him I wanted to go away. If I made good, he would hear from me and if I did not, he would never hear. He said he would give me $200 if I would stay. I had made up my mind, however, and he gave me the hundred dollars. I got as far as Chicago, and was sitting in a hotel one day broke and overheard two prospectors talking about a mine in Colorado. They said they just wanted $125 to make the thing go, so I butted in and told them I had no money, but could get it. I got it and we went to Colorado. It was cold, wet, hard work for a long time, but I made my fortune. I had always wanted to be a doctor and set out at once for Chicago Medical College. I gave my money to go through with my studies and during the time I was studying I met a girl, who afterwards became my wife. I believe that God sent me that wife. She was the means of keeping me from drink. I dared not tell her about my life and she died without knowing. She was a kind wife and we lived happily together until one year ago last August, when I looked into her grave. After that I went to Toronto and was on a continuous drunk for three months. I found myself once more back in the General Hospital, where I was taken when a boy of twelve. I got out, sobered up, only to make a fresh start. I thought the devil was fighting me and when I thought I had him, he would get around behind me. I was in a saloon fighting him one day, and thought I would get outside where I would have a better chance with him. I was running along fighting him when I saw the sign, "Yonge Street Mission. All Welcome." I ran in there, thinking the devil would not follow me into the house of God. I met Mr. Davidson, the Superintendent of the Mission. He prayed for me and asked me to back the mission. I went and I at last found a cure in the blood of Jesus Christ. From that time I knew what absolute freedom from drunkenness was."

Dr. Luttrell concluded by saying that whatever a drunkard needs, a sinner needs, and that the address he had given was for the benefit of those who needed encouragement.

At the close of the service the doctor was presented with an envelope containing a sum of money and the following address was read.

To Dr. Sam. Luttrell—

Esteemed Brother,—We, the members and friends of the Park street Baptist church and congregation have listened with spiritual profit and pleasure to your earnest appeal to the heart of the unsaved to accept Christ as their saviour, during the past two weeks. We have been inspired to new exploits for God and the kingdom of Jesus Christ, as you have so faithfully unfolded to us the word of God.

Your frank, manly character has left an impression upon our hearts that time and eternity cannot efface. We have learned to love you, which is the best we can do.

On behalf of the church and congregation and the Men's Helping Hand Bible Class of the Park street Baptist church, we ask you to accept this slight token of our appreciation of you as an evangelist in the service of Jesus Christ. Many have been born again and will ever pray for you and we shall always pray that the grace that lifted you from the pit shall sustain you a power for the reclaiming of sinners for the Master, and should you ever be able to return to our church and city, you will always find a welcome and a love unfeigned in our hearts for you and the work to which you have been called.

Good-bye brother. "God be with you till we meet again.

Signed on behalf of the congregation,

W. C. RIDDIFORD, Pastor.

The address was read by Mr. Herbert Reid and the presentation was made by Mr. Harry Goodwin.

Dr. Luttrell left this morning for Toronto.

THE GREAT Y. M. C. A. GATHERING

"Some Great Unfinished Tasks in the Work of the North American Association Movement."—John R. Mott, L. L. D.

Canada has a right to expect great things from the Convention. During the last four days of its existence, several thousand picked men, representing the Young Men's Christian Association movement in America, and Britain, will meet in Toronto. It is a third of a century since an International Convention of the Association was held in Canada. Since then the whole situation has changed. The range of the Association is wider. Conditions in Canada have been transformed. There has also come a larger recognition of the place and function of the Association in the life of the nation. All these facts combine not only to give visibility to the International Convention at Toronto, but also to increase its obligations.

Canadians throughout all the Provinces of this half-continent are looking forward with eager expectation to the gathering. They hope for the best things. They know that from the Convention lines of transmission run out to every large centre. They believe that within reach is the source of "all power in Heaven and in earth." To send that power thrilling through the lives of all the delegates to the life of the Canadian people is the great opportunity of the Convention. It is indeed great business.

A BRONCHO BUSTER.

How Billy H—— Showed the British Army a Trick or Two.

Writing of Ross's Scouts, who took part in the Boer campaign, the author of "The Rough Riders of the Plains," says:

In riding they were the admiration of the regulars. The story is told of how a well-known Imperial officer on one occasion was treated to an exhibition of "broncho-busting" such as he had never before witnessed, and was not likely to witness again outside North America.

A line regiment, under General Hutton's command in the Bloemfontein district was boasting one evening of a horse, an Australian waler, which none of their men could mount. The horse was a big, powerful black brute, full of devil, and the consensus of opinion was that he had better be shot or sent to the Remount Department to be broken in. He was of no use for present service. An officer of the C.M.R. happened to hear this, and ventured to dissent. "I'll bet you fellows," he said, "that I've a man in my troop who'll ride him." The challenge was taken up, and the following day fixed upon for the contest. The C.M.R. officer went to his men and said: "The - th over there have a horse that they can't manage. Now I want one of you to show 'em how to ride it. At this, pretty well all the troop stepped forward, but it was explained to them that they couldn't all get on the waler's back, and that one man alone was needed. "You can settle it among yourselves," said the officer. "I just want the best man, that's all." The troop decided by selecting Billy H—, an ex-cow-puncher of wide reputation as a "buster." The horse wasn't born, he declared, that could beat him. So in the morning Billy, dressed in cowboy style, shirt and "shaps," and wide-brimmed hat, and armed with a stout quirt, strolled down to the appointed place, where the —th were waiting to see the fun.

Walking leisurely to the Imperial officer, who was resplendent in all the glory of gold lace and plumes, Billy prodded him in the chest with the quirt. "What's this son of a gun you say you kain't ride?" he asked. For a moment the officer had no breath to make a reply with, but on recovering himself, he ordered the waler to be brought out. Then Billy H— took the matter in hand. The big black horse having been turned loose, was skilfully "roped" by Billy's friends, and the ex-cow-puncher's own saddle was placed upon it. When the animal struggled to its feet, Billy was in his seat ready for action.

The waler was something of a terror there was no gainsaying the fact. He bucked and corkscrewed and twisted and bit, and indulged in all the devilments that an outlaw horse could possibly devise. But through it all, Billy H— sat tight, as if he were part of the animal itself. To his comrades' loud cries of "Stay with him, Billy! Stay with him!" he spurred and quirted the waler to a pitch of madness, until the frenzied brute tore wildly across the veldt. It came back to give vent to more bucking, but not for long. The cowboy proved the master, and when he threw himself off at last, he had succeeded in making the horse do just what he ordered. The buck-jumper was tamed.

The Imperial officer had watched the exhibition with amazement. Nor was he alone in this. Very few of those present had seen a better display of riding. "Wonderful!" he exclaimed. "Wonderful, by Jove! I should never have believed it possible!" Billy H—, with his saddle on his arm and his quirt trailing on the ground, spat some of the dust out of his mouth. "Wa'al," he said, "I dunno. I guess in my country we'd just call that hoss a goldarned cayuse!"

Garibaldi as a Canadian.

That Garibaldi was a Canadian was the strange claim set up fifty years ago by a Montreal newspaper of the period known as L'Ordre. The story was that in 1812, an Iroquois chief named Garrabaldeh (meaning "mighty in war") came from Western New York to Lower Canada. He died in 1820, leaving a son named Joseph, whose name was known as Garibalde. He was taken charge of by a priest who took him with him to Italy and educated him there. There, in accordance with the language of the country, he was known as Guiseppe instead of Joseph, and was taught to write his surname Garibaldi. It was claimed by the newspaper already quoted that Garibaldi, at this time half a century ago, corresponded regularly with his uncle, one Francis Garibalde, of Sorel. Strange as it may appear, in view of the apparently well established fact of the Italian general having been a native of Nice, and born of respectable and well-known parents the claim of L'Ordre was taken quite seriously by some people of the period in question, who were perhaps not averse to believing in the Iroquois origin of the general.

The Window of St. Patrick's.

Montreal, where the Eucharistic congress assembled, has probably more churches to the square inch than any other spot on the surface of the globe, says The London Chronicle. When Mark Twain was there he said you could not shy a stone in any direction without breaking a church window. The cathedral is an exact reproduction of St. Peter's at Rome half-size. All the sermons are in French, except at St. Patrick's, where our own Father Bernard Vaughan tilted at English Protestantism. St. Patrick's has a large stained glass window showing the snakes diving off the cliffs into the ocean at the command of the saint. The legend is not usually treated in this ultra-realistic fashion.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

If all the men who have signed up on the Mechanical Drawing Class at the Y.M.C.A. are in their places tonight there will be sixteen students for the teacher to face. The class will hold its first session, commencing at 8 o'clock sharp and the importance of being present at this first session can hardly be over-estimated.

The very best teacher that could be secured will be in charge and will be prepared to give each student the attention he needs.

It means advancement to the young man who is willing to sacrifice a little his winter to take in this class. Young man ask your foreman whether or not it would be to your advantage to take in this class and see what he says. Do not waste your precious time this winter walking the streets and playing hockey when you can turn your time into money.

There will be a good delegation of Peterborough business men at the big convention at Toronto next week. Ten men have already signified their intention of being present and there will likely be others. This will be the biggest and best convention held in Canada this year. There will be two thousand men in attendance from all over the continent and from Great Britain and Europe. Some of the best speakers in the world will be heard there and business will be transacted which will mean much to the future of the Y.M.C.A. in America.

WEDDING BELLS

HULL—GORDON.

On Saturday afternoon, Oct. 15th, the wedding was quietly solemnized at the residence of Rev. J. A. Brown of 164 Lake street, of Mr. R. W. Hull and Miss Sarah Gordon. The young couple were unattended. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Brown.

CASEY—SMYTH.

Rev. Father Casey of St. Peter's Cathedral was in Montreal yesterday where, according to the Montreal evening papers, he officiated at the marriage of his brother, Mr. Thos. J. Casey, of the C.P.R., and Miss Jane Smyth, of 91 17th avenue, Lachine. The ceremony was performed at the Church of the Holy Angels, Lachine, which was very prettily decorated for the occasion. The bride was given away by her brother and the best man was another brother of Father Casey's, Willie Francis. Only immediate relatives were present, at the church, and the wedding breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Casey left by the 10 p.m. C.P.R. for the West, where the honeymoon will be spent.

Yes, it is true, I was very weak and Miller's Compound Iron Pill made me strong. Wm. Madill, engineer.

SIX MACHINISTS ARE BLOWN TO PIECES IN A BOILER EXPLOSION

Frightful Accident in Brooklyn Factory This Morning—The Boiler Ripped Through Walls Carrying Mutilated Bodies a Whole Block.

TERRIBLE SCENES

Special Wire to the Examiner.

NEW YORK, OCT. 20.—Six machinists were blown to pieces, two fatally hurt and twenty more or less injured this morning, when a big ten ton boiler exploded at the American Jute Mfg. Co's premises in Brooklyn. The boiler ripped through heavy brick walls parts of it carrying mutilated bodies a whole block. Twenty-five hundred employees stampeded for the exits and there were terrible scenes around the scene of the fatality when the explosion occurred. The wives and children crowded around for information of loved ones.

DR. CRIPPEN DENIES THAT WIFE IS DEAD TELLS STORY IN COURT

Says She Was Intimate With Chicago Man and That He Understood That She Had Gone to America---Prisoner Says This is the Reason He Concocted Story.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 20.—The height of sensation was reached in the Crippen case this afternoon, when Doctor Crippen, dressed and apparently optimistic and alert, walked to the witness box and gave evidence in his own defence. His Counsel, Mr. Tobin, K.C., had previously announced that the defence theory was that Mrs. Crippen was not dead at all. That the body was that of somebody else. After briefly telling the story of his life till the time of the trouble with his wife, he said that they were quite happy together, until he observed she was too friendly with Bruce Miller of Chicago. He upbraided her for it, and since 1904 he said relations had been very much strained. He said he last saw her in January 1910, and understood she had gone with Miller to America. To avoid scandal he concocted the story of her departure to California, and her death and published all the death notices to avoid curious questioners.

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 20.—Crippen said his belief was that his wife went to Chicago to join Miller. He had intercepted letters in which Miller signed himself "With Love and Kisses to Brown Eyes, Bruce." Crippen admitted being intimate with Miss Leneve for some years and that she had worn Mrs. Crippen's furs and jewelry. Regarding purchases of hyoscin he said it was for patients requiring sedative for nervous troubles. He said he had never given his wife poison or maltreated her in any way.

He admitted he had plotted with the quartermaster of the Montrose to allow him to escape among cargo when discharged at Montreal or Quebec. The letter written on Montrose about suicide was to get rid of curious people. He admitted that Mrs. Crippen had a scar similar to that found on the body. The court adjourned for the night and Crippen will be called again to-morrow.

Burleigh Power Co. Wants Patent Rights On Lands Adjoining Falls

Examiner Special.

TORONTO, OCT. 19.—A deputation headed by J. J. Pearson and J. H. Devitt, two members of the Legislature, waited upon Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests, and Mines, this morning to ask that the Central Ontario Power Company be given a patent to 26 acres of Government lands near Burleigh Falls.

This company has received from Dominion Government a concession to develop power at Burleigh Falls on the Otonabee River, at the head of Stony Lake. The land in question is immediately adjoining the water power. At the present time the question of ownership is in dispute between the Ontario and the Dominion Governments, and therefore the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines is in favour of a lease. The company however, desires patent rights. It promises cheap power to Cobourg, Port Hope, Peterborough and surrounding towns.

French Canadian Press Refers To Bishop Fallon

Special Wire to the Examiner.

QUEBEC, QUE., OCT. 20.—L'Action Sociale the leading French paper of this district is out with a call to arms to French Canadians of this province to assist the Ontario brethren with encroachments of the Anglyers, as they call Bishop Fallon and the others who condemn bilingual system. The paper recalls all the struggles the French Canadians have had to preserve the identity of the language and religion and says the latest attack against them is one that must be resisted to the last ditch, even though former comrades are now ranged on the side of the enemies.

MONTREAL, OCT. 20.—Le Canada says this morning that it deplores to have to place Bishop Fallon on the side of the Orangemen against French Canadians and regrets that he should mix up politics in discussion, assuredly above party issues.

Woman Who Fell Down Cellar Passed Away At Noon To-day

Mrs. Nancy Smith, who, while on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Harry Howson, Wolfe street, met with a serious injury a little over a week ago, by falling down cellar, succumbed to them at one o'clock to-day. The deceased was badly hurt and it was known from the first that she could not recover. She was eighty years of age and was born in Prince Edward county. She had been a resident of Warkworth for many years. Her husband predeceased her some years ago. Three sons and three daughters are left to mourn her loss.

The remains will be taken to Warkworth on the 8.30 train to-morrow morning, and interment will take place there.

ALWAYS CONSULT A A SPECIALIST

Never select glasses for yourself, and never purchase glasses from a peddling spectacle seller. The stock of such spectacle sellers is as defective as their knowledge of optics. The lenses are carefully ground and the lens in one eye is frequently different from the lens in the other eye.

BEWARE of SPECTACLE PROBLEMS

Wearing them will soon result in pain in the eyes and injury to the sight. Then there is frequently the condition of unequal vision—that is, your eyes may differ in focus and each may require a different, specially prescribed lens. In such cases similar lenses, such as you would select for yourself or a peddler would give you, must of necessity prove injurious to one or other of the eyes. We, on the other hand, have the knowledge and appliances necessary to detect the unequal vision or any other defect and grind the lenses to suit. Nineteenths of the cases of defective vision require glasses ground especially for the patient.

HOW BRITAIN THRIVES.

British trade returns for the nine months of the fiscal year furnish no comfort to the "tariff reform" crowd. The total of imports is in round numbers, 2,436 millions dollars, an increase of 188 millions over 1909 and 256 millions more than in 1908. The total of the month's exports was 184 millions, making 1,592 millions for the nine months, or 206 millions more than in 1909 and 194 millions more tha nin 1908. An increase of trade amounting to $393,850,000 in nine months, is a splendid answer to those who prattle about Britain's "decadence." Where can any free trade country though of infinitely greater area and much larger population be found with a similar or even approximate record of advance? There's life in the old lion yet. Great Britain is in no need of the nostrums of economic quacks.

A CLEAN CITY.

The city authorities of Peterborough are doing a little to clean up the margins of the streets, but a great deal is to be done before our city is made as clean and tidy and beautiful as it can be made. What is needed more than all is the arousing of the interest of our civic administrators, which will be the starting point of the development of a public spirit of neatness and tidiness. We must have an educative campaign, and in this direction the city should take the lead. In Boston the Mayor has issued an appeal to the school children of "the Hub," for a clean city. He says:

The street is in one sense the floor of the city, and no person who has been well brought up, would throw soiled papers or decayed fruit on the floor of his home or a schoolroom. The waste baskets are there for just that purpose. So why not let us all agree for the next year when we are tempted to use the streets in this way to refrain from doing so and to hunt up a suitable barrel or receptacle in which the rubbish may be placed. This may cost us a little trouble, but most things that are valuable have to be paid for.

I wish the pupils in the schools might be the leaders in a movement of this kind. They are doing it in other cities, and Boston ought not to be behind in so excellent a work. There are more than 100,000 of you studying in the schools, and if all the litter you cast away in a whole year were heaped up in some open field next Fourth of July morning I think it would make the biggest and brightest bonfire that Boston ever saw. Let us keep the streets healthier, happier, and perhaps richer for it.

Aside from the physical results that would come from a response to the appeal of Boston's mayor or to a similar appeal on the part of the Mayor of Peterborough, there would be the creation of a new era. We should realize that authority was behind the movement for a clean and tidy city, that the city itself would not be the chief offender, but would do its share in making the city clean, and, therefore, beautiful.

At the same time it would be a hint to our educationists. Our schools are made too mechanical—they centre too much attention upon training children to solve examination conundrums, neglecting instillation of the graces that after all make possible the highest enjoyment of the natural gifts that business and work bring us.

Do our schools spend much time in inculcating the beauty of grace of speech and the elimination of slang and loose speech, akin to and a leader-up to looseness of morals? Do our schools spend much time in inculcating or even to the slightest degree, impressing the precepts of respect and reverence for age and superiority, in fact or in position? Do our schools spend much time in inculcating the duty of and the beauty of respect for others and respect for the public weal? Some time may be spent in what is called nature study, analyzing or dissecting flowers and leaves, but is much time spent in teaching a love for the beautiful in trees and grass, in beautiful velvety lawns in the religion of tidiness of public places, the first step in teaching the principles of domestic science. The teachers of our schools, if they chose, could be a mighty force in these directions by a little timely example and injunction. A man that litters the streets with papers and parcels, or other litter, careless or thoughtless of the contribution he makes to general slatternly untidiness, is not a true man inthe sense of solicitude for the comfort and pleasure of his neighbour; he has not taken the first step in obeying the divine injunction to love his neighbour as himself.

The teacher who fails to impress the duty of children doing the same—avoiding unnecessary litter of the streets, destroying flowers, defacing, or befouling fences or buildings, tramping across boulevards or the corners of open lawns—is failing in an important element of his or her duty as a teacher. There are higher pedagogic functions than teaching the important fact that two and two make four. There is the moulding of the character and manners of the child, the infusing the elements of the highest manhood and womanhood. The Mayor of Boston in making an appeal to children to preserve civic tidiness, is sowing seed upon unreceptive soil if the schools have not prepared it by injunction and example of the teachers in the public and other schools.

Any course of action in the moral or material world that is not based on principle is only transient in its existence, only a mere make-shift. The natural place for teaching the child lessons in tidiness is the home, but all homes are not suited to this; but every school should be equipped with teachers who should have higher ideals in regard to the responsibility to pupils than cramming them with a hash of arid facts to be unloaded upan an examination paper. If their hearts are in their work they will put soul into their work, and put ethical aspirations and ambitions into the souls of the precious little souls committed for the time being to their charge. The first effective step to a clean city is putting principles of cleanliness and all that that implies in the hearts of the young.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir James Whitney, like "Champagne Charley" of the past generation is up to everything, "from a fight to pitch and toss." In England heposed as a regenerator of empire and squared his broad shoulders to become a new Atlas. He is now engaged in a thunderous struggle to crush the Toronto Star. He would succeed as well in trying to snuff one of the firmamental stars. He will come out second best in the campaign against the newspaper—it will have the last word—and will, instead of being crushed, get a big free advertisement.

Bishop Fallon states that childrenare not sent to many of the bilingual schools in Essex. This is primarily the fault of the parents, but in the matter of responsibility the education authorities are to blame. The Truancy Act was passed to provide for the attendance at school of children of school age. It only needs the enforcement of the law to remove from the streets of Peterborough to the school room—from contaminating to elevating influences—the large number of children who are to be seen every day idling in the street or roaming the suburbs in search of opportunities for mischief. Only the enforcement of the law is needed to bring rural school attendances from an average of about 50 per cent. to an average of 90 per cent. But with incompetence at the head, even if the will were present, what otherwise can be expected?

New Prince Of Wales Bears Many Striking Resemblances To Late King

The Prince of Wales, standing, as he does, on the theshold of his public career, occupies a position of peculiar and, what one might term, romantic interest in the minds of his father's subjects, as did his illustrious grandfather, whose name he bears, at the same age, says M. A. P.

In appearance, the Prince of Wales bears a distinct likeness to the late King when his Majesty was his age, though his Royal Highness is a rather taller and of slighter build than was King Edward when a boy, and the Prince's features are sharper; but the hen to the Throne has unquestionably inherited his grandfather's expressive eyes. This fact is specially noticeable when the Prince is amused; then his eyes become laughter-lit and the blue deepens, and his whole expression very much recalls that of the Prince of Wales of fifty-three years ago.

The upbringing and education of the future monarch is being conducted on different lines from those followed in the early training of the late King Edward; I believe, was always of the opinion that he himself was brought up over strictly.

Severe Discipline.

Between the ages of ten and eighteen his late Majesty was allowed little personal liberty, and had to strictly conform to a severe code of discipline, under which Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort thought it wise to place him, butwhich the young Prince found irritating, and which certainly seemed to him sometimes unnecessarily severe.

The present heir to the Throne has been, and is being, allowed to exercise his own judgment in many matters which the late King had decided for him by his tutors or parents.

For example, when the late King was a boy, all his intimate friends were chosen for him, and the companionship of one or two were not specially welcome to the young prince.

But the friends of the present Prince of Wales are entirely of his own choosing. Nothing has been done to force the companionship of anyone on him whom he did not personally desire as an intimate friend, yet in Lord Wolverton and Mr. Edward Knolly, the Prince has two friends whom their Majesties would certainly have selected themselves to be his associates.

A Studious Prince.

The heir to the Throne, however, is of a more reserved disposition than was his grandfather as a boy. The late King certainly desired to have a larger circle of friends than does the present Prince of Wales, and no doubt, this made the choice of associates for the then eldest son of the sovereign rather a difficult matter.

The present Prince of Wales is, undoubtedly, more studious than was his grandsire when a boy; but, I believe, that is because his Royal Highness has never been forced to study as was the late King, upon whom great pressure was put by his tutors in his early days.

As a matter of fact, though the Prince of Wales could read and write at five years old, no pressure at all was put on him to acquire any knowledge from books until he was six years old, and even then his studies were never made unduly severe.

Though more reserved than the late King, the Prince of Wales inherits that genial frankness of manner which was one of his grandsire's special characteristics. In this connection I was recently told an interesting little anecdote of the Prince.

Like His Grandsire.

During his holidays at Balmoral, his Royal Highness went to see an old tenant on the royal estate who had often accompanied the late King on fishing and shooting expeditions, when his Majesty was a boy.

When the young Prince entered the room where the old man was, the latter, who was sorely stricken with rheumatism, made an attempt to rise, but his Royal Highness ran over to him, and putting his two hands on his shoulders said: "Oh, please do not stand up; I hope you don't mind my coming to see you, but I wanted to have a talk with you awfully."

Then tears came into the old man's eyes as he looked at the Prince, and he exclaimed, "Ah, sir, you remind me so of your grandsire when he was a boy."

The two sat chatting together for a long time, the Prince listening with immense interest to anecdotes of some youthful sporting adventure of the late King which the old man related. In his quick, impetuous moments the young Prince is very like his grandfather, and, when very much amused, he has a way of putting his hands behind his back when he laughs exactly as the late King often used to do, a little habit of the Prince's that has been noticed with much interest by members of the Royal Family.

The Love of Home.

It may be noticed that the Prince was confirmed a year earlier than was King Edward, but his Royal Highness has not, perhaps, attended so many functions, or been as much before the public as King Edward had when his late Majesty reached his sixteenth birthday.

The love of his home is, indeed, playing a very important part in the formation of the character of the heir to the British Throne, and his great affection for his only sister has been a potent influence for good in his young life. Fond as King Edward was of his sisters, he never, as a boy, made a companion of any of the Princesses as the prince of Wales has of the Princess Mary, who has joined him in countless sporting expeditions with gun and rod; and these home influences in the Prince's life have tended to strengthen not to weaken, his manliness of character.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of the uterus, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

"THE BETRAYAL"

(By E. Phillips Oppenheim)

He nodded and then glanced at the papers on his desk.

"I have been going through several matters connected with the estate, Mr. Ducaine," he said, "and I have come across one which concerns you."

"The proposed lease of the Grange," I remarked.

"Exactly. It seems that you arranged a three years tenancy with Mr. Hulshaw, my agent, and were then not prepared to carry it out."

"It was scarcely my own fault," I interposed. "I explained the circumstances to Mr. Hulshaw. I was promised two pupils if I took a suitable house in this neighbourhood, but, after all my plans were concluded, their father died unexpectedly, and their new guardian made other arrangements."

"Exactly," the Duke remarked. "The only reason why I have alluded to the matter is that I disapprove of the course adopted by my agent, who, I believe, enforced the payment of a year's rent from you."

"He was within his rights, your Grace," I said.

"He may have been," the Duke admitted, "but I consider his action arbitrary. Not only that, but it was unnecessary, for he has already found another tenant for the place. I have instructed him, therefore, to send you a cheque for the amount you paid him, less the actual cost of preparing the lease."

Now my entire capital at that moment was something under three shillings. A gift of fifty pounds, pounds, therefore, which after all was not a gift, but only the just return of my own money, was more than opportune—it was Heavensent. If I could have given way to my feelings I should have sprung up and wrung the little man's hands. As it was, however, I expect my face betrayed my joy. "Your Grace is exceedingly kind," I told him. "The money will be invaluable to me just now."

The Duke inclined his head.

"I am only sorry," he said, "that Hulshaw should have exacted it. It shows how impossible it is to leave the conduct of one's affairs wholly in the hands of another person. Now, there is a further matter, Mr. Ducaine, concerning which I desired to speak to you. I refer to your projected lecture last night."

"I beg that your Grace will not allude to it," I said, hastily. "It is really of very little importance."

The Duke had a habit which I began at this time to observe. He appeared to enter into all discussions with his mind wholly made up upon the subject, and any interruptions and interpolations he simply endured with patience, and then continued on his way without the slightest reference to them. He sat during my remark with half-closed eyes, and when I had finished he went on, wholly ignoring it.

"This is a strange little corner of the world," he said, "and the minds of the people here are for the most part like the minds of little children; they need forming. I have heard some remarks concerning the war from one or two of my tenants which have not pleased me. Accordingly, while Colonel Ray was here, I thought it an excellent opportunity to endeavour to instruct them as to the real facts of the case. It was not until after the affair was arranged—not, indeed, until I was actually in the hall—that I heard of our misfortune in selecting the evening which you had already reserved for your own lecture. I trust that you will allow me to offer you the free use of the hall for any other date which you may select. My people here, and I myself, shall esteem it a pleasure to be amongst your audience."

I was quite overwhelmed. I could only murmur my thanks. The Duke went on to speak for a while on general matters, and then skilfully brought the conversation back again to myself and my own affairs. Before I knew where I was I found myself subjected to a close and merciless cross-examination. My youth, college career, my subsequent adventures seemed all to be subjects of interest to him, and I, although every moment my bewilderment increased, answered him with the obedience of a school boy.

It came to an end at last. I found myself confronted with a question which, if I had answered it truthfully, must have disclosed my penniless condition. I rose instead to my feet.

"Your Grace will excuse me," I said, "but I am taking up too much of your time. It is not possible that these small personal details can be of any interest to you."

He waved me back to my chair, which I did not, however, immediately resume. I was not in the least offended. The Duke's manner through out, and the framing of his questions had been too tactful to awaken any resentment. But I had no fancy for exposing my ill-luck and friendless state to any one. I was democrat enough to feel that a cross-examination which would have been impertinent in anybody else was becoming a little too personal even from the Duke of Rowchester.

"Sit down, Mr. Ducaine," he said. "I do not blame you for resenting what seems to be curiosity, but you must take my word for it that it is nothing of the sort. I can perhaps explain myself better by asking you still another sort of question. Are you in a position to accept a post of some importance?"

I looked at him in surprise, as well I might.

"Sit down, Mr. Ducaine," he repeated. "I have said enough, I hope, to prove that I am not trifling with you."

"You have managed, at any rate, to surprise me very much, your Grace," I said. "I am eager to receive employment of any sort. May I ask what it was that you had in view?"

He shook his head slowly.

"I cannot tell you to-day," he said. "It is a matter upon which I have to consult others."

A sudden thought struck me.

"May I ask at whose suggestion you thought of me?" I asked.

"It was Colonel Ray who pointed out certain necessary qualifications which you possess," the Duke answered. "I shall report to him, and to some others, the result of our conversation, and I presume you have no objection to my making such inquiries as I think necessary concerning you?"

"None whatever," I answered.

The Duke rose to his feet. I took up my cap.

"If Colonel Ray is in," I said, "and it is not inconvenient, I should be glad to see him for a moment."

"Colonel Ray left unexpectedly by the first train this morning," the Duke answered, looking at me keenly.

I gave no sign, but my heart sank.

"If it is anything important I can give you his address," he remarked.

"Thank you," I answered, "it is of no consequence."

There was a moment's silence. It seemed to me that the Duke was watching me with peculiar intentness.

"Ray stayed with you late last night," he remarked.

"Colonel Ray was very kind," I answered.

"By-the-bye," he said, "I hear that some stranger lost his life in the storm last night. You found the body, did you not?"

"Yes," I answered. "There was a great deal of wreckage on the shore this morning."

The Duke nodded.

"It was no one belonging to the neighbourhood, I understand?" he asked.

"The man was a stranger to all of us," I answered.

The Duke stood with knitted brows and seemed on the point of asking me some other question, but apparently he abandoned the idea. He nodded again and rang the bell. I was dismissed.

CHAPTER VI.

LADY ANGELA GIVES ME SOME ADVICE.

Rowchester was a curious medley of a house, a mixture of farmhouse, mansion, and castle, added to apparently in every generation by men with varying ideas of architecture. The front was low and irregular, and a grey stone terrace ran the entire length, with several rows of steps leading down into the garden. On one of these, as I emerged from the house, Lady Angela was standing talking to a gardener. She turned round at the sound of my footsteps and came at once towards me.

She was barebacked, and looked as straight and slim as a dart. I fancied that she could be no more than eighteen, her figure and face were girlish. The quiet composure of her manner, however, and the subdued yet graceful ease of her movements, were so suggestive of the "great lady," that it was hard to believe that she was indeed little more than a school girl.

"I hope that you are better, Mr. Ducaine," she said.

"Thank you, Lady Angela, I have quite recovered," I answered.

She looked at me critically.

"I can assure you," she said, "that you look a very different person. You gave us a fright last night."

"I am ashamed to have been so much trouble," I answered. "Such a thing has never happened to me before."

"You must take more care of yourself," she said gravely. "I hope that my father has expressed himself properly about the lecture."

"His Grace has been very kind," I answered. "He has promised me the free use of the hall at any time."

"Of course," she said, "I hope that you will give your lecture soon. I am looking forward very much to hearing it. This always seems to me such a quaint, fascinating corner of the world that I love to read and hear all that people have to say about it."

"You are very kind," I said; "but if you come I am afraid you will be bored. The notes which I have put together are prepared for the comprehension of the village people."

"So much the better," she declared. "I prefer anything which does not make too great a strain upon the intellect. Besides, it is the very simplicity of this country which makes it so beautiful."

"Yet it is a land," I remarked, "of elusive charms."

"Sometimes, unless they are pointed out," she replied, "by one who has the eye and ear for nature, these are the hardest to appreciate. Only the other evening I was standing upon the cliffs, and I thought what a dreary waste of marshes and sands the place was, and then a single gleam of late sunshine seemed to transform everything. There is hidden colour everywhere if one looks closely enough, and I suppose it is true that the most beautiful things in the world are those which remain just below the surface—a little invisible until one searches for them. By-the-bye, Mr. Ducaine," she added, "if you are on your way home I can show you a path which will save you nearly half the distance."

"You are very kind, Lady Angela" though without taking you out of your way?"

She smiled.

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. If you take two cups of granulated sugar, add one cup of warm water, and stir about 2 minutes, you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready-made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly.

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good tonic effect and taste is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

It is a splendid remedy, too, for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, etc.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has often been imitated but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

AN APPEAL TO REASON

TWELVE months ago, after prolonged investigation and experiment, we pinned our faith to the Knight motor as the greatest improvement of the decade in automobile construction.

Many believed us, bought cars and are to-day congratulating themselves on their judgment.

There were croakers then, perhaps there are to-day, but we hear less of them.

THEY SAID—The engine was an experiment forgetting that it had stood the greatest engine test on record before the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland.

THEY SAID It will not stand up on Canadian roads; although they knew a challenge of $1,250 was open to anyone who wished to measure his motor against the Knight for reliability.

THEY SAID That it would not be taken up in Europe, and that the Daimler Company were about to discard it. We knew at the time and anyone can verify it now—that the leading concerns of six of the countries of Europe have adopted the Knight motor.

THEY SAID—No one in the United States would take it up. We know that over twenty of the largest concerns in the United States have from time to time applied for consideration in the American rights. And we know to-day that leading United States firms will announce 1912 models with Knight motors in another twelve months despite the fact that the agents of some of these concerns profess great skepticism about the Knight motor to-day.

We seldom refer to or bother about the suggestions of interested opponents. We want, however, to repeat our conviction, formed a year ago, and confirmed by twelve months' of experience in the factory, on the road, and in the users' hands:

That the Knight motor far surpasses the old valve type, and that it is only a question of time before it entirely supersedes it in all high grade cars. Get a car that will be up-to-date the longest.

Our 1911 model is out, but our 1910 users can smile, for their car is up-to-date still. 1911 is only a refinement in details on 1910.

The same motor. The same body lines, with high front doors, now pretty universally copied.

Is not this the type of car to buy?

A GREAT TREAT

Richard F. Carroll and Gus Weinbrge Coming in "The Alaskan"

"The Alaskan," a genuine fun-making musical melange, will be the attraction at the Grand next Tuesday, Oct. 25th.

"The Alaskan" has not been seen here before. It comes to us now from a phenomenal run of five months in Chicago, where the entire press of that city lauded it as "the bulliest musical show ever seen there in years." Manager William P. Cullen, who has given us many good things, viz., "The Burgomaster" and "The Tenderfoot," is the producer, and he has been especially happy in the formation of the present company. The complete Chicago production intact will be brought here. Richard F. Carroll and Gus Weinberg are responsible for many of the new, novel surprises and exclusive features with which "The Alaskan" fairly bristles, and in the part of Walsingham Watts, a stranded theatrical manager, Carroll has a part exactly suited to his peculiar talent. Gus Weinberg, as Professor Knickebein, is prominent amongst the fun-makers, and is given ample opportunity to extract many laughs with the aid of his "laughing powder," not saying anything about his natural, spontaneous humour. Detmar Poppen will be welcomed as Totem Pole Pete, while Al Rauh will show his splendid voice to advantage as Richard Attwater; Jessie Stoner, as Arlee Easton; Alice Keen as Mrs. Good Better Best; Etta Lockhart as Kuko, an Esquimo child of nature; also Nellie Templeton, as La La La; not forgetting Leo Kendall in the now famous character of "Snowball" the polar bear, will all be welcomed. The many musical interpolations, including "Snowballing," in which the entire audience takes part and the self same audience is allowed to pelt back "Laughing Powders" "Hi Hi Hi", "The Face of the Girl I Love," and twenty other odd song hits of last season, including "My Totem Pole." The large chorus of Esquimax girls and miners is again a strong factor in this season's organization.

INSPECTING EQUIPMENT

Captain Long and Master Gunner Stroud of Kingston have been in the City for the past few days inspecting the equipment of the 14th Field Battery at the Armouries. In conversation with an Examiner reporter last evening Capt. Long stated that he found everything entirely satisfactory. He paid a glowing compliment to the Armouries, stating that they were among the best in the Dominion. An effort, he thought, should be made to make them a garrison armouries.

Strong Sermon Preached On Subject Of Temperance By Rev. J. B. Anderson

At St. Luke's church last evening, Rev. J. Bennet Anderson, temperance and moral reform lecturer, preached a very interesting and instructive sermon from the 59th chapter of Isaiah: "Waste and destruction are in thy path." Mr. Anderson commenced by saying that it would be quite impossible to depict the full horrors of the drink traffic. It is a cancer in the heart of this grand Dominion, cursing us more than most people realize. It is a waster and destroyer. The text as applied to it is true. Why is it that people are not saved? Simply because their sins and iniquities have hidden the face of the Lord from them. Drink is an unnatural appetite and creates its own lusts. It does not satisfy and the strongest men will weaken under the desire for it. Mr Anderson here gave many instances to show that this was really a fact, and that the most intellectual and strong-minded men have given way to the desire for drink.

Drink is not the only enemy of the church. Backsliding is another evil, but it can be attributed to strong drink in the first place. John Bright an eminent English statesman said that if the Christian churches would take up the temperance cause they would carry all before them. Strong drink causes a waste of money, soul, body and health. The speaker related a tale of the Irish farmer. He said that although they were starving for bread they would make beer out of the barley.

He did not complain of hotels; he said, in his opinion, they were a necessity; it was the bars he objected to. He said he knew some men to get up on local option platforms and talk temperance, who also went into bars and took their drink like any drunkard. Liquor causes a waste of health and constitution; it affects the brain and effects the most intellectual men, carrying death and destruction in its path.

Mr. Anderson concluded by saying that if the millions of dollars spent in drink were put into manufacturing concerns, employment would be supplied for all the labouring classes. Its waste of the soul, however, is the most important waste of all. He then asked the members of the audience to sign the pledge to abstain from strong drink, not because they needed to do so, but for the example it would set others.

PUBLIC MEETING TO CONSIDER CHIMES PROJECT

The staff of the Nugent Drug Company kindly contributed $5.00 to the Chimes Fund yesterday. An old St. John's boy in Montreal sent in a donation of $10.00, bringing the fund up to $4972.32. A general appreciation is expressed of the public spirited action of the lodges and other bodies of men in contributing together. This is a general and representative way and entails least hardships to the individual. In this connection the splendid united contributions made by the men of the different factories are worthy of all praise and have probably not been duplicated in any other city. Every subscriber, whether through lodge or factory, is invited to the public meeting of subscribers, to be held in the Council chamber tomorrow evening which will be most important in its nature, as advice and consideration of all is invited with a view to carrying out this project in the best possible way for the community. While the subscription list has almost reached the splendid figure of $5,000, it is by no means completed, as every additional donor will enable still better results to be obtained.

MEET TO-NIGHT

The class in electricity will meet for organization in the Y. M. C. A. to-night at 8 o'clock. This will be joyful news to the men who are looking forward to electrical engineering as a life work. There is not likely to be another class of the kind in Peterborough and now is the time to get in and start studying. It means time and money saved to every man who enters. The teacher will meet his Class in the Board room of the Y.M.C.A. at 8 o'clock.

The class in mechanical drawing commenced under very favourable auspices last night. There were 14 men present and there are twenty-one names enrolled. It is feared that there will have to be a limit put on the enrolment of this class. It meets again on Saturday night.

Misses Ella White and Beatrice Gordon left on Wednesday last to spend two weeks at home.

Bilious Headache

COMES FROM LIVER DERANGEMENTS WHICH ARE THOROUGHLY OVERCOME BY

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Headache is said to be the most useful pain in the world. It is a sort of fire alarm that warns you of something wrong with some organ of the body.

Most frequently the trouble is indigestion and torpid liver and the pain arises from the poisoned blood passing through the arteries of the brain and head.

There is no cure for bilious headache, torpid liver and indigestion that can be compared to Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills for prompt and certain results. This has been proven by as many thousands of letters published from time to time that everybody should know it by this time.

Mr. Fred Hinz, Bradhagen, Perth Co., Ont., writes: "I don't like to have my name in the papers, but feel out of justice to suffering humanity I should tell others of the good I obtained from Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and Ointment.

"For years I was troubled a great deal with sick headaches and was often so bad that I could not work. Being advised to try Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills I did so and can say they have brought about a complete cure. From the first I found that one pill cured my headache quickly every time. I was also a victim of itching piles and found Dr. Chase's Ointment the most satisfactory treatment I ever used. It brought relief almost instantly."

You won't be satisfied with mere temporary relief when you know your headache can be completely cured by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cts. a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

GROWING CHILDREN

play hard and work hard at school, and rapid growth uses up an enormous amount of energy and vitality that needs replacing.

This accounts for the many delicate, sickly and ailing children we see on our streets.

We wish the mother of every such child would come to our store for a bottle of Vinol, as it is a delicious cod liver and iron tonic which children love to take, and it is easily assimilated.

A grateful mother in Durand, Mich., says her little girl was weak, pale, and had no appetite. She gave her Vinol and she began to thrive at once — and she gained rapidly in weight, colour and strength. (Name furnished on request.)

Vinol builds up good healthy flesh and muscle tissue and makes thin little limbs round and plump.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that if it does not benefit your child your money will be returned. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets, Peterborough.

SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS TO CLOSE

Messrs. A. E. Ames and Company, Limited, of Toronto, who are handling the re-offering of securities of the Pacific-Burt Co., Limited, have decided to close the subscription books at their offices at 4 o'clock tomorrow (Friday) afternoon. This is three days in advance of the time originally suggested, and is due to the ready response to the offering. Investors still have a chance to subscribe by telegraphing at the expense of the company.

BLANCHE RING HERE ON NOV. 4

Theatregoers will learn with a great deal of pleasure that Messrs. Turner, manager of the Grand Opera House, have booked for Friday, November 4th, the appearance here of Blanche Ring in the "Yankee Girl." Miss Ring appears all next week at the Royal Alexandra, Toronto.

COUGHING BURST BLOOD VESSEL

Says Danger Avoided and Cures Coughs in 5 Hours.

A writer for the medical press states that coughing is responsible for the bursting of blood vessels quite frequently. A cough or cold means inflammation (fever) and congestion, and these in turn indicate that the body is full of poisons and waste matter. Simple relief, as found in patent cough medicines, and a whiskey, often result in more harm than good; as they cause more congestion. A tonic-laxative cough syrup will work marvels and here follows a prescription which is becoming famous for its prompt relief and thorough cures. It rids the system of the cause, except it be consumption. Don't wait for consumption to grasp its victim, but begin this treatment which cures some in five hours. Mix in a bottle one-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardui and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times a day. Give children less according to age.

POLICE COURT

Fred Sullivan, who has been lodged in the cells for the past week, charged with breaking into and robbing Mr. James Edgar's store on George street, was this morning arraigned before Magistrate Dumble to answer to the charge. He asked for an enlargement of the case, and did not elect or plead. The case will stand over until next Thursday, and this being the second enlargement, will likely be proceeded with then.

An old man named Francis McGirr, who has no home and no place to go, and who spent his time on the hill, got out this morning, it being the end of his term of six months, and came back to the police court, when he was sent back for another six months.

JUMPED TRACK

One of the Jackson Park trolley cars happened with an accident last night about 11 o'clock. It had gone out to the Park after the show and was returning when it jumped the track near Gilmour street, at the switch. The force with which it was going threw it crosswise on the track and damaging it to a certain extent. Fortunately no passengers were on the car when the accident occurred, or perhaps it might have proved more serious. Other cars an da gang of men were despatched to the scene of the mishap, about 11.30, and the car was pulled back on to the track, and brought to the barn.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

WHEN horses are trying to start a team, I was told years ago by my physics teacher, they are exerting all the time a pressure equal to the resistance they have to overcome. It is the sudden quick jerk, plus the pressure, that starts the load.

I thought of that the other morning as I lay in bed dreading to get up. All the time I lay there, I was exerting a mental pressure all but sufficient to overcome the resistance of my laziness. All I lacked was the quick jerk.

Now it seems to me that's always the way when we put off some duty. We really mentally do it all the time we are putting it off, and thus we do a lot of energy before we give the quick jerk and finally accomplish the task.

Isn't that one of the reasons why people who work systematically, accomplish so much with so little effort — that is, because each duty has its routine place and therefore none of them are done mentally before they are done actually, with the consequent waste of mental energy?

How about it?

A young girl wrote me the other day to ask how to treat pimples and black heads.

For her sake, and for the sake of all the women who write me that sort of question, I take this opportunity to make it plain that I am not running a beauty column, that I do not claim any especial knowledge of the subject, and that I can't, as a rule, answer that kind of question.

At the same time it just happens that I recently heard a very good doctor telling a young woman how to treat a lot of blind pimples that had broken out on her face, and I am glad to pass along the advice as it seemed to help her.

"Pimples are very often caused by dirt," he said. "You think you keep your face perfectly clean but you don't. That's not an insult. Very few people do. If you live or work in a dirty, grimy city no ordinary soap-and-water washing will keep your face clean. So when pimples break out, take a nail brush and soap and scrub your face long and hard. Then bathe it in alcohol and then anoint it with boracic acid ointment.

If the pimples come to a head prick with a needle sterilized in some antiseptic, touch with a drop of hydrogen peroxide, and then rub on the ointment."

Of all the bad habits for anyone who wants to be popular, I think a failure to pay courteous attention to what people say to you is the worst. And also the most common.

How many people you know who will ask you a question, and then, as you are answering it will turn towards you with a glassy stare that shows they do not hear a word you say.

And how many people, while they would not actually interrupt you in the middle of a speech, will break out speaking the minute you say your last word, so explosively that you know they haven't been listening at all, but just waiting for you to finish, so that they might have their turn.

Yes, real listening certainly is a fine art and a rare one.

It certainly ought to be an opening for the plain girl who needs an auxiliary to her charms.

And if she avails herself of it, a very sturdy auxiliary I think she will find it.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

To-night in the Intermediate Basketball League the following teams will meet: Quakers vs. Jolliers and Hustlers vs. Joshers. The first game promises to be some game, as these teams have not been defeated as yet, and it is a dead sure thing that neither team will give up before the referee's whistle blows for full time.

The second game ought to prove quite as interesting as the first, as the Joshers say that they have lost enough games and are due to win the rest of the games. But the Hustlers say nay. You are invited to come and take in the games.

Sir,—Just a word about what I consider the exorbitant prices charged by the Grand Opera House manager, in some cases. While I realize that the proprietors must, for certain shows, sell a number of seats at $1.50 each, there is no necessity for placing half the seats on the ground floor at that price, as was done last night. People simply cannot afford to pay that figure two or three times a week, and the result is that the greater part of the audience is grouped in the rear of the theatre, leaving the front seats vacant as was the case last night. Such conditions are not fair, either to the audience or the players, who cannot be expected to do justice to themselves under the circumstances. The management should take this matter into their consideration, and by so doing will earn the gratitude of one who has been an

Strange Story Of Girl With Millions And Her Discovery Of An Ideal Man

Examiner Special.

New York, Oct. 19.—At last one ardent devotee of occult forces has discovered her sure-enough affinity, her real soul-mate, within the fold of this wearied world.

She is Miss Antoinette Reading Gazzam, of Cornwall, N. Y., a very pretty young woman, 26 years of age and heiress of $3,000,000. Her affinity is Mr. Charles B. Galvin, a not too-high-salaried engineer on the New York Aqueduct. And these two divinely affianced soul-mates will be married to-day in the parish house of St. Thomas' Roman Catholic church by Father Breslin.

Strange Wooing.

How Miss Gazzam found her everlasting mate of her astral inmost being is a real romantic story, and will be detailed in her own magazine, "The Forecast," appearing serially under the title, "My Search for a Masculine Counterpart and Ideal Companion Through the Supernatural."

"The romance has been a very beautiful one," said she in the drawing-room of her marble mansion on the Hudson.

"I wrote a letter, yes, I wrote a letter to Mr. Galvin. He did not answer me. I wrote another letter. Still he did not answer me. But when I wrote a third he did answer me, and then one day he came here right here," she said, pausing to accentuate an inflection of marveling, "and that was the first time I ever saw him in my life.

"He did not come back at first. There were others with him and he did not make the general invitation to apply to him. But after he had received a special invitation he came back. And then there were many beautiful happenings many beautiful moments and days and the realization came to us both that we were made, intended, designed for each other, and, well, we have found each other, that is all."

It is not on record that she ever saw anything more than the photograph of the Indian affinity, but in March of this year she was in keen pursuit of an affinity she had seen on a train when travelling from Philadelphia to Cornwall.

Hired Sleuths to Find Him.

A month afterward, however, her mind reverted to the young man, and she set Pinkertons hunting for this affinity, armed with a description which declared him to be about 32 years old (Miss Zazzam is 26); eyes dark blue, very large, clear and slightly prominent; height, about six feet, athletic in build, good chest development; hair dark brown, straight or slightly wavy, parted on left side and reaching far back, revealing high forehead.

Miss Gazzam would not say that Mr. Galvin was this man, yet his appearance fits the description accurately, save that his hair is not slightly wavy. It is luxuriant and is worn with a certain negligent roll back from the forehead that would win the admiration of a Marcel hair dresser.

Mr. Lo First Ideal.

Miss Gazzam confesses that she had been looking for her ideal soul-mate since she was fourteen years old, and that she was not hampered by any old fogey notions of propriety in the pursuit.

Her first remembered affinity was found when she was going over a book of photographs with her cousin. There she saw the picture of a young Indian. Her cousin didn't like her notion. However she says in the autobiography:

"But the picture which I had viewed only a few seconds in the superb young Indian tastefully and becomingly dressed in our modern attire, made a permanent impression on my mind. And this was the beginning of my romance."

Miss Gazzam was left her huge fortune by her mother. With Japanese servants she has lived alone in her big mansion since the death of her mother, save when she was travelling.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE NAKED TRUTH.

"The Naked Truth," the English farce comedy by George Paston and W. B. Maxwell, as Americanized by Mr. Henry E. Dixey and his company, caused the walls of the Grand Opera House to shake with laughter for three hours during its local presentation last night. In point of laughter the production certainly lived up to its advance notices; the funny situations keeping the audience convulsed until the last curtain and "The Naked Truth" was pronounced one of the funniest farces ever seen here.

The plot is a novel one, being woven around the complications that ensue when a young man who has been given to flattery and "blarney" as they say in the Emerald Isle, comes into possession of a ring which has the magical power of compelling its wearer to tell the truth, at no matter what cost. Naturally there is trouble as soon as he gets the ring on his finger. He insults his fiancee and everyone else down to the cook by his blunt statements. He is secretary of a company and forces it into bankruptcy. In fact he is so different from his former self that he comes to the conclusion that he is ill and the scene in which the doctor diagnosed his case was one of the funniest of the play. It finally ends up with the condemnation of the doctor as a fake and a quack. Eventually he gets the ring off and everything ends happily.

Mr. Henry E. Dixey gave a splendid interpretation of the role of "Bunny" the young man who developed such an awkward penchant for telling the truth. He endowed the part with such a fund of whimsical humour and realism that one wondered at his ability as Peter Pan. It was hard to realize that the seeming young man was over fifty years of age and his clever work kept the audience in a happy mood throughout. His support was good. Mr. Sotteswoode Aitken who will be remembered here by his clever bit of character acting as the boatswain in 'Billy' last season, was decidedly funny as Mr. Heyter.

Miss Ruth Shapley as his fiancee and Miss Marie Nordstrom as Mrs. Heyter had the chief feminine parts but spoiled what were otherwise splendid portrayals by a lot of senseless giggling in the last act. Whether they thought they were in a "tank" town and anything would go or whether their amusement was caused by something really funny behind the scenes could not be ascertained. It is hoped it was the latter.

If there was any other fault to be found it was that some of the company did not seem to be letter perfect in their lines and there were awkward pauses at times.

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Colour.

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of the female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and of course, stops the falling hair, and prevents baldness.

SAUL GOUIN AGAIN ESCAPES, JURY RETURNS VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY

Judge is Indignant—Verdict of Guilty Was Fully Warranted—Imposes Sentence of Three Years on Conviction of Assault.

FAILED IN DUTY II

North Bay, Oct. 20.—Saul Gouin, tried for the fourth time in connection with a brutal assault on two women in the bush near Cobalt, from the effects of which one died, was yesterday acquitted of a charge of wounding with intent to maim and disfigure Ethel Crawford. He was, however, sentenced to three years in prison for assault, causing bodily harm to Carrie Russell, on which he was convicted at the spring assizes, sentence then having been deferred pending the hearing of the more serious charge.

Justice Teetzel's charge was rather against the prisoner, but in two hours the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. G. T. Blackstock, K. C., in moving for sentence on the other charge, declared that responsibility for one of the grossest failures of justice ever known rested upon three juries of this district, who had failed to convict in the plainest evidence.

T. W. McGarry, K.C., Gouin's counsel, took exception to these remarks as insulting to northern juries, who were just as intelligent as those anywhere else.

Justice Teetzel, however, also expressed surprise, as a verdict of guilty was fully warranted. It had been one of the most outrageous assaults known to his experience, and both women had mercifully escaped instant death.

The assault occurred in a little shack on the Haileybury road, one mile and a half from Cobalt, Nov. 11, 1908, when Carrie Russell and Ethel Crawford received injuries from an axe in Gouin's hands. Carrie Russell died some months later in Toronto, but two jurors refused to connect her death with Gouin's action when he was charged with murder. Ethel Crawford recovered and has been the principal witness against Gouin in the various trials. The present trial was for wounding her with intent to maim and disfigure. On another more serious charge the jury returned no bill. Gouin was convicted at the spring assizes of assault and causing grievous bodily harm to Carrie Russell.

While admitting the assault, Gouin claimed he had acted in self-defence, having been threatened with a revolver. This the women denied, swearing he had assaulted them for purposes of robbery.

Lawyer McGarry in his address to the jury said that never before in the annals of justice in Canada had a man been so hounded by the law as had Gouin.

Mr. Blackstock, in protesting, said that the vindication of justice alone was desired and characterized Gouin's evidence as stupendous lies, and his action as a cowardly, dastardly crime, without a shadow of reason.

Gouin is a married man with a large family. The sentence dates back to April, when he was convicted.

GUARDING PRISONER

Every Precaution Is Being Taken to Prevent Self-Destruction and Doctor's Meals Are Carefully Supervised — Evidence Is Largely a Repetition of the Earlier Testimony at the Inquest.

London, Oct. 20.—The prosecution continued its case against Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, charged with the murder of his wife, the actress Belle Elmore, yesterday, by introducing the testimony of Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard, who pursued the doctor and his companion, Ethel Clara Leneve, across the Atlantic and brought them back to England under arrest.

The inspector's evidence was a repetition of the now familiar story, which he had recited previously in the lower courts. While Alfred Aspinall Tobin, chief counsel for Crippen, was cross-examining Dew, with the object of showing that the defendant exhibited no trace of anxiety or nervousness during the police investigations at his Hilldrop Crescent home, one of the jurors fainted and the court was adjourned for two hours.

When the session was resumed, Prof. Augustus Pepper, the pathologist who examined the dismembered parts, was called, and his testimony, which was a recapitulation of the gruesome recital at the earlier heating, occupied the afternoon up to adjournment.

Prof. Pepper has been unable to determine anatomically the sex of the Hilldrop Crescent house victim, but was satisfied that the parts were human, and that they had been severed by a hand skilled somewhat in surgery. The organs were healthy and indicated a stoutish person in middle life. They had been buried for not less than four months and for not more than eight months. One part bore a scar left from an operation.

Every precaution is being taken to guard Crippen against self destruction, it was learned yesterday. The prison doctor supervises the cooking of his meals and no food is allowed the prisoner but fresh-laid eggs and soup. All the food is especially served at the infirmary.

TEACHER'S NERVES

Teachers often have the reputation of being cross when the trouble is with the nerves rather than with the disposition. Mr. A. Sutherland, Principal South Bar School, Sydney, N. S., writes: "I was nervous and worried, had indigestion and headache. Doctors failed me. You can depend on me to recommend Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food for I believe it has entirely cured me." Tired brains and feeble nerves are soon restored by this celebrated food cure."

IS BOUND TO MAKE IT

New York, Oct. 20.—The royal mail steam packet Trent with Walter Wellman and his crew on board, reached quarantine at 2.53 yesterday afternoon.

"I am going across the Atlantic in a dirigible balloon," declared Wellman. "Far from disheartening me, this failure has only spurred me to higher ambitions. It was our equilibrator that disabled the America. That was the one fatal error, despite the fact that the plan had worked out well in theory, and at the time I made my first attempt at the north pole.

"It will have to be a new type of dirigible that will be used. Even while the America was drifting helpless, and nearly a total wreck above the waters of the Atlantic, Vaniman and myself were talking over what was needed. We know, and we intend getting busy as soon as possible."

The America had been drifting helplessly for hours before it was abandoned and could have kept in the air more than 20 hours longer.

"We will support Wellman in any further air venture which he may undertake," declared President Joseph W. Saius, of the local Wellman Company. "The man has proven himself to be one of the heroes of modern times, and with his men has accomplished a feat far beyond anything of its kind ever known."

The Girl Who Lives Alone

whether she attends college or goes to business, needs the Perfection Oil Heater. It will heat a cold, cheerless boarding house or dormitory room and make it livable. It is always a ready help in the many things women do for themselves in their rooms. With the damper top opened it will heat water for tea or cocoa; it will dry the small articles that a woman prefers to wash herself in her own room. It will quickly heat an iron or curling tongs; quickly dry wet shoes or skirts—an ever ready help for the woman who lives alone, dependent on her own resources. The is invaluable in its capacity of quickly giving heat. It will burn nine hours with one filling. It is safe, smokeless and odorless; has a cool handle and a damper top.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

An indicator shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain. It has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so the wick can be quickly cleaned.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, and can be unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. Finished in japan or nickel, strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

USUALLY ONE DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION

Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas and all Stomach Distress Vanishes

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel blunted after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; it what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure Indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your Stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas, which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Dnstritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all or any kind of food you eat.

No Attack on the Canon.

Montreal, Oct. 20.—The story that an attempt had been made on the life of Canon Dauth of Laval University is emphatically denied. It appears that a drunken man named La Rose fired off a revolver at one o'clock in the morning, and the next day it was seen that one of the balls had entered the canon's study, but he was, of course, not there at that time of night.

Snow in Colorado.

Denver, Col., Oct. 20.—Snow was reported from all parts of Colorado yesterday, the first general snow storm of the season. In the mountain passes of the Moffatt Road, above Tolland, Col., snow from eight to ten feet deep was reported.

MORTALLY WOUNDED

Mrs. Martha Washington, a Victim of the Cocaine Habit, Is Dying and Police Are Scouring the Border In Search of Assailant, Who Is Evidently a Foreigner — Woman's Husband in Central.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 20.—With a bullet in her head, Mrs. Maude Washington, colored, is lying at the General Hospital to-day, mortally wounded. The police are scouring the frontier for the assailant.

An unknown man, evidently a foreigner, did the shooting, which took place in a vacant lot on Murray street, shortly before 8 last night. John J. Shea was passing along Murray street, in front of the scene of the shooting, when three shots were fired. He saw the woman's assailant run away. The police believe that the man who was with Mrs. Washington fired to frighten Shea away and did not intend to shoot the woman.

Officers sent to investigate found Mrs. Washington lying on the ground in an unconscious condition, bleeding profusely from the mouth, and she was immediately removed to the hospital. The city and provincial police forces are both working on the case, every suspicious man found in the city being arrested.

Mrs. Washington is a cocaine fiend, and the police say that her physical condition is not such that would enable her to recover from even a much slighter wound.

Last week her husband was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison for stealing wire from the Electrical Development Co., and the police say he stole the wire to secure money to buy his wife cocaine.

The police have arrested several suspicious foreigners, one a Swede, who was hurrying across the bridge about half an hour after the shooting. When arrested he was going to work on the American side, but having no dinner pail and bore evidence of having been running and excited, the police say they probably have the right man.

WHOLESALE CORRUPTION

New York, Oct. 20.—Representative Otto G. Foelker, the man who was carried from his sick bed to the Senate chamber to cast the deciding vote for the anti-racing bills urged by Governor Hughes, took the stand as a witness yesterday, and gave the Merritt Joint Legislative Committee the details of the attempt to buy his vote, which he charges that ex-State Senator Frank J. Gardner, now under arrest, made in 1908. Gardner, called to the stand, refused to testify, but Robert Elder, first assistant district attorney of King's County, the next witness, repeated a conversation which he said he had with Gardner last March, and which had been referred to as a "confession."

Mr. Elder did not vouch of his own knowledge for the truth of what he repeated, but he gave it for what it might be worth, as testimony which involves more names of men now living, and names of men higher in social, business and political life, and the distribution of bigger sums of money than anything yet heard in either the Allds' hearing or any of the previous sessions of the present committee of enquiry.

The narrative was nothing less than a sensation. Briefly, it described a dinner at Delmonicos of prominent men friendly to the race tracks; of $250,000 subscribed to a corruption fund; of the distribution of this fund to politicians and to well-known correspondents at Albany of the New York newspapers, and the secret grievance of the late Senator Patrick McCarren, which worked for the passage of the bill against his own wishes and his associates.

Columbus Car Strike Off.

Columbus, O., Oct. 20.—The Street Car Men's Union by a vote of nearly 3 to 1, has called off the strike which had been in progress since June 26. The men have received no concessions from the company, and those who have forsaken the strikers' ranks heretofore, have been accepted only on extra runs.

News From Rural Ball Camps

By Connie Mack.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 19.—"I predicted last spring that my club would win the American League pennant, and I called the turn. The great Chicago machine has showed us nothing to date. We took three bases on them. They stole no bases on us, and at that, believe me, we had our eyes on Kling. We have had much harder battles in our own league against pitchers such as Johnson, Ford and Walsh. If luck break fair, I think the younger boys will win against the veterans."

By Frank L. Chance.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 19. "We had the best pitching that we will get from the Athletics. We have struck better twirling all year in certain National League bouts and we came out ahead. Mathewson is one I can name. He is so much better than the Indian Bender, and Coombs, that there is no comparison, and I want to say that Dreuke right now is a better man than Bender. Neither Overall or Brown showed anything. We will cop the series sure as shooting. The Athletics have shot their bolt."

By President Ben. Shine.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 19. "I can't saw how pleased I am at the showing of Bender and the rest of the boys. I knew they had it in them. We are perfectly confident now, and I think Plank will do just as well as Bender and Coombs have done. We want to show the world that we can hit any kind of pitching. Chance has a great ball team, but I believe Connie has a better one, and I can say sincerely that I believe we will win two out of the next three games."

By Charles W. Murphy.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 19. "I'll have to take off my hat to Bender for the work he did in the first game, but we had a bad break yesterday. But I still believe we have the greatest ball club in the world, and I am not worrying about the defeats. I have great confidence in Manager Chance, and I don't expect to lose a world's series as long as he is at the head of the Cubs. I believe Cole will beat them to-morrow, and I wouldn't be at all surprised or displeased if we took the next four straight. A defeat in the first two games of a world's series isn't a pleasant dose to swallow but we will get over it and show them something to-morrow.

Twenty-Two Entries For The Examiner Junior Race

There are so far twenty-two entries in the Examiner junior road race, a number far ahead of those received this far ahead of the race last year. From present indications at least forty youngsters will face the starter at the five mile post on the Lakefield road a week from Monday.

Just a word about training. Some of the youngsters seem to have the idea that they should run the full five miles nearly every night between now and the race. This is a big mistake. Once or twice over the full course is enough and the kids should not run more than a mile or two at a time. There is great danger of doing too much work in advance.

The junior entries received since yesterday are Stanley Deegan, 683 1-2 Stewart street, Merrie Graham, 677 Stewart street, Frank Halpin, 332 Smith street and Clifford Smith, 48 Lafayette avenue.

EXAMINER'S SPORTING EXTRA ON TO-DAY'S BIG GAME

Owing to the difference in time between Chicago and Peterborough, it is not possible for the Examiner to publish the complete account of to-day's world's series game between the Cubs and Athletics in the regular issue. However, a sporting extra will be issued as soon as the game is over, giving the complete details.

Coombs vs. Reulbach In To-days Battle Weather Threatening

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, OCT. 20.—It seemed today that the elements lined up with Philadelphia in swatting the poor old Cubs. This morning the temperature dropped twenty degrees and there was a drizzly rain, but the wind freshened towards noon. Chicago fans are going about quite optimistic and acting as if it was a foregone conclusion that their team couldn't help winning four straights. Despite the weather conditions an insistent throng was pushing round the gates early and it looks like a big attendance if there's a game. The Philadelphia crowd are flourishing a lot of money and odds are various, the Athletics naturally being favourites in embassed betting. The Cubs look for great things from Reulbach, their star pitcher in the event of rain to-day, here will be three games in succession in Chicago, including a Sunday game.

COOMBS VS. RULBACH.

CHICAGO, OCT. 20. Despite the threatening weather there will be a game this afternoon. Coombs will try to repeat Tuesday's victory and will pitch for the Athletics to-day, with Thomas doing the receiving. Reulbach and Kling will be the Chicago battery. The umpires will be O'Day at the plate, Sheridan on the bases and Connolly and Rigler in the outfield.

First Innings.

Athletics—Strunk walked, Lord sacrificed, Collins flied to Sheckard, Baker singled, scoring Strunk. Baker was caught stealing second. One run.

Cubs—Sheckard walked, Schulte doubled into the bleachers, Hofman flied to Strunk, Sheckard scoring after the catch, Chance fanned, Zimmerman flied to Strunk. One run.

CRIPPEN WILL TRY TO PROVE THAT BELLE ELMORE IS STILL LIVING

Dressed in Height of Fashion and Quite Free From Nervousness Accused Tells His Story---Denies Her Death

Special Wire to The Examiner.

London, Oct. 21. For the first time since his arrest on board the Montrose, at Father Point, Quebec, Dr H. H. Crippen, the American doctor, yesterday afternoon gave to the world his version of the disappearance of his wife, Belle Elmore, the music hall singer, whom he is charged with murdering.

After a sensational opening statement by his counsel, A. A. Tobin, in which Tobin told the jury of a plot to smuggle Crippen safely from the Montrose, Crippen himself took the stand.

He made it clear immediately that the defence will seek to prove that Mrs. Crippen is not dead, but that she fled to America ostensibly to join Bruce Miller, the Chicago real estate man, whose name Crippen mentioned to Inspector Dew when the latter questioned him.

Dapper and spruce as a dude, attired in the height of fashion and showing no signs of nervousness, Crippen had walked briskly to the witness stand.

Crippen first gave the jurors a brief outline of his early life and his medical career, both in the United States and England.

"I knew that my wife had been very friendly with Bruce Miller," he continued, "and I often upbraided her for corresponding with him. In 1904, Cora admitted to me that she was very fond of Bruce Miller. I ceased cohabiting with her at that time and our relations from that time on were strained to the breaking point. She repeatedly threatened to leave me, telling me that she could go to America to join Miller. I last saw her on Jan. 31, of this year, and I believe that she fled to America.

"To avoid scandal, I concocted a story that she had gone to America to attend to certain private business for me in California, and that while on her way across the American continent she had died and had been incinerated there. I simply could not face my friends with an admission that my wife had deserted me.

"On the Monday night before I wrote a letter, in her name, to the Music Hall Guild, resigning her position as treasurer. Mrs. and Mr. Paul Martinetti came to our house for dinner. After they left my wife abused me for not paying him more attention and said: 'This is the finish of it. I won't stand it any longer. I shall leave you to-morrow, and you will never hear of me again.' Before this, she told me that the man she would go to was better able to support her than I was. I went to business next morning, and when I went home, between 5 and six p.m., I found she had gone.

"I tried to think how to cover up her absence without any scandal. I wrote to the guild that she had gone away, and I told that to all our friends. I afterwards realized that this would not be a sufficient explanation for her not coming back, and later on I told people that she was ill with pneumonia, and afterwards I said that she was down from the ailment. I do not remember telling them where she died, except that it was in California. Afterwards they asked me where my son lived, and I gave them his address.

"I then put an advertisement in the Era that she was dead, as I thought that would prevent people asking me a lot of questions. Whatever I said to other people in regard to her death was absolutely wrong, but was done to prevent a scandal.

"I do not know what my wife took with her when she went away. She had often told me that when we parted she wanted nothing from me. I never pawned any of her jewels. I did draw money on several checks signed by her. We had a collective banking account, in her name, so I always carried several blank checks around with me to which she had signed her name, so that I could get money when I needed it.

"It is true that I was at the Benevolent Fund dinner at the Criterion with Miss Leneve and that she wore a brooch my wife left behind. She also wore my wife's furs. Miss Leneve had been in my employ and I had known her when she was employed with other firms for which I worked for the past eight years.

"After my wife disappeared Miss Leneve lived with me as my wife in the Hilldrop Crescent home. I have been intimate with her during the past three years. I had frequently visited hotels with her, but I was never away from home at night.

"After I had told people that my wife was dead, Miss Leneve and I went to Dieppe for five days and stayed at a hotel there.

"My firm belief is that my wife went to Chicago to join Bruce Miler. He often sent her presents and wrote her loving letters, in some of which he signed himself, 'With Love and Kisses to Brown-Eyes, Bruce.'"

Crippen was questioned by Attorney Tobin regarding the purchases he made of hyoscin, the deadly poison which he is charged with having used to murder his wife. He declared that he had never given his wife any poison. The hyoscin, he swore, he had given in very small doses to several of his patients who had been suffering from nervous disorders.

Crippen confirmed Tobin's statement about the alleged plot concocted with the quartermaster of the Montrose to allow him to escape with the vessel's cargo, adding:

"I decided that I had nothing to fear, and that it would be best for me to return to England and face the charges, of which I knew I was innocent. The letters I wrote threatening suicide were to be used as a 'blind' to prevent a search being made for me. I wanted people, at that time, to think I had killed myself. When I decided not to try to escape, I forgot to tear up the notes."

At this point the hearing was continued until to-day, when Crippen will probably resume the stand.

GETS SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR COMMITTING MINE ROBBERIES

Jury Brings in Strong Recommendation to Mercy in Case of Dupes in Nova Scotia Bullion Thefts---Gets Seven Years.

North Bay, Oct. 21.—After deliberating two hours the jury in the Nova Scotia mine bullion robbery case, returned a verdict of guilty against all three prisoners, with a recommendation to mercy for Thomas and Ralph Ballantyne. The verdict was received in breathless silence by the crowded court room, broken only by sobbing of the mother of the two Ballantynes and the wife of Thomas Ballantyne, who was almost hysterical.

Justice Teetzel fully concurred in the verdict, which he said would have a splendid moral effect and be a warning to all that life and property would be protected by juries and courts. It would have a splendid salutary effect in this district, when running property was exposed to great risk from the presence of so many men of low moral character.

George T. Blackstock, prosecuting attorney, concurred in the recommendation to mercy on behalf of the Ballantynes, on account of this being their first offence, and of their previous excellent character. He could not say anything in favor Reilly.

Prisoners' counsel, Mr. Bull, made a strong appeal for leniency.

Judge Teetzel said he was convinced that the Ballantynes had been the dupe and Reilly had plotted the entire crime. He suspended sentence in their case, conditional upon good behavior, and sentenced Thomas Reilly to seven years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Reilly was dazed by the sentence and dropped to his seat with bowed head, while tears streamed down his cheeks. He reiterated his innocence, exclaiming, "I never had a thing to do with it; this is all spite work."

W. B. Montgomery, convicted of manslaughter in causing the death of Elmer Kline in ejecting him from his hotel in New Liskeard, was fined $500 and was released on suspended sentence by Justice Teetzel yesterday.

Family Terrorized By The Receipt Of Anonymous Letters

Special Wire to The Examiner.

Sagersville, Oct. 21.—A bold attempt to terrorize a family and drive them from the farm which they have occupied for 22 years is being perpetrated in Haldimand County, near the village of Selkirk, where the household of Mrs. Fred Smelser live in deadly fear of impending disaster. Three weeks ago their barn, filled with the season's crop, was fired and destroyed under strange circumstances, and since that occurrence Mr. Smelser has received an anonymous letter warning him to give up the farm and move away or his life will be taken. Five letters have been received to date, in which the writer represented himself as the involuntary agent of an unrelenting enemy of Smelser who will brook no interference with his plans.

The members of the family are not only terrified but mystified. They have hitherto believed that they possessed the friendly regard of their neighbors far and near, and they are at a loss to know whom to accuse of the crime. Two of the threatening letter have been forwarded to the Attorney General's Department, two have been stolen from the Smelser home, and the fifth is in the possession of Mr. Joseph W. Holmes of Selkirk. Mr. Smelser has taken the mysterious mandate very seriously. He has advertised a sale of his stock on Nov. 1, and is preparing to abandon the farm.

The Smelser family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smelser, two daughters, and four sons, three of whom are at home; Ernest, aged 23; Lloyd, aged 18; and a boy aged 12, who is attending school. They live about a mile north of Selkirk on the Hagersville road, and about 11 miles south of this town. There are two men employed on the farm just now, Harvey Schwyfer and Maynard Wilkinson. Mr. Smelser rented the farm 22 years ago from Joseph W. Holmes of Selkirk, and has been a continuous tenant. Besides running the farm Smelser owned a thrashing machine and a clover seed-cleaning machine which he hires out to neighboring farmers.

Engineer Kills Himself.

Toronto, Oct. 21.—After sitting about all morning and writing letters to those who would survive him, John H. Fell, a civil engineer, of about fifty years of age, stepped quietly into the lavatory on the top storey of No. 19 Toronto street and shot himself through the head shortly after two o'clock yesterday. He did not die immediately, but was unconscious for nearly an hour before death came.

The reason he gave in letters was domestic troubles. "The last straw had broken the camel's back," he said. He was married to an Italian woman, and they lived at 928 Sexton street. He leaves one step-daughter, Mrs. John Stanley Richmond, 453 Church street.

Mr. Fell was a fluent speaker of the Italian language, and for the past two nights had held a position as night school teacher at the Elizabeth street school. He was a civil engineer, born in England, but had no office in this city.

Premiers to Confer Here.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 21.—Premier Hazen of New Brunswick and Premier Hazzard, Prince Edward Island, left last evening for Toronto, for a conference with Sir James Whitney and other provincial premiers regarding control of joint stock companies. The question of provincial representation in the Federal Parliament will also be debated. The Maritime Provinces want the British North America Act changed so that the representation will be restored to what it was when they entered the union and never to fall below that.

Commands In Dutch.

Johannesburg, Oct. 21.—The Union Government has ordered the recruiting of volunteers for the South African force to be stopped, apparently with a view to the formulation of a scheme of defence. Leaders of the language movement are urging the Government to require that words of command be repeated in Dutch, otherwise Dutch people will not join the volunteer corps.

Bank Officials Resign.

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—A. A. Taillon, who for many years has been manager of the Ottawa branch of La Banque Nationale, has resigned, along with Arthur Frechette, the accountant. It is stated that Mr. Taillon's resignation is the result of a disagreement with the board of directors.

Five Killed In Wreck.

Sandusky, O., Oct. 21.—Five persons are reported dead and many injured by the ditching of the northbound Hocking Valley passenger train No. 33 one mile south of Harpster yesterday afternoon. Details are lacking.

Physicians and ambulances have been sent from here.

ALWAYS CONSULT
A SPECIALIST

Never select glasses for yourself, and never purchase glasses from a peddling spectacle seller. The stock of such spectacle sellers is as defective as their knowledge of optics. The lenses are carefully ground and the lens in one eye is frequently different from the lens in the other eye.

BEWARE of SPECTACLE PEDDLERS

Wearing them will soon result in pain in the eyes and injury to the sight. Then there is frequently the condition of unequal vision—that is, your eyes may differ in focus and each may require a different, specially prescribed lens. In such cases similar lenses, such as you would select for yourself or a peddler would give you, must of necessity prove injurious to one or other of the eyes. We, on the other hand, have the knowledge and appliances necessary to detect the unequal vision or any other defect and grind the lenses to suit. Nineteenths of the cases of defective vision require glasses ground especially for the patient.

(By E. Phillips Oppenheim.)

"You might," she said, "but I walk down to the cliffs every afternoon. I was just starting when you came. It is quite a regular pilgrimage with me. All day long we hear the sea, but except from the upper windows we have no clear view of it. This is the path."

We crossed the Park together. All the while she talked to me easily and naturally of the country around, the great antiquity of its landmarks, the survival of many ancient customs and almost obsolete forms of speech. At last we came to a small plantation, through which we emerged on to the cliffs. Here, to my surprise, we came upon a quaintly-shaped grey stone cottage, almost hidden by the trees. I had passed on the sands below many times without seeing it.

"Rather a strange situation for a house, is it not?" Lady Angela remarked. "My grandfather built it for an old pensioner, but I do not think it has been occupied for some time."

"It is marvellously hidden," I said. "I never had the least idea that there was a house here at all."

We stood now on the edge of the cliff, and she pointed downwards.

"There is a little path there, you see, leading to the sands," she said. "It saves you quite half the distance to your cottage if you do not mind a scramble. You must take care just at first. So many of the stones are loose."

I understood that I was dismissed, and I thanked her and turned away. But she almost immediately called me back.

"Mr. Ducaine!"

"Lady Angela?"

Her dark eyes were fixed curiously upon my face. She seemed to be weighing something in her mind. I had a fancy that when she spoke again it would be without that deliberation — almost restraint — which seemed to accord a little strangely with the girlishness of her appearance and actual years. She stood on the extreme edge of the cliff, her slim straight figure outlined to angularity against the sky. She remained so long without speech that I had time to note all these things. The sunshine, breaking through the thin-topped pine trees, lay everywhere about us; a little brown feathered bird, scarcely a dozen yards away, sang to us so lustily that the soft feathers around his throat stood out like a ruff. Down below the sea came rushing on to the shingles.

"Mr. Ducaine," she said at last, "did my father make you any offer of employment this afternoon?"

It was a direct, almost a blunt question. I was taken by surprise, but I answered her without hesitation.

"He made me no definite offer," I said. "At the same time he asked me a great many questions, for which he must have had some reason, and he gave me the idea that, subject to the approval of some others, he was thinking of me in connection with some post."

"Colonel Ray was telling me," she said, "how unfortunate you have been with your pupils. I wonder—don't you think perhaps that you might get some others?"

"I have tried," I answered. "So far I have not been lucky. At present, too, I scarcely see how I could expect to get any, for I have nowhere to put them. I had to give up the lease of the Grange, and there is no house round here which I could afford to take."

Some portion of her delicate assurance had certainly deserted her. Her manner was almost nervous.

"If you could possibly find the pupils," she said, hesitatingly, "I should like to ask you a favour. The Manor Farm on the other side of the village is my own, and I should so like it occupied. I would let it to you furnished for ten pounds a year. There is a man and his wife living there now as caretakers. They would be able to look after you."

"You are very kind," I said again, "but I am afraid that I could not take advantage of such an offer."

"Why not?"

"I have no claim upon you or your father," I answered. "We are almost strangers, are we not? I might accept and be grateful for employment, but this is charity."

"A very conventional reply, Mr. Ducaine," she remarked, with faint sarcasm. "I gave you credit for a larger view of things."

"I found her still inexplicable. She was evidently annoyed, and yet she did not seem to wish me to be. There was a cloud upon her face, and a nervousness in her manner which I wholly failed to understand.

"If I were to tell you," she said, raising her eyes suddenly to mine, "that your acceptance of my offer would be a favour—would put me under a real obligation to you?"

"I should still have to remind you," I declared, "that as yet I have no pupils, and it takes time to get them. Further, I have arrived at that position when immediate employment, if it is only as a breaker of stones upon the road, is a necessity to me."

She sighed.

"My father will offer you a post," she said slowly.

"Now you are a real Samaritan, Lady Angela," I declared. "I only hope that it may be so."

Her face reflected none of my enthusiasm.

"You jump at conclusions," she said, coldly. "How do you know that the post will be one which you will be able to fill?"

"If your father offers it to me," I answered, confidently, "he must take the risk of that."

I was surprised at her speech—perhaps a little nettled. I was an "Honours" man, an exceptional linguist, and twenty-five. It did not seem likely to me that there was any post which the Duke might offer which, on the score of ability, at any rate, I should not be competent to fill.

"He will offer it you," she said, looking steadily downwards on to the sands below, "and you will accept it. I am sorry."

"Sorry!" I exclaimed.

"Very. If I could find you those pupils I would," she continued. "If I could persuade you to lay aside for once the pride which a man seems to think a part of his natural equipment, it would make me very happy. I——"

"Stop," I interrupted. "You must explain this, Lady Angela."

She shook her head.

"Explain is just what I cannot," she said, sadly. "That is what I can never do."

I was completely bewildered now. She was looking seawards, her face steadily averted from mine. As to her attitude towards me, I could not even decide whether it was friendly or inimical. Did she want this post for some one else? If so, surely her influence with her father would be strong enough to secure it. She had spoken to me kindly enough. The faint air of reserve that she seemed to carry with her everywhere which, coupled with a certain quietness of deportment, appealed to most of the people around to indicate pride, had for those few minutes, at any rate, been lifted. She had come down from the clouds, and spoken to me as any other woman to any other man. And now she had wound up by throwing me into a state of hopeless bewilderment.

"Lady Angela," I said, "I think that you owe me some explanation. If you can assure me that it is in any way against your wishes, if you will give me the shadow of a reason why I should refuse what has not yet been offered to me—well, I will do it. I will do it even if I must starve."

A little forced smile parted her lips. She looked at me kindly.

"I have said a great deal more than I meant to, Mr. Ducaine. I think that it would have been better if I had left most of it unsaid. You must go your own way. I only wanted to guard you against disappointment."

"Disappointment! You think, after all, then——"

"No, that is not what I meant," she interrupted. "I am sure that you will be offered the post, and I am sure that you will not hesitate to accept it. But, nevertheless I think that it will bring with it great disappointments. I will tell you this. Already three young men whom I know very well have held this post, and each in turn has been dismissed. They have lost the confidence of their employers, and though each, I believe, was ambitious and meant to make a career, they have now a black mark against their name."

"You are very mysterious, Lady Angela," I said, doubtfully.

"It is of necessity," she answered. "Perhaps I take rather a morbid view of things, but one of them was the brother of a great friend of mine and they fear that he has lost his reason. There are peculiar and painful difficulties in connection with this post, Mr. Ducaine, and I think it only fair to give this warning."

"You are very kind," I said. "I only wish that the whole thing was clearer to me."

She smiled a little sadly.

"At least," she said, "let me give you one word of advice. You will be brought into contact with many people whose integrity will seem to you a positive and certain thing. Nevertheless, treat every one alike. Trust no one. Absolutely no one, Mr. Ducaine. It is your only chance. Now go."

Her gesture of dismissal was almost imperative. I scrambled down the path and gained the sands. When I looked up she was still standing there. The wind blew her skirts around her slim young limbs, and her hair was streaming behind her. Her face seemed like a piece of delicate oval statuary, her steady eyes seemed fixed upon some point where the clouds and sea meet. She took no heed of, she did not even see, my gesture of farewell. I left there inscrutable, a child with the face of a Sphinx. She had set me a riddle which I could not solve.

CHAPTER VII.

COLONEL RAY'S RING.

The ring lay on the table between us. Colonel Ray had not yet taken it up. In grim silence he listened to my faltering words. When I finished he smiled upon me as one might upon a child that needed humouring.

"So," he said, slipping the ring upon his finger, "you have saved me from the hangman. What remains? Your reward, eh?"

"It may seem to you," I answered hotly, "a fitting subject for jokes. I am sorry that my sense of humour is not in touch with yours. You are a great traveller, and you have shaken death by the hand before. For me it is a new thing. The man's face haunts me! I cannot sleep or rest for thinking of it—as I have seen it dead, and as I saw it alive pressed against my window—that night. Who was he? What did he want with me?"

"How do you know," Ray asked, "that he wanted anything from you?"

"He looked in at my window."

"He might have seen me enter."

Then I told him what I had meant to keep secret.

"He asked for me in the village. He was directed to my cottage."

Ray had been filling his pipe. His fingers paused in their task. He looked at me steadily.

"How did you know that?" he asked.

"The person to whom he spoke in the village told me so."

"Then why did that person not appear at the inquest?"

"Because I asked her not to," I told him. "If she had given evidence the verdict must have been a different one."

"It seems to me," he said quietly, "that you have acted foolishly. If that young woman, whoever she may be, chooses to tell the truth later on you will be in an awkward position."

"If she had told the truth yesterday," I answered, "the position would have been quite awkward enough. Let that go! I want to know who that man was, what he wanted with me."

Colonel Ray shrugged his shoulders.

"My young friend," he said, "have you come from Braster to ask that question?"

"To give you the ring and to ask you that question."

"How do you know that the ring is mine?"

"I saw it on your finger when you were giving me wine."

"Then you believe," he said, "that I killed him?"

"It is no concern of mine," I cried hoarsely. "I do not want to know. I do not want to hear. But I tell you that the man's face haunts me. He asked for me in the village. I feel that he came to Rowchester to see me. And he is dead. Whatever he came to say or to tell me will be buried with him. Who was he? Tell me that?"

Ray smoked on for a few moments, reflectively.

"Sit down, sit down!" he said, gruffly, "and do abandon that tragical aspect. The creature was not worth all this agitation. He lived like a dog, and he died like one."

"It is true, then?" I murmured.

"If you insist upon knowing," Ray said coolly, "I killed him! There are insects upon which one's foot falls, reptiles which one removes from the earth without a vestige of a qualm, with a certain sense of relief. He was of this order."

"He was a human being," I answered.

He was none the better for that," Ray declared. "I have known animals of finer disposition."

"You at least," I said fiercely, "were not his judge. You struck him in the dark, too. It was a cowardly action."

Ray turned his head. Then I saw that around his neck was a circular bandage.

"If it interests you to know it," he remarked drily, "I was not the assailant. But for the fact that I was warned it might have been my body which you came across on the sands. I started a second too soon for our friend—and our exchange of compliments sent him to eternity."

"It was in self-defence, then?"

"Scarcely that. He would have run away if he could. I decided otherwise."

"Tell me who he was," I insisted.

Ray shook his head.

"Better for you not to know," he remarked reflectively. "Much better."

My cheeks grew hot with anger.

"Colonel Ray," I said, "this may yet be a serious affair for you. Why you should assume that I am willing to be a silent accessory to your crime I cannot imagine. I insist upon knowing who this man was."

"You have come to London," Ray answered quietly, "to ask me this?"

"I have told you before why I am here," I answered. "I will not be put off any longer. Who was that man, and what did he want with me?"

For a period of time which I could not measure, but which seemed to me of great duration, there was silence between us. Then Ray leaned over towards me.

"I think," he said, "that it is my turn to talk. You have come to me like a hysterical schoolboy, you seem ignorant of the primeval elements of justice. After all it is not wonderful. As yet you have only looked in upon life. You look in, but you do not understand. You have called me a coward. It is only a year or so since His Majesty pinned a little cross upon my coat—for valour. I won that for saving a man's life. Mind you, he was a man. He was a man and a comrade. To save him I rode through a hell of bullets. It ought to have meant death. As a matter of fact it didn't. That was my luck. But you mustn't call me a coward, Ducaine. It is an insult to my decoration."

"Oh, I know that you are brave enough," I answered, "but this man was a poor weak creature, a baby in your hands."

"So are the snakes we stamp beneath our feet," he answered coolly. "Yet we kill them. In Egypt I have been in more than one hot corner, where we fought hand to hand. I have killed men more than once. I have watched them galloping up with waving swords, and their fine faces ablaze with the joy of battle, and all the time one's revolver went spit, and the saddles were empty. Yet never once have I sent a brave man to his last account without regret, enemy and fanatic though he was. I am not a bloodthirsty man. When I kill, it is because necessity demands it. As for that creature whom you found in the marshes, well, if there were a dozen such in this room now, I would do my best to rid the earth of them. Take my advice. Dismiss the whole subject from your mind. Get back to Braster and wait. Something may happen within the next twenty-four hours, which will be very much to your benefit. Go back to Braster and wait."

"You will tell me nothing, then?" I asked. "It is treating me like a child. I am not a sentimentalist. If the man deserved death the matter is between you and your conscience. But he came to Rowchester to see me. I want to know why."

"Go back to Rowchester and wait," Ray said. "I shall tell you nothing. Depend upon it that his business with you, if he had any, was evil business. He and his whole brood left their mark for evil wherever they crawled."

"His name?" I asked.

"Were there no papers upon him?" Ray demanded.

"None."

Nervous Headache

AND MUSCULAR RHEUMATISM DISAPPEARED WHEN THE NERVES WERE RESTORED BY

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Feeble, wasted, starved nerves often make their condition known by nervous headaches. This was one of the first and most marked symptoms.

If you are at all subject to rheumatism you have noticed how much worse it gets when the system gets run down.

Both nervous headache and muscular rheumatism disappear when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used to rebuild and revitalize the wasted and weakened body.

Mr. James Riley, moulder for the Waterous Engine Co., 46 Jarvis St., Brantford, Ont., writes: "I suffered for years with muscular rheumatism and as I also had frequent and severe attacks of nervous headache I concluded that the trouble came from the nerves and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As I continued this treatment the rheumatism was gradually driven out of the system, my nerves got stronger and steadier and the headaches disappeared. I consider Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a splendid nerve regulator and health builder."

You cannot possibly make a mistake in using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when the nervous system gets run down, for, by forming new, rich, blood this great food cure builds up the nerve cells as nothing else can.

When you have made up your mind to test this treatment, go at it in earnest and keep at it regularly until you feel again the joy of health and vigour.

SHE WAS SURPRISED

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs. R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure Bowel and Kidney as well as Liver troubles, and keep you healthy. 25c a box at your dealer's. 14

MONTREAL, 22nd February, 1909.

I HEREBY CERTIFY that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four lots of about 150 barrels each and six lots of about 450 bags each. I have analyzed same and find them uniformly to contain 99-90/100 to 100 per cent of pure cane sugar, with no impurities whatever.

A Tonic Stimulant

The active business man, the brain worker, and all that class of people could not stand the constant strain on their brain and nerves were it not for the timely use of a pure, gentle, invigorating tonic.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

the standard of purity and excellence for over half a century, is one of the greatest tonic-stimulants and strength-givers known to science.

It has been extolled throughout the world for what it has done for suffering humanity. Its success in curing disease has caused many unreliable dealers to put up substitutes and imitations with which to fool the people, claiming that their substitutes are "just as good as Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey," but they are thinking of their own profits only. Insist on the genuine. Sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY. All druggists, grocers and liquor merchants, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free.

Mr. Hilliard Nelson has purchased a new threshing outfit, all complete.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. O'Brien, Douro, spent Sunday last with friends here.

Mr. Thomas Fitzgerald has moved into his new residence in Douro village.

Miss Shannon and Miss Waterman, our two popular school teachers, attended the Teachers' Convention in Peterborough on Thursday last and Friday.

Miss Mary Aitch of Douro, spent a few days last week with friends here.

Miss Gertie Murphy of Eganmore, is spending a few days with her uncle Mr. Stephen Murphy of Guelph.

The high wind of Saturday last left very few apples to be hand-picked.

Potatoes are proving to be a failure, as they are rotting in the ground.

The Norwood Fair was well attended from here and a large number from the surrounding villages.

Messrs. Maher and Cavanagh shipped a car of hogs from the cheese factory yards on Thursday, 6th inst. to Matthews Co. The price was $6.00 per cwt.

Mr. Andrus, cheesemaker, is getting about 10,000 lbs. of milk daily, and is well pleased with his average for the past five months. Mr. Andrus is going to make the first week of November, as the milk drawers wish to make a few extra cents on account of the late start in May.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lynch of Clarke's, spent Sunday last with friends here.

Miss McDonald of Sterling, is spending a few days with her friend, Mrs. Richard Cornelius.

The grain market was opened, but is very quiet. Fall wheat is worth 90c, while wheat is worth 90 and oats is bringing 30 cents per bushel.

DAIRY INSTRUCTOR SPEAKS OF THE WORK

From Ottawa Dept. Dairy.

D. J. Cameron, Dairy Instructor, Peterboro Co., Ont.

The district in which I have been Dairy Instructor since 1906, is that lying west of Peterboro, and extending south to Lake Ontario, north into Verulam, and west into Mariposa and Darlington townships. On the west and south I find the creameries gradually creeping in. Several cheese factories have closed in the last few years. It looks as though others will have to turn creamery as well. The patronage of these factories is small and scattered, making the cost of hauling so high as to be unprofitable.

On my first trip over the ground this season, I was well pleased with the improvements I found being made in the factory buildings and equipment. The factories started out in good sanitary condition, which condition has been fairly well maintained.

Our early make of cheese never was finer than this season. All the makers, with the exception of three, are using a pasteurized starter, from the same culture. This I find a great help in getting the cheese of uniform quality.

PATRONS NOT CAREFUL ENOUGH

During the long hot spell in June and July, we were troubled a good deal with over-ripe milk. Some patrons never seem to realize that the weather has changed until they have a can of sour milk returned to them. If all patrons of cheese factories would be observant, and when warm weather sets in, imitate cold weather conditions, a load of worry would be lifted from the shoulders of all, besides increasing the yield and value of our cheese. Patrons should place the milk in cold water or ice, with as little exposure to the air as possible, and cool quickly to at least 60 degrees, being careful to use a thermometer, and have everything in connection with the milk clean.

A great many patrons think they must dip and pour their milk. They probably do this in an impure or dust-laden atmosphere of, perhaps, 80 degrees temperature. By this process the milk can only be [illegible] to the temperature of [illegible] air. In warm weather this temperature will not be low enough for good results. Keep the milk clean, and cool quickly.

COOL CURING ROOMS

We have no cool curing rooms in my district as yet, but hope to have some before next season opens. The producers are beginning to think seriously about the excessive shrinkage, both in weight and value of their cheese that has been going on in the ordinary curing room. They must see that they are sustaining a loss, and that a cool curing room would return them big returns on their investment.

Generally speaking, the quality of our cheese has been an improvement over last season.

BROTHERS KILLED

Examiner Special.

TACOMA WASH., OCT. 18.—Two reservation Indians, brothers, Albert Bill and George Jim, were run down and killed at different points at the same hour early in the morning by speeding trains.

The former was struck by an interurban near Fife and the latter by a Milwaukee train on the main line at East L and Twenty-sixth Streets.

The motorman of the interurban train was running about sixty miles an hour when he says he saw Albert Bill's body lying between the tracks in front of him about fifty feet. It was then too late to stop. The tender passed over the body, but it was ground under the metal castings. George Jim was instantly killed by the locomotive.

MAN'S MISERY PROMPTLY VANISHED

(From "Man's Maladies.")

A certain sort of misery which causes a man to become abject in manner, timid, suspicious and jealous without real warrant, can be readily banished by a systematic nerve treatment which can be followed out in the privacy of home and restoration of a normal or natural condition speedily ensues.

A man feels and knows when he is not getting out of life all that it holds, and this knowledge makes the misery which occurs with such symptoms as unsteady gait, weak voice, downcast eyes, cold extremities, loss of flesh, loss of self control, lack of self esteem, pains in the back and back part of head, shooting pains, heart palpitation, nervousness, sleeplessness, hollow eyes, sunken cheeks, colourless lips, dizziness and trembling.

The requirements to overcome these dreadful symptoms is a restoration of power and strength to the nervous system which has been poorly nourished or abused by thoughtless eating, drinking or social duties, perhaps superinduced by overwork. Keen, strong, sensitive nerves which carry every sensation or emotion to the brain centres of consciousness can and should be the possession of every living individual. Let this prescription be used and the results will surely reward the efforts. Obtain of any good druggist, three ounces of syrup sarsaparilla compound, in a six ounce bottle. Add one ounce of compound fluid balmwort, shake and let stand for two hours, then add one ounce of tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom) and one ounce of compound essence cardiol. Mix. Shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring. The three last named ingredients are specially prepared and powerful concentrations, which exist in various prescriptions, but obtain no opiates to harm the system.

SOME Stories of Poultry Raising for Profit That Recall Governor Flower and His Prophecy of a Renaissance

By EDWARD HUNGERFORD.

THE late Roswell P. Flower—one time Governor of the State of New York—was a pretty practical sort of agriculturist. Born and raised on a farm near Theresa, in the northern part of Jefferson county, he kept a keen interest in the welfare of farmers until the end of his days. In no small way he foreshadowed the coming renaissance of Eastern farming. He saw with his far sighted eyes the coming of the day when New York State, in common with the other somewhat neglected farming districts of the North Atlantic seaboard, would be called upon to give increased measure of food to the great and growing cities that cluster close to that seaboard.

It was Governor Flower's keen delight to use the resources of his wealth in practical aid to struggling farmers. Watertown folk long ago ceased estimating the gifts that he had made during his lifetime to men who found that they were struggling almost under more than they could carry, the farm mortgages that he had taken over, only to use as kindling for his office stove.

But Mr. Flower's keenest joy was to take some north country farm, run down, perhaps, because of gross stupidity in management, and by use of a normal working capital, such as any quick witted farmer should be able to command, make that farm into a normal, money making institution. There were farms far and near about Watertown which came into new youth through the quickening influence of his aid, but when he went back to Burrville, a little hamlet six miles southeast of the county seat of Jefferson, and bought a hillside place in almost the last stages of decadence the people of the township wondered what the Governor could make of that place.

It was a cold farm, a mighty cold farm even in a land of cold farms. Limestone ledges cropped out from its steep hillsides; there did not seem to be a single decent sort of growing thing that might thrive upon those acres. A little brook came dancing down over those hillside ledges, and that brook became the salvation of that Burrville farm. The Governor, using a little of that plain, hard common sense that was his greatest asset, dammed that brook in three or four places and the Burrville folks began driving by the place the better to see what he was trying to do.

They saw. The dams created ponds and the ponds became the lodging place for swarms of Pekin ducks. After that the Jefferson county people said that it was a simple idea and perhaps Governor Flower did not get any too much credit for his hard common sense. He brought a poultry expert up from one of the Long Island duck farms and in a single year more than ten thousand of the plump birds went down to the city markets. North country people saw "Watertown ducks" on the menu cards of the big New York hotels and their pride swelled tremendously.

If Governor Flower were still alive it is probable that his duck farm would still be adding to its laurels. But it came to hard times. There was trouble with the water supply. Most of all, the keen personal interest of a man who was developing the idea of his own brain was gone. The ponds are drained and the farm of the hillside ledges no longer sends its ducks to the city market.

The Vision of Ducks.

That Burrville farm excited greatest interest because of the ingenious use of its rippling brook. People began to see every hillside brook in the north country dammed into countless ponds for the breeding of ducks—a great industry being set forth on those stony slopes. Then there came faintly, as faint rumor always comes—word that a successful duck grower over at Ransomville, in Niagara county, was not using duck ponds any more. He said that the ducks put on muscle by swimming around in the drained old ponds, and what folks wanted who ate ducks was not muscle but fatty meat. His theory was that a duck worked off fat by paddling all day long around a dirty pond. He put that theory into effect and to-day he claims to have the largest poultry farm in the United States. Last year it sent between fifty and sixty thousand ducks and between twenty and twenty-five thousand chickens to the city markets.

A traffic man for the big railroad system that reaches into that country got into the habit of stopping at Ransomville on his way East from Niagara Falls, keeping sharp eye on the business that was originating on a fairly active branch line. A certain citizen of Ransomville used to be hanging about the depot a good part of the time when the little local trains straggled in and out of town and the railroader picked up a budding acquaintance with him. The certain citizen finally said that he owned a duck farm over across the road and that perhaps he would like a siding for it. Duck farms are not ordinarily siding propositions for railroads, and so, after the freight expert had resumed politely to the citizen from Ransomville, he dismissed the idea from his mind.

But that citizen was insistent. He kept speaking about that siding each time the traffic man came to Ransomville, and for a time he continued to dismiss it from serious consideration. There were too many really big concerns that were demanding sidetracks from his line.

The Ransomville farmer was insistent, and one day the railroader gave greater heed to that insistence. He proposed to show the duck grower that he was seeking a big proposition when he began to talk siding to a train line railroad corporation.

"It would cost coal hauling," he argued.

"We can raise the money," the farmer said.

"You would have to move that pump station over

"We'll move it. We own it."

"And cross that field."

"You can cross it. We own that, too."

Then it developed that the simple, unassuming farmers—father and sons—owned most of that part of Ransomville, and the traffic man, his interest greatly stimulated, went into the little yellow depot and began studying the freight receipts of the Niagara farm—as they called their place. Those freight receipts told the story. The traffic man could hardly believe it. Here was a farm getting four to five cars of feed alone in the course of a week—its output in ducks and in chickens ran into high tonnage.

The sidetrack was built without further delay.

You find the entrance to Niagara Farm—the place where the ducklings are tabooed from their favorite sport—just across the main street of Ransomville from the railroad depot. A big grain elevator—the real cause for the starting of the big industry—marks the entrance of the farm. Inside the elevator are its offices—a metropolitan looking place, with young women stenographers and typewriters—all the frills of a really big business. The elevator itself holds tons upon tons of chicken and duck feed, and when the senior Curtiss—the man who made the railroad give him a private sidetrack—tells you once again that it was the real cause of the starting of the duck farm, you demand the story of that starting.

When the Start Came.

It comes—a little slowly at the very first. The senior Curtiss was in the flour and feed business there at Ransomville twenty years ago—the big elevator there by their siding was his storehouse—when his small boy, Roy, came to him and called his attention to the fact that the hens of the farm were being neglected. He offered to care for them if his father would furnish the feed from the storehouse and give him the eggs and chickens they did not eat in their house. The senior Curtiss quickly agreed—it was a little matter at the best—and Roy plunged in. He did not know much about poultry at the beginning, but he was willing to learn and learn he did.

Before two years were passed his father was anxious to end the bargain; the feed that the boy was using was running into sizable quantities. The young poultryman held his father to the very word of his contract. All the while he kept hard at it—raising chickens. There was a marketing proposition, too, to be taken into account and Ransomville folk to-day will tell you how Roy used to get up at two o'clock in the morning to start his long thirteen mile drive into market at Niagara Falls.

An older brother, Jay, came home from the city and found that Roy was making more money than he, and he joined in the business. So was the Niagara Farm founded.

"It was not all plain sailing even then," said W. Roy Curtiss the other day to us. He is not much of a boy now, but a man grown strong and keen and enthusiastic in the pursuit of his profitable hobby. "It was ten years before we could get quite rid of the fogs. One time we bought four hundred dollars' worth of incubators—and $400 was some capital to us then—only to find that they were no good. They had to go on the scrap heap and that big figure was charged hopelessly to loss.

"That was a blow when our capital was slim and its lack a constant handicap to us. When we began to raise ducks we found them a big problem. The first year that we hatched them we raised fourteen hundred and it seemed to us then that we were handling a big proposition. Perhaps we were, but we

Chickens Everywhere

Then we were sure that it was a big proposition and Jay went down for a season as a laborer on a Long Island duck farm.

"That cost money, too, but it was a good investment. The next year after he came back our balance was on the right side of the ledger. Niagara Farm seemed to be well launched. Then we began a campaign of education to make the Western New York folks eat duck. Before it began we sold a ton of the birds to a big Buffalo hotel at ten cents a pound."

Mr. Curtiss smiled grimly.

"They don't go as cheap as that since folk have begun to eat and to like the juicy birds," he added.

We followed close upon his heels through the big feed elevator with its mixing machines and its cutters, all operated by the farm's power plant.

"We find the dough mixers that the big bakeries use just the thing for our duck feed," he tells you. "It assures us of an even quality."

You ask about the composition of duck feed. The senior Curtiss tells you. When he is done it seems as if all able bodied Pekin duck fattening up for a critical market would eat about anything that a man would be joined in the business. So was the Niagara Farm founded.

The By-Product.

Mr. Curtiss grows reminiscent and tells you of a year when the big level farm brought forth an unusual crop of clover. When it was threshed the boys observed that there was a large quantity of the heads and leaves left on the barn floor and that such a by-product made good poultry feed. They began to advertise it as poultry feed in the farm papers and created a demand for a month that had before been rushed as Xmas. Advertising pays, and orders came in fast and furious. They gave up trying to cut the stuff with a hand cutter and turned to horse power. More orders came, and then turned from horse power to a steam engine—they have a hustling around now—the feed to the right consistency. Then they rigged machines to sift and bag the cut clover, and when their trade in this by-product reached five or six tons a day the Curtisses felt that they had done well with a waste product.

That one thing is typical of the big farm. Everything upon that estate is typical of the best operating economy—a thing that has yet to be dinned into the ears of a good many New York State farmers. You step from the feed elevator on to the rails of a narrow gauge track.

"The Niagara Farm Traction Company," laughs one of the proprietors. There are more than a thousand feet of track, and it leads straight from the feed storehouse past a double row of colony houses through a long covered shed; from ten to twenty thousand ducks are reached directly by it. When the cat goes slipping down those rails morning and night the everlasting clatter of the birds becomes crescendo. As the farmhands scatter out the feed—bushels upon bushels of it—great white breakers of feathered life go rolling across those pens.

There are lanterns every little way along that railroad track, and you grow gayly humorous—you make bold to ask if the Niagara Farm Traction Company is adopting the block system. One of the Curtisses explains.

"If we didn't hang those lanterns there and keep them lighted throughout the night this place would be Bedlam. I don't know duck logic well enough to give you the precise reason, but those beacon lights do seem to keep the ducks asleep from dusk to

Just Ducks

The big shed—some three or four hundred feet long and fifty feet in breadth—was a development of the Niagara Farm. One of the Curtisses discovered that it was most essential that ducks should have plenty of shade, and yet he wished to work out a bigger and a better sort of colony house and one that was far cooler, too. The big open shed, with the railroad track running its length, was the solution. Its ample roof provides shelter against sun and storm, its roomy pens run out in long stretches to the one side and the other.

You wander around that sixty-five acre poultry farm until you are well nigh footsore. You pass the woodlot and find that it is a haven for some thousands more of ducks; back of the woodlot there is more open space, and chickens—Wyandottes and Leghorns—by the thousands. One of the twenty-five farm hands who find employment all the year round upon the duck farm is going through the flock scattering feed from his basket. A sea—a surging, cackling sea—is at his heels. You must give a chicken credit for knowing meal time, at the least.

We come forward again, through the thickly populated woodlot. There is an orchard off to the right, and it is studded with white colony houses—a miniature village set there among the trees. You pass a long row of maples and more ducks come out, in companies, in regiments, in brigades—hundreds and thousands of them. Sometimes in those flocks you see tiny ducklings of a mottled brown, in keen contrast to the tiny yellow Pekins.

"Indian runners," says Roy Curtiss. "We're experimenting with them. They lay eggs all winter and they may prove a great investment. We're never too old to learn, you know."

Care Is the One Thing.

The senior Curtiss smiles and tells you how once he had to rout his boys out of bed at daybreak to have them take care of their chicks. The boys had been out late on the preceding night and had overslept.

"That's the point," he urges. "People who undertake to raise poultry sometimes forget it. You have got to take care of your chickens and your ducks, and that is something of a real proposition. You've virtually got to live with them—if you do anything else you can't expect to make a success in the poultry business."

He illustrates his point by reaching down into a pen and setting a little shaver of a duckling, lying helpless upon his back in the broiling sun, squarely upon his feet once again. The duckling hurried off to join the rest of his company.

"You've got to watch them—just like that," says Mr. Curtiss. "If you don't you bring up your percentage of mortality and off go your profits—almost before you realize it."

You pass three big ponds in which ducks are paddling to their hearts' content and you look at the proprietor accusingly—you had been told that this was dry farming in ducks. He laughs at you—once again.

"These are the breeders," he explains. "All through the season we are picking the cream of our production and putting them in this company. We have the flowers of the flock here. See those fine heads, those short necks, the broad breasts, the bodies set well back on the legs." He wanders on in the professional pride of an expert poultryman. Then he shuts himself off and points to a big bulk of a building, big enough to serve as a State armory.

"The biggest building in Niagara county," he says, in pardonable elation. "Our growing farm brought us to it."

It is a big building and in it are numberless incubators. You can look into one after another of their trays and fairly see the tiny chicks and ducklings coming into their brief existence on this old world. A Japanese boy is turning eggs on one of the incubator trays and the senior Curtiss whispers to you that he is studying the business so that he can go back to Tokio and launch a big poultry farm there.

"We get some pretty well educated help that way," he continues. "Last year the Russian government sent Miss Marguerite Friede all the way to Ransomville from St. Petersburg, and she stayed on the farm for a month, studying it in detail."

You pass from the incubator cellar up stairs into storerooms, into a room where a deft fingered workman is fashioning cases out of heavy pasteboard. Mr. Curtiss lifts one of the cases up for your close inspection. It is perforated with a hundred holes.

"We send the day-old chicks and ducklings across the continent in these cases," he says, "and they travel like old drummers—never a bit the worse for their journey."

Others of that incubated crop go to the brooder houses when they are a day old, there to stay for a week or a fortnight, until they are ready to go into the open. When they are ten weeks old they are ready for the market—for the lord high executioners of Niagara Farm. From the slaughter house they go in great racks to the pickers, who dress them for market.

Some twenty-five women find a good if somewhat monotonous employment in picking the birds. They get four cents a bird and nimble workers think they get of sixty birds as a day's work. Then they are packed in ice and shipped off by express to market.

"We get our ice from our duck ponds," says Roy Curtiss. "There is nothing wasted here."

He is right. Niagara Farm is of the modern order of agricultural projects, which no less commercial has

THE PRINCE OF WALES IS A SPORTSMAN

The King Wishes Him to be Good Marksman, Cricketer, and Rider

London, Oct. 8.—The young Prince of Wales is naturally a sportsman, but his father is taking the greatest of pains to make him a good shot, rider and cricketer, knowing well how these accomplishments appeal to the crowd in this country. The boy made an excellent impression lately by sending a subscription to the popular ground superintendent of a London cricket club, who, after twenty-five years, was enjoying a "benefit," and he followed this up by playing remarkably well in a cricket match arranged at Balmoral Castle between the Royal Household and a local team.

For the first time the young Prince has this season been out shooting grouse, and on the first day he acquitted himself well, but in regard to fishing he is not so keen or so expert as his brother, Prince Albert, who can already "cast a fly" as well as many of his seniors. The next sport to which the Prince of Wales will be initiated is hunting, and for this purpose two horses are being specially trained at Sandringham. He will, next month, when the Court returns to Windsor, go through a course of riding and jumping at the Cavalry Barracks under the tuition of a non-commissioned officer of the Royal House Guards, and sometime after Christmas he will make his first appearance in the hunting field with a famous pack of hounds in the Windsor District.

King George does not, however, allow the Heir Apparent to think of sport and nothing else. He is still with his old tutor, Mr. Hansell, a giant of six feet four inches, who exacts the sternest discipline during vacations, and the mornings at Balmoral are spent in study and what may be called "lessons in kingship." The boy devours history and is keenly interested in it, but he is not proving a great linguist. His manner is extremely serious in public, and he has the "shy frown" which he has inherited from his mother, Queen Mary, who, by the way, is daily adding to her reputation for doing kindly acts in an unostentatious manner. This "frown" is nothing more than a peculiar formation of the eyebrows inherited from the Duke of Teck. Queen Mary's father, who was in reality one of the jolliest of mankind, as are his sons, Prince Alexander and Prince Francis of Teck.

WHERE DOES ALL HAIR COME FROM

Material for the Puffs, Curls, Swirls, and Other Hair Furnishings For the Head

London, Oct. 15.—"Where on earth does all the hair come from that women pile on their heads in the form of puffs, curls, swirls, and a few other things the professional name of which I don't pretend to know?" asked an innocent man a day or two ago. Everyone is aware nowadays that part of the hair women wear is not their own for the wearers quite openly and cheerfully admit such to be the case. In fact, little shame or confusion does it give a woman to replace her locks it part of them fall off. Where does all this hair come from which is used to ornament the head of the average woman of fashion? Best not to inquire too deeply as to that. China contributes a very large share, for its several hundreds of millions of population are a very prolific source of hair which is sold to hair merchants for exportation to the United States and Europe. But the women who are to wear it later have no suspicion of this fact. The large amount of blonde hair in the market comes from Brittany in France. The travelling hair merchants meet in the south of France in October of each year where a "hair market" is always held, and to which place the wholesale hair merchants come. They not only buy hair actually cut from the head, but also what is known to the trade as "combings." Many a braid is from these. Last year's harvest of "combings" amounted to more than 20,000 pounds.

BRANDY AND COFFEE

Willing to Do With Smaller Wages to Get Them

Paris, Oct. 15.—The washerwomen and their employers in the little town of St. Pierre d'Oleron have arranged their differences of opinion by means of the town crier. This novelty in strike methods might be a useful example. The washerwomen struck work, insisting on 25 cents a day wages, and two hearty meals, including coffee, with a glass of brandy, after each. The employers refused these terms and the washerwomen sent the town crier round to tell what their claims were. Some hours later the employers—in other words, all the ladies of St. Pierre d'Oleron except the washerwomen—sent the town crier round a second time offering to pay the 25 cents and to supply the food, but without coffee and brandy. The washerwomen then held a meeting, and mobilized the town crier for the third time. He proclaimed with beat of drum that the washerwomen were willing to work for 30 cents a day instead of 25 cents, but that the coffee and brandy must be included in the meals, and all is now at peace in St. Pierre d'Oleron.

A PECULIAR SCENE

The Proprietor of a Parisian Bazaar In a Mix-Up

Paris, Oct. 15.—An extraordinary scene was witnessed at a bazaar the other evening. The proprietor of the establishment has for a long time been the victim of a number of precocious thieves, whose habit it is to "lift" articles exposed for sale outside the shop. He caught one of the thieves last night—a boy of eight, who, when asked for his name and address, burst into tears. Then someone protested against the "cruelty" of M. Mitzker, and he was first insulted and then assaulted. An individual knocked him down by striking him in the stomach, and then seized him by the throat and tried to strangle him. The crowd took advantage of the resultant confusion to help themselves to the articles exposed for sale. A large number of them walked off with as much as they could carry, and, but for the intervention of a police officer who happened to pass, the pillage might have gone to greater lengths. There was already talk of setting fire to the shop! The individual who assaulted M. Mitzker was arrested, but his character is good, and his explanation that he acted under the impulse of legitimate indignation at the proprietor's supposed cruelty was accepted.

A CUPBOARD CURE

The Wizard Got the Fat of the Land and a "Best Girl"

Paris, Oct. 15.—Three months' imprisonment has been dealt out to a jolly wizard who behaved a trifle too playfully with a gullible customer. The latter is an unsophisticated man of 23, who is an imaginary invalid. He went to the faithhealer to be cured of the ills he thought he had, and the wizard jumped at the chance. He diagnozed so many and so serious diseases that he advised the young man to take him to live in his house. The magician was accordingly installed, and began putting the patient through his treatment—mystic passes morning and evening, incantations at regular intervals, exorcisms every other day, and much dosing with bewitched water. Meanwhile the wizard treated himself to the fat of the land, ate prodigiously, and drank more so. At night after the final treatment he retired intoxicated with the youth's best wine. The young man took it all in earnest, and was beginning to feel really better, when the wizard carried things a little far by making love to his best girl. The latter called one day, and the faithhealer not only courted her, but, in order that their interviews should not be disturbed by her betrothed, locked him up for some time in a cupboard, telling him that complete rest and a dark-room cure were part of the magic treatment. When the young man came out of the cupboard he really was cured this time. He summoned enough courage to throw the wizard out of doors and lodged a complaint with the police.

LITTLE PRINCES AMONG THE TOYS

Russian and Grecian Royal Children Have a Frollicking Time in Friedburg Shops

London, Oct. 15.—A pretty scene may frequently be witnessed while the Czar and Czarina are at Friedberg. It is the visits paid to a Bad Nauheim toyshops by the five-year-old Czarevitch and his playfellows, the little Princes Ludwig and George of Hesse and two tiny princesses of the Royal Family of Greece. Three ladies of the Russian Court accompany them, but, with the exception of one, whose duty it is to empty Prince George's pockets as he lawlessly fills them from the shop counters, they in no way interfere with the children's movements. At first a couple of detectives stood at the door to prevent other customers entering while the royal children were in the shop, but the precaution has been dropped, and now many people go in simply to watch the spectacle. All the children are dressed, as usual, in white, except the Czarevitch, who is clad in a blue frock, patent leather top boots, and a white cap with hanging gold-embroidered tassels. They run about the shop mounting rocking-horses, handling dolls and setting mechanical toys in motion; but their purses, it seems, are not over full, for their purchases only range from five to ten cents in value. The conduct of the Czarevitch is said to be different from that of his lively companions. He is described as hiding shyly behind the counters and shrinking if a door opens or anyone speaks suddenly behind him. The shyness, bordering on fear, is credited to what he has heard about the dangers that incessantly threaten every member of the Imperial family.

FRANCE AND GERMANY

A Proposed German Visit is Resented By the Frecnh

London, Oct. 15.—"Lest we forget." Just before the coming of age of Princess Victoria Louise, youngest child and only daughter of Emperor William, of Germany, which occurred last month, a rumor was in circulation in Paris that overtures had been made to the French Government by the Government of Berlin to permit the young Princess and her mother to make a short visit to the French capital strictly incognito. Their visit, it may be explained, was not intended for the purpose of purchasing toilettes, for the German court, needless to say, while copying Paris fashions, exacts that the legend "Made in Germany" appear on all necessary garments worn at court by German women, from the Empress down. A prompt and very forcible negative was sent in reply, but nevertheless the news became known, not, perhaps, with very much secret objection on the part of the French Government. A monster indignation meeting was planned in Paris in protest of the request made by Germany. Over and over again has the attempt been made to enable members of the reigning royal family of Germany to visit France, but the same reply is always conveyed to Berlin, in diplomatic language: "At your own peril. We cannot be responsible for your personal safety." When a young and daring member of the family did venture into French territory some time ago he was quickly hustled back across the frontier by cautious French officials, who realized the grave results that would follow if the identity of the royal visitor became generally known.

HUGE MONUMENT

The Best Wood to Make the Grave of the "Son of Heaven"

London, Oct. 15.—A magnificent mausoleum is to be built to mark the resting-place of the late "Son of Heaven"—the Chinese Emperor, Kwang Hsu. The forests of the Orient were searched for the best and most durable wood, and, after much competition, a Manila lumber company has won what is described as the richest commercial prize of recent years in China. The preliminary contract for the material has now been signed by two of the Chinese imperial princes, and it provides in the first place for the shipment of 50,000 feet of Philippine hard wood. This was to have sailed last week by special steamer, and on its arrival at Peking work is to start forthwith on the mausoleum among the tombs of the Ming dynasty near the capital. For the huge pillars of the mausoleum giant trees will be taken from the Mindanao forests. Some of them, already cut, are 60 feet high and 4 feet in diameter, weighing over 17 tons.

The Remarkable Bequests of a Benevolent Frenchman

Paris, Oct. 15.—Pascal Favale, a benevolent gentleman who has just died, has devoted his modest fortune to promoting matrimony. The repopulating of France was his end in view. He leaves three sums of $125 each to three spinsters on condition that they shall desert spinsterhood. The list of applicants will close by Nov. 15th next. They must be over 16 and under 25. Otherwise no conditions whatever are imposed, save the one essential one that they give up celibacy. They may be plain or lovely, uncc' guid or flighty; but they must marry.

Three names will be drawn by lot from among those on the list. These three spinsters will then bind themselves to marry before the expiration of three years. This gives them ample time to look around. On their wedding day, provided that it comes to pass within three years, $125 will be handed to each of the three brides. If any or all of the three spinsters are still spinsters after the lapse of three years, the dowry will be forfeited, and fresh candidates chosen by lot. A dowry of $125 does not seem an enormous inducement to marriage, and will hardly be enough to keep house on, yet the list of applicants is said to be quite a long one by Nov. 15th.

THE CZARINA'S BATHS

She is Still Under Treatment at Friedberg, But is Infirm

London, Oct. 15.—The Czarina's cure at Nauheim will be prolonged, as it is evidently benefiting her. She is looking and feeling much better than when she arrived at Friedberg; in fact, so well, that it is difficult to believe her health is affected. The Czarina now takes the baths on two consecutive days, only resting on the third. She began with the plain thermal water, and will soon, it is hoped, be able to stand the Nauheim specialty—baths in which the water, direct from one spring, continues flowing and bubbling through the bath all the time the bather is in it. The attendants on the Czarina are, besides her own waiting-women, one of whom was also in attendance on the late Empress Elizabeth of Austria when she took the cure there ten years ago. Princess Tatjana, the Czarina's thirteen-year-old daughter, bathes in an adjoining room at the same time as her mother, and keeps up a continual chatter all the time she is in the bubbling water, which affords her great pleasure. Each of the "royal baths" consists of four small rooms—ante-room, dressing-room, attendant's room, and bath proper—and, when not occupied by royalties, may be hired by anyone willing to pay $5 for one bath.

The Famous Rayo Is the Lamp of Real Beauty

because it gives the best light of all lamps. The Rayo gives a white, soft, mellow, diffused light—easy on the eye because it cannot flicker. You can use your eyes as long as you wish under the Rayo light without strain.

The Rayo Lamp is low-priced, and even though you pay $5, $10 or $20 for other lamps, you may get more expensive decorations but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. A strong, durable shade-holder holds the shade on firm and true. This season's new burner adds strength and appearance.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cattle Steady at New York and East Buffalo—Sheep Firm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—London and Liverpool cables quote American cattle steady at 12¾c to 14¼c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef, 10¼c to 11c per pound.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—The railways reported 185 carloads of live stock at the City Market for Wednesday and Thursday, consisting of 1476 cattle, 5483 hogs, 3890 sheep and lambs, 100 calves and 1 horse.

Butchers' Cattle.

George Rowntree bought during the week 1960 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Co., as follows: Choice steers, 1150 to 1350 lbs., at $5.75 to $6.30; butchers' steers and heifers, $4.65 to $5.25; choice cows, $4.40 to $5; medium cows, $3 to $4.15; canners and cutters, $2.25 to $2.85; bulls, $2.50 to $4.75. Mr. Rowntree reports steers for feeding purposes, 950 to 1075 lbs. each, at $4 to $5.50 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

Good feeders, 900 to 1050 lbs., are in demand, selling all the way from $5 to $5.50; feeders, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $4.75 to $5; stockers, $4.25 to $4.75.

Milkers and Springers.

The demand from Montreal and Quebec continues strong for the good cows, and all of that class find a quick outlet at strong rates. A good many sold this week at $75 to $85, with extra choice at $75 to $90, and one at $95. Fair to medium grades sold at $40 to $50 and common at $30. Backward springers are not wanted.

Veal Calves.

Receipts light, only 100 for the two days. Prices ranged from $3 to $8.50 per cwt., and one choice calf $9 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $4.50 to $5; lambs were quoted at $6 to $6.30, but there were few reached the latter price.

Hogs.

Receipts for the two days were reported at 5483. Mr. Harris reports prices for the coming week at $7.75 for hogs, fed and watered at the market, and $7.40, f.o.b. cars, at country points. One drover who had two decks of hogs and was complaining of the price, was given a cheque for $50 by Mr. Harris, and told to keep his hogs, as he, Mr. Harris, considered it was needless for two to be losing at the same time.

Interim In-Grain Shipments.

Montreal, Oct. 21.—While there has been a decrease of wheat shipments through Montreal this month there has been a substantial increase in total shipments of grain. Up to date this season 18,000,000 bushels of wheat, oats and corn were exported through this port. For the same period of last season the total was 16,619,819.

Murderer Died by His Own Hand.

Cortland, N.Y., Oct. 21.—As the result of the wound he inflicted on himself after he had shot and killed Lillian Elsie Lodge because she had refused to marry him, Dr. Loring B. Loomis, retired physician and specialist, died early yesterday in the Cortland Hospital.

Mistook Girl's Hair for Squirrel.

Buffalo, Oct. 21.—Mistook Stanford Dexter yesterday intercepted Julian Davidson of Alden to pull up inquiries into the shooting of Miss Marion L. Pope, a 15-year-old girl, near that place Wednesday.

The girl was talking in the woods with Frank Lowney, 18, of Alden, also was engaged to be married. Harry Cooley, 21, another Alden youth at the time, mistook the girl's bright hair for a squirrel, and fired. Buckshot in the head killed her instantly. Cooley fled through the woods, but was captured early next morning.

FIRST BOX CURED HIS LAME BACK

GIN PILLS are made and guaranteed by the largest wholesale drug house in the British Empire.

National Drug and Chemical Co., Dept. B., Toronto. 47

A Misunderstanding.

Montreal, Oct 21.—Rev. Father Paradis, the Quebec priest who has done so much good work for education and colonization in northern Ontario, was in the city yesterday, and while discussing what he terms the unfortunate Fallon controversy, the reverend gentleman said there were misunderstandings and exaggerations on both sides.

"Perhaps my fellow-countrymen do not quite understand Mgr. Fallon, and it may be his lordship fails to comprehend the French-Canadian mentality, but, be this as it may, nothing could be more erroneous than the idea that the French schools do not want to have their children taught English in the Province of Ontario. If that were so, they would be fools, and my fellow-countrymen are certainly not fools. They have their weak points, but they want to do about right, and they especially want their children to master the English language.

"My compatriots want to learn English, and they never dream of dominating any other race or people."

David B. Hill Dead.

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 21.—Ex-United States Senator David B. Hill died early yesterday at his residence, Wolfert's Roost, north of the city line.

For two weeks he had been ill with a cold and complications. There was a recurrence of the lung trouble of four years ago. Senator Hill's last public appearance was in Elmira several weeks ago, where he made a speech in which he pleaded for a return to "old-time principles of honesty in public life."

David Bennett Hill was the last of the old-line politicians who made Democratic history in New York when that party secured control of the State Government following the famous stalwart and Half-Breed Republican fight, which involved President Chester A. Arthur and Senator Roscoe Conklin. He was for years in absolute control of the Democratic party organization in the state and his bitter conflicts with the Grover Cleveland organization finally culminated in Cleveland abandoning New York State as his home.

Calls Accusers Untruthful.

Winnipeg, Oct. 21.—Rev. Dr. John McDougall of Calgary, arrived here yesterday from Fisher River, northern Manitoba, and at once answered accusations made against him at a Methodist mission meeting at Toronto recently.

"That statement was false, and the man who made it knew it was false," he said, referring to the charge that he was responsible for the orgies of Indians. He added that he had done more to stop improper Indian dances than all other members of the Methodist Mission Board together. But he did believe that Indians had the right to conduct their ceremonies under proper control and conditions.

Bit Officer's Face.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 21.—When an unknown foreigner was refused admission to Canada yesterday afternoon, he apparently became suddenly insane. Along the station platform he ran, shrieking at the top of his voice. He was captured after great difficulty. While Grand Trunk Policeman Anderson was taking him to the police station in a hack, the man bit a piece of flesh out of the officer's face.

Oil Tanks Exploded.

East St. Louis, Oct. 21.—A fire started in the Chicago & Alton freight house on the river front, and spread rapidly to neighboring structures of like character, causing a loss of more than $500,000 early yesterday morning. The blaze was of no significance when discovered, but soon spread to ten tank cars of oil, which exploded, hurling blazing fluid in all directions. The oil set fire to the Baltimore & Ohio freight warehouses, covering a block. A score of oil tanks in it exploded with a roar that was heard for miles.

New Monster of the Deep.

Belfast, Ireland, Oct. 21.—The first of the two mammoth White Star liners, the Olympic, was launched successfully amid scenes of much enthusiasm yesterday.

The new vessel is of 45,000 tons. She is a triple screw steamer, the principal dimensions being: Length over all, 882 1-2 feet; breadth over all, 92 1-2 feet; height from bottom of keel to top of captain's house, 100 1-2 feet. She exceeds by nearly 100 feet in length and by 12,000 tons, any other ship afloat.

Police Commissioner Resigns.

New York, Oct. 21.—Police Commissioner Bather late yesterday afternoon announced that he had resigned his office. James C. Cropsey, a Brooklyn lawyer, who swore in as commissioner Bather's successor shortly after the latter's resignation was handed to Mayor Gaynor.

Held-Up Man Gets Ten Years.

London, Ont., Oct. 21.—Frank Harvey, who some weeks ago held a revolver to Sheriff Tilbrich's head and robbed him, was sentenced to ten years in Kingston. Harvey is 20 years old.

INCREASE IN TRADE.

Canada's Commerce Grows by a Hundred Million Dollars.

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—The annual report of the Department of Trade and Commerce for the fiscal year ended March 31 last, shows that the total merchandise imported amounted to $385,835,103. This is nearly one hundred millions increase over the previous year. The total exports of merchandise amounted to $288,763,993, an increase of nearly 39 millions. Including coin and bullion, the total imports and exports were $639,211,221, an increase of 122 millions.

Trade with the United States increased by 67 millions, and with Great Britain 41 millions. The comparison is interesting. Total trade with the United States, $332,221,727, with Great Britain, $245,313,984. Merchandise imports from United States, $110,614,727, to Britain, $149,630,488. Thus, while the mother country is a much better customer for Canadian produce than the United States, Canada buys more from the United States than she does from the United Kingdom.

In view of the treaty with France, the figures concerning Canadian trade with that country are very disappointing. While the imports from France have increased by two millions, the exports to France have actually decreased by half a million. The figures are: Imports $10,170,908 against $8,028,808 in the previous year; exports $2,640,848, as compared with $3,176,096 in 1908; total trade $12,811,551, as against $11,204,902.

On the other hand, Canadian trade with Germany has increased in both imports and exports. Imports $7,993,264, an increase of nearly two millions; exports $2,501,191, an increase of one million.

Thus our trade arrangements with these two countries would appear to have been more to the benefit of them than of Canada.

Want Experimental Farm.

Chatham, Oct. 21. The Royal Commission on Technical Education and Industrial Training arrived in Chatham at noon yesterday, and received evidence all afternoon, after visiting several schools and factories. The evidence submitted all favors the establishment of technical schools, and Chatham is particularly anxious to secure an experimental farm. The evidence showed that there is a scarcity of skilled artizans in Chatham, although laborers are very plentiful.

Banker Simon, president of the Board of Trade, criticized the education being given to boys who have applied to enter his bank. Courtesy is evidently lost sight of by the teachers. The boys are also deficient in spelling and writing. This was accounted for, he said, by the rushing in the schools. Mr. Simon resented the recent criticism that boys who enter Canadian banks have no chance to rise to the top of the institution.

Last night the commission were entertained at dinner by the officers of the 24th Regiment.

The suggestion advanced by Capt. J. S. Black that the Federal Government should combine military training with technical education met with great approval. The scheme was to make drill sergeants experts in some technical branch of education, and require them to give free instructions to men of the regiments, educating them and encouraging them to join the militia.

The Adam Beck of Japan.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 21.—His Excellency R. Nankike, jr. president of the Imperial Hydro-Electric Power Resources Commission of Japan, accompanied by a number of prominent Japanese engineers, yesterday, inspected the local power plants. Plans of Niagara's power houses will be taken back to Japan by the visitors.

Street Railway Arbitration.

Winnipeg, Oct. 21.—The street railwaymen held a mass meeting early yesterday which heartily endorsed the action of the executive in referring their dispute with the company to arbitration.

Mayor L. N. Pelletier of Fort William was nominated to represent the men on the arbitration board.

LADIES!

Do you want to wear an up-to-date Suit or Coat? If you do, call and see me. I was in New York for two months this season and have imported an excellent assortment of cloths in different colors. I also made myself acquainted with the most popular styles for this fall and winter, and can reproduce them as satisfactorily as you could obtain them in New York. ## THE STORY IS TOLD

"The Whole Thing is as Great a Mystery to Me as it is to the Police" Said Crippen as He Stepped From Witness Box To-day

MAY BE ACQUITTED

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 21.—"The whole thing is as great a mystery to me as to the police," this was the last sentence of Doctor H. H. Crippen, accused of wife murder, as he stepped down from the witness box to-day, after a gruelling cross-examination by Crown Prosecutor Muir. Crippen had gone through quite cool and collected as per the account of Muir to break down his story. Regarding the rumpled bound in his collar he said Mrs. Crippen and he frequently went away from home and there were lot of opportunities for other people to leave a bottle there. Crippen undoubtedly made a good impression on the jury and it seems doubtful that the Crown will secure a conviction.

BUSINESS MEN INVITED TO FAIR DIRECTORS' MEETING FAIL TO PUT IN AN APPEARANCE

The Idea of Purchasing Exhibition Grounds is Abandoned by Local Directorate—Five Attended Last Evening's Meeting — Business Men Show Little Interest.

LETTER RECEIVED

There were present President R. H. Leary, Secretary F. J. A. Hall, and directors, James Storey, Wm. Collins, Chas Moore, and George Elliott. That is the way about twenty business men of the city who were invited to attend a joint meeting of the Fair directors, and representative citizens last night turned out. The object of the gathering was to discuss plans for the purchase of permanent property for the Industrial Exhibition. This is conclusive evidence that the business men are not interested, as President Leary believes. Considerable indignation was expressed by those present at the meagre attendance, and when the way the President and some of the directors have worked to bring the Fair to the success that it now is, giving their time and labor without any remuneration whatever, it is indeed discouraging to find that not one citizen [illegible]ng. There is another year to the lease of the present grounds, and for next year the directors will go on as in the past, and abandon the idea of purchasing grounds. Then after next year unless the city takes it in the matter of buying suitable grounds, the directorate will give up the Fair, and Peterborough will be without an annual exhibition. The surplus money in that case will go to the Department of Agriculture.

Hon. J. P. Stratton, M.P., was unable to be present last night, but expressed his views in the following letter to the President, which was read:

October 18th, '10.

R. H. Leary, Esq., President, Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I very much regret that I shall not be able to be present at the meeting called, as I understand, to consider some definite and decisive policy and action with a view to placing an assured position and an enlarged scope of usefulness and success to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

I trust however, that there will be a sufficiently large attendance at the meeting on Thursday evening to be representative of the important interests concerned and to devise some practical scheme to secure the end to be aimed at.

I feel that the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is not being made sufficiently important to represent the enterprise, capabilities and surroundings that Peterborough possesses and should have.

Peterborough is the centre of a great district. The Government recognized this when, by the construction of the Armouries, it made it a military centre. We are also the hub of a rich agricultural district fifty miles wide.

Every place in Eastern Ontario is fitted naturally and by combination of circumstances, as the site of a great Provincial Exhibition, is Peterborough.

There does not seem to be any reason why we might not have, because of it, a stallion show in the spring, a mid-summer horse show and a great Industrial Exhibition in the fall, making the agricultural and horse part of the show a greater attraction than the mere speeding events.

A summer show should be, and could be made, a great drawing card.

At Cobourg there were thousands of out-siders present every day of the Exhibition, and the town of Cobourg found that its part in encouraging the show guaranteeing the purchase price of the excellent grounds was well advised and materially profitable.

It is evident that the duty of Peterborough is to acquire, equip and fit up suitable grounds for exhibition and horse show purposes.

If we get to work in the right way with enough energy, we may bring about conditions that will advertise Peterborough as it has never been advertised before; and if we manage things wisely and energetically we shall reverse the usual order and, instead of paying for our advertising, make it a source of profit.

With everything ready and provided for, it seems to me that Peterborough could arrange to be the first summer show without interfering with any of the other Exhibitions, and so derive all the advantages from being first in the field.

A mid-summer horse show appeals to everybody and is especially appreciated by the farmers, but the latter cannot be expected to come long distances to town in the evenings to take part in the work of organization, but can lend their aid and support in other directions.

It requires all interested to co-operate to bring success. The business men of Peterborough have not heretofore taken, and do not

RAIN PREVENTS FOURTH GAME IN SERIES TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, OCT. 21.—The fourth game in the world's series, between the Athletics and Cubs, which was to have been played here this afternoon, was called off by the National Commission, at noon, on account of rain. It will be played here tomorrow. If a fifth game is necessary it will take place in Chicago on Sunday.

The city never was so depressed since the time the great fire swept the best part of it, years ago. Citizens are going about with a "why-the-deuce-did-they-hope" expression, but there are few Chicagoans who deep down in the bottom of their hearts don't fail to know that their dearly beloved "Cubs" are doomed to a humiliating fourth defeat at the hands of the Philadelphia Athletics. To add to it a cold, drizzly rain was falling this morning, and the game is postponed. Bender will probably pitch for the Athletics, and "King" Cole for the Cubs tomorrow.

THE CHICLE COMPANY TO BUILD A NEW FACTORY

Ask the Manufacturers' Committee For a Free Sight at the Corner of Romaine and George Sts---Will Erect a Four Storey Building and Will Guarantee to Employ Thirty Hands.

The Canadian Chicle Company, of Peterborough, one of the most flourishing of the smaller industries of the city intend to erect a new factory here in the near future to meet the demands of their constantly growing business. A letter from them was read at the meeting of the Manufacturing committee of the City Council. The company stated that they intended in the near future to erect a four-storey factory building 3.5 feet by 70 feet and would employ thirty hands. They asked for a free site, preferably at the corner of Romaine and George streets.

The committee will deal with the matter later.

Mr. Carew, who, as previously announced, arranges to hear for mutual gas-heres, providing he can get a street franchise for conveyance of same, wrote the city solicitor that as the city has not placed the application at other is a similar franchise there would be no need of bringing further into the matter till next January. He offered that Mr. Dettman had had all the opportunity due him for carrying on his operations agreed upon, and seemed surprised that his application for an extension of time should enter into the question at all. A copy of the solicitor's reply to Mr. Carew was read. The solicitor has enquired of Mr. Carew if he would be willing to accept the terms provided in the Dettman agreement as amended at the time the Lundy Shovel and Tool Company's application for a franchise came before the committee. In the agreement now drawn up by the Manufacturers' committee, the city's interests are pretty thoroughly protected, and the committee's attitude so far points to the conclusion that this agreement is open to all comers.

CANADA'S FIRST WARSHIP WELCOMED AT HALIFAX

Examiner Special.

HALIFAX, N.S., OCT. 21.—Canada's first warship, the "Niobe" steamed into harbour this morning and was officially received on behalf of the Canadian government by Hon. The public will inspect the vessel next week.

PLEAD GUILTY AND THEIR SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED

The young men, who were arrested last week on a charge of breaking into Mr. Thos. Hooper's south store and taking a quantity of candies to the value of $200 were arraigned before Magistrate Dunbar in the police court this morning. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the young men, while Attorney R. E. Wood acted for the crown. Both young men pleaded guilty to the charge. After giving the young men a lot of good advice and pointing out to them their mistake in starting to lead such a life, his Worship allowed them to go on suspended sentence. They also had to pay the costs, amounting to $9.00 each.

MAKING READY FOR THE BIG CONVENTION OF HARDWARE MEN HERE

Reception Committee of the City Council Took Up the Matter Last Night---Over 600 Delegates Will Be Here and Their Accommodation is a Detail That Requires Attention.

At the meeting of the Local and Reception Committee of the City Council last night a letter was read from Mr. W. Worgley, secretary of the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association, in regard to the convention of the Association to be held here in February next.

The communication, which was addressed to Ald. Duffin, chairman of the committee was, in part, as follows:

Dear Sir,—The writer, in company with our President and Treasurer, paid a visit to Peterborough on the evening of Sept. 19th, leaving early the next morning, and having time only to interview the local manufacturers and Ald. J. J. Turner, regarding signs and decorations for the Armouries at the time of our convention next February. We expect to visit Peterborough again shortly, and hope to have the pleasure of meeting you again and discussing the arrangements for the convention. As chairman of the Reception Committee of the City Council, we suppose you will be within, if in office next February, to act on the local Reception Committee to meet the visiting hardware men on their arrival in the city, and assist in getting them located in the various hotels, etc. Ald. Phelan and Turner and representatives of the local hardware firms, will also be willing, no doubt, to act on the Reception Committee.

The letter went on to say that Mr. Wrigley had written our various hotels for information as to the number of guests they can accommodate, and their rates, but had received replies from but three—the Oriental, National and the Grand. The writer, therefore asked for such data to be furnished by some city authority. He also suggested that a card be got out, one side bearing the names of Peterborough's various hotels, the number of meals each can accommodate, together with rates, and the other side showing location of railways, the various hotels, the armouries, Collegiate Institute, city hall, hardware stores, hardware manufacturing institutes; this card to be distributed to visitors on their arrival.

The chairman was authorized to comply with the requirements of the above association. All necessary data will be prepared and forwarded, together with sketch of a map to be printed on inside of "information" card for use of visitors. The association will bear the expense of printing such card.

A letter was read from Fire Chief Howard to the effect that an invitation should be sent to the Provincial Association of Fire Chiefs, which meets in Toronto at the end of this month, to hold their next annual convention in Peterborough. Orillia, the Chief stated, was after the convention.

The chairman was instructed to send an invitation, through Chief Howard, to the Fire Chiefs.

LAY BURNING ON WIRES HALF AN HOUR

Special to The Examiner:

HARTFORD, CON., OCT. 18.—Electricity instantly killed George A. Fowler, manager of the Farmington Telephone Exchange, this afternoon at Foote's Corner in West Hartford.

Fowler was at work at the top of a telephone pole and got into contact with a high tension wire. Bystanders saw him fall across the wires. Little spurts of flame came from his clothing. To try to pull him away would have meant death to the would-be rescuer. Word was sent to the Farmington exchange and the current was turned off, but not until the boyd was burned on the wires for a half hour.

Medical Examiner W. W. Knight of West Hartford had the body removed to this city. The right arm was nearly burned from the body, and there were deep burns across the hips and thighs.

CHILD TOSSED INTO BLAZE

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, OCT. 18.—The prompt and brave action of her seven-year-old sister, Evelyn, saved little Ruth Olinger, aged four, of No. 159 East One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, from being burned to death last evening when she was thrown out of a toy express wagon onto a bonfire.

The child is in Harlem Hospital severely burned, but will not die. The elittle heroine's hands are in bandages through the burns she sustained in rescuing Ruth.

With Evelyn and other children Ruth was playing in the street outside her home about 7 o'clock. One of her boy friends had a toy wagon, and took her for rides in it up and down the pavement. Ruth enjoyed it immensely, and cried out fro speed like the automobiles.

In a wild rush down the pavement the wheel of the wagon struck a rough spot and capsized, throwing Ruth out.

Some boys had built a large bonfire in the gutter and had it going in great shape. Ruth was flung into the midst of the flames.

Evelyn quickly dashed to her sister's aid, and never hesitating, dragged her out. With her hands she then tried to extinguish the flames which had seized the little one's clothing.

Patrolman Regelman of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street station ran down from Lexington Avenue and wrapped his coat round Ruth. Dr. Balamuth, who took the child to Harlem Hospital, said her life had been saved by Evelyn.

WAS BURNED

James Simmonite, a young man who is employed in W. Hailton's foundry, happened with an accident this morning. He was working at a kettle of molten brass, when by some mischance, the brass was upset and splashed all over. Mr. Simmonite received burns about the feet and ankles but no serious results are likely to develop. An ambulance was called and removed Mr. Simmonite to Nicholls hospital, where his injuries are now being cared for.

SAVED BY BIRD'S DEATH SONG

Examiner Special.

STAMFORD, CONN., OCT. 18.—A canary bird's death song saved the lives of Mr and Mrs. Frank Etero last night when gas thrown off by a coal fire in the kitchen range was suffocating the sleeping couple.

About 12.40 o'clock, just before the bird became lifeless, it burst forth into song. Weak and quavering enough it was, but still sufficiently loud to awaken Mr. Etero. He arose with a sense of suffocation and nausea. He fell, but regained his feet with an effort, staggered to a windiw and called for help. Then he collapsed.

The neighbors heard the cry and hurried to the apartment. A physician who was summoned said the Eteros had had a close call.

CAT'S CRIES AT DOOR ROUT WOMAN BURGLAR

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, OCT. 18.—A woman burglar, dressed in a black silk gown, her face heavily veiled and accompanied by a man, was scared away from the house of John Callery, a wealthy coal dealer living in the Clifton Park section of Weehawken, early yesterday morning by a servant coming downstairs to let in the cat.

The burglars had entered by a front window, which they opened with a jemmy, and had packed up all the silverware, table linen and cut glass ready for removal when the servant girl heard the cat crying outside the kitchen door. As she came down the stairs to let the cat in she heard the swish of a woman's silk gown. Turning up a light she found the packed shuttles ready to be taken away. She ran to the front door and saw a man and woman running down the street.

A woman of the same description was noticed near the house several times the afternoon before, and also near the house of Harry Untereiner of No. 388 Park Avenue. Residents of the section believe that the pair is a couple that committed many burglaries on Long Island about two years ago.

WEIGHTY MATTERS.

What a deal of energy is wasted, and sometimes with the best intentions. At a church convention in Toronto a day or so ago a reverend speaker made a ponderous appeal to save the boys who play marbles "for keeps". And this when the clerical mentor had a fine field for denunciatory eloquence in the mothers who play bridge "for keeps"—till they lose. A boy that plays marbles—for fun of for keeps—in so doing neglects no domestic duties, except perhaps a column of the multiplication table. He only plays the first few days of genial March weather; and if he swore off we should miss one of the most infallible signs of spring. The mother who plays bridge neglects her household, loses money and loses precious time. If the parson had wanted something worth while to denounce here was his opening. But he frittered away his time and the time of the convention by breaking a butterfly on the wheel—loading a cannon to kill a canary, while the sins of bridge gambling stock gambling, etc., were left severely alone. In like manner, Sir James Whitney is bringing hyperbolic broadsides to bear upon a newspaper reporter, upon an issue that does not amount to a pinch of desert dust, while the Educational interests of the province, are dwindling, peaking, and as the Toronto Star would say, Pyning, under swaggering inefficiency of administration. But it seems to be the way of some persons, high in place in church and state, to select subjects to talk about that will get the talkers talked about.

NEW NAMES.

The Conservative party nomenclature has undergone some strange mutations. Once upon a time "Tory" was good enough. About seventy-five years ago, in England, this rather uncompromising title was softened into "Conservative," and like other great British institutions, transplanted in Canada. In Canada, at a later period, a further "improvement" was made. It is said that Sir John Macdonald, in order to confer additional respectability upon the title, "Conservative," added the prefix, "Liberal". Hence we have Liberal-Conservative. But even this vastly improved nomenclature does not meet the demand of the spirit of the times. Canadian Conservatism is in rather a state at present—lacking elemental co-ordination, and a new name has come to the fore. The Toronto News self-constituted, if not generally accepted, mentor of the party, or the interests associated with the changing nomenclature, has still a new name, "Progressive". And now by common consent of the party, headed, if not led, by Mr. Borden, another change is rung, or to be rung. In the bye-election in Drummond and Athabaska, Quebec, the candidate opposing the Liberal candidate in the Conservative-Progressive interests is a Nationalist. It has, therefore, come to this that the titles of the party in question are becoming as formidable as those of a Spanish Infanta—the "Tory-Conservative-Liberal-Conservative-Progressive-Nationalist" party of Canada. Here certainly is standing ground for all degrees of sentiment and political opinion—from the moss back "Tory" to the ranting, roaring, rabid, red republican sans culottes. But as Shakspere suggests, what's in a name? The party would be just as policyless and drifting, under any other name as under any or all of those conjoined in the conglomerate nomenclature, that shift and necessity, have evolved.

WEALTH OF FISH IN CANADA

When opening the recent conference of sanitary offices in London, England, Sir James Crichton-Browne gave advice which should interest people in Canada. His subject was the value of a fish diet. He advised that wherever it was possible a great deal more fish food should be used than is customary at present. He told how that after careful inspection he had concluded that a fish diet would help to bring back and retain health, and in some cases to prolong life, and then continued:

At one time fish had a universal vogue in England, the great majority of the people being in the habit of using a fish diet at least two days a week and confining themselves to it in Lent. In those days fish ponds were found in the gardens of every country house, and anguillonia, or receptacles for eels, existed on most rivers. Yet, nowadays the people do not avail themselves as fully as they might of the contents of the larder of the deep. Though fish still held its own among the affluent classes, its consumption had not kept pace with the increase of population amongst working people.

From a physiological point of view fish is the next best thing to meat. It contained protein and fat, protein, the only constituent of food that was able to repair the waste of the tissues, and fat, one of the two important constituents of food that supplied the energy which enabled a man to do his work. The despised bloater offered the largest amount of nutriment for a given sum of any animal food, and two salt herrings contained as much animal protein as need enter into the daily dietary of a working man. The price of fish was no criterion of its nutritive value.

In these days, says the Ottawa Journal, when even with working people dietetics is becoming a thing to be scientifically regulated, Sir James' deliverance will be of importance to all. But, to Canada, it has an importance altogether its own. For Canada, as it is often pointed out, contains about half the visible supply of fresh water in the world. And Canada, too, is about the only country in the world to have three of its cardinal boundaries lie along the world's three greatest oceans. And rivers, lakes and oceans are stocked with enormous quantities and varieties of fish. Thus Canadians should be able to obtain fish of all kinds a great deal more cheaply than the people of any other country. And this should tend to make fish diet popular in Canada. For Canada, like England, to which Sir James' remarks principally apply, does not consume nearly as much fish as she should. Canada has given valuable fishing leases to native and foreign companies, and, for a mere nominal sum, many men are garnering great wealth from the rivers, lakes and bordering oceans of Canada. Why, in view of these natural and governmental advantages, Canada does not obtain cheaper fish is a question that the average man would find difficult indeed to answer.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Here is the true explanation of Sir James Whitney's antipathy to the Toronto Star, which perpetrates the following: "Mr. Hanna is tempted to think of it as the bile-ink-well controversy."

Sir James Whitney can be better employed than in running scandals to earth. He might do something to prevent his Minister of Education fro strumming Canada's school system into the ground.

Ottawa seems to be too fond of other liquids to incur danger of typhoid from bug-gy water. A specialist engineer reports that out of every hundred gallons pumped in the Capital, only twenty are used.

A Marconi message has been sent from Glace Bay, Newfoundland, to Buenos Ayres, a distance of 5,600 miles. This is said to be the longest distance that a wireless message has ever been sent. The latest application of wireless telegraphy has been made by the British Admiralty, which is in possession of an appliance whereby communication can be maintained with a submarine when under water. With men in a ship beneath the sea talking with men on shore and with torpedoes being directed by wireless upon their course we have reached an era in which Jules Verne's stories begin to seem commonplace.

A DAMAGING RECORD.

Under the above heading the Brantford Expositor deals with conditions, that emphasize the inefficiency of our educational administration, a subject which Premier Whitney is awkwardly endeavouring to dodge. It also tends to justify Bishop Fallon in the attitude he assumes; for not only is the inefficiency of administration in respect of bilingual schools made manifest, but also the negelect of the interests of Public school education generally. The Expositor says:

Hon. Dr. Beaume, Minister of Public Works for Ontario, is reported as placing the blame for any lack of education among the French-Canadian children of the province upon the parents, who are said to take their children from school at too early an age. His remark calls up the whole question of the failure of the present Ontario Government to enact adequate legislation for the prevention of truancy, despite the fact that its attention has been more than once called to the unfortunate state of affairs now existing. Taking the counties of the province, the annual report of the department of education for 1909 shows the percentage of average attendance to the enrollment to have been as follows:

| | Per Cent. |
|---|---|
| Brant | 57 |
| Bruce | 57 |
| Carleton | 65 |
| Dufferin | 48 |
| Dundas | 55 |
| Durham | 54 |
| Elgin | 55 |
| Essex | 54 |
| Frontenac | 43 |
| Glengarry | 46 |
| Grey | 52 |
| Haldimand | 63 |
| Haliburton | 40 |
| Halton | 53 |
| Hastings | 48 |
| Huron | 66 |
| Kent | 55 |
| Lambton | 60 |
| Leeds and Grenville | 55 |
| Lennox and Addington | 51 |
| Lanark | 61 |
| Lincoln | 51 |
| Middlesex | 59 |
| Norfolk | 53 |
| Northumberland | 55 |
| Ontario | 51 |
| Oxford | 57 |
| Peel | 53 |
| Perth | 60 |
| Peterborough | 49 |
| Prescott and Russell | 51 |
| Prince Edward | 49 |
| Renfrew | 47 |
| Simcoe | 52 |
| Stormont | 51 |
| Victoria | 51 |
| Waterloo | 62 |
| Wellington | 60 |
| Wentworth | 54 |
| York | 55 |
| Algoma, etc | 45 |
| Muskoka | 46 |
| Nipissing | 47 |
| Parry Sound | 45 |
| Rainy River, etc | 44 |

The total average attendance in the rural districts of the province was only 53 per cent. of the enrollment, and no reports was made from any one of them as to prosecutions for truancy. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that it is not compulsory to appoint truant officers in the townships, with the disgraceful result to which attention is about called, and which Dr. Reaume practically admits.

In one Alberta school, as The Expositor pointed out the other day, a percentage of attendance amounting to 100 has been reached. Brantford has been got up to 80 per cent., while the average of attendance in the public schools of all the cities of the province is 69 per cent.

If Sir James Whitney cannot see where the chief weakness of his administration is to be found he must be very blind.

DR. PYNE'S OBVIOUS DUTY.

The Presbyterian: Bishop Fallon of London has raised a storm by his frank statements regarding the inefficiency of those public and separate schools in this Province which purport to give a training in both French and English. He is very specific about the condition of such schools in the county of Essex, where there is a considerable and increasing French population. He openly alleges that many of the children are deplorably ignorant as to both French and English, and are sent out to make their living without having received fro mschool any substantial aid to enable them to do so. Bishop Fallon's thorough-going description is not likely to be seriously called in question by any person who knows either his force of character or his old-time attitude toward bi-lingual education. He wa sengaged in a like crusade against ignorance when, as a high ocfficial in the University of Ottawa, he denounced the schools of that city as inefficient. Between his Ottawa period and his appointment as Bishop of the London diocese he spent some time in Buffalo, where he had an ample opportunity to make a close study of educational work in the Roman Catholic parochial schools. Protestants who know and admire him as a man of sympathy as well as a man of force will hesitate to believe that he had been guilty of any exaggeration. It is the obvious duty of the Education Department to take immediate steps to inform the general pubic as to the actual facts.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

(Toronto Star)

The letter Provincial Secretary Hanna wrote to Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, purporting to give an account of what Mr. Hanna believed were the opinions of Bishop Fallon, of London, on the bilingual school question, is dated at Sarnia, May 23rd, last.

The interview Mr. Hanna had with Bishop Fallon, upon which the former's letter to Dr. Pyne is based, was had a day or so previous to the sending out of that letter. The article in the Detroit Free Press which Bishop Fallon takes exception to was published on June 5. A comparison made between that letter written by Mr. Hanna and the article as it appeared in the Detroit Free Press, shows that they have many things in common. In fact it looks as if the newspaper article might have been based on the Hanna letter.

In the statement issued by Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works, he maintains that he sent a letter to Bishop Fallon, following an investigation he caused to be made, in which he stated that a newspaper man, Mr. H. E. Willmot, took the responsibility of having written the article in the Detroit Free Press.

A few questions may prove pertinent.

1. Taking it for granted that Mr. Willmot did write the article where did he get the material for it?

2. Was he given access to the Hanna letter, and if so, why? And finally,

3. Whose name was signed to the article when it was forwarded to the Detroit Free Press?

Canada's Real Relation To The Proposed British Preference

(Ottawa Free Press)

Thinking of Canada alone, I cannot but hope for the success of the proposed British preference. It would add very substantially to our annual income. But when I observe the thousands of Brtish poor who will have to subscribe to that enhanced income, and when I remember that Canada is in no need of help from anybody, my sympathies turn against the proposal.

Thus does Mr. J. S. Ewart, of Ottawa conclude his article in the London Daily Chronicle on "The Truth about the Preference." Many other Canadians, especially those who have visited the Motherland since the tariff agitation began, have found themselves thinking the same way. The Canadian who goes to England advocating a tariff preference in the British market finds himself occupying a very selfish position and one that he cannot successfully or in good taste defend. That is why The Free Press was so indignant over Sir James Whitney's blustering demands and why we are certain he did not in the extraordinary statement he gave out in England, fairly represent Canadian opinion.

Mr. Ewart also exposes the weakness of one of the Tariff Reform arguments that it will be the foreigner who will pay any duty that Britain may put on wheat as follows:

As to the question of Canada's attitude towards the proposed British preference to Colonial products, what strikes a Canadian as most peculiar is the rank absurdity of the opinion attributed to his countrymen. Unionists allege that a duty on foreign wheat would not increase its price; but that nevertheless, Canadians are very anxious that such a duty should be imposed. The Unionists are right when they allege that Canadians desire a preference upon their food products Canadians want British preference, because they believe that they would make money by it. They have no desire for it upon any other ground.

Why are Canadians certain that a duty on foreign corn will increase the price of the Colonial corn, if it is permitted to enter the United Kingdom free of similar duty? At present, the value of wheat is determined by its quality merely no one cares to inquire whether it was grown to the North or the South of the boundary between Canada and the United States. But if a duty of 2s. a quarter is placed upon the Southern wheat, while the Northern is left free, a difference in value of 2s. a quarter is at once established. And every Liverpool importer will be quite as willing to pay (say) 38s. a quarter for Canadian wheat as 36s. for the same quality grown in the United States.

That fact being indisputable, the next question is whether this difference in price will be reached by increasing the price of Canadian wheat or by reducing the price of that which comes from the United States and other parts of the foreign world. The question can be very easily answered, by asking a few others: Why does England pay foreign countries 36s. for wheat? Because she cannot get it for less and cannot do without it. Suppose that England offered 34s. instead of 36s. would she get the wheat? No. Now, suppose that England offered as excuse for suggesting a reduction to 34s., that she wanted to charge 2s. duty on every quarter that she purchased would that influence foreigners to sell their wheat at less than 36s.? Of course, it would not. There is no way by which England can get foreign wheat at rates lower than those which she is now compelled to pay. If she charged herself an import duty of 100s. a quarter, she would find the foreigner just as rigid and indifferent as if she levied twopence ha'penny, or nothing at all.

If England cannot reduce the amount which she must pay for foreign wheat, and if Canadian wheat is to be more valuable than foreign wheat by the amount of the duty 2s. a quarter, as proposed then Canadians must be right when they believe that the effect of preference would be to increase the amount that they will receive for their product. And it is for that reason, and for that reason alone, that Canada may be said to favor that Canada may be said to favor the proposed British preference. At the same time, it is but fair to add that very many Canadians would deeply regret the change; for they realize pertectly that the amount of Canada's gain would be precisely and inevitably the amount of Britain's loss.

Mr. Ewart resided in England for over a year preparing the British case for the Hague Court of Arbitration, and consequently had a fine opportunity for carefully considering the matter of a tariff preference from both the British and Canadian point of view.

YESTERDAY'S GAME WAS A SLAUGHTER

Athletics Have the Cubs on the Run---Regard To-day's Game as a Mere Formality no Matter Who Will Pitch for Chicago---Coombs, Barry and Murphy Shone Yesterday

CHICAGO, OCT. 20.—Philadelphia came out here to-day and rubbed it in. The Athletics claimed their third successive victory in the world's championship series with the Chicago Nationals to the tune of 12 to 5, and if the big pennant is not nailed to the Quaker City mast to-morrow Connie Mack will be the most surprised man on the baseball map. Captain Chance was ordered from the field in the third for disputing a decision.

In the three games played so far the easterners have pounded every assortment of curve which the entire galaxy of Cub pitchers could offer. Only 'King' Cole, the so-called pitching find of the year, remains to be seriously considered by Manager Chance, and he is held back because of his inexperience and a belief that his assortment of shoots is just what the Mack men like. Mack will in all probability furnish local enthusiasts with a view of Bender to-morrow. Who will go on against him is a problem. Maybe Brown, maybe Cole. And then, there are Foxen, an untried man, and Pfeffer, who has been of little use this year. It is a matter of indifference to Mr. Mack. He and his players regard the game to-morrow as a mere formality.

The combat to-day was a slaughter. Big Ed. Reulbach lasted just two innings, during which he allowed one single and two doubles, passed two batsmen and saw three runs across the home plate. McIntyre was the next twirler led forth for slaughter. He pitched just one-third of an inning, but that was long enough for the visitors to hammer out two singles, a home run, and to send Davis to first rubbing his back, where one of McIntyre's inshoots had hit him. With the assistance of a hoot by Schulte, four runs were scored under his beneficent reign.

The bright stars of the day were Coombs, Barry and Murphy. Coombs allowed only six hits, passed four men, and contributed a two-bagger and a single, which added three runs to the Philadelphia collection. Barry hit as if there was another automobile in sight. Also he figured in double plays. It remained for Murphy, however, to electrify the crowd. His first noteworthy exploit was to smash the ball over the heads of the overflow crowd and into the right field bleachers for four sacks, driving in two runs ahead of him.

The hit figured largely in the expulsion of Captain Chance from the grounds. Chance, joined by most of his men, surrounded O'Day in an endeavour to persuade him that the rules made all hits into the crowd, at any point or distance, doubles. The arbiter could not see it, and when the Cub leader sought to prolong the argument, ordered him from the field. Archer replaced Chance at the initial station.

Murphy's next sensational exhibition earned him an ovation. He ran back after what Zimmerman had marked for a double, jumped on the barrier in right field, grasped the ball, fell backward into the crowd, and presently emerged with the trophy still safe. Meanwhile Sheckard, thinking Murphy could not capture the drive, sped around the bases. He awoke at third to find he had been doubled at first. Sheckard faced Coombs four times, and all but once was allowed to walk. He brought two runs across the plate and fielded his position without a flaw. Both of Schulte's hits were doubles. Tinker made three hits, one of which was a two-bagger, and two errors. He negotiated the only stolen base of the day.

A mist fell during the game, and there was a chilling wind from the northwest. The clouds were so overcast that the spectators had difficulty in keeping track of the ball.

It was announced that 26,210 persons paid for admission to the grounds.

JARVIS STREET COLLEGIATE TO PLAY ON THE HOLIDAY

The Collegiate Institute rugby team will play a game with the Jarvis street Collegiate Institute team of Toronto here on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day. The Jarvis team is undoubtedly the strongest High school fourteen in Toronto and will be formidable adversaries for the local students. The Peterborough College lines have been strengthened since their last game by the return to school of Billy Gibson, last year's captain, who has added speed and running ability to the back division. They are practising faithfully and will be in good shape for the battle with Jarvis on the holiday. A practice game will likely be played to-morrow afternoon.

Twenty-Five Entries In The Junior Race

Three more entries have come in for the Examiner Junior race, bringing the total up to twenty-five. The last three entries are Harold Sweeney, 457 Chamberlen street, Sidney Desbichon, 209 Smith street, and Tommy Barnett, 123 Stewart street.

There are believed to be only 32 survivors of the rank and file who took part in the historic charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava, and of these 23 are in necessitous circumstances. The oldest is 86 years of age, and but for philanthropic effort he and his companions would have had their last days overshadowed by want. It is thirteen years since T. H. Roberts of 1 and 2 Plough court, E.C., London, established the Balaclava Light Brigade Charge Survivors' Relief Fund. At the banquet then held 74 attended, and it was discovered that several of them were spending their last days in workhouses, forgotten and neglected. In the intervening years more than half these heroes have gone to their rest. The work of aiding the veterans lost a sympathizer and supporter in the death of Florence Nightingale. The money which goes to these neglected heroes is well spent. They are sent weekly pensions by post, and when at length the "Last Post" sounds each of the old men receives a decent funeral.

A BAG OF GOLF CLUBS.

They Picture In a Way the Various Phases of Human Society.

Devotees of the links will be interested to learn that, in the opinion of a Philosophical student of their ancient game, a bag of golf clubs is a symbolical epitome of human society.

In the front rank you have the driver, smooth, polished, elegant, the aristocrat of the circle, to whose lot falls the showy role in the day's performance, who disdains to play his part on the level of his fellows, and must have his sphere of operations artificially raised above the plane of the common earth. The brassy is your rich commoner, substituting a barrier of metal for the tree that confers rank on his social superior. After these come the humbler cleeks, lofters and mashies, the common herd, who, like the butchers, shoemakers, and tillers of the ground among human beings, have the bulk of the work to do, and can afford no polish save what comes from keeping themselves clean, which at times is no easy task. Apart from them all stands the niblick, the good Samaritan of golf, resorted to only when the player is in a serious difficulty. The function of the niblick is to aid the golfer in the day of trouble, and his destiny, after having done his duty in that state of life, is to be relegated to the limbo of forgetfulness.—Argonaut.

AN ALGERIAN HOTEL.

The Attempt to Describe Its Attractions In English.

Things are not always as they seem, even in an advertisement. This truth dawned upon Robert Crawford when he was in Algiers, and he tells of the reason for his conclusion in "Reminiscences of Foreign Travel." Mr. Crawford, not being satisfied with his lodgings, procured a copy of the Journal des Etrangers and proceeded to look up a hotel.

After a patient investigation the choice seemed to lie between two. One, according to the notice, possessed "every Anglish confort" and had "larg" as well as small apartments. The other—and I was strongly drawn to it—advertised as follows:

Fir Glass House.
O.
Full South.
Mis of larg Parc.
Tramways to and from towen every 10 minutes.

I found the place. To my surprise there was no conservatory or glass house of any kind and no fir trees. As I pondered over the fact the solution suddenly came to me—it was a "first class house," of course. What of the rest of the advertisement? The hotel had a southern aspect and was situated in a park. As for the tramway, that was pure fiction.

Such a Bore to Dress.

A belated traveler who was compelled to stay all night in a backwoods cabin says that soon after the frugal meal a tall, gaunt youth of eighteen and an equally sallow and gaunt girl of seventeen, both barefooted, took their hats from wooden pegs in the wall and prepared to go out, whereupon the mother, taking her pipe from between her teeth, said reprovingly:

"Go 'long an' wash your feet, Levi—you and Looly, both! Hain't you 'shamed to go off to an evenin' party without washin' your feet?"

They obeyed, but as Levi took the washpan from a bench by the door he said with a grumble:

"I'd 'bout as soon stay home from a party as to have to fix up for it."

Diving Birds.

Water birds which are ordinarily able to float high on the water can also sink at will by expelling the air which is inclosed within the film of feathers surrounding their bodies, thus making them heavier than water. This mechanical trick on the part of diving birds is probably familiar to all who have watched the kingfisher at close quarters and have noted the sudden contraction in the bird's apparent size as it takes the plunge. This is much more easily observed in the case of the starling, which sometimes imitates the kingfisher by plunging into water for food. The shrinkage of the bird in apparent size is very apparent when, after hovering above the surface, it turns downward to dive.—Zoologist.

Too Thorough.

"My first wife married me to reform me."

"Of what?"

"Being a bachelor."

"Well, she succeeded in that, anyhow."

"I should say. I've been married twice since."—Cleveland Leader.

The Expensive Promoter.

"That man's time is worth $60 a minute," said the mathematician.

"More than that," replied the reckless investor. "He once gave me five minutes of his time when I was looking for advice, and it cost me several thousand dollars."—Washington Star.

WHY SLEEP IS NECESSARY

During sleep nature restores the cells and tissues wasted by the activities of life. Without sleep physical bankruptcy is quick and certain. Mrs. J. Drocher, 495 Bethune street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I can say for a certainty that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food is a splendid medicine, for, besides steadying the nerves it built up my system wonderfully and enabled me to sleep and eat well."

NORTHERN ONTARIO DEMONSTRATION FARM

From Farm and Dairy.

Forty-one miles north of the height of land and 80 miles south of Cochrane and the traveller on the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railroad is surprised to see in the almost unbroken forest a comparatively large clearing with a comfortable house and good barn surrounded with fields of grain. He usually imagines that some settler more progressive than the rest has succeeded in hewing out for himself a home considerably more attractive than the home of the Average Temiskaming settler. But on enquiry he will learn that this is the Northern Ontario Demonstration farm at Monteith.

The site for the farm was decided upon four years ago by a party consisting of Hon. Cochrane; Hon. N. Monteith; Com. Coombs of the Salvation Army; Col. Lamb, Immigration agent for the Salvation Army; Thos. Southworth; A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Public Works; H. G. Howie, Crown Timber Agent; Geo. W. Yates, Private Secretary to Hon. Cochrane; Dr. Clark, Chief Forester of Ontario; A. E. Stephenson, Editor of New Liskeard Speaker; and Wm. Pringle, photographer. From Charlton the party proceeded by a special train to the end of the line, 18 miles south of Matheson. From there they travelled on foot over a rough construction trail with the exception of Hon. Cochrane, who was suffering from a broken leg. He travelled on horse back.

THE JOURNEY TO THE FARM

After a night's rest at Grant's Construction camp at Matheson, where the party was hospitably treated by Mrs. Grant and everything done for their comfort that a good woman could do, they embarked in canoes on the Black River. One canoe was in charge of two Indians named McDougall. The other was in charge of H. G. Howie and Robt. Reid, late of the Hudson Bay Co. The route taken was north down the Black River to the Abitibi River, thence down it to Iroquois Falls. Hon. Monteith made the selection of what is now the Northern Demonstration Farm.

In Temiskaming, Hon. Monteith is considered as the first Minister of Agriculture to take an interest in the agricultural development of that country. During the time he was Minister he made annual visits in company with Hon. Cochrane and did everything in his power to further the interests of the settlers. The north country lost a staunch friend when Hon. Monteith retired from office.

THE FARM AT PRESENT

The farm consists of 800 acres. At the present time there are about 20 acres under crop and upwards of 100 chopped. The expectation is that next year a much larger area will be ready to sow as the work of clearing the farm is proceeding very rapidly. The house and barn were erected two years ago. The house is 20 by 26 feet and the barn 20 by 36 feet. The first plowing was done last year.

At the time of the writer's visit, the stock consisted of five horses and one cow. It is the intention to fully stock the farm before long. There is a complete equipment of farm machinery already in the barn.

As this year's crop is the first there is little or no possibility of gaining any very valuable knowledge as to the best varieties of grain, etc., to sow in the north. Mr Whitton does not hesitate to state however, that the grains and vegetables do fully as well if not better in this new country than in Old Ontario. Despite the fact that the present crop is the first and that the early part of the season was very dry, Mr. Whitton had some magnificent grain and excellent turnips and mangels. The grain fills extremely well and there is no rust whatever. As yet there are no potato bugs. Grubs cut off an odd cabbage here and there.

GREAT CLOVER GROWTH

Here, as elsewhere in the Clay Belt there is an almost phenomenal clover growth. The writer saw a plant at the farm, consisting of 180 stems all grown from a single seed.

In the vicinity of the Monteith farm and indeed all through the northern part of the agricultural country there are many settlers but little improvements are being made. The Government has not done what it should in the matter of building roads and the settler goes to and from his little shack on a narrow trail cut through the bush. Until roads are constructed and the settler given a little more encouragement he cannot be expected to do much in the way of clearing his farm.

The land here is equally as fertile and the climate just as pleasant as at New Liskeard, 105 miles south. The good crops grown on the Demonstration Farm are evidence of the possibilities of this section and it too will some day be a great agricultural country.—Colin W. Lees.

KIDNEYS ACT FINE AND BACKACHE GOES

A Few Doses Regulate Your Kidneys and End Urinary Misery

Whether old or young, no man or woman can make a mistake by taking a good kidney medicine any time.

The moment you suspect any kidney or urinary disorder—if you feel a dull, constant ache in the back, sides or loins, or the urine is full of sediment or thick, cloudy and offensive, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin taking Pape's Diuretic, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure.

The time to cure kidney trouble is while it is only trouble—before it settles into Dropsy, Gravel, Bright's Disease or Diabetes.

Pape's Diuretic acts directly upon the kidneys, bladder and urinary system; heals, cleanses, vitalizes and regulates these organs, ducts and glands and completes the cure usually within a few days.

Lame back, painful stitches, rheumatism, Prostatic trouble, nervous headache, dizziness, irritability, sleeplessness, inflamed or puffy eyelids, bilious stomach or weak, worn-out, tired feeling and other symptoms caused by sluggish, inactive kidneys disappear. Uncontrollable, smarting, frequent urination (especially at night) and all bladder misery ends.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will vouch for the responsibility of Pape, Thompson & Pape of Cincinnati, who prepare Pape's Diuretic 50 cent treatment—sold by every druggist in the world.

MIND BLANK 40 YEARS

Special to The Examiner.

KENTON O., OCT. 18. Waking as if from a long dream, John William Exline, whose mind was made blank by an explosion forty years ago, is now trying to reconcile present day conditions with the world as he remembers it.

Forty years ago Exlin was a sawyer in a mill at Findlay, O. An explosion wrecked the mill and injured all of the employees. Exline was buried many feet, picked up unconscious, and after hovering many days between life and death, recovered from bodily ailments but was mentally deranged.

No whis mind has cleared and he is dazzled and amazed by telephones, automobiles and aeroplanes. To him all three are almost beyond belief. His astonishment is childlike. Exline says it seems that he has just awakened fro ma dream or a trance.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

THE superintendent of schools in one of our large cities won considerable notoriety recently, by deciding that henceforth the boys, to a certain extent, should share the girls' sewing and cooking lessons.

Seems to me that notoriety ought to be fame.

For, if the innovation becomes a permanent custom, as I hope it does, it will probably mean the vanishing of that absurdly helpless type of man who can scarcely get himself a glass of milk and a rocker in his own home, and who, under no pressure of circumstances, would be able to make himself a cup of tea.

And I surely think that disappearance would be a blessing to humanity.

"Oh, but I just hate a fussy man that thinks he knows all about your work, and is forever prowling around the kitchen," objected a lady to whom I was expressing my delight at this innovation.

So do I.

But I think it is a far cry from him to the man who doesn't know how to boil water, and I don't see why there isn't a happy medium.

I would be the last person to want to see a busy man regularly helping with the housework in his leisure hours. I think it is rank injustice to expect that. But I do think a little understanding of the work of home-making, on the man's part would make family life pleasanter, both by making the man capable of looking out for himself a bit when occasion demanded, and by giving him more respect for that share of the burden which his better half carries.

I think it would be a good idea if the superintendent's innovation could be carried from the school into the home, and boys, as well as girls, expected to take a hand in helping mother about the house.

A woman who evidently believes as I do on this subject, wrote me the other day to tell me how much help her four boys were to her.

"I am a mother of four boys and one little girl," she writes "We live on a farm and as my husband has a man to help him, there is more work for the children inside the house than outside, so I have trained my boys to help me.

"Our eldest child, a boy of fourteen, can prepare breakfast when occasion demands as well as most girls of his age. The next, a boy of ten years, can wash dishes and sweep nicely and help care for the younger children.

"Our little six-year-old boy has made several nice gingerbreads when mamma was very busy. He measured everything very carefully, too.

"By having them all help, the work is divided so that no one has an irksome amount and I am given some leisure to be a companion to my boys, as well as the housekeeper.

"Do you think such work will make my boys unmanly?"

Most certainly not, madame.

On the contrary, I think helping their mother will make them more considerate and more truly manly men, and I wish more boys had a similar training.

WERE HONOURED BY THE EMPLOYEES OF THE GRAND

Messrs. Edward Crowe and Jas. Price Were the Guests of Honour at a Most Enjoyable Banquet —Songs, Speeches and Good Cheer.

A SUCCESSFUL EVENT

Coleman's restaurant was the scene of a most enjoyable event last evening when Messrs. Edward Crowe and James Price were the guests of honour at a banquet under the auspices of the Grand Opera House, arranged for the purpose of congratulating them upon their recent joining of the ranks of the Benedicts. Some forty members of the Grand staff gathered round the festive board, and the occasion was one of unmitigated pleasure, losing none of its enjoyment from the fact that it was informal in its nature.

Messrs. Crowe and Price have always been popular with the employees of the Grand and last night's affair was arranged to show the appreciation in which they are held. Nearly every member was present, including the orchestra, ushers and stage crews.

Mr. J. J. Turner, sr., made a most efficient chairman.

Messrs. Coleman Brothers had prepared a most enjoyable menu for the occasion and the many good things provided were done ample justice to.

Mr. Turner opened the second part of the programme by calling upon the gathering to honour the health of His Majesty the King and the toast was heartily honoured amid the singing of the national anthem.

Mr. Lee was called upon for a song which he gave in excellent voice and was forced to respond with an encore in response to the applause.

Mr. Geo. Lynch, added to the enjoyment of the occasion by telling some humorous stories in his own inimitable fashion. He also took advantage of the opportunity to congratulate Messrs. Crowe and Price upon the steps they had taken and Mr. Turner upon having such an obliging and competent staff in connection with the Grand Opera House.

Mr. Will Barrie contributed a piano solo in splendid fashion.

Mr. Turner in calling upon Mr. Crowe for a speech remarked that he wanted to take the opportunity to express his appreciation of the faithful work of the staff of the Grand. They were always anxious to do their duty on every occasion and it had been a pleasure to him frequently to hear the managers of visiting companies compliment him upon having such a splendid lot of employees. He felt sure that there was no better staff in any theatre in Canada.

Mr. Crowe in a neat speech thanked his fellow employees for their kindness in arranging such a delightful event.

A comic song by Mr. Harry Wilfrid was enthusiastically received and an encore number demanded.

Mr. Jas. Price thanked the gathering for the manner in which they had honoured himself and Mr. Crowe and referred to the many pleasant features of their work together at the Grand Opera House.

The Grand orchestra played a couple of enjoyable selections that were loudly applauded.

Mr. Chas. Coleman was heard to great advantage in a comic song and was forced to respond to an encore.

Mr. Geo. Chandler sang "Then You'll remember me" from "The Bohemian Girl" in faultless fashion, and sang as an encore "Mary of Argyle."

The health of the guests of the evening was heartily honoured, after which the most enjoyable affair came to an end with three cheers for Mr. Turner and the singing of "God Save the King" and "Auld Lang Syne."

Was Wedded Thrice In Nine Months Lacked Looks, But Was, Oh, So Loving!

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, OCT. 18. — Neither beauty, refinement nor education has Mrs. Alice Hoskins, arrested in Oklahoma on a charge of bigamy on complaint of James E. Young of Chicago. She is forty-five, coarse, ugly and illiterate.

Young says she has four husbands, three acquired within the last nine months. One, J. W. Graham, of Toledo, says she robbed him of $315 and some jewels before she kissed him good-bye. Young met her by "accident" in Toledo. She promised that she would come to him in Chicago. She did, and they were married July 8. She attended church regularly. August 29 she kissed Young good-bye and jumped to Oklahoma where she married Hugh Hoskins of Conway Springs, Kan.

Young and Graham are going to prosecute. Hoskins says he will stand aside and read about it in the newspapers.

Graham, a well-known shoe dealer, said in Toledo to-day:

"She was the kindest and most affectionate woman I ever knew. I became acquainted with her through a matrimonial agency and she came to Toledo from Troy, O., the latter part of January. She brought her ten-year-old daughter Olive with her and suggested when she came that if I did not think it was too forward on her part she would keep house for me for the [illegible] and if she suited me we could marry.

"I was tired of living alone and trying to keep house, and she seemed so affectionate and was such a capable housekeeper that we were married at the end of two weeks. She was a loving, affectionate companion, and it was a hug and a kiss when I left in the morning and a hug and a kiss when I returned in the evening."

This was Graham's third matrimonial venture, his first wife having died and his second divorced. To Graham the woman gave her name as Alice Eckle and said she was a widow.

By Doing An Act Of Kindness Woman Received $50,000

Examiner Special.

LONDON, OCT. 15.—A former New York governess, Emily Edith Griffin Reed, has come into $50,000 through a remarkable romance. She is now the wife of an engineer named Angle and lives in a vine-clad cottage in Bristol, where she was found by the lawyers after a missing heiress search that had extended all over the world.

An accidental meeting and a chance act of kindness led Mrs. Angle to a fortune. She is the daughter of the late Theophilus Fry and was christened in the parish church of Easton. She was brought up by Miss Henrietta Fry at Brake Hermitage near Clovelly, and was educated at the Friends' school at Sidcup. She married against the wishes of her protectress and was exiled from Brake Hermitage, and she and her husband settled in far off obscurity and raised a family of children, now all grown up. When her husband died she became a governess and took charge of a number of noblemen's children.

Then she went to New York with a wealthy English woman and remained there several years. While she was in America, and when her whereabouts were unknown to her family, her father, Theophilus Fry, died, leaving the Brake Hermitage. The Bungalow and other property to a nephew, Arthur Braund, subject to the life interest of the long missing daughter Emily. Braund and the solicitors of the Fry estate made long and systematic efforts to locate the woman, but no trace of her was obtained. After several years, still in ignorance of her father's death, she met and was married to Angle.

One day a woman whom Mrs Angle had befriended introduced Mrs. Angle to a Miss Fry, a wealthy and benevolent charity worker. The women became friends and this led to an interchange of confidences, resulting in the discovery that the two were closely related. Mrs Angle says she will cling to her vine-covered cottage in Bristol.

Five dollars was donated by the local lodge of the Sons of England at their last meeting, and a substantial donation was received from Mr. R. J. Winch, who is now in Vancouver was also received. The girls in R. Fair and Co's store, through Miss Norah Edwards, subscribed $2.25.

NURSES HURT SHIELDING BABIES

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, OCT. 18. Swaying from side to side and refusing to respond to its steering wheel, a big delivery truck, bumped by a street car, crashed into a crowd of women and babies, the little ones in perambulators and afoot at Madison Avenue and Ninety-eighth Street yesterday afternoon, causing injuries to five. Before the machine could be stopped it had wrecked three baby carriages and had knocked down the big iron fence in front of No. 1125 Madison Avenue.

Katie Weidmar, a nurse employed by Dr. Duelberger to take care of his year-old son, Harold, in trying to shield her charge was knocked down and run over. Her right leg was fractured and she received internal injuries. She was taken to Mount Sinai Hospital, where her condition was said to be so serious that her death is expected. Harold was cut about the head and face. His father attended him and put him to bed in his own home.

ANOTHER NURSE GIRL HEROINE

Rose Tietelbaum, seventeen years old, also a nurse, caring for two-year-old Morris Levine, who lives at No. 1131 Madison Avenue, proved herself a heroine, too. She did not desert the child when she saw the big car, careering wildly, leap upon the sidewalk. Instead she broke the strap that held the child in the carriage and covered him with her body. Her leg and cheek were hurt, the boy escaped with a few bruises. The little carriage in which he had been riding was overturned by the automobile and smashed.

Florice Weinblum, one year old, living at No. 1127 Madison Avenue, was hurt perhaps the most seriously of the infants. She was cut about the body and injured internally. Dr. Tetler, No. 20 East Ninety-seventh Street, dressed her wounds at her parents' home.

CHAUFFEUR HURLED FROM SEAT

The machine was one of Gimbel Brothers' delivery wagons, driven by James Burns. According to the stories of bystanders the automobile apparently failed to answer the wheel and was bumped by a north-bound Madison Avenue car. The bump must have put the emergency brakes out of commission, for it was sent on an oblique from its course, across the street and onto the sidewalk, crowded with women and children out for an airing. The chauffeur was thrown from his seat and alighted on his head. He pluckily got up and went to the East One Hundred and Fourth Street station, where he was released as no charge was made against him.

PREPARING TURKEYS FOR THE MARKET

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. W. Smith, Wellington Co., Ont.

We always starve the turkeys about 12 hours previous to killing. It is necessary to starve this length of time to empty the crop. If the crop is not empty, the dressed turkey will not keep right. Many turkey raisers starve their turkeys for a full day. We have found however that after starving them for more than 12 hours, they begin to shrink in flesh, giving them a woody appearance. And appearance counts for a great deal in getting the highest market price.

The better way to kill turkeys is to cut in the mouth but it is not advisable to kill poultry in this manner unless you understand how. If not cut properly, they will only partly bleed out and when picked the blood will follow every feather, giving the turkey a reddish tinge and making it almost unsaleable.

After killing, pick immediately while the body is warm, double up the wings, bring the legs in close to the body and place in the pressing board similar to that used for chickens, but of course, much larger. Whether or not the birds are drawn depends on the market to which they are shipped. We find that for our private trade, drawn birds are preferred, while in those which we ship to more distant markets the entrails are left in.

SHIPPING

We ship our turkeys in boxes 14 by 22 by 26 inches. These boxes hold eight turkeys. The turkeys should be as uniform in size, plumpness and age as possible. If you have old turkeys to dispose of, do not spoil the sale of a large number of good ones, by putting in one or two poor ones in a box. We know that we always get better returns by taking a second class price for a second class bird, and thereby making sure of a first-class price for our first-class birds.

In our experience, the shipping of the turkeys in wholesale lots is really more profitable than our private trade as it is a lot of trouble and expense to properly clean the birds and carry them around to the houses of our customers. There is a good profit in raising turkeys for the Christmas market if you have lots of room for them to range and are not too near to towns or cities in which case, a number of them are apt to be stolen. In the fall months, the market for well fleshed turkeys, neatly and uniformly packed is unlimited.

HAS MADE GOOD

From Farm and Dairy.

As a type of farmer who has made good and who has been of distinct service to his community and to the country at large we may well look to Mr. Archibald Kennedy, a veteran stock breeder and farmer of Russell Co., Ont. Archibald Kennedy, Vernon, Ont., was born at Maxwell, Glengarry Co., Ont., in 1831. He has lived on Hillcrest Farm since 1858. He brought the first Berkshire swine and Shorthorn cattle into his community in 1867. He brought the first Shropshire sheep in 1883. He commenced breeding Ayrshire cattle in 1889 when he purchased five first prize winners at the Ottawa fair. Since that time he made several additions to the herd, the best that money could buy. The Hillview herd now owned by A. Kennedy & Son, is one of the best in Ontario. They have sold cattle to all parts of Canada and to the United States.

Mr. Kennedy is the father of five children: Mrs. Jas York, Spring Hill, Ont.; Mrs. Herb. Faith, Winchester, Ont.; Mrs. W. J. Carson, Winnipeg, Man.; D. J. Kennedy, Vernon, Ont., and Prof. W. G. Kennedy, Ames, Iowa.

NOXIOUS WEEDS

From Farm and Dairy.

Editor, Farm and Dairy,—I notice in Farm and Dairy, Aug. 25, an editorial dealing with the noxious weed problem in which you advocate a change in the present act. This act has proved absolutely useless for the prevention and eradication of noxious weeds. Cooperation is a good thing to carry out some enterprises—but cannot be made to do effective work in this particular case. I quite agree with you when you say that there should be a stringent noxious weed act passed by our Provincial Legislature and rigidly enforced.

In order to enforce any weed law inspectors would have to be appointed, each one having his allotted district to superintend. The appointment and selection of Inspectors might be left to the township councils. Their appointment, however, should be compulsory.

LEGISLATION NECESSARY

The necessity for legislation of this character is apparent on all sides. If the farmer is not in a position to control the weeds he should be able to control the farmer who produces the weed seeds. Can there be anything more discouraging than having spent a whole summer cleaning a field to find the same field reseeded with sow thistle, Canada thistle and similar bad weeds through the carelessness of a neighbor.

The strict enforcement of such an act would necessitate to a considerable extent a change in the operations of the farm. A percentage of our farmers would have to get out of the old rut and adopt modern methods of farming. That in itself would be an advantage to all concerned.—J. Smithson, Peterboro Co., Ont.

OBITUARY

MRS. GRACE BALLANTYNE.

The death occurred at Peterborough on Wednesday, Oct. 19th, 1910, of Mrs. Grace Ballantyne, widow of the late John Ballantyne, in the 72nd year of her age.

The late Mrs. Ballantyne has been in failing health for some time past, and her death was, therefore, not unexpected.

The funeral will take place on Friday, 21st inst., from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Harry Evans, 284 Westcott street, at 2 p.m. Funeral private.

MISS MAUD MASON.

The numerous friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. Mason will sympathize with them in their bereavement in the death of their daughter, Miss Maud, who passed away in Toronto yesterday about 12 o'clock. About three years ago, Miss Mason left here for Morden, Manitoba, where she attended the Masonic Hospital and some time ago graduated as nurse. She was nursing a young man who had typhoid fever in Toronto and she was infected with the disease. She was quickly ill for about three weeks, but her friends did not think she was in danger and the shock they received when the sad news of her death was made known to them was indeed a cruel one.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later. In all probability it will take place to-morrow from the C.P.R. train to the Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. FIRTH.

Mr. J. E. Firth of this city, has received word of the death of his mother, Mrs. Firth, at Meaford, Ont. Mr. Firth left Meaford today to attend the funeral which will take place on Sunday.
